HERE'S GRAND OPERA THAT'S REALLY GRAND

No Plush or Posing at Ravinia.

Almost before we in Chicago realized it, so modest and unostentatious had been the beginnings, Ravinia had burst into full and astonishing operatic florescence.

Almost without our knowing it a major opera company had developed under our eyes.

The little stage which was once the part of a band stand was being peopled with the foremost artists of the world; performances began to take on as their normal course an intensity and beauty such as you would find only occasionally in the foremost opera houses of the world. EDWARD C. MOORE.

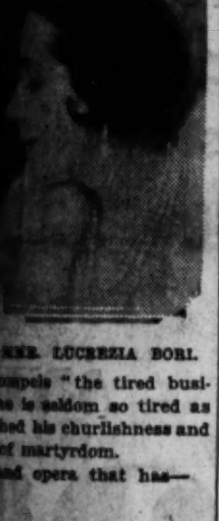
BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
(Picture in rotogravure section.)

To comprehend at a glance the scale and the standards of Ravinia opera you have but to consider [illegible]



MME. LUCREZIA BORI.

Imagine grand opera [illegible] but so [illegible] that it compels "the tired business man," who is seldom so tired as he is dull, to shed his churlishness and drop his pose of martyrdom.

Imagine grand opera that has—
No gilding.
No plush.
No snobbery.
No overdressing.
No [illegible].
No bumbling.
No long intermissions.
No remote seats.
No extortionate prices.
No tiresome ballyhoo.

And that has a forty acre setting of lawn and flowers which when darkness falls and the lights flash on is woodland touched to fairyland, with stars singing beneath the stars.

Such is Ravinia opera.

The Terrific Cost.

It is a public benefaction privately financed and—in the sense that it has never made a dollar of profit—it is not a profit making enterprise. The music critic, Edward Moore, who is not given to loose statements, told me that he believed the founder of Ravinia opera had in the last twenty years paid deficits to the heart-searching tune of a million dollars.

Some millionaires love to own a steam yacht, some to buy rare books, some to keep a racing stable. Louis Eckstein, a bustling, insistent man who loves to foster and command, finds his joy in owning grand opera and [illegible] libation pourer in the temple of [illegible] he pours lavishly and without [illegible] himself into the position of [illegible].

A Distinguished Attraction.

All that, save as a matter of due record, is beside the point in an article appraising Ravinia opera not as a [illegible], but as a unique and distinguished attraction of Chicagoland. The financing of it might be ever so lavish and still it could be only another of those dire art-for-art's-sake enterprises; one of those well-meant [illegible] in which high aspiration is [illegible] by mediocre execution. In [illegible] and in opera Chicago has endured its share of them, and they have passed unwept away.

Take one of its representative performances of the current season—the performance of Puccini's "La Rondine" with Bori, Johnson, Macbeth, [illegible], and D'Angelo in the principal roles. Better opera—more vivacious as to the singing and acting, more richly fraught with tender feeling or more distinguished in its mise en scène—I never saw, and my memory goes back to the days when, as [illegible] old men are wont to say, [illegible] grand opera, the days of Abbey, Schoeffel, and Grau, when they would lift the curtain on an "Huguenots" cast comprising Melba, Nordica, the two De Reszkes, Victor Maurel, Pol Plançon, and Mantelli! People called it "the night of seven stars."

[illegible], Bori's singing—and acting—in the letter scene in the last act of

AGED INVENTOR COLLAPSES, BUT RALLIES LATER

Doctor Keeps Vigil at Bedside.

BULLETIN.

West Orange, N. J., Aug. 2 (Sunday).—Shortly after midnight Dr. Hubert S. Howe said Mr. Edison was sleeping normally, and members of the family who gathered at the inventor's home had returned to their own residences for the night. Dr. Howe said Mr. Edison joked with members of his family before retiring and told them he was enjoying his "rest."

New York, Aug. 1. — [Special.] — Thomas A. Edison, the wizard of Menlo Park, collapsed at his home in Llewellyn Park, West Orange, N. J., late this afternoon. Three physicians were summoned at once, but after a thorough examination said that the inventor, now in his 85th year, was not in imminent danger of death.

Reports persisting since the middle of June, that Mr. Edison was in poor health had been denied repeatedly by relatives, but gained added force today when members of the family admitted that his condition was causing anxiety.

John A. Sloane, his son-in-law, issued a statement early in the day denying that Mr. Edison was critically ill and attributed his weakness to overwork and the recent heat wave. Charles Edison, a son, insisted, however, that his father was "critically ill."

Gravity of Illness Unknown.

In the face of these conflicting statements and because of the barrier of secrecy surrounding the estate of the inventor, the gravity of his illness was not suspected until it became known that Dr. Hubert S. Howe, Mr. Edison's personal physician, had been summoned to his bedside from a golf links on Long Island.

Dr. Howe made the trip by airplane from Port Washington to the Newark airport. There he was met by an escort of motorcycle police and sped on to the Llewellyn Park estate. He was joined there by two other physicians.

Bulletin Tells of Collapse.

"Mr. Edison has been failing in health since his return from Florida six weeks ago. He is suffering from chronic nephritis and diabetes. The diabetic condition is now under control and the kidney trouble seems improved as compared with a week ago.

"This afternoon he suffered from a sudden collapse, but at present has recovered from this and is resting quietly."

The bulletin was signed by Drs. Frederick N. Allen, Dr. Howe, and Dr. William R. Williams.

Mr. Edison's condition was unchanged shortly before midnight. However, his condition was considered sufficiently grave that arrangements were made for Dr. Howe to remain at the bedside all night.

Collapse Accounts Differ.

There is some confusion regarding the manner of Mr. Edison's collapse One report said he was stricken while being carried to an automobile by his relatives. But another report says he collapsed while seated in a chair in the library which adjoins his bedroom. This report said he lapsed into a semi-coma—a diabetic seizure.

Harvey Firestone, one of Mr. Edison's closest friends, telephoned tonight to learn of his condition and talked with Mr. Sloane who told him: "Mr. Edison suffered a nasty collapse but recovered and is resting quietly. His condition is not satisfactory, however."

Sons at His Home.

Among those at the Edison home today, in addition to Charles Edison and Mr. Sloane, were his sons, Theodore of East Orange and Thomas of Orange, and Mrs. Sloane.

Two other children, William Edison of Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. Marion Oser of Danbury, Conn., were notified that Mr. Edison's condition was not critical enough to warrant their making the trip home tonight.

Ever since his return from Fort Myers, Fla., where he had spent the winter experimenting with the derivation of rubber from goldenrod, Mr. Edison has remained quietly at his home, attempting to regain his strength. He has made but few visits to his laboratory and whatever work he has accomplished was in his smaller laboratory at Glenmont.

Reports that he was dangerously ill

HERE'S GRASSHOPPER CURE FROM FARMER WHO CAN'T TELL LIE

Gageby, Colo., Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—George Pointon, a farmer with a reputation for veracity, today told the United Press how to clear a farm of grasshoppers.

"Fill galvanized tins with common moonshine made from silo drippings and spread them around," Pointon said. "I did it and here's what happened:

"First the hoppers started jumping backward and turning somersaults.

"Then they turned ugly and started tearing each other limb from limb. After a while there was only one left.

"I slammed the door just in time, as that one chased me into the house. It wandered off into the hills, looking for mountain lions."

HINSDALE HIGH TEACHER ENDS LIFE WITH GAS

"Don't be a sap. Find a good guy with money and get married again."

Hugh F. Bannen Jr., 37 years old, teacher of chemistry in the Hinsdale High school and a nephew of ex-Senator Charles S. Deneen, wrote these lines to his wife last night. He then turned on the gas in his bedroom at 3730 Park avenue, Brookfield. He was found dead an hour later. The rest of the letter, which lay alongside him, read:

"Sweetheart Dear: I love you, and I am doing this for the best. Nobody needs to be around me any more when I am crabby and such. Don't forget that the insurance policies are in the bank, and you the girl. Also don't forget the pink slip. (That's good for $500.) Think kindly of me, dear. It's all for you and I love you. HUGH."

Chief Edward O'Connor said he learned that the chemistry teacher and his wife quarreled earlier in the evening and that she had left for her family home in Rockford. Neighbors told police, however, that she had left to visit his father, a Lutheran minister, also of Rockford.

SHUT NO. SHORE BEACHES AFTER 5TH DROWNING

Beaches along the north shore were closed last night, and the annual Winnetka water carnival, scheduled for this afternoon, was postponed indefinitely, because of the presence of one of the worst undertows along the lake shore in years.

Five swimmers have been drowned along the north shore in the last week, and numerous others have been rescued. Two of the drowning victims died Friday night, and another died yesterday. The latest victim was Frank Rohac, 45 years old, a musician, 2206 South Trumbull avenue. He sank off the Lake Forest beach. His body was recovered.

Gandhi to Sail in Steerage with 2 Goats

BOMBAY, India, Aug. 1.—(AP)—When Mahatma Gandhi, India's Nationalist leader, sails two weeks hence as a steerage passenger for the London round table conference he will not even have a suitcase, a tooth brush or a coat and hat. His only baggage will be two goats, a spinning wheel, a spare loin cloth and a copy of Thoreau's essay on "Civil Disobedience."

The goats will supply the milk which is his principal article of diet throughout the three weeks of the voyage and during the conference at London. The steamship company broke a long standing rule to allow the goats to be brought along.

Miss Madeleine Slade, daughter of a British admiral, and Gandhi's English disciple and attendant, will have charge of the goats, milking them twice a day while he watches.

Build Rail Around Mattress.

So that he will be in no danger of being swept overboard while he sleeps on the third class deck, the steamship company will build a special guard rail around Gandhi's straw mattress.

A score of Indian princes and other distinguished Indian delegates to the conference will travel in special suites, but the "holy man" goes as would the lowest pariah, with a hardwood deck as his bed and the sky as his roof. If the weather gets cold he will wrap a homespun blanket around his frail frame.

Aboard ship he will live just the same as though he were on land, rising every morning at 4 o'clock for an hour of prayer, eating only dates and grapes and goat's milk, spinning yarn for five hours a day, fasting at regular intervals, holding religious services every evening and observing every Monday as his day of silent meditation.

Trip Costs Him $100.

His only companions, besides Miss Slade, will be Mahadel Desai, his secretary, possibly Davadas Gandhi, his favorite son, and perhaps Bhulabhai Desai, a Bombay lawyer, who has volunteered to serve without compensation as Gandhi's adviser in constitutional matters.

The steerage passage for the 7,000 mile trip will cost about $100. Some of the cabins of the princes will cost up to $5,000. Gandhi declined an offer of first class passage at the expense of Great Britain.

Pundit Madan Mohan Malaviya, vice chancellor of Benares university, will be traveling on the same ship as an independent delegate to the London conference.

Will Sprinkle His Food.

Crossing the seas for the first time in his life, this plus 70 year old Hindu will take half a dozen brass vessels filled with water from the holy river Ganges. It will be sprinkled over everything he is likely to use, especially his food, clothing and bedding.

Because his orthodox teachings forbid him to touch food prepared except under special conditions, he is taking along a Brahmin chef.

Bandit Mother Seized; Bandit Son Shot Dead

BULLETIN.

Harold Marcelle, 24 years old, 4057 South Richmond street, was arrested early this morning in his home, charged with being the bandit who accompanied John C. Baranski in the holdup in which the latter was killed. Marcelle was seized in bed by Sergt. Arthur Rathke and a squad. By his side lay a pistol. Records revealed he served a term in Michigan prison for robbery.

A gray haired grandmother, 58 years old, who for some weeks had been helping her 30 year old son make a living as a robber, went out on her last expedition with him yesterday. He was killed by a policeman who had followed both of them from a real estate office where $130 loot had been taken at the point of a pistol.

Mrs. Anna Baranski, 4025 Odell avenue, Norwood Park, is the bandit mother. The son killed was John C. Baranski, who had a police record dating back to 1918 and who once served a term in Pontiac reformatory.

Hold Up Real Estate Office.

Just after noon yesterday Baranski and a man companion left the respectable looking grandmother sitting in her automobile in front of 4916 Irving Park boulevard. They walked east to No. 4819, where they entered the real estate office of Sorensen & Olson. There they tied up Charles Nation, office manager, and took $130.

They walked out leisurely and started west to join Mrs. Baranski. The police have learned, they said, since the events of yesterday, that she was an indispensable factor in their success. It was her custom, in underworld parlance, to "case the joint" for her son and his companion. She would enter a store, preferably a drug store, and change a $20 bill. She would walk out and a little later the male robbers would enter and do their work.

Another Trick She Knew.

But her assistance, according to the police, did not end with scouting the places to be robbed. Once outside, she would get in her automobile, parked a half block away, and slip down behind a seat. When John and his robber friend arrived and started to drive away she again took her seat and one of the robbers hid himself on the floor. Police looking for two gunmen never bothered to halt a car in which one young man and a motherly looking woman were riding.

Mrs. Baranski was doing her part yesterday. She was hidden in the car when the son and his accomplice arrived with their loot. They got in and she took her accustomed seat. But the two robbers had been slow. As they strolled down the street Nation had freed himself of his bonds, and a friend, M. J. Bilharz, of 4949 North Leavitt street, had entered.

Victim Takes Up Chase.

Bilharz ran east to Cicero avenue and summoned Policeman Fred Kretschmer, who ran after the robbers and after Nation. Kretschmer reached Mrs. Baranski's car just as it was being driven away. His command to halt was disobeyed and he fired once in the air. The car went on.

Commandeering a passing automobile, Kretschmer followed. At the next avenue to the west, Lavergne, the bandit car was swerved too suddenly and crashed into a post. Baranski and his robber friend leaped out. The

August Sales Bring Big Furniture Bargains

Conduct this little experiment next time you drop in on friends or relatives. When they're not looking, note carefully the furniture, the rugs, and the draperies. Make a mental list of the things you would be inclined to keep and the things you'd eliminate. Note the pieces that are out of date, outworn, and out of harmony with the general scheme. Ask yourself what you would do if it were your own home.

If the result adds up considerably below par, don't draw any conclusions until you have completed the experiment. The second part of the experiment you make in your own home. With the same careful eye, look at your own things—the furnishings you've lived with so long that you really never see them as they are.

You'll probably discover what a lot of others have discovered—that many families during the past decade or so of high furniture prices have developed a tolerance for improperly furnished, underfurnished, carelessly furnished homes.

It's time for a new deal. Good furniture today is available at prices the lowest in fourteen years. You can refurnish your home now for little more than half of what it cost originally to equip it. If you take advantage of the special prices during the August sales in Chicago you will be amazed at how much furniture so little money will buy.

PLANE VANISHES AFTER TAKEOFF FROM OTTAWA

Radio Goes Silent on 460 Mile Hop.

BULLETIN.

Up to five o'clock this morning no further word had come from Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh. A check up to 9:30 o'clock last night through the towns and settlements of northern Ontario, including Coral Rapids, about 75 miles from Moose Factory, failed to disclose any reports of the sighting of the plane. The check was made also at Cochrane, Hunta, Fraser Dale, and Moose River Bridge.

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The fastness of the timber studded Canadian northland tonight veiled the whereabouts of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, who took off this morning from Ottawa to Moose Factory, 461 miles distant. But several circumstances attending their holiday flight toward the orient kept friends here from entertaining any great anxiety.

At 8:30 p. m. [Chicago daylight saving time] no word had been received from their plane since 1:15 p. m., when Mrs. Lindbergh sent a message to the station of the department of national defense at Ottawa that they still were "traveling north."

Although at that time they should have been close to their destination, located on the southern tip of James bay, the message gave no position. Flying conditions were reported ideal.

Heard by Chicago Amateur.

Shortly after noon the Lindberghs, in a radio message intercepted by Fred Schnell, a Chicago amateur, gave their position as fifteen miles northeast of "Lake Expand." There is a Lake Expanse about 150 miles southeast of Moose Factory.

The couple's desire to proceed toward the orient at a leisurely pace, without maintaining a fixed schedule, the presence aboard the plane of a radio which several times before has given trouble and the numerous lakes affording landing places were reasons advanced by friends for not becoming alarmed.

Should the Lindbergh's radio, the only set over which the arrival at Moose Factory might be reported, have failed there will be many hours, perhaps days, before news of the couple reaches the outside world. The nearest telegraph office is 75 miles distant and it may be reached only by boat up the Moose river.

Unseen by Patrol Plane.

An Ontario forestry patrol plane made the trip from Lake Expanse to Moose Factory this morning and returned later in the day. The pilot did not see the Lindberghs and no aviator was willing to take the risk of flying to Moose Factory tonight.

The Lindberghs took off from Ottawa at 9:49 a. m. [Chicago time] for the isolated settlement. The government radio station at Ottawa established communication with them at 11 a. m. and again at noon.

They reported they were on a direct course and making good time. It was assumed that they were safely over the Gatineau hills, although at no time was their position given.

Wear Life Preservers.

For the first time since starting their vacation journey the Lindberghs wore life preservers in addition to their parachutes. They were pneumatic vests, which could be inflated quickly in case of need.

While at Ottawa they added to their supplies a fishing net, a long knife, a coil of rope and a small quantity of food in addition to their fifty pounds of emergency rations. The rations are of the regular army and navy type, including "bully beef," chocolate, and other concentrated foods.

Their camping equipment consists of a machete for cutting wood or cutting a path through brush, a .38 caliber pistol, warm army blankets, waterproof blankets, emergency medical and surgical supplies, and mosquito netting.

Carry Collapsible Boat.

A collapsible boat, which will be released from the floor of their plane in the event of a crash on water, also was carried by the Lindberghs.

Col. Lindbergh arranged that he would notify his office here by cable in the event of an intermediate landing in an isolated territory, and this fact served to allay concern.

No word had been received at his office nor by his father-in-law, Senator Dwight W. Morrow, whom the Lindberghs visited at North Haven, Me., when they bade their young son good-by before leaving for Ottawa. Mr. Morrow, at North Haven, Me., tonight said that he was "not surprised" that the flying couple had been unreported. Senator Morrow expressed no anxiety as to their safety, however. He said if the radio aboard the plane had failed temporarily it was possible they would not be heard from until Sunday.

RACE OVER SIBERIA

MOSCOW, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The American round the world flyers, Hugh Herndon Jr. and Clyde Pangborn, arrived at Omsk, Siberia, at 2 p. m. [4 a. m., Chicago daylight saving time] today and left for Chita three hours and fifteen minutes later, reports to the Tass agency here said.

The airmen hoped to make the distance of about 1,700 miles to Chita in one hop.

At the time of the takeoff from Osmk, the flyers were 97 hours and 47 minutes out of New York, where they hoped to arrive again in less than eight days and 16 hours required by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty.

Dogged by Ill Luck.

Ill fortune dogged the flight eastward from Moscow across the spaces of Siberia. Civil aviation authorities were advised that the flyers had made a forced landing at Jietiegari, about 350 miles from Kustanaisk, in the Cossack Autonomous republic, at 8:30 a. m. Omsk is more than 500 miles northeast of Jietiegari.

The fragmentary advices received here did not indicate exactly what caused the flyers to descend at Jietiegari, which is in the heart of the nonferrous mining section of the East Urals, but it was assumed a northeast wind forced them far southward off their intended course.

Between the time they landed at Jietiegari and their descent at Omsk, there is a gap in the reports to Moscow, but the fact that they were able to take off so soon again for Chita was taken to indicate that neither the plane nor the flyers suffered from the forced landing.

Turkey Decorates U. S. Flyers.

YALOVA, Turkey, Aug. 1.—(AP)—President Mustapha Kemal of Turkey, who rarely receives visitors, today was host at his summer home here to Russell Boardman and John Polando, American aviators, who set a new record by flying 4,984 miles without a stop from New York to Istanbul.

From the first shouts of "Hurrah for the American aviators!" set up by hundreds of Turkish peasants and villagers massed upon the Yalova wharf to greet them, until Premier Ismet Pasha pinned upon their breasts Turkey's special medals of honor, the president's reception today was the flyers' biggest event during their stay in Turkey.

They came to this Byzantine thermal resort from Istanbul in President Mustapha Kemal's launch. The brief ceremony of pinning on the medals took place at the Yalova clubhouse. It was followed by a dance, at which Premier Ismet Pasha and his wife presided. They talked and danced with Turkish society girls and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Most of the high officials of Turkey were present.

Amy Reaches Irkutsk.

MOSCOW, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Amy Johnson, British aviatrix, on a trip from England to Tokio, arrived at Irkutsk this evening. She planned to continue her journey early tomorrow morning.

Blue Island Police Head Is Demoted in Shakeup

Chief of Police George J. Fiedler of Blue Island was demoted yesterday to the rank of detective sergeant, and was succeeded by Lieut. William Hankey, who was made captain, and at the same time acting chief. Sergt. Stuart Heim was promoted to a lieutenancy. The shakeup was ordered at the last council meeting.

LINDBERGHS REPORTED MISSING IN FLIGHT OVER CANADIAN WILDS

Map shows territory over which Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh started from Ottawa for Moose Factory, 460 miles away. This area was combed up to a late hour last night without finding any trace of the famous flyer and his wife.

The last heard from the Lindbergh plane was at 1:15 p. m., when the couple reported that they were "heading north" without giving their position.

About noon yesterday a Chicago amateur picked up a call saying the Lindberghs were about 150 miles north of Lake Expanse, about 200 miles northwest of Ottawa.

35 DRY AGENTS ARREST WOMAN, 11 MEN IN RAIDS

Thirty-five prohibition agents, under the command of Deputy Administrator A. E. Hamilton, raided eight places in Chicago and the suburbs last night, arrested eleven men and a woman and seized a large quantity of alcoholic drinks.

The woman, Anna Bright, a waitress, was taken into custody at 1811 Irving Park boulevard. The other places visited by the federal operatives were 6012 West Grand avenue, Jules Baer's at Niles, 61 West Monroe street, 2467 West Grand avenue, 2415 Lawrence avenue, Suberg & Knapp's roadhouse at Niles, and 4062 Broadway.

2 MEN CATCH FIRE AS THEY WALK IN STREET

Suddenly Parry's clothes broke out in flames both fore and aft. Lewis, bent on playing a hero's role, dashed away for a bucket of water. As he raced back, the bucket poised over Jarry, his clothes flamed, too.

Lewis poured some of the water on Parry, the rest on himself. Still the flames crackled.

They jerked off their jackets and beat each other with them until finally the flames were out.

As they conversed from hospital cots while recuperating from serious burns, they decided that their clothing, permeated with dried sodium chlorate, burst into spontaneous combustion from friction as they walked.

Anyway, that was their story and they stuck to it.

Germany's Birth Rate Less Than France's; Due to Crisis

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—Germany's birth rate for 1930 fell below France's for the first time in history. Official figures today showed a rate of only 17.5 births per 1,000 German inhabitants, as against a rate of 18.1 per 1,000 for France.

WIFE REFUSES TO BE HOSTESS TO 3 EX-WIVES

Mrs. Beatrice Edelstein, 1437 South Kenneth avenue, could stand her husband's vanity, which caused him to spend hours in front of a mirror waxing his mustache, but she walked out of their home when he declared he was going to invite his three former wives there to "solve the riddle of why I've lived with one woman for four years."

These representations were made in a bill for divorce filed by Mrs. Edelstein in the Circuit court yesterday.

Judge William V. Brothers granted her $15 a week temporary alimony for the support of her son, Selwyn, 4 years old.

LIGHTNING KILLS CADDY, STUNS 20 IN GOLF SHELTER

Walter Wasylovich, 19 years old, of New Chicago, in Lake county, Indiana, a caddy, was killed and 20 men and women golfers were severely shocked yesterday when lightning struck a shelter house at the Cressmoor Golf club, 12 miles southeast of Gary. The golfers had just reached the shelter when the bolt struck. All were thrown to the floor.

Wasylovich's brother John, 20 years old, also a caddy, and Mrs. Helen Mooey, 2200 West 5th avenue, Gary, were taken to the home of a nearby physician for treatment. Their injuries were found to be not serious.

MILL FIRE LOSS $100,000.

Harrisburg, Ill., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—The Woolcot Milling company's mill burned here late last night, with damage estimated at more than $100,000. The fire started from a hot box on an elevator shaft in the basement.

WOMAN LEAPS 29 STORIES TO DEATH IN LOOP

Mrs. Pearl Creely, 44 years old, 2822 Cambridge avenue, was killed last evening in a leap from a window of a washroom on the thirty-fifth floor of the Pittsfield building at 55 East Washington street. Her body struck a roof at the sixth floor level.

In her purse in the washroom the police found a note, in which Mrs. Creely explained that she believed "this is the best way out." She added: "I know God will forgive me and understand my feelings."

According to Mrs. Alfred Enger, 3043 Logan boulevard, a sister, Mrs. Creely was the wife of Dr. Wilmer R. Creely, with offices at 30 North Michigan avenue. They separated on May 1, Mrs. Enger said, but were still on good terms and met frequently. Mrs. Creely recently had been working for a drug concern. Her letter indicated that she had lost the place.

SWEET LITTLE OLD FASHIONED GIRL RETURNING

Empress Eugenie Hat to Transform Milady.

BY KATHERINE KELLY.

Some masculine hearts are going to skip a few beats one fine day this fall when men discover that the idols of their dreams are just sweet, old fashioned girls.

Dame Fashion, who usually knows what she is talking about, gave voice to that prediction yesterday. She glanced over a collection of frocks designed and manufactured by Chicago firms flowing enchantingly from their hangers in a Palmer house exhibit room, peeked into a few hatboxes and smiled. Then she turned to a bevy of mannequins—blond, brunette, and all the intermediate types of feminine beauty, and suggested they start getting used to being little old fashioned girls.

Makes Debut Tomorrow Night.

Tomorrow evening promptly at 8:15 this old fashioned girl will make her debut in the ballroom of the Palmer house before buyers from all over the country here for the annual fall style show of the Interstate Merchants' council. She will wear frocks, coats and hats manufactured by more than 40 Chicago exhibitors. She will show these buyers that styles Chicago designed are as artistic as New York's or those of Paris fame, and not nearly so expensive.

Should grandpa chance to attend that fall revue he will declare to goodness that the young miss wearing that Empress Eugenie hat cocked over her right eye with a ravishing two inch veil, her dress with its boat shaped neck falling low over her shoulders, its tight bodice and full skirt almost to the ankles, is just the picture of grandma 'round about the 1890's. He will add, too, that he didn't know a girl in this age and generation could look so sweet.

That bright makeup, the stylists say, the kind that leaves no doubt whether it came out of rouge, powder and lipstick boxes, is just one detail that can't be worn with a Eugenie hat and frock. This hat has changed everything. Makeup can't be bold. It must be soft and natural. And so must be the hair likewise.

Flattering When Worn Right.

"It takes a certain technique to wear that Eugenie hat," explained Miss Mildred Luoma, a designer. "And when worn correctly it is flattering. It should be tipped over the right eye, the hair must show on the left side, and the feather—yes, feathers and plumes are here to stay—must curl coquettishly around under the right ear. Milady should have long hair to wear this hat, and she may wear curls to her advantage."

The evening gowns are low off the shoulder, have short waist lines, are extremely long and occasionally have sleeves. Evening shades are still pastels with white, off-white, ice green, and Chinese red to blend with browns predominating.

Coolidge Simply Ignores His Latest 1932 Boomlet

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 1.—[U.P.]—Calvin Coolidge had no comment to make on the reported statement of Col. James F. Coupal, "or on any other political matter," the former President's secretary stated today.

Coupal, former White House physician, was quoted as saying Coolidge would run for president again in 1932 if the people "drafted" him.

The Coolidges are vacationing here.

Cermak and Party Sail on Mackinac Island Cruise

Mayor Cermak and a small party of friends sailed yesterday afternoon on a Lake Michigan steamer for Mackinac Island. The mayor said he would spend a day or two cruising on a yacht owned by Paul V. Collanni after he arrives at Mackinac Island. He expects to return to Chicago Wednesday.

SEEKS DIVORCE FROM PRINCE

Mae Murray, film actress, who has filed suit in Los Angeles court to divorce her husband, Prince David Mdivani. [Acme Photo.]

Actress Sues

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The long and apparently happy romance of Mae Murray, dazzling blond of the screen, and Prince David Z. Mdivani came to an abrupt end today when the actress filed suit for divorce in which she revealed many alleged instances of cruelty and beatings.

The suit surprised friends. It was learned they separated only yesterday. Rumors of discord which attach to nearly every Hollywood marriage never had touched the couple.

The complaint was based on charges of extreme cruelty, the first alleged instance being more than three years ago. The actress charged the prince, member of a royal family in the European state of Georgia, and interested in film productions and oil, had pursued "a continuous course of inhuman and cruel treatment," inflicting grievous bodily injuries," and "grievous mental suffering."

She also charged that the prince had threatened her with a revolver. She asked no alimony but petitioned for custody of their 4 year old son.

The recitation of alleged instances in which the prince had struck her began on New Year's day, 1928. While they were in Buffalo, N. Y., she said he struck her with both fists and locked her in a room for several hours. Hotel employés finally freed her and she went to another hotel for the night.

Sues His Former Pilot for Loss of Wife's Love

Pontiac, Mich., Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—Charging alienation of his wife's affections, Frederick A. Sauer, wealthy sportsman, today filed suit for $50,000 against Peter A. Larson, who for two years was pilot of his airplane. Last fall Mrs. Sauer filed suit for divorce, and Sauer has been in court several times since, charged with failure to pay alimony. Larson also has a suit against him for alleged back pay.

CLUTTER MAIL WITH PLEAS FOR JOBS AS GIGOLOS

Mail from men who would be gigolos, seriously and intentionally gigolos, is stacking up on the desk of Miss Llewellyn Jones, director of social activities at the Stevens hotel, she made known yesterday. This rush of correspondence is in answer, she said, to an announcement made a few weeks ago that the hotel was thinking about hiring "some presentable male escorts."

"The letters are amazing in their seriousness," Miss Jones said. "The young men were sure they had all the necessary qualifications and hoped to make a living by being dancing men or escorts. Some wanted to work their way through college that way, and some had college degrees. They mention educational background, family connections and references."

REORGANIZATION OF BANK CHEERS BUSINESS MEN

Woodlawn Institution to Reopen.

Woodlawn business men yesterday hailed the announcement of a reorganization plan for the closed Washington Park National bank as a boon to the commercial interests of the neighborhood and to the bank's 40,000 depositors.

Although official details of the reorganization plan will not be mailed out until tomorrow, hundreds of depositors, having read the announcement in the newspapers, already have come forward with pledges of whole hearted support, according to Watson H. Vanderploeg, president.

"The response of depositors has been gratifying," said Mr. Vanderploeg. "It heartened the reorganization committee to win such spontaneous approval."

Bank Examiner Indorses Plan.

The reorganization plan, as indorsed by Alfred P. Leyden, chief national bank examiner in Chicago, and approved by the controller of currency in Washington, calls for capitalization of $300,000, a surplus of $200,000, and undivided profits of $100,000. The institution, to be known as the Park National Bank and Trust company, will retain its present quarters at 6306 Cottage Grove avenue.

Harry Feuer, owner of Feuer's restaurant at 6312 Cottage Grove avenue, was one of the most enthusiastic of the neighborhood business men supporting the reorganization plan. He has considerable deposits in the bank.

Praises Bank Officers.

Samuel Y. Bloom, florist at 822 East 63d street, said that the officers in control when the bank was closed and now engaged in completing the reorganization plan always had enjoyed the confidence of the neighborhood.

Jay Mansfield, manager of the Tivoli theater, predicted that the reopening of the bank would mark a strong stimulation of business in the neighborhood and, on behalf of the theater, expressed eagerness to cooperate in the reorganization plan. The Publix-Balaban and Katz corporation, operators of the Tivoli, were among the depositors.

Closed on June 8.

The Washington Park National, an affiliate of the Foreman-State banking group, was closed on June 8 for protection of the depositors following the assumption of the Foreman liabilities by the First National bank. On the closing day the bank had deposits of $4,700,000.

Under the reorganization plan depositors will be credited on their pass books with 70 per cent of their deposits and will be asked to use 10 per cent of the total deposit in the purchase of the new bank's stock, leaving 60 per cent of their deposits without restrictions. The remaining 30 per cent will be paid them as assets are liquidated.

GRAND JURY ASKS FURTHER INQUIRY ON CLOSED BANKS

Nelson Calls Report Ill Advised.

The July grand jury submitted a report yesterday to Acting Chief Justice Harry B. Miller of the Criminal court, asserting, in substance, that several bank failures could be attributed to the "wrongful acts" of bank officers and directors and recommending that the state's attorney's investigation of bank failures be continued.

State Auditor Oscar Nelson, upon examining the report, declared its language ill advised and its implications misleading. In its report the grand jury said:

"The grand jury has been given evidence of radical irregularities and crookedness on the part of officials and directors of several state banking institutions resulting from investigations made by the state's attorney's office of the transactions shown by the books and records of these institutions which at the present time are closed and in the hands of receivers.

Jury's View of Evidence.

"The evidence would appear to indicate that the probable cause of the closing of many of the banks is not due to unusual conditions brought about by the heavy withdrawals made by depositors but by the financial condition and resulting inability of the banks to meet the demands of the depositors, in many instances due to the wrongful acts of the officers and directors.

"While this jury has taken action which it deemed proper in cases presented to it, and in view of the fact that investigations have been or are being made in connection with irregularities of numerous other banks, it is forcibly recommended that the state's attorney's office continue with its investigation of closed banks, and that the August and subsequent grand juries coöperate in every way possible, so as to bring to justice any person apparently responsible for the conditions found to have existed."

The jury also declared that "more care and diligence could and should be used by the state bank examiners in making their periodical examinations of banking institutions coming under their supervision."

Auditor Nelson's Comment.

The comment of State Auditor Nelson follows:

"From the language of the report one might infer that much dishonesty has been discovered in the operation of banks closed by my office. Stripped of its qualifying phrases, the report simply alleged dishonesty by officials of two or three banks, cites suspicion of 'wrongful acts' by officials of a number of other banks, and urges the state's attorney to continue his investigation.

"I wish to say that the examination of closed banks by my office has revealed no widespread dishonesty on the part of officials of those banks.

"As for the implied criticism of state bank examiners in the report I might say that of 66 Chicago banks closed during the period of uncertainty 37 were under supervision, not only of my office but of the Chicago Clearing House association. With the best interests of the community striving at this time to restore confidence, I believe the grand jury report was extremely ill advised."

As its final act yesterday the grand jury voted new indictments against ten officers and directors of the Roosevelt Bankers State bank, some of whom had been previously indicted. The new indictments charge conspiracy to embezzle approximately $2,500,000 of the bank's funds. Those named are Alexander, Samuel, and Frank Flower, Louis W. Frank, W. Ellis Stewart, Norman B. Schreiber, Edward Kallish, Thomas E. Breen, Abraham Weinstein, and Edward H. Carry the last named a Negro insurance officer.

Faces Loss of Eyesight in Freak Auto Blast

George Fader, 28 years old, faces the loss of his eyesight as the result of an unusual accident which occurred last night. Fader, an attendant at the gasoline filling station at 8626 South Chicago avenue, attempted to stop a leak in the radiator of a patron's car. He poured a solution into the radiator. A flare of fire burst, catching him in the face. He was taken to the South Chicago hospital.

THAT'S PART OF THE BARGAIN
The other day we heard a wise shoemaker say he couldn't afford charge accounts. Neither can we. In spite of the fact that we do the largest retail grocery business in the world, we can't afford to wait for our money.
That's our conviction, and we've got to stick to it if we're going to run our affairs economically and efficiently and supply our enormous public with good food at low prices.
A small profit on each item sold—that's all we'll ask if you keep your part of the bargain and pay for everything you buy when you buy it. As far as that goes, it's best for both of us. It helps to keep us both out of debt, which is good for your digestion and peace of mind, and good for our business.

JURY CONDEMNS SPEED TRAPS IN COUNTY TOWNS

Scores Abusive Police; Demands Quiz Go On.

The July grand jury in its final report yesterday to Acting Chief Justice Harry B. Miller of the Criminal court, censured as abusive and brutal the tactics used by some police in the handling of motorists.

JUDGE MILLER.
[Walinger Photo.]

The report also condemned the practice of police magistrates and justices of the peace in the suburbs of Chicago in using motor vehicle law violations as a medium for their livelihood. The jury said that many of the justices make their living from the court fees collected from motorists who are charged with minor violations.

Urge That Inquiry Go On.

The report recommended that the August grand jury, which is to be impaneled tomorrow, continue with the inquiry and call on Attorney Joseph H. Braun, general counsel for the Chicago Motor club, for assistance. Arthur Malmquist, foreman of the jury, issued a separate statement commending Mr. Braun for the activity of his club in helping to stamp out speed traps and bring to justice abusive policemen.

"We found that in too many instances policemen in some of the municipalities of Cook county inflicted unwarranted abuse, indignity, and persecution upon motorists alleged to have violated some of the motor vehicle laws or ordinances," said the jury's report.

Motorists Assaulted by Police.

"Even worse than verbal abuse and indignity, we found that in some instances motorists have actually been assaulted and subjected to bodily injuries at the hands of police officers without justification.

"Such conduct is indefensible in a public servant. And in the minds of tourists who encounter such treatment it creates a contempt for the community which tolerates it."

The jury recommended that the situation be remedied by State's Attorney Swanson calling such matters to the attention of suburban officials and forcing them to take proper action.

The jury also said that it had received evidence regarding spurious motorists' organizations and dubious schemes designed to mulct the motorists. These organizations should be investigated by the next jury, the report said.

GETS LIFE TERM

GEORGE W. E. PERRY.

Found Dead in Evanston; Police Seek His Identity

The police of Evanston and other North Shore towns last night were endeavoring to identify the body of a well dressed man, about 45 years old, who was found dead early yesterday in front of 1024 Lake Shore drive, Evanston. Near his body was a bottle which had contained poison. All marks of identification had been removed from the man's clothing. The only clew discovered was the letter "A" on the belt buckle. The victim weighed about 245 pounds and was about 5 feet 10 inches tall.

BIGAMIST PERRY IS FOUND GUILTY; GETS LIFE TERM

Murder Case Jurors Take Only One Ballot.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Eagle River, Wis., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—George W. E. Perry, Milwaukee brakeman who wooed and married eight women, tonight was found guilty of the murder of his fourth wife.

DISTRICT ATTY. E. H. DRAGER.

The victim of of whose death he was convicted was Cora Belle Hackett, whom he married bigamously after he had deserted a wife and family in Milwaukee and had married and deserted two other women.

The body was found beside a swamp road bordering the Lac du Flambeau reservation of the Chippewa Indian tribe last Oct. 1. The time of the murder was set as July 6, when she accompanied Perry on a tramp in the woods during their honeymoon at the resort of Houston W. Parker on Crawling Stone lake.

The jury was not long in reaching its decision. The verdict was returned in 1 hour and 45 minutes. Jurors later reported that onl— one ballot was taken.

Sentenced to Life Term.

Sentence was passed immediately by Circuit Judge C. M. Davidson of Beaver Dam, Wis. It was life imprisonment in Waupun prison—the maximum penalty in Wisconsin.

The throng in the courtroom bent forward as the judge cautioned them to make no demonstration when the verdict was returned.

"We, the jury, in the court of Vilas county, find the defendant, George W. E. Perry, guilty of murder in the first degree," the judge read slowly. "Are there any motions," he asked.

Mrs. Mary Perry of Milwaukee, the first of his eight wives, screamed.

Attorney John J. Dolan of Milwaukee, representing Perry, moved for a poll of the jury. The jurors stood up and affirmed the verdict as their names were called.

New Trial Denied Perry.

"Under the circumstances the motion for a new trial is denied," the judge said.

There was a moment of silence, broken only by the moans of Perry's first wife. Near her sat Miss Kathryn Gebhardt of Cleveland, third of his wives, who smiled as the verdict was read.

"George W. E. Perry, have you anything to say before sentence is pronounced?" the judge asked.

Perry made no move. The question was repeated and he was nudged by his attorney. Perry leaped to his feet.

"Yes," he shouted, "because I'm not guilty——"

"Anything else?" said the judge.

"That's all."

Judge Imposes Sentence.

"Stand up, George W. E. Perry," the judge commanded. "The court sentences you to imprisonment at Waupun penitentiary for your natural life, the sentence to become official as of noon today."

Attorney Dolan, pointing to the fact the jurors were out less than two hours, announced he would file a writ of error charging that the veniremen were prejudiced.

Many spectators crowded about District Attorney Edmund H. Drager and Special Prosecutor A. J. O'Melia of Rhinelander offering congratulations. O'Melia had made a strong closing argument for the state.

O'Melia blistered Perry as a jubilant, brazen braggart for his attitude on the stand. He hailed Perry's collapse as a sham, pointing to the fact Perry testified "he could always cry a little to get money from the women he married." He termed the defendant "a monumental liar, roaming in fields of lust."

Assailed by Prosecutor.

The prosecutor attacked Perry's defense, declaring "he could remember the names of all the people he met, including his list of wives, which is no mean feat. But he could not remember the names of the friends of his bigamous bride with whom, he said, she was going after their farewell on the day of the murder. Those friends did not appear here. They could not appear here. They existed no more than his rich aunt and wealthy mother—the mythical creatures he employed in wooing his wives by tales of wealth."

In his closing argument Attorney Dolan attacked the state's mass of circumstantial evidence as insufficient to prove the charge against Perry. He pointed out that Houston W. Parker, owner of the resort on Crawling Stone lake, at which the couple stayed, might have faced the same charge.

Possible Case Against Others.

"Parker said he was shooting gophers the day of her death," Dolan declared. "He may have been off in that direction. He needed money and may have met her after her farewell with George. I believe a stronger case could have been made against some one else. I don't believe Parker did this, but similar evidence might have been employed to send him up for life imprisonment."

Dolan scored Perry for his many marriages and expressed sympathy for the women. Despite the philandering tendencies, he declared Perry not to be the killer type, pointing to his kind treatment of the other wives. He assailed the state's witnesses as prejudiced.

Under the barrage cross-examination by O'Melia, Perry stood by the story he told yesterday. He maintained that Mrs. Hackett left him when she discovered he was already married and had no money, giving him her car, clothing and a farewell kiss.

Courted Only 4 Days.

Mrs. Hackett, twice widowed subscription saleswoman for the Chicago Art institute, married Perry June 16 in Chicago after a 4 day courtship She came to the resort at Crawling Stone lake for her honeymoon. On July 16, 1930, she and Perry, according to state's witnesses, went for a tramp in the woods. He carried a .22 caliber rifle. He returned to the resort and fled with her car and clothing.

The body was not discovered until Oct. 1, 1930, near a swamp road bordering the Lac du Flambeau reservation of the Chippewa tribe. Perry at that time was in St. Louis living with a seventh bigamous bride. He fled to San Francisco under the assumed name of Frank Moran.

He was captured last May when a San Francisco policeman recognized his picture in a detective magazine, giving an account of the Hackett murder, as a man who had appeared as a witness in an auto accident case. Perry was returned to Eagle River where he pleaded not guilty.

WOMAN FOUND POISONED.

Mrs. Bernice Wise, 27 years old, a divorcee living at 2956 East 90th street, was found in Bessemer park last evening, suffering from poisoning. She was taken to the South Chicago hospital, given first aid, and removed to the Bridewell hospital. She will recover.

HUGE SPECTACLE TO BE FINALE OF MUSIC FESTIVAL

New Features Will Mark Stirring Program.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

A year ago 150,000 persons made their way into Soldiers' field to see and hear the first Chicagoland Music festival.

That was a night to remember. There was a thrill in seeing them all. There is still a thrill in their memory. They came not only from Chicago but from the five states hereabouts, by steam, by electricity, by gasoline, by animal power, any means of transportation as long as they got there.

The chief, in fact the only reason for bringing up the reminder of that stirring event is that there will be another Chicagoland Music festival in three weeks. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the associated newspapers of Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Iowa have been busy ever since last summer on the project. On Saturday night, Aug. 22, you are invited to come to Soldiers' field and see for yourselves how the plans have worked out.

Sousa to Direct Huge Band.

It is going to be bigger and better this year.

How, for instance, will it strike you to hear a massed band of 2,200 pieces directed by the world's greatest and most famous of bandmasters, the veteran and greatly beloved John Philip Sousa?

That will be one item.

A few weeks ago Victor J. Grabel, the musical director of the festival last year and this, telegraphed Mr. Sousa, who is now in Interlochen, Mich., giving his generous aid and instruction to the National High school band and orchestra camp, inviting him to come to the festival here. Mr. Sousa answered at once, saying that he would be pleased to come if he had no radio engagement to conflict.

Other Stirring Events.

Remember back when—the sailors' band of 1,200 used to come down to Chicago from Great Lakes during the war, Lieut. Sousa at their head, swinging along the streets to the music of the mettlesome, toe-tickling, heart-swelling Sousa marches? That was another event to stir the memory. Of all that Mr. Sousa has done in his long and colorful career to put him among the best loved of Americans, he never did a finer thing than to devote that part of his life to training the bandsmen at Great Lakes.

But we are talking about the Chicagoland Music festival and what its new version is going to present. There is the massed band of 2,200. There will be two concert bands, one of 100 pieces, an additional one of fifty more, to play under the gifted baton of Mr. Grabel. There will be a single drum corps of 400 pieces to do its evolutions over the arena of Soldiers' field. At the time these words are being written some twenty-eight drum corps have entered the festival, nineteen adult and nine juvenile, with a total drumming force of not less than 1,400.

Will Repeat Musical Thrills.

Some of the events last summer proved to be so stirring, so altogether fine in idea and performance, that by unanimous agreement and without discussion they were scheduled for repetition this year. The mighty Hallelujah chorus from Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," is one. It will be sung by a massed chorus of 6,000 voices, and Noble Cain, who conducted it then, will conduct it again. And Mr. Grabel will once again lead the concert band through Tschaikowsky's "1812" Overture, with its raging assertion and its spectacular accompaniment of fireworks and artillery.

You surely have not forgotten how the Negro chorus of 1,000 stirred the 150,000 who were there and the millions who listened over the radio to enthusiastic appreciation of what a fine bit of art the singing of Negro spirituals can be. There will be a change in that feature this year. There will not be a chorus of 1,000. There will be a chorus of 2,000.

So far this accounts for something like 12,000 participants. The numbers are impressive, and they are not all counted yet. Twenty-five competing choruses are one still incomplete item. Ten are mixed, thirteen are male, two female. Twenty-five bands are likewise on the list, sixteen adult, seven juvenile, and Mr. Grabel's two non-competing but actively participating organizations. The massed bands will be added to by 500 members of various high school bands who are entering as individuals rather than organizations to lend their services to the cause of music.

Salvation Army to March.

The drum corps have been mentioned. They are still entering. An additional feature will be 500 members of the Salvation Army who with their own band will march to their own music of "Onward, Christian Soldier."

The program will be in two parts. The first section will be of concert, presenting the features touched upon here and a number of others still to be made public. The second will be a spectacle, bringing down to the present some of the historical incidents of the civil war.

"Sheridan's Ride," one of the most famous Sousa compositions, will be both played and acted here, showing the famous Union general in the event later narrated in an even more famous poem, the story of how he galloped to the front to take charge of his surprised and dismayed soldiers, and by word of mouth example, rallying them and turning a rout into victory.

Spectacle to Close Program.

At the end will come the most colorful scene of all, the ceremonial known as Trooping the Colors. It is symbolical of America's place in the world. Nation after nation, each symbolized by its own flag and feminine color bearer, takes its place in a group, each presented by its own national music. Finally to blare of trumpets and roar of artillery, America takes her place at the head, and America's national anthem is played and sung by every one in Soldiers' field.

So melody, rhythm, and color will take the stage for a few brief hours. The date is Saturday, Aug. 22. Mark it down.

RUSSIAN CHOIR ENTERED FOR MUSIC FESTIVAL

The St. Mary's Orthodox choir of Gary, which is entered in the Gary Post-Tribune's preliminary Chicagoland Music Festival contest, which will be held on Aug. 16 in the Horace Mann High school auditorium in Gary. Prof. Andrew P. Glagolev is director and Gregory Wahner manager.

Start on Their Vacation; Robbed of Auto and Cash

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Kaspen left their home at 3356 Diversey avenue early this morning, bound for a vacation in Wisconsin. They stopped their car for traffic at Spaulding and Milwaukee avenues. Two armed men suddenly accosted them and entered their car. The bandits forced Kaspen to drive to the 1700 block, Keystone avenue, where they took $220 and their machine. The car was recovered later, but the Kaspens, minus their money, probably will spend their vacation at home.

SOLVES FAMILY JOB PROBLEM; HE BUYS ENTIRE KANSAS TOWN

Wichita, Kas., Aug. 1.—(AP)—George Washington Winters, Wichita realtor, has solved the problem of supplying summer jobs for his children by buying a town.

Mr. Winters purchased Waco-Wego, a small town twelve miles south of Wichita—that is to say, he purchased the garage, filling station, grocery store, soda fountain, lunch room, oil station, and a home, which constitute visible Waco-Wego.

Then he moved his family there so his three boys and one daughter now have a variety of jobs at their disposal. The town is on a main highway between Wichita and Wellington.

Pontiac Man Found Dead on Roadside Near Joliet

The body of Philip J. Kruse, 50 years old, of Pontiac, Ill., was found yesterday in the weeds beside state highway No. 4, six miles south of Joliet. Papers in his pockets indicated he came from St. Louis, but relatives who attended the inquest last evening said he lived in Pontiac. Kruse died of heart disease, according to the official findings. He was a real estate dealer.

SWEAT OF HONEST TOIL SAVES HIS $50 IN HOLDUP

Even in hot weather Mr. Clyde Holt enjoys work. So, instead of enjoying cool breezes last night like other folk, Mr. Holt went out to the garage in the rear of his home at 7933 Ingleside avenue and busied himself at various repairs.

In hot weather when Mr. Holt works he perspires. He perspired last night, freely. His clothing gave ample testimony of that. But Mr. Holt's honest toil was suddenly halted when two bandits pounced upon him. Mr. Holt continued to perspire.

One of the visitors took his watch. Then he reached into Mr. Holt's left side pocket. But the pocket was sticky from perspiration, and only with great patience and manipulation did the robber extract some $4 from it. He then gave his attention to the right side pocket of Mr. Holt. He met similar difficulties, then gave it up as a worthless job. The gunmen fled. Mr. Holt reached into his right side pocket. He let out a whoop of joy. There, buried safely in the pocket snuggled a $50 bill which Mr. Holt had, by the sweat of his labor, saved from a bandit hand.

ECONOMY DRIVE OUSTS 35 MORE CITY EMPLOYES

Further Pay Roll Trims Coming, Cermak Says.

Thirty-five more city employés were dropped from the pay rolls yesterday as Mayor Cermak carried his retrenchment drive into the offices of Controller M. S. Szymczak and Collector E. J. Kaindl. Other dismissals, the mayor said, will be announced within a few days.

Twenty of the jobs abolished were in the controller's office, where the force was reduced from 174 employés to 154. The salaries of those dismissed approximated $53,000, so that $21,000 will be saved during the remaining five months of 1931. Frank Absked, head teller, who received $3,440 a year, was one of those released, while Emil Miller, a head clerk at $4,200, resigned to accept a pension.

Fifteen employés were dropped from the collector's pay roll. These and the 20 ousted by the controller were in addition to the 90 dismissals from the health department on Friday, which became effective yesterday.

Deficit Is Certain, Says Cermak.

"It's too bad we have to dismiss old employés, but what can we do?" said Mayor Cermak. "If we continued to pay them, later on we wouldn't be able to pay any one. Even Ald. John Clark, chairman of the council finance committee, admits that our corporate fund budget is going to be $10,000,000 in the red this year. Everybody knows that it will not pay out.

"How are we going to save $10,000,000? Some of the members of the city council don't seem to understand what kind of a crisis we are facing. They think it's a joke. Well, it isn't."

The mayor referred only once to his statement of Friday suggesting that Ald. Clark resign. He said: "The alderman himself first made that suggestion. I didn't." The mayor said he had heard nothing further from Ald. Clark, who could not be reached at his home or office.

Bridewell Saving Reported.

State Senator R. V. Graham, acting superintendent of the Bridewell, reported to the mayor yesterday that he expected savings of $10,862 for the year, of which $7,396 already has been salvaged.

Another economy move announced was in the fire department where Acting Commissioner Edward Maloney reduced the staff of ambulance drivers from 24 to 12, sending the extra 12 men to stations.

Further economies will be made in all departments, according to the mayor, through not filling vacancies. He made public a partial list of these unfilled positions as reported to him by department heads.

There were 48 vacancies reported in the fire department, 7 in the building department, 17 in the public service department, 4 in the boiler inspection department, and 391 in the department of public works. Of the latter number 151 are in the bureau of parks and playgrounds and 56 in the bureau of engineering.

Mayor Cermak yesterday defended his right to keep an official star on his automobile despite the recent passage of an ordinance banning the stars from all cars except those of the police department. The mayor pointed out that his automobile was technically a police machine.

"However," he commented, "it might be a good idea to have the star changed to a shield or some other designation so that the mayor will not be setting a bad example.

Calls Star Just a Joke.

"As a matter of fact, I didn't know I had a star on my automobile until today. These stars really don't mean anything. They are just a joke, but a lot of people like to have them. Over in the county building they used to pay $8 apiece to have them made so they could display them on their cars. It's only vanity, I suppose."

The mayor did not say definitely what he would do about his own star or those on the automobiles of other city officials.

Enforcement Is Ordered.

The ordinance banning the official stars was sponsored by Ald. Barnet Hodes [7th] and passed by the council several weeks ago. It became a law without the mayor's signature. At the last council meeting, Ald Hodes secured the passage of an order directing the commissioner of police to enforce the ordinance by forcibly removing the "I Gotta Drag" emblems from all but police automobiles.

According to Ald. Hodes the only possible purpose to be served by such emblems on nonofficial cars is to give the holder special privileges with regard to violating traffic laws not enjoyed by the ordinary citizen.

HERE'S GRAND OPERA THAT'S REALLY GRAND

"La Rondine" was worth the trip from the loop to the lawns and woodlands of Ravinia. It was a beautiful thing done with perfection, and that is the kind of thing Ravinia offers on almost every night of its season of seventy-three performances of thirty-six grand operas. The letter scene was, in truth, an epitome of the charm and the proficiency of Ravinia opera. The audience rose nobly to it. In this easy al-fresco atmosphere, which you might think would tempt to chatter, it none the less was followed with almost breathless attention, and rapturous applause rewarded it.

The whole performance was worthy of this its high point. Not to vulgarize the achievement by mentioning expense, but to indicate how grand opera is here cast regardless of expense, I may add that it cost four thousand dollars to lift the curtain on this performance, and there was not that much money in the house, although the audience, I should guess, numbered nearly two thousand persons. But the impresario seemed happy, whispering as the applause rolled toward Bori and Johnson after the tempestuous melody of the parting of Magda and Ruggero, "We have no claque here. These cheers mean something!"

The Opera's Story.

The story of "La Rondine" (The Swallow) is, you will recall, the story of "La Dame aux Camelias" with a mournful but not a mortuary ending. Puccini left the score unfinished, and by whose hand it was finished I could not learn. In the last act Magda is moved to surrender the infatuated Ruggero not by the pleading of an Italianized Duval père but by a timid, gentle letter in which the mother of Ruggero gives her consent to the marriage. "Read! Read!" cries the happy lover.

From his hands Mme. Bori receives the letter. It begins with the words "My son," and those words this great singer and actress touches with the delicate nuances, now rapturous, now plaintive, with which she is to adorn the ninety words that follow. "You tell me," the letter continues, "that a sweet creature has touched your heart. May she be blest if God sends her. With tear wet eyes I am thinking that she will be the mother of your children." Here the confident witchery which Mme. Bori hitherto had given Magda quite vanished. She became another woman. The ingenuous piety of the anxious mother humbled the light o' love, and the phrase, "It is motherhood that makes love sacred," searched out her soul. With deeper and ever deeper self-questioning she dwelt upon the words, "If you know that she is pure and good, that she has every virtue, may she be blest." The singer's voice broke. She sang her tears. Humility enveloped her.

The letter drew to a close with the vision of a home which Magda knew she could not enter. The tender lines of welcome brought her only pain and that pain she expressed not so much in a tempest of emotion as in woeful reverie.

"While anxiously I await your return," ran the last sentences, "the honest old home of your parents is alight with joy—to receive the chosen one. Give her my kiss."

Self-questioning culminated in self-sacrifice and the tragedy of the swallow that had flitted from love to love was finished.

Almost Incredible.

To see such acting and hear such singing in an al-fresco setting, where one does not look for the delicacies of interpretation, was almost incredible. The scene has here been described in some detail not because its beauty and power presented an exceptional phase of Ravinia opera but because they are characteristic of it. The performance of "La Rondine" was not made memorable by the achievements of one star alone. It had a multitude of beauties. It was suave and spirited throughout. The rôle of Prunier—the kind of rôle Otis Skinner loves to play and the kind he plays beautifully—was touched with the comedy of Marek Windheim, deftest of operatic comedians. Louis D'Angelo brought his massive dignity and his gift for unobtrusively commanding a scene to the part of Rambaldo, and the piquancy of Florence Macbeth kept Lisette in the classic vein of soubrette acting. There was a really thrilling demonstration by the audience after Mme. Bori's exultant singing of the table song about love and laughter in the cabaret scene, and the tribute of gentle handclapping—as if loath to break a spell—rewarded Papi's conducting of the lovely subdued passage in which the oboes and the cellos are singing to one another in the last act.

Now, the marvel of so much brilliance and painstaking was that "La Rondine" is scheduled for only three performances in Ravinia's current season. But it is done as if for a season's run.

With Fire and Precision.

The next night brought a vehement presentation of the tempestuous fourth act of "Les Huguenots"—Martinelli a great Raoul, Yvonne Gall a Valentine not below the magnificent traditions of that statuesque, but impassioned rôle, Rothier a Saint-Bris not unworthy of comparison with Plançon's colossal rendition of the implacable old zealot, and Danise an ideal Comte de Nevers. The blessing of the poniards, one of the most terrific scenes in music drama, was sung with enormous fire and precision—an achievement to be accounted for by the fact that in this company discipline is so perfect that second principals were singing in the chorus, and singing as if their places were places of honor; in truth they made them such.

The fragment of "Les Huguenots" was preceded by a concert in which Mme. Rethberg was heard in songs of Wagner and Richard Strauss. The crystalline purity of her tones is always a delight, but in concert this dramatic soprano seemed not wholly at ease and her frequent glances into a little book of the words that was bound in material of the same color as her gown blurred her effects. A child, you would have thought, could have mastered the words in an hour. Fifty men of the Chicago orchestra, under the leadership of Eric DeLamarter, played the overture to Weber's "Euryanthe" and the overture to Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini," and, led by Mr. Pelletier, accompanied Mme. Rethberg. It was a distinguished concert and it gave spacious proof of Ravinia's resources.

A Typical Week.

So on through the week—Wednesday evening "Lucia di Lammermoor" with Macbeth as Lucia, Thursday afternoon a concert for children which gave the young people the march from "Tannhäuser," the second movement of Beethoven's Pastoral symphony, and a Strauss waltz that a program note admonished the audience to "compare with the twaddle to which we dance nowadays"; Thursday evening, "Lohengrin," with Rethberg as Elsa and Johnson as the knight; Friday evening, "Samson et Dalila," with Martinelli and Julia Claussen in the title rôles; Saturday evening, "L'Amore dei Tre Re," with Bori as Fiora; Sunday afternoon a concert of Italian music, with Daniel Saidenberg as soloist, which drew an audience of 3,000 persons, mostly rapturous Italians, and on Sunday evening "Il Trovatore," with Rethberg as Leonora.

Such is a typical week at Ravinia; seven evenings and two afternoons of distinction in suave surroundings, and incessant variety without a lapse into the slipshod.

No work is given more than thrice in a season. Last year seventeen operas, including some of the most exacting standard works, were given only twice and seven only once. The season lasts ten weeks and three days, beginning June 20 and ending Aug. 31, and Mr. Moore says that in that period the company presents the fruits of what would—under the usual conditions of operatic production—be a year's work. New works receive at least twelve rehearsals each; the impending production of Deems Taylor's "Peter Ibbetsen," to be revealed tomorrow night, has received many more, owing to the subtle nature of its mise en scène.

The movement of the performances is amazingly expeditious. The rule is to ring down not later than 11 o'clock. At that hour southbound and northbound opera trains of the steam lines and the electric are waiting to convey the people to downtown Chicago, twenty-one miles away, and to the suburbs of the north shore. Half the audience, however, comes in autos and within a few hundred yards of the stage there is parking space for fourteen hundred cars.

Principals, chorus, and orchestra of the Ravinia company number two hundred.

The Lone Policeman.

The staff to keep order is efficient but lonesome. It consists of one policeman who has ample leisure to complete his operatic education, for his official tasks are negligible. In twenty years there has not been a drunken man nor a case of disorderly conduct on the Ravinia scene, and the only criminal character ever identified there was the bootlegger and hoodlum known to the police as "Scarface Al"—and he behaved himself while there. "If he hadn't," said the lone policeman, "I'd a had to jug him."

In the handling of the artists there are none of those devastating rows that elsewhere often make grand opera a Donnybrook fair of temperaments. Discipline is strict, but it is tempered with tact. "I cannot, I will not, sing tonight!" a French singer at Ravinia shrilled at the climax of a brainstorm on the afternoon of a July 14.

"What! Not sing tonight, and you a French artist and this the fourteenth of July, your nation's greatest fête day. Madam, it is incredible!"

She sang.

A World of Talent.

The artists are recruited from the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, with the exception of a few minor people from the Chicago Civic opera. The chorus of forty-eight is "hand picked," as the proprietor put it, from the Metropolitan. The orchestra is composed of sixty members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. There are three operatic conductors—Papi, Hasselmans, and Pelletier—and they have not been changed in eight years. Mr. DeLamarter conducts the orchestral concerts.

Leading members of the company live in villas round about Ravinia, residents away for the summer being glad to sublet to them. They bring their own servants and lead a pleasant life. Otto Kahn, opera's fostering father in New York, once said that the sympathetic tone and settings of Ravinia are so nearly ideal that artists expand there. "They sing," he added, "better than they know how to sing." Every summer for nine years he has made the Ravinia pilgrimage, and his cablegram of greeting at the opening of the present season contained these words:

> In these troublous days there is one investment which has retained one hundred per cent of its value and the dividends from which remain all that the most exacting could wish for—I mean the investment of attendance at the Ravinia performances. Personally I look forward to making that investment and collecting my annual dividend in the shape of artistic enjoyment as soon as possible after I get home.

Little Time for Frivoling.

To the question "How do you amuse yourselves?" one of the singers dryly replied, "We haven't much time for amusements. When we do have it some of us play golf and some go to luncheon parties. You must remember that this company can be assembled in fifteen minutes and we never know when an emergency call is coming."

This year's budget for the season of ten weeks and three days is six hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Last year the deficit was two hundred and forty-one thousand dollars. The proprietor paid one hundred and thirty-nine thousand dollars of that loss and the guarantors—mostly north shore residents—one hundred and two thousand dollars. It was pretty much the same story in 1929. "In other words," said THE TRIBUNE editorially at the close of the 1929 season, "the patrons of Ravinia pay for their pleasure about two-thirds of what it costs, taking no account of Mr. Eckstein's contribution of grounds, buildings, etc."

In view of those facts, Ravinia's prices may justly be described as bargains. To the price of each reserved seat—and there are fifteen hundred of them ranging from $1.25 to $3.50—must be added the admission fee to the park of $1.25, but purchase of a coupon book of admissions reduces that fee to $1.10. Each side of the open air auditorium there are four hundred free seats beneath the trees. I stupidly forgot to try one of them, but the management declared that there is good hearing and good vision from every one of them. Thus it is possible for eight hundred early comers to enjoy Ravinia opera from these side lines for $1.10. The auditor from Chicago, if he comes by train, must also figure a dollar for the round trip into his evening's expenditure.

The audience, whether it sat on the $1.10 sidelines or in the $3.50 best seats, was as much an inspiration as the performance. No chatterers, no gum-chewers, no hip-flaskers were present, and the young people when promenading in the great green oval of lawn between acts did not shriek. The place and the people have tone. It was a representative middle west gathering, for the license plates showed cars from as far away as Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, and Wisconsin. The ushers, brisk, civil lads in black coats and white trousers, did not peddle anything between acts. That was a blessed relief and loop theaters supposed to be of the first class might make a note of it. But they will not.

"The youth! The youth!—they are what I am after," said the proprietor as he surveyed the promenaders. Well, he had his wish, for they were there and were manifesting an honest joy in something besides vacuous movies. "And the children, too, at the Thursday afternoon concerts," added my guide, "are just as appreciative—quiet as mice!"

Big as a Circus.

This operatic plant is huge—big as winter quarters for a circus and as complete. It includes forty acres of lawns, beds of sun-defying petunias, fountains, and groves of oak and hickory—twenty acres each side of the railway tracks—and that area is unobtrusively set with softly toned buildings comprising opera house, scenery loft, costume house, refectory, stadium, rehearsal hall, and living quarters for the local staff of ticket sellers and caretakers. Ravinia makes every stick of its scenery and does much of its own costuming. Its stadium, overlooking three acres of lawn and seating twenty-two hundred people, is used for the children's concerts, which are fostered by the Ravinia Opera club, composed of women of Lake Forest, Highland Park, Glencoe, Winnetka, Kenilworth, and Evanston. This is the club's declaration of purpose:

> The great social need of today is to give young people wholesome entertainment. The aim of these Thursday afternoons for children is both to educate and give pleasure; to give them happy entertainment which they will like and to give it in the best possible manner and through the best means obtainable.

The opera house is open to the woodland on three sides. It is built of Tennessee pine and the sun and rain of twenty years have so seasoned its timbers that it is now a gigantic sounding board. Mr. Moore told me that the acoustics are so perfect that often he has caught a delicate nuance of ensemble at his summer home on the Green Bay road a mile away.

The house is one hundred and fifty feet wide and twenty-six rows deep—as contrasted with the tunnel-like proportions of the vast operatic establishment downtown, which is thirty-nine rows deep. Hence intimacy is part of Ravinia's charm, and intimacy is one of the sources of successful presentation of grand opera. There are only eight boxes and most of them have been in the same families for a decade. The lighting is by electricity, but it is concealed in Japanese lanterns, and hence, like the reticent treatment of the proscenium and the curtain, it is subdued. No teasing signs, no glare, no flamboyancy disfigure an edifice which is not alone beautiful but is a history maker, for here at least three works new to Chicago are produced every summer.

A bugler at 8:05 o'clock daylight saving time calls the people in from the lawns for the lifting of the curtain at 8:15. Then the picture is charming—women streaming in in evening gowns or in sport costumes as fancy prompts them, men in dinner jackets or in white flannels, and the pageantry moving in the glow of the setting sun. Great spaces of blue and gold and crimson in the western sky are the background against which the boughs of whispering trees are silhouetted. Sometimes the searchlights at airports and the fort sway across the scene, and one evening when they were having night maneuvers at Fort Sheridan the deep diapason of artillery solemnly tuned in with the street firing in the fourth act of "Les Huguenots." That was thrilling.

In such a setting families from the bungalow and families from the villa assemble without self-consciousness for lofty enjoyment. This place is a genuine art expression and not a forced flower of "society" and it has a firm place in the affections of the people.

What Insull Thinks of Ravinia.

Ravinia's development to its present status as the most distinguished al-fresco grand opera house in the world has been slow. A quarter of a century ago a promoter intended to make its groves the site of a "refined" kind of Coney Island—if such things be—but he and his project went into bankruptcy. Citizens of the north shore bought control of the place and a modest policy of concert and one-act opera was launched in 1912. Not until 1918, under the present owner, was the policy of full opera and great artists adopted, and to what heights it has been carried is readily illustrated by a remark Samuel Insull made when Mr. Moore was telling him of the scope of a work—"Forty Years of Opera in Chicago"—which the critic then had in hand.

"I hope," said Mr. Insull, "that your book is to contain a chapter on Ravinia opera."

"It's written."

"Good! For no history of what Chicago has achieved in the field of grand opera would be complete without a record of Ravinia."

To get comfortably to one of these memorable performances you will have to have dinner a bit early, for only light refreshments are served in the park. In saner and more genial days of American civilization you could get an excellent dinner there, but under prohibition such service ceased to be profitable. Having dined, take either the 7:25 opera train—daylight saving time—from the Chicago and North Western station or the 7:15 electric train marked "Highwood" from the elevated station at Wabash avenue and Adams street.

Next Sunday Mr. Bennett will take us behind the scenes at Lincoln park, telling us how a great metropolitan recreation ground is run and the multitude of attractions it contains.

100 YEAR OLD DIARY OF ROEBLING, FAMOUS BRIDGE BUILDER, FOUND

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—A 100 year old diary, written by John A. Roebling, founder of the wire and cable industry in this country, was made public today in connection with the observance of the 100th anniversary of Roebling's arrival in America from Germany.

The pioneer Roebling, who died in 1869, was a celebrated designer and builder of suspension bridges, including the Brooklyn bridge. He designed the huge span over the East river between New York and Brooklyn which was completed by his son, W. A. Roebling, in 1883.

The diary came to light through the researches of Dr. Hamilton Schuyler, author of a book soon to be published entitled "The Roeblings—A Century of Engineers, Bridge Builders and Industrialists, 1831-1931." It describes in detail the elder Roebling's trip to America and his invention of wire rope to take the place of hempen cables.

Arriving in Philadelphia, the author of the diary was struck by the cleanliness of the people, which, he pointed out, was partly offset by the swine running loose in the streets. Although the date was 30 years before the civil war, Mr. Roebling commented upon the bitterness over the slavery question, which he foresaw as the cause of a conflict.

AUTOMOBILES TAXED OVER BILLION, 18.3 PER CENT OF VALUE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Motor vehicle taxes in 1930 were listed in the American Automobile association today at 18.3 per cent of the machines' valuation.

The association put the total value of 26,523,779 vehicles at $5,460,716,620, with taxes amounting to $1,000,388,270.

S. D. Walton of Detroit, chairman of the association's taxation committee, said a tax of nearly 20 per cent per annum on any form of property is almost prohibitive. He urged adoption of the tax program advocated by the association to prevent "further pyramiding of motor taxes."

BILLY SUNDAY SEEKS TO STOP SABBATH DAY SWIMMING AT LAKE

Alexandria, Ind., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—An active campaign against recent approval of Sunday swimming at Winona lake will be waged by the Rev. W. A. (Billy) Sunday and his wife, "Ma" Sunday, they said here today.

"Ma" Sunday said she planned to call a meeting of cottagers at Winona as soon as she returned there to have the town board's action either rescinded or nullified.

Sunday said no action would be taken by him until the minutes of the town board had been studied. Mrs. Sunday, however, declared that the Winona Assembly association is the actual controlling body for Winona lake, and said she thought any action taken by the town board to permit Sunday bathing would be voted down quickly by the assembly.

MUSSOLINI SAYS HE WANTS PEACE WITH ALL WORLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Aug. 1. — Inaugurating a new aqueduct at the city of Ravenna, near which he grew up, Premier Benito Mussolini in a speech today declared that he wished peace with all the world, but added that he was not afraid of the risks of war nor of anguish of combat.

The large monumental tower which crowns the aqueduct was dedicated to Ravenna's war dead. This, said Mussolini, was morally significant.

"The Fascist government, the Fascist regimé and the Fascist desire peace," he said. "We want it with far countries, with near countries and those very near. We desire it, not because we fear the risks of war or the anguish of combat, but because we are engaged in great work and because we wish to deliver the Italian people from the straits and hardships of present times.

"We are putting in our constructive work all our will power, which is as inflexible as the blade of a sword, and with the same inflexible will we are ready for the work of destruction and ruin of all those who may be obstacles to the forward march of the Fascist revolution, which must assure the well-being of the Italian people and give them an ever higher sense of their renewed greatness," he said.

NEW CHUMS CHAT AND FIND WIVES ARE SAME WOMAN

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Fred Gurzick happened to mention to a new acquaintance, David Stahl, that his wife was in Virginia visiting her parents.

"So's mine," said Stahl. "Lucille's at Newmarket, Va."

"Lucille? Newmarket?" asked Mr. Gurzick, and one thing led to another and, finally, to the prosecutor's office, where, after a study of marriage certificate from Toledo, O., Assistant Prosecutor W. G. Krise recommended a warrant charging Mrs. Lucille Kingann-Stahl-Gurzick of Newmarket, Va., with bigamy.

CAPONE BOOZE STORY IS TOLD BY PROSECUTORS

Get Rum and Vice Facts for Tax Trial.

While federal income tax prosecutors were beginning their plans to try Al Capone, public enemy No. 1, in September, Assistant United States Attorney Victor E. La Rue announced yesterday that evidence in Capone's booze conspiracy case would be presented to the grand jury on Tuesday.

The reopening of the conspiracy case before the grand jury was ordered by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, who instructed the jurors to hear evidence to determine whether Capone and his sixty-eight codefendants can be indicted on substantive charges of manufacturing or transporting beer. This would subject the members of the $20,000,000 a year beer syndicate to the Jones law penalty of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Must Confer with Witnesses.

The trial of the hoodlum leader, made necessary when Judge Wilkerson refused to be bound by any agreement between the government and the defendant and permitted Capone to withdraw his plea of guilty on tax fraud charges, probably will begin late in September. Meanwhile, United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson and assistants must bring witnesses from various states and confer with them.

The prosecutors refused to state how many witnesses they will have, but it is known that more than thirty testified before the grand jury in the Capone case, exclusive of the dozen or more agents of the intelligence unit, which investigated the case. The government brought witnesses from Pennsylvania, Florida, and California, as well as a dozen Capone gamblers from Cicero.

U. S. Traces Money Orders.

Capone is said to have boasted that he had no bank accounts and thus could never be convicted for tax evasion, but the government agents say they have traced upwards of $100,000 forwarded to him at Miami by telegraphic money order by Joe Fusco, George Howlett, and others connected with his beer business. It is also reported that income from gambling houses will be shown by the testimony of gamblers, as was done in the trial of Jack Guzik through the testimony of Fred Ries, old time gambling house manager.

He named the owners of a circulating Cicero temple of chance as Al and Ralph Brown (meaning the Capone brothers), Jack Guzik, and Frank Nitti, all of whom save Al are under conviction. It is also reported on reliable authority that the government will prove Al received a "cut" in the huge bank accounts of Guzik and his brother Ralph, each of whom deposited more than $1,000,000.

Show Vice Traffic Revenue.

In his petition for a reduction of his civil tax assessment, Ralph claimed that he was only the "cashier" for deposits totaling $1,871,000 in the Pinkert State bank of Cicero. Ralph contended that Guzik and Nitti participated in these accounts, but no mention was made of Al, the latter not having been convicted.

Another source of income to be shown is traffic in vice. A half dozen Capone prostitutes were taken before the grand jury, and they are reported to have sworn that the syndicates took 75 per cent of their receipts. Even so, one of them is said to have testified that she earned $60.75 for herself in one night.

Evidence to be presented to the grand jury in the booze conspiracy case will include, it is reported, documentary records of tapped telephone conversations and the testimony of the special prohibition agents who developed the case.

TAX DODGING A POPULAR SPORT; ONLY RICH PAY

Something Wrong with Law, It Seems.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—At a cost of three years' work and the expenditure of $215,000, the federal government has almost caught up with the Capone brothers, Al and Ralph.

According to Judge Wilkerson's decision Friday, Al Capone will go on trial this fall for evasion of the income tax laws. Ralph Capone has already been tried on a similar charge, found guilty, and his case is on appeal.

Though conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws figures in both cases, the main avenue of attack followed by the government was through prosecution for evasion of the income tax.

It is evident, therefore, that persons who evade payment of their rightful income taxes can be caught, provided the government can spend the time and the money necessary to bring them to justice.

U. S. Needs the Money.

With this fact demonstrated and with the treasury deficit mounting and the question arising of raising additional revenue by taxation, it appears likely that the congressional spotlight will be brought to bear upon the income tax dodger next winter.

Nor will the discussion be limited to a demand for more efficient administration of the income tax law. Instead there are likely to be many who will go into the nature of the tax itself rather than its administration as the cause which annually deprives the treasury of many millions.

The realization is growing that ease and certainty of collection of the income tax is in almost direct proportion to the accuracy and scope of the taxpayer's books. It is extremely difficult to detect evasions in the case of the man who keeps haphazard, sketchy accounts or none at all. To catch him probably would require a greater outlay than it would be worth. Next to the personal property tax, it has been said, no tax is easier to evade than the income tax.

Two Per Cent Pay Tax.

About half of the revenue of the national government is derived from the income taxes on individuals and corporations. About 2 per cent of the population since 1925 have furnished the income tax revenue. Not more than 4⅛ per cent of the people ever paid income taxes at any time.

The latest available figures, which are for 1928, disclose a steady decline in the number of income taxpayers under the present exemptions, beginning with 1925, despite the fact that this was a period of flush times, when it logically would be expected that the number of persons with taxable incomes would increase.

Some members of the joint committee of congress on internal revenue taxation regard this decrease in the total number of returns filed in this period as proof positive that several hundred thousand persons are being permitted to escape an accounting of their incomes to the federal tax gatherers.

Treasury Has Another Theory.

According to the internal revenue bureau, however, the decline of more than 100,000 in the total number of returns was due, paradoxically enough, to too much prosperity.

People cut loose with their newly gotten gains, say the bureau statisticians, and mortgaged the future. They borrowed money to build grander houses befitting their new scale of living, they bought cars and furniture on the installment plan. Interest paid on borrowings and real estate taxes, when deducted from gross income, were sufficient to wipe out small net taxable incomes, and persons thus finding themselves not liable to the federal assessment neglected to file any returns.

Nevertheless, the congressional tax experts are convinced that the internal revenue bureau is failing to round up more than a negligible fraction of the tax dodgers.

One congressman said:

"Give me a flying squadron of fifty picked men, experienced in tracking down tax dodgers, and I will guarantee to bring in one hundred million dollars of additional revenue from persons who have never been on the income tax rolls. The result would be well worth the expense, which would be within $250,000."

In other words, as was shown in the Capone cases, it is a matter of men, time and money.

One large taxpayer, who is also the head of a large corporation, gives it as his considered opinion that the income tax law is violated quite as generally as the prohibition law.

"I think," he said, "that only companies and individuals with interests large enough to employ thoroughly responsible bookkeepers are paying their taxes. I believe this accounts for the fact that so few companies and individuals are paying so large a percentage of the total tax. I doubt if small lawyers and doctors and shopkeepers are paying their tax. I doubt if members of labor unions are being compelled to pay their tax."

HUSBAND KILLS HIMSELF.

Following a quarrel with his wife, Anna, Adam Martinka, 45 years old, 2736 West Pershing road, employed by the American Key Can company, yesterday shot and killed himself.

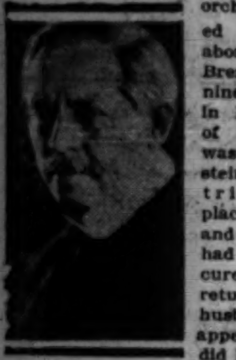
STOCK RETURNS; SAYS EUROPE IS EMPTY OF MUSIC

Tells Plans for Chicago Symphony Season.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, returned here today aboard the liner Bremen after a nine weeks' visit in Europe, most of which time was spent in Gastein, an Austrian watering place where Mr. and Mrs. Stock had gone for the cure. Mrs. Stock returned with her husband and both appeared in splendid health.



FREDERICK STOCK.

Seated at a luncheon table, the veteran Chicago conductor spoke on the effect of the depression on music abroad, the economic crisis in Europe and his plans for the coming season.

He is a gray-haired, ruddy-faced man with a charming personality and talked with direct simplicity and at times with humor as he spooned a melon.

A Jab at Mussolini.

"Mussolini, certainly, he is a musician—he fiddles like Nero," remarked the conductor, and a moment later, "No, I'll have no time for guest conducting this winter; I'll be too busy with my own orchestra."

"I am bringing no new music home this trip," said Mr. Stock, "for the composition of music is at a standstill in Europe. Just as everything else is. I looked through a lot of the latest offerings but found nothing I wanted. One cannot expect the arts to flower under present conditions in Europe."

Mr. Stock said Paderewski, the Polish pianist, would visit Chicago next April to appear at two concerts with the Symphony orchestra. He also revealed that he was planning a visit to Russia next summer as guest conductor for the Leningrad State orchestra, an organization made up of 120 of the finest musicians in the Soviet union.

Praises Russian Music.

"If any great compositions come out of Europe these days, Russian artists probably will produce them," said the conductor. "I am greatly interested in Russian music and look forward with pleasure to the opportunity of studying it at first hand. Miarsawsky, the Russian composer, is doing great work, and there are others. Some of the Russian music is tremendously somber, but it is not all sad. I would say it was the sort of music Tschaikowsky might write if he were living under present day circumstances."

The European symphony orchestras are being disbanded or reduced in size, and the only remaining ones are in the great cities, said Mr. Stock. The music festivals in Germany and Austria have been hard hit by the falling off of tourist trade and the unsettled conditions in the countries. Cheap music is sweeping over Europe and very little serious composition is being attempted.

Europe Wants to Forget.

"The craze for light, quick tempo music is prevalent everywhere," explained the conductor, "for the people want something cheerful to make them forget their troubles. The Cuban music, popular in America, has spread to Europe and is replacing the slow Spanish waltzes and tangoes. Europe still wants jazz music."

Mr. Stock said the Chicago Symphony orchestra would not open its season until mid-October and that he intended remaining at his summer home in Wisconsin until early in that month. He said the orchestra would not be reduced in size and would give 126 concerts during the season of 28 weeks.

Henry E. Voegeli, manager of the orchestra, who came east to meet Mr. Stock, said the orchestra would visit Pittsburgh twice next season and would come as far east as Buffalo. Mr. Voegeli also said arrangements had been made for special radio broadcasts next season. The radio concerts will be heard on Sunday afternoon over the National Broadcasting company's hookup.

Mr. and Mrs. Stock will leave for Chicago tomorrow on the Century and go almost immediately to their Wisconsin summer home.

Two holdup men were captured in a thrilling chase in downtown streets yesterday after they had held up the Century Electrotype company at 547 South Clark street. In the picture, left to right, standing: Morris Koven, who aided in capture; Sergt. John Martin; his son, Edward Martin, and Deputy Chief of Detectives Lawrence Rafferty. Seated, left to right: Edgar Courtner and Dan Prendergast, the bandits, and Chief of Detectives John Norton.

Mrs. Anna Baranski (left), who was captured, and her son, John Baranski, who was killed by policemen after he held up real estate office at 4819 Irving Park boulevard.

TWO PAY ROLL BANDITS CAUGHT IN LOOP CHASE

Two robbers who had raided the offices of the Century Electrotype company at 847 South Clark street and taken a $2,500 pay roll were pursued through downtown streets and captured by the police yesterday morning. Two others who had been their accomplices in the holdup escaped.

Those arrested are Dan Prendergast, 33 years old, 3826 Lowe avenue, who was carrying the loot, and Edgar Courtner, 30 years old, 536 West 45th street. Prendergast was taken at Van Buren and Dearborn streets by Sergt. Martin after the cab in which he was riding had been forced to the curb. Traffic Policeman Lester Carr captured Courtner in a hardware store at Dearborn and Harrison streets.

The four robbers had forced Miss Delia O'Halloran, cashier, to hand them the money. They then compelled an elevator operator to take them from the company offices, which are on the eighth floor, to the street. The robbers who were captured named Earl Bergman, 21 years old, and a man known as "Baldy" as their accomplices, and these two are being sought. Prendergast, the police said, is under indictment for three other robberies.

BANDIT MOTHER SEIZED; BANDIT SON SHOT DEAD

Swift Drama Enacted After Holdup.

Death Pursues Her Son.

Before her eyes swift drama was enacted. Her accomplices tried to commandeer an automobile in which a man and a woman were riding. The driver didn't stop and the robbers fired, striking the car twice. Kretschmer was approaching and the two gunmen fled on foot in different directions. It was the ex-convict son of Mrs. Baranski whom the policeman pursued.

He ran north, dashed into a passageway at 4018 North Lavergne avenue, and hid under a rear porch. Kretschmer went boldly after him. When the bandit drew a pistol and refused to surrender Kretschmer shot him through the heart. Still, little more than a hundred feet away, sat the grandmother bandit.

Grandmother Doesn't Squawk.

The police believed at first that she was quiet because she was terror-stricken. They changed their belief when she was questioned at the Irving Park station. She declined to tell even her name. She displayed no emotion when she was told her son was dead. Her only remark was:

"I don't squawk."

Sol Kapp, druggist at 5001 Irving Park boulevard, and Harold Dereby, druggist at 6425 Irving Park boulevard, looked at her and told of her "casing" their places and of the follow-up robbers who trailed her. They pointed their fingers at her and said: "That's the woman." But Grandmother Bandit Baranski merely sniffed. She didn't squawk.

SLAYER OF MAN, 90, BEGINS TERMS.

Columbus, O., Aug. 1.—(AP)—William Gibbons, 22, convicted slayer of Henry H. Gay, 90, Cannelville civil war veteran, entered Ohio penitentiary this afternoon to begin a left term for the slaying.

CANADA TO SPEND 100 MILLIONS ON POOR AND JOBLESS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 1.—Canada's parliament adjourned tonight after continuous sessions since March 12. Legislation was passed giving the government a "blank check" to meet unemployment and farm relief problems next fall and winter. It is officially estimated 300,000 Canadians will require financial assistance. More than $100,000,000 will be required to provide work, food, clothing and shelter.

Seven Experts Appointed by Tax Appraisal Chief

Seven experts were appointed by Charles E. Fox, director of tax appraisals for the board of assessors, yesterday. The assumed their posts immediately. All the men except one will work in the land valuation department. Maj. Frederick N. Wildish, world war veteran and until recently vice president of a Chicago engineering concern, enters the industrial building department. The other appointees are: Walter W. Majewski, Frank B. Reynolds, Henry F. Hallman, Donald H. Stuart, Joseph E. Serhant, and Robert C. Goldsmith.

R. NEY SEEKS NEW TRIAL ON MURDER CHARGE

[illegible]s Plea on Affidavit Made by Juror.

Dr. Thomas J. Ney, 7010 Stony Island avenue, convicted abortionist, who dodged trial on a murder indictment for more than three years, filed affidavits yesterday before Acting Chief Justice Harry B. Miller of the Criminal court on which he hopes to obtain a new trial from Judge Joseph B. David. The latter imposed a 14 year sentence on Dr. Ney about two weeks ago after a jury had found him guilty of murder by abortion.

George E. Roberts, 812[illegible] Crescent place, one of the jurors in Dr. Ney's trial, says in an affidavit filed by Attorneys Ward Swalwell and Arnold B. Morris in behalf of the convicted doctor, that he was himself convicted in the federal court of conspiracy to conceal assets in a bankruptcy case. In the affidavit Roberts admits that he did not properly answer the defense question as to whether he was ever interested in the outcome of a criminal trial.

Witness Against Bandit.

Roberts' affidavit says in addition that he was robbed four or five years ago while an employé of a chain store. He appeared to prosecute the bandit in court, he says.

Several times the same subject has come up in the Criminal courts, it was said by the state's attorney's office, and the juror was invariably punished for contempt of court. The prosecutors refused to say that such a claim alone is sufficient to justify the granting of a new trial.

Allows Filing of Petition.

"I do not know how Judge David will feel about me entertaining a motion in a case which he has decided, but inasmuch as it is the last day of the court term I will allow you to file your petition, as the state's attorney's office offers no objection," said Judge Miller. "The matter is referred to Judge David for hearing on Monday."

Judge David overruled Dr. Ney's previous motion for a new trial as soon as it was made after the jury returned its verdict.

WINNERS IN HOME FURNISHINGS GO ON TOUR OF U. S.

Twenty-four Get Prizes in National Contest.

Relative merits of period and modern furniture was the chief topic of conversation yesterday among the twenty-four winners of the recent home styling competition of the National Home Furnishings program. Headed by Miss Frances Walker of San Francisco, 26 years old, who won the $1,000 first prize in the contest, the group set sail last night for Muskegon, Mich., on the start of a tour of the district that offered the cash prizes for the principal winners.

Will Visit Historic Homes.

Included in the tour also are pilgrimages to the beautiful homes on historic sites in many states. Chief among the visits to such establishments is an inspection of Mount Vernon. Southern mansions that harbored civil war generals and other points of interest will be seen by the group, which includes both amateurs and professionals in the art of interior decoration.

Piloted by William F. Sullivan, director of the National Furniture News bureau, the visitors began their expeditions in Chicago yesterday with a trip to the Century of Progress grounds, where they inspected the modernistic buildings and part of the equipment that will be used in 1933. Capt. John W. Gorbey of the fair's exhibit staff guided them about the site.

Visit Chicago Buildings.

Stops were made yesterday also at the mayor's office, the Board of Trade building, the National Broadcasting company's studios on the Merchandise Mart, the Congress hotel, where they were guests at a luncheon, and the College inn, where a dinner was given last night.

To capture their prizes the entrants submitted plans for changing the furnishings of an illustrated room according to the dictates of taste and mode. Floor plans were submitted showing the most artistic and convenient groupings of furniture, and color charts detailed the tones to be employed.

VANDERBILTS READY FOR DIVORCE; MAY BE IN COURT TOMORROW

Reno, Nev., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. and his wife, the former Mary Davidson Weir of Chicago, who separated last June, are ready to face each other in Divorce court, possibly Monday.

It was reliably learned today that after much dickering they had arrived at an agreement on alimony payments, and that it now awaits only approval of Mrs. Vanderbilt's father. If this is received today or tomorrow then they will have their case heard by Judge Benjamin F. Curler on Monday, probably behind closed doors, otherwise they may wait another week.

William Woodburn, attorney for Mrs. Vanderbilt, indicated today that an agreement also had been reached whereby the decree will go to his client on her crosscomplaint alleging cruelty.

The Vanderbilts separated June 15 after an affair Vanderbilt asserted his wife had had with Peter Arno, noted caracaturist.

He filed suit for divorce four days later, charging cruelty.

Mrs. Vanderbilt filed her cross-complaint June 23.

Barber Killed, Wife Saved When Folding Bed Closes

Denver, Colo., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Warren E. McLean, 61, Denver barber, was killed and his wife, Sarah, 56, narrowly escaped death when an old fashioned folding bed trapped them as they lay listening to a radio program last night.

Damage suits totaling $250,000 against Old Doc Lester Tilton were pending in the Superior court yesterday with the filing of two more malpractice bills by patients who were treated in his cancer clinic.

With Tilton are named Dr. Joseph Duffy, 5755 North Clark street, a licensed physician, and two sisters, Mary Wenceslaus and Mary Modesta, from the Felecian convent at 3800 Peterson avenue, where the clinic was held. Both new suits demand $50,000. They are the third and fourth which have been instituted against Tilton within a fortnight. The earlier suits demanded a total of $150,000 damages.

The complainants in yesterday's actions are Mrs. Lillian Kunzweiler, 34 years old, 3709 North Hermitage avenue, and Cezar Hrynakowski, 36 years old, 2322 North Moody avenue. Their bills filed by Attorney Robert Lewis and Charles McDonnell, charge the four defendants with misrepresenation, negligence, and a wanton disregard for duty in selling and administering harmful drugs which they knew would not effect a cure of cancer.

Hrynakowski has become bedridden and is confined to his home in a critical condition, his bill avers, while Mrs. Kunzweiler is gravely ill at the county hospital.

Both patients charge that Dr. Duffy examined them with Tilton and promised an absolute cure. They add that both the sisters in the convent declared themselves to have been cured of cancer through Tilton's treatments.

According to the attorneys, the treatments offered consisted of salves which were rubbed on the skin and taken internally when dissolved in water. One remedy, according to Attorney Lewis, was a powerful corosive and caused severe burns.

Tilton was named with Dr. Otto Holinger, 4632 North Rockwell street, also a licensed physician, in suits filed last week by Mrs. Mary Zembroski and Mrs. Hilda Bittner.

PUZZLED HOUSEWIFE FINDS ANSWER TO PROBLEMS AT REVELL'S

Mrs. A. had been very busy all Spring and Summer working in her garden and getting her lawn to look like velvet. It was a sight to behold . . a perfect picture of a cool Summer scene. She showed it to all her friends.

"It is all very beautiful and you should be mighty proud of it," said Mrs. B. next door, "but of what good is it?"

Now, Mrs. A. had not thought of that. However, Mrs. B. was quite right. The lawn and flowers were gorgeous, but no one was really enjoying them. They were merely a background.

Suddenly Mrs. A. had an idea. She had worked hard on this garden . . why not enjoy it now? Why not entertain that bridge club she had been putting off until Fall? She would get some furniture for that garden and make it an outdoor living room.

That is just exactly what Mrs. A. did. She came right down to Revell's, who were offering special prices on Summer furniture, and purchased metal tables with chairs to match with a huge umbrella over all. This ensemble was reduced from $60 to $39.75. Then she added some folding style chairs with colorful duck backs, and seats, $3.75 each, and some odd tables. A $35 glider was purchased for $19.75, because Mrs. A. decided that was double economy . . . she could use it on the porch after she had entertained with her garden party.

Needless to say, Mrs. A.'s garden bridge party was a huge success, economically as well as socially, for Mrs. A. took advantage of the unusually low prices offered in Revell's Clearance of Summer Furniture.

REVELL "PRIZE BARGAIN" CONTEST AWARDS TO BE ANNOUNCED NEXT SUNDAY

The editor is extremely gratified at the huge stack of letters from the hundreds of Revell customers who almost clamored to tell of their particular bargain that was secured at Revell's.

The judges will have a very busy time this week because every letter is so interesting it will be extremely difficult to decide just which ones to choose.

But their work will be finished promptly and the prize winners will be announced in next Sunday's advertisement.

WATCH FOR THE WINNERS!

REVELL ORIENTAL RUG PRICES ASTOUND CONNOISSEURS

Time and again when Revell's customers, who have loved and made a study of Oriental rugs, see the remarkably low prices on such beautiful specimens of the Oriental Rug weaver's art, they marvel.

Oriental rug prices are the lowest in 15 years and these lovers of fine rugs are busy collecting them as fast as possible.

Revell's collection is, as usual, the recipient of much attention, for Revell's have specialized in good Orientals.

At Revell's you will find salesmen who have made a study of the fine points of Oriental Rugs and can give you intelligent information regarding the rugs you buy. That is very important when purchasing an Oriental!

Because Revell's did not sign any long term contracts and have always bought rugs in the open market, quality here is higher and prices lower than the regular run of rugs found in the retail market today.

The small scatter size rugs are being used now thrown carelessly on the plain carpet floor, and the effect is very charming and beautiful. These scatter size rugs are extremely reasonable now and the purchaser with an eye to thrift will do well to use Revell's Oriental Rug prices as a basis of comparison.

NATION'S POLICE FAIL, IS REPORT OF WICKERSHAM

Influence of Politicians Is Assailed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Because of their "general failure" to perform their duty, the police of this country have forfeited the public confidence, the Wickersham committee, now disbanded, declared in its report to President Hoover, made public today.

AUGUST VOLLMER.
[Acme Photo.]

The picture of the typical police force as drawn by the commission was one in which politics was all powerful and often sinisterly so in which the chief of police fearfully—or perhaps with a purpose—obeyed the commands from the appointing power above; in which the chief had office on the average for only 2½ years; and in which the subordinates were often incompetent, sometimes crooked, and almost always job holders by virtue of political favoritism.

Foreign Born a Problem.

Under such a system, the commission went on, the police are expected to cope with crime in metropolitan cities filled with foreign born, ignorant of the language, as yet untutored in American customs, and distrustful of all authority. They are burdened with a multiplicity of duties.

Supporting the report of the commission was a detailed study made by David G. Monroe and Earle W. Garrett, research assistants in the University of Chicago's department of political science, under the direction of August Vollmer, professor of police administration at the University of Chicago. They pointed out that no method of law enforcement could succeed where public opinion had not been educated to demand the law enforced.

"According to the theorist, if the police wished they could easily stop bootlegging, gambling and prostitution. But is this true?" They said. "How does it happen that repressive moral legislation is unenforceable where education has not preceded the legal enactment, regardless of the country in which this repressive legislation has been initiated? Severe penalties may be imposed for peddling opium in China but opium continues to be peddled. Does the famous English bobbie cope with minor gambling regulations in London? Has the repression of prostitution succeeded in those communities where the police are not supported by a strong public sentiment?"

Dry Law Brings Problems.

The coming of prohibition, they declared, marked the dividing line between an older type of crime and a modern, highly organized, richly financed type.

"Crime with all its ramifications is most complex and wholly different from what it was a few generations ago. Crime is better organized and better financed than in the pre-Volstead days," they explained. "Racketeers are to be found in every city, large or small, operating successfully by intimidating business men and labor unions. Crime is big business and requires police executives of unusual ability to prevent it from destroying governmental foundations."

In their study and report, Mr. Monroe and Mr. Garrett added as a causative factor in poor police work, the lack of public appreciation for good work and the continued dependence of the public on political organizations.

Political Power Emphasized.

The evil of political power, pull, and protection was the factor emphasized throughout in the commission's report.

It is this, the commission found, that accounts for the short tenure of office of the average police chief. In ten large cities with populations of more than 500,000 the average term served by a chief is a "mere 2.41 years."

In Chicago, it was noted, there have been thirty-two chiefs of police in seventy years; fourteen in the last thirty years.

Each change of administration, it was pointed out, was invariably followed by a general shakeup. No business, the commission maintained, could be efficiently run on such a system.

"The control which politicians have over the appointment and conduct in office of the chief is a well known evil," said the report.

Chief Appointive Job.

"The chief is usually appointed by the mayor, subject to confirmation by the city council or board of aldermen. Such appointment is, however, never a guaranty of competency for the place of the person appointed, but is simply an assurance that he is the personal appointee of the mayor and subject to his arbitrary control, or, more likely, that he is satisfactory to the party politicians whom the mayor felt obliged to consult before he dared risk confirmation of his nominee.

"The chief knows perfectly well to whom he owes his appointment; he knows when he accepts office that he must in the administration of it yield the interest of the public in the prevention, detection, and prosecution of criminals with political alliances, to the powerful protection of his own patrons. The chief, being subject to arbitrary dismissal when by any action he displeases the mayor or politicians who put him in office, must, if he desires to retain office, necessarily be cautious, in the discharge of his duties, to heed the admonitions of his patrons and to follow their often brutal orders to go easy on this or that criminal or criminal gang who are in alliance with his patrons.

Public No Longer Fooled.

"The public have long been sickened by the usual formula periodically issued from the mayor's office whenever there is a change in that office, that the new chief has received orders to heed no one in the discharge of his duties, but fearlessly to protect the public against the criminal."

Milwaukee was lauded as a city with an enviable record for the prevention and prompt detection of crime, and the reason was found in the fact that it has had only two chiefs of police in 46 years.

CERMAK AND CHIEF DEFEND POLICE FROM WICKERSHAM REPORT

Chicago's police force is not so corrupt and inefficient as it is pictured by the Wickersham commission in the opinions of Mayor Cermak and Acting Commissioner Alcock. Both took issue yesterday with the latest report of the commission dealing with police shortcomings.

Although it is true that Chicago's police chief has been changed 14 times in the last 30 years, Mayor Cermak pointed out that the present acting commissioner served as deputy chief for 10 years and could not be charged with inexperience. Further, he said, the police department has been divorced from politics under his administration which took office while the Wickersham survey was being made.

"I believe the men of the Chicago police force as I know them are of average intelligence," said Mayor Cermak. I sometimes wonder why they don't apply their intelligence to some other line of business."

Acting Commissioner Alcock disputed the statement in the Wickersham report that the Chicago police communication system was too slow to cope with modern criminals. The local police flash board, he said, provides radio, teletype and telephone flashes within thirty seconds.

DRY RAIDING AND MOTORING SOFT JOBS FOR POLICE

Three Officers Have Nine Chauffeurs.

Nine policemen, drawing salaries totaling $21,600 a year, are assigned permanently to chauffeur duty for Chief of Detectives John Norton, Deputy Chief Lawrence Rafferty, and First Deputy Commissioner James B. Scanlan.

Seven patrolmen and a sergeant, drawing total salaries of $19,700 a year, report daily at the headquarters of Prohibition Administrator J. F. Herbert to either lounge all day or assist seventy prohibition agents in serving warrants. The agents average four or five liquor raids a day.

Listed as Choice Jobs.

There is considerable debate at the detective bureau, it became known yesterday, over the respective attractions of the two jobs—chauffeuring and dry raiding. It is generally agreed, however, that between them they are the choicest police posts in Chicago.

"If I had my chance I'd take the dry job," sighed a young rookie in a bright new uniform.

"A buddy of mine got assigned there and was telling me how it works," he explained. "You come in at 9 a. m. and plant yourself for a game of pinochle or, if its a raid, you split the deck to see who goes.

"They all want to go," he added, "because the government pays 'em each $1.50 withness fees next morning in court and allows 10 cents a mile for transportation. The dimes mount up, especially when you ride a street car."

"You're a bright young lad and you'd best be steering clear of the prohibition office," observed a grizzled old sergeant. "If I had my youth I'd be out for a job driving Rafferty's car. There's a pipe for you.

Called Loafing Job.

"Let's see," the sergeant reflected. "He's got Tom McEnery, Henry Jansen, and Sergt. Fred Kahler driving for him now. Suppose you have the early watch. You pick up Rafferty at 8 a. m. at his home in Beverly Hills, drive him to the bureau and loaf until 4 o'clock, when you're relieved.

"If you're on the middle watch you report to the bureau at 4 o'clock, drive Rafferty home and then turn in on a cot a Gresham station. You can snooze from then on to midnight when the late watch man takes your cot. On the late watch, you're turned out once in a while to take Rafferty to a murder, but not often."

"I'd rather be driving for Norton," asserted another patrolman. "He's at the bureau until late at night and all you have to do is drive his family in the country in the evenings. Once in a while it's a movie they want, and they ask you in to see the show."

Finds Police Useful.

Prohibition Administrator Herbert, commenting on the assignment of the patrolmen to his office, said the arrangement existed before he took office here a year ago and that the men were useful in liquor cases involving delinquent minors and disorderly houses. Sergt. Alex Gasparick is in charge of the detail.

Chief Norton said he would make his explanation, if any, to Acting Commissioner Alcock. Pursuant to Mayor Cermak's order, Alcock in the past few weeks has been attempting to eliminate unnecessary police details to provide for the maximum number of the city's 5,000 policemen on patrol duty.

This Statement Taken From the Chicago Tribune Substantiates What John A. Colby & Sons Have Been Proving for Months

New Fall Furniture Now Showing at New Low Prices

Brides and grooms of the summer of 1931 get a break. Brides and grooms of all ages, for that matter, have cause for rejoicing in the findings of a survey made in Chicago by the United States Department of Labor. Here is what the government discovered:

According to the figures on the price tags in Chicago retail stores, a home may be furnished for less money than at any time in more than thirteen years. Not since some time between 1917 and 1918 has it been possible to buy at prices as low as at present the tables, chairs, beds, draperies, rugs and other equipment which transform a house or apartment into a home.

The all-around purchasing power of the consumer's dollar now is $1.41, figuring that it was an even dollar in 1920. But at the stores that sell furniture a single dollar today packs nearly twice the punch it did ten years ago. Today a dollar will buy as much home making equipment as $1.88 would a decade ago.

Chicago stores already are featuring complete lines of new fall furniture. It will pay to investigate and take advantage of the present low prices.

JOHN A. COLBY & SONS
129 NORTH WABASH AVENUE

MRS. BLACKLIDGE SURRENDERS ON WHOOPEE CHARGE

She Is Freed by Police on Bond of $25.

Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge, former collector of internal revenue named in a warrant charging disorderly conduct, walked into the Burnside police station late last night and surrendered. She posted $25 cash bail immediately and walked out.

The warrant was obtained by her neighbor, Mrs. Cora Rowe of 940 East 82d street, who alleges that hilarious parties were held frequently in the Blacklidge apartment, which is above her own, and disturbed the peace of the building. The warrant was the second in the case. It was granted yesterday by Judge John J. Lupe in the South Chicago court, to supersede the first warrant which disappeared after it had been issued by Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in the Felony court.

Missing Warrant Is Found.

During the day the mystery of what became of the first warrant during the more than thirty-six hours it was missing was cleared up when Clerk Charles Lundberg of the South Chicago court admitted that he had received it in the mail on Friday, but had disregarded it because it was not correctly signed. Yesterday morning, after numerous inquiries had been made about the warrant, Lundberg delivered it to Judge Lupe, who directed a police squad to go to the Rowe home and bring the complaining witness before him.

When Mrs. Rowe appeared in court Judge Lupe explained that he had received an unsigned warrant bearing her name and asked whether she still wanted such a document, as the original was illegal. Mrs. Rowe declared that she did and repeated her grounds for seeking it.

Gets a Second Warrant.

"My husband and I are unable to sleep because of the disturbances every night from Mrs. Blacklidge's flat," she told the court. "I went to Judge Hartigan to get a warrant because he was a neighbor of ours, and I thought I got a legal one. But if it isn't right, I'll swear out a complaint for another."

She was directed to the clerk, where she repeated her charges and obtained the second warrant, which was signed by Judge Lupe and sent to the Burnside police station.

Mrs. Blacklidge, who was forced to resign as internal revenue collector after the now famous faro game in Springfield in which Edward R. Litsinger of the board of review lost $50,000, told reporters that she could not understand Mrs. Rowe's attitude. Her only parties, she insisted, were the entertainments she held for two bridge clubs of which she is a member.

BOMB MARKS LINER LAUNCHING CEREMONY

BOMB EXPLOSION HERALDS KING'S VISIT TO GENOA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENOA, Italy, Aug. 1.—A bomb exploded in front of the offices of the Italian Transatlantic society, in the heart of the business section, today, just a few hours before King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena arrived for the launching of the ocean liner Rex.

The explosion, the fourth bombing in Genoa in recent weeks, caused a panic. Police placed the city under practically martial law, and searched every one found in the neighborhood. Hundreds were arrested.

Although the blast damaged the Transatlantic society's offices and shattered windows of buildings nearby, no one was injured. In one of the two hotels which flank the office where the explosion occurred was Under Secretary of State Allieri. In the other Gov. Somalia Rava, the duke of Abruzzi and several deputies were staying. Windows of their rooms were shattered.

Unperturbed by the bombing, the king and queen later witnessed the launching of the liner Rex, with which Italy intends to bid for the blue ribbon of trans-Atlantic traffic, at Sestri Ponente, near Genoa. The launching was also witnessed by cabinet ministers and a crowd of more than fifty thousand.

7,200 Given Road Jobs in Illinois for One Week

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Employment for 7,200 men was provided by state and county highway construction during the week that ended July 22, it was announced today by Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer. The tabulation disclosed that the employment rate has increased 100 men a day over the state since the middle of July.

WOMAN TEACHER, 22, IS EXONERATED AFTER CAR KILLS DEBUTANTE

West Chester, Pa., Aug. 1.—(AP)—A few hours after she had surrendered to police Miss Mary W. Broughton, 22, of Collingswood, N. J., a school teacher, was exonerated by a coroner's jury today of responsibility of the death of Miss Elizabeth Parke, West Chester debutante.

Miss Parke was struck yesterday by Miss Broughton's automobile and died in a hospital of which her father is president of the board of managers.

Miss Broughton, who teaches school at Mount Airy, Md., was first sought as a hit and run driver, but she told police she had no idea the girl was even seriously hurt until she read of her death in a newspaper today.

At the inquiry Miss Broughton testified she had been driving slowly, approaching a red traffic light, when Miss Parke stepped from behind a parked automobile into the path of her car.

Writ Halts 202 Service Car Drivers in East St. Louis

Belleville, Ill., Aug. 1.—(AP)—A temporary injunction restraining 202 service car drivers from operating in East St. Louis and between that city and Belleville was issued in Circuit court here this afternoon. The injunction was granted on application of the attorney general's office, following complaints by bus and trolley companies that the service car were not complying with the Illinois law governing common carriers.

2 ARRESTED AS DRY VIOLATORS.

Benton, Ill., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Albert Askew, former star athlete of Benton Township High school, and Claud Allen, Mount Vernon, were arrested here last night by federal agents and charged with violation of the prohibition law.

HEIRESS BLOCKS EVICTION OF 59 POOR FAMILIES

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ethel Clyde, New York heiress, today saved from eviction the families of 59 striking coal miners by posting bonds totaling $8,850 to guarantee rent payments for a year.

The homes from which the miners and their families were moving their furniture were company owned. Mrs. Clyde, who was touring here, said:

"I'm interested in fair play. Unfortunately, the residents of West Virginia seem to take far less interest in these poor miners than I, a stranger. I don't represent any charitable or philanthropic group."

Father Was Ship Magnate.

On June 8, 1928, Prof. Russell Gordon Smith of Columbia university, a life long friend of the Clyde family, leaped thirteen stories to his death from her apartment.

Police Hunt Suspect in Lake County Beer Killing

Police last night searched the western part of Lake county last night for Jake Schrieber to question him in connection with the murder of Matthew Hoffman, 33 years old, beer runner. Hoffman was taken for a ride Thursday night, and his body was found the next day near the village of Aptakisic. Hoffman was last seen alive when he left his home to deliver some beer to a roadhouse owned by Jack Hackney. Schrieber, it is alleged, asked Hackney to telephone the order to Hoffman.

NAVY IS URGED TO TRAIN GUNS ON PROPAGANDA

Retired Officer Makes Appeal to Public.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—An appeal for greater activity on the part of the navy department in counteracting foreign propaganda designed to influence American public opinion on matters of naval policy and arms limitation was published today by Capt. Dudley W. Knox, retired, in the current number of the United States naval institute proceedings. Such a policy must be followed, Capt. Knox said, if American public opinion on naval matters is not to be adversely affected by unfair foreign and pacifist propaganda during the months previous to the scheduled convening of the Geneva arms conference next February.

According to Capt. Knox, propaganda originating partly abroad and partly in pacifist centers in this country today plays a big part in the preparation of American public opinion on naval matters and upon American naval policy. To combat this situation the naval officers advocated that the navy department make public accurate and comprehensive technical information regarding the American naval establishment whenever the American position was misrepresented.

As an example of propaganda designed to have an adverse effect on American sea power Capt. Knox pointed to the efforts made during the negotiation and ratification of the London naval treaty to injure the prestige of American naval officers opposed to the treaty and thus discount the value of their advice.

"Now that we seem to be in an era of periodic limitation conferences it is a matter of considerable national importance that the American public should be protected against the sophistry which would have them discount the advice of their own naval officers while indirectly and unknowingly accepting foreign naval advice," Capt. Knox said. "The United States is dangerously close to that situation today."

FRANCE BUILDING PLANE FOR 'WAR' IN STRATOSPHERE

In Race with Germany to Make First Machine.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 1.—France and Germany are waging a neck and neck race to build a stratospheric plane capable of flying four hundred to six hundred miles per hour through the thin, cold and calm spaces above the earth's envelope of air—50,000 feet up.

This sounds like a vision and was until Prof. Auguste Piccard, the Swiss scientist, arose to those parts and supplied missing factors that changed a plausible theory into a working hypothesis. Now two hard-boiled commercial air firms—Farman of France and Junkers of Germany—are supported by two very practical governments, the motives of which have nothing to do with the advancement of science. They are spending thousands of dollars and are utilizing the services of spies in an effort to put the first stratospheric plane into the air.

French Plane Nearly Ready.

The French entry in this stirring race for military and commercial supremacy is very near completion and before long will be given its first trial. It is even possible that such trials are being made now. In an interview, an experienced American pilot, who saw the plane at the Farman factory two months ago, said it was more than half finished then. But for him nothing would have been known concerning the details of the new machine, as its construction is surrounded by war time secrecy and the hangar, where it is being built, is surrounded by a heavy guard which few pass.

The Farman machine is rather a small model all metal plane with a round torpedo like fuselage, and stream lined throughout. The fuselage is about 25 to 30 feet long with double walls to withstand the pressure from within.

Guard Against Plane Bursting.

Pressure is one of the greatest difficulties of flying into the stratosphere. Construction of a hermetically sealed fuselage with oxygen tanks as in a submarine is comparatively simple. The real problem is to prevent the machine from bursting apart through the difference of heavy pressure within and the light pressure of the rarefied atmosphere without. Prof. Piccard solved this problem on his balloon with an aluminum ball for his "basket," and the same principles have been applied to the new plane.

The motor, naturally, will be supercharged, with turbine compressors used to maintain a normal air pressure within. A special heating system keeps the motor from freezing in a temperature of 135 degrees below zero, which Prof. Piccard found prevalent in the stratosphere.

One unusual feature in the French machine is that the pilot's cockpit is elevated so he has a clear vision about and ahead of him. As the plane gains altitude and rises into the stratosphere the pilot revolves a wheel, which lets him down into the fuselage and completely seals the ship. Then the pilot flies entirely by instruments.

Has Adjustable Wings.

Certain details are unknown, such as the wingspread—it is reported the plane may be equipped with adjustable wings increasing or decreasing in size according to the needs—and the motor. The American flyer who got a brief glimpse of the plane estimated the motor develops 600 to 1,000 horsepower.

The flyer, who understands that Coupet, veteran test pilot for Farman, will take the stratospheric plane on its first flight, thinks that it will be at least a partial success.

"The various altitudes flyers have reached at lower ranges proves the stratosphere can be reached by a heavier-than-air machine," he said. "The problem heretofore has been to maintain the height reached. This is difficult because of the vital factor that the pressure of temperature could only be guessed at. Prof. Piccard's observations fill in the gaps."

There is a piquant story behind the construction of the two rival planes. The Junkers company has been working on the idea for a long time and as soon as Prof. Piccard reached the earth an expert was sent to check the air firm's plans with his findings. The French, through spies, learned of this and Farman at once entered into negotiations with the scientist to obtain the exclusive use of his discoveries. After a great deal of alleged intrigue the bewildered professor finally declared he had made the perilous ascension purely in the interest of science, adding that he would not take part in an international struggle for aerial supremacy. So he placed his material before both rivals.

TYRO SOLDIERS TAKE OATH TO THE FLAG

Army School at Sheridan Opens with 1,950.

More than 7,000 citizen soldiers of the Illinois National Guard moved into Camp Grant, near Rockford, by train, automobile and plane yesterday and immediately set to work erecting the city of tents that will house them during their two weeks' summer field training. At the same time 1,950 members of the Citizens' Military Training corps, encamped at Fort Sheridan snapped to attention and took an oath of allegiance to their country and their flag, the ceremony officially opening a similar period of training at the army post.

All yesterday forenoon trains and automobiles left Chicago bearing the 131st, 132d and 8th infantry regiments to Rockford. Ten planes of the 108th observation squadron took off from the Municipal airport at 10 a. m.

Advance details from the various units have been at the camp for several days laying out the tents which were erected when the main body of the troops arrived. The 129th and 130th infantry, downstate units, arrived at Camp Grant shortly after the Chicago troops arrived.

Commanded by Brig. Gen. Frank R. Schwengel, the 58th field artillery brigade, composed of the 122d, 123d and 124th field artillery regiments, also entrained yesterday for Camp McCoy, near Sparta, Wis., for the largest concentration of field artillery to be assembled for service since 1929. The brigade is at full peace strength, numbering 135 officers and 1,700 enlisted men. Attached to it for training will be 40 officers of the 404th reserve field artillery regiment.

ALFONSO CLAIMS HE SAVED MOVIE STAR DURING WAR

PARIS, Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—Alfonso XIII., exiled king of Spain, once saved the life of Maurice Chevalier during the world war, the former monarch asserts in a book to be published soon, the publishers revealed today. Alfonso, writing to refute charges that Spain was unfriendly toward France during the war, points out instances to show he was friendly despite his country's official neutrality.

One instance deals with his war work and how he obtained the exchange of numerous French prisoners of war. One was Chevalier, the subsequent film and stage star, he said. Chevalier, before the war, had attained a certain stellar distinction, appearing in Paris music halls with Mistinguette, the dancer.

He went to war with the millions of other Frenchmen, and was captured. He became ill in a German prison camp. Mistinguette, distrait, appealed to Alfonso in Madrid, and the monarch arranged for the actor's exchange, the book relates.

Foot Troubles
Cause Bad Health

They affect the body in many different ways. The feet swell, burn, ache, sharp pains under heels, and spurs on heels, ball of foot becomes sore and feels as if you are walking on marbles; corns, calluses, ingrown nails and bunions; excessive perspiration with offensive odor, overdeveloped ankles and legs, varicose veins, leg cramps, knees stiffen; pains in hips, small of back, shoulders and neck, poor circulation, with a weak and nervous feeling.
Most people think they have rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, or kidney trouble, when their troubles are all caused from their feet.
Do not be discouraged, regardless of what your condition may be or what you have tried, or whom you have consulted. Dr. Pinkston guarantees to relieve all foot troubles and cure nine-tenths of them regardless of the nature or condition of the ailment by removing the cause.

NATION CENTERS AERIAL DEFENSE ON WEST COAST

Goes to the Support of Naval Forces.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Bids for the construction of the huge dirigible hangar which is to be erected at Sunnyvale, near the south end of San Francisco bay, will be advertised this coming week, it was announced at the navy department today. The building of this structure will mark the addition of another big base to the navy's shore establishment and the shifting of the greater part of the navy's lighter than air activities to the Pacific coast.

The circumstance that the United States already maintains two-thirds of its active fighting ships and an even greater percentage of its actual sea fighting strength in Pacific waters is partly responsible for the decision to establish a new air base in the San Francisco area for the use of fighting type dirigibles. The new hangar will be the largest ever built in this country and will rank among the great structures of the world, according to the navy department announcement.

It's a Huge Affair.

The total exterior surface of the hangar and doors if spread out flat would cover fourteen acres, it was announced. The main floor of the hangar will cover eight acres and the two mezzanine floors along the sides of the hangar will provide more than another acre of floor space. An airplane hangar for housing the planes which will be carried in the Akron, the navy's new combat dirigible to be commissioned sometime this year. Numerous repair shops will be located under the other floor.

"The hangar will be 1,138 feet long, 310 feet wide, and 198 feet high or relatively, about three city blocks long, one block wide, and the equivalent of about 18 stories high," the navy department announced.

In addition to the hangar, a number of buildings and structures will be required to complete the station, including an administration building, barracks, and mess hall, a dispensary, a recreation building, bachelor and married officers' quarters, an aerological and radio station, store houses, and shops. The helium storage and repurification plant will include a gas holder of two million cubic feet capacity.

Akron to Be First.

The Akron will be the first dirigible assigned to the Sunnyvale base. In event the second dirigible is constructed, this sister ship of the Akron probably also would go to the Pacific coast. From this point the dirigibles would operate in training operations with the American battleship fleet. Lakehurst will be maintained as the east coast dirigible base.

HOLDUP MAN CAPTURED.

Robert Brunelli, 26 years old, who admitted to police that he came to Chicago from New York two weeks ago "to make some easy money," was captured yesterday after he held up William Kennedy, manager of the Grant Park hotel, 1148 South Michigan avenue, and robbed him of $66.

HOOVER IS TOLD FALL UNJUSTLY CONVICTED; PLEADS FOR CLEMENCY

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 1.—(AP)—In a letter to President Hoover, made public here today, H. Foster Bain of New York, former director of the United States bureau of mines, declares that the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills, Cal., naval oil reserves were leased "for the soundest technical reasons" and Albert B. Fall was unjustly convicted of accepting a bribe in connection with the leasing.

In asking for clemency for the former secretary of the interior, now serving a sentence in the New Mexico state penitentiary, Bain said he himself was Fall's "principal agent" in negotiating the contracts and leases and "Fall did not make the decisions though he approved our recommendations, after assuring himself they met the wishes of the navy department."

Bain at present is connected with the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. He was a witness for the defense during the oil lease trials.

ACTRESS LEAVES HOSPITAL; WALES SENDS BOUQUET

LONDON, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Miss Beryl Riggs, young actress who was injured when her car collided with one driven by the prince of Wales on Thursday, drove today from the hospital at Windsor to London to resume rehearsals. With the actress in the car was a large bouquet sent by the prince. She had a small bandage on her head and drove the car herself.

Miss Riggs was full of praise for the efficiency of the prince in attending the injuries of herself, her sister and her cousin after the accident and in making arrangements for sending them to the hospital. He also arranged for sending their damaged car to a repair shop, she said.

"I saw the prince carrying my sister, who had fainted, into the clubhouse of the golf club where the collision occurred," Miss Riggs continued. "Her face was covered with blood. The next thing I remember was the prince bathing my forehead, and so competently, too. He stayed bathing our wounds and talking to us for an hour until we were brought to the hospital."

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURE AND WORLD DEPRESSION.

The chief cause of the present world-wide depression is the excessive expenditure of governments. This has diverted enormous sums of money from constructive enterprise and piled up a huge burden of debt for this enterprise and the people to carry. While a part of this expenditure was forced as political, social or economic consequences of the wastage of war and the necessity of providing for its huge armies returned to private life, the greater part was the result of bad policies and of the pressures of expedient and shortsighted politics.

The crisis of German finance is chiefly a result of this excessive expenditure, made possible by imprudent foreign borrowings, imprudent foreign loans, and a deplorable failure to look ahead and to respect those principles of self-restraint and sound fiscal planning which are essential to a healthy financial and economic order.

But while this lesson is being recognized as to Germany because of the special crisis which has called in great powers to her belated rescue, the condition of Great Britain points the same moral. For years socialistic theories have been gaining ground with the governments of that once all-powerful and prosperous nation. Heavier and heavier drafts have been made upon its unequaled reserves of wealth; steadily the exactions of taxation have increased, until in these years of reduced markets and weakened credits Great Britain, once the unshakable financial and commercial power of the world, finds herself with depleted and steadily waning strength. Her exhaustion is the inevitable result of the continued diversion of her reserves of wealth to huge government expenditures, wealth made unproductive and withdrawn from productive enterprise.

The same process, continuing through years in the socialistic British commonwealths of Australia and New Zealand, has produced the same results, while in the chief countries of South America government expenditures far beyond their means have brought about conditions of general impoverishment and want which have shaken down one government after another.

Americans ought to be ready to read this lesson, for it is writ large across the world. It is writ large across our own affairs, for we, too, have steadily increased public expenditures by the nation, the states and the local communities, steadily increasing the burden of taxation upon the individual and the productive activities of the people, steadily drawing our capital away from our own uses and turning it over to politicians and bureaucrats to spend, or, rather, to waste. We are still as a nation rich, but no nation, however rich, can survive this devitalizing process. It is bleeding our strength and there is no repair in its operation. It strikes at the life of the productive activities which have created and alone can maintain the national prosperity. Chicago is an outstanding example of ruthless waste in public administration, afflicting every inhabitant of the city—the homeless and the home owner, the worker with hands or brain, and all the activities which support them. In the case of Chicago the situation is so desperate that even the least instructed victim ought to realize what has brought about his misfortune—the common misfortune of all in the community. But Chicago's crisis is only the logical and inevitable predicament toward which the whole nation is hurrying and where it will soon find itself unless it puts a stop to inordinate public expenditure and its fatal waste of the nation's resources.

We are hearing a great deal these days about the wrongs and errors of capitalism. Individualist democracy, we are told, is on trial or has failed. We are invited with increasing vehemence to resort to government planning on a large scale, which means more vast expenditure by government. But it is not capitalism or individualist democracy that has failed, unless we mean that they have failed to prevent socialistic wastes. It is the heedless expenditure of government, the resort of all socialist devices, that has brought us and every other country that has permitted it to our present ordeal. Yet we are being exhorted to cure our present ills by increasing the main cause that created them—to draw more heavily than ever before upon the productive wealth of the country for government purposes, to take more away from the productive enterprise of the nation to give to the wasteful processes of politics and bureaucracy, and to pile up the burden of taxation upon the backs of the people.

It is the initiative, the thrift, and industry of a free people that have achieved in the United States the greatest and most widely and equitably distributed welfare ever accomplished by a people in history. It is they which have been the real forces of all modern civilization. We are now asked to repudiate them. This is the main issue before this nation, an issue as vital to modern civilization as to America.

A SYSTEM OF LAW OR OF MEN?

This is assumed to be a country of laws and not of men, meaning that the individual is in a system of equitable privileges, responsibilities and restraints and is not subjected to the eccentricities and partialities of personal dictatorship. Rights and punishments then do not depend on the moods, temperament or characteristics of persons, but are derived from laws superior to any men who may be at any time in place and power. The guaranties, agreements and compacts are supposed to have general acceptance because they represent common experience, acceptance and aspiration and thus indicate a homogeneous culture and civilization making a people and a nation.

Sometimes all this seems a bit doubtful. It might be interesting if the men concerned in some recent applications of law were to foregather and consider what they were in agreement upon and whether in their recent experiences a system of law and not of men had been in operation. For this purpose there might be selected: 1—the Indiana judge who sentenced to the reformatory, with a fatherly admonition not to repeat his offenses, a full grown youth found guilty of rape resulting in the death of the outraged victim; 2—the federal judge who sentenced to the penitentiary for two years a gangster not because he was convicted of felony but because he went to Florida with a woman before he married her; 3—the coroner's jurymen who found blameless a woman whose husband somehow died after she had chased him with a revolver.

Is it so very clear that in this law procedure there is a plain formula of equitable justice free from personal eccentricity or expedient and opportunist temperament? Is there revealed any common understanding and agreement as to what constitutes conduct essentially detrimental to the community or what must be maintained as social protections? To the three stated cases may be added that of the fifteen year old boy sentenced to eighteen years in the penitentiary for shooting a policeman who surprised him at a school bathing pool at a closed period and ordered him out. Do these four decisions in law come out of the same system of law, administered depersonally and dispassionately for people of common social agreement?

A Michigan boy was sent to the penitentiary for life in a rape case of greater ambiguity than the Indiana case and without murder as the consequence of the rape. In the Indiana case the sexual crime seems to have been a mitigation of the murder. In the Chicago case of the wife whose husband somehow died from a revolver she had in her pocket when she chased him, the sexual offenses of the husband canceled out whatever happened when the revolver was taken from her pocket. In the case of the Chicago gangster the fact that he was later married to the woman whom he took to Florida was no amelioration of the fact that he took her there and she also was sentenced for her participation in those travels.

The federal judge in this instance said he was protecting the sanctity of the marital ties without which society would fall; but under the Mann act, upon which the prosecution was based, the offenders must cross a state line in such a way as to come under the interstate commerce act. Thereupon a federal judge has jurisdiction in what otherwise would be of no federal concern. Marriage contracts are made under state sovereignty. Sexual morality is under community control, police power and reprehension. The doctrine that interstate commerce should have anything to do with it is a moral eccentricity attached to a statute to punish the shipment of prostitutes in a real commercialization of vice. The law immediately became an open door for blackmail and consequently district attorneys had to use their discretion not to prosecute, but this gangster was a gangster and he is sent to prison because his wife formerly was his mistress.

The United States government does not undertake to put all sex offenders in the penitentiary, but because hard cases make bad law the gangster is caught where he can be caught. It is virtually the law of flight. The Mann act is a moral eccentricity which can be used when there is a special purpose for using it, but otherwise is to be disregarded because the general opinion of the people does not justify penitentiary sentence for sexual irregularities.

The Indiana rapist whose victim died got his sentence from a sentimental source. The Chicago boy murderer got his from a legal code, the gangster from justice doing one thing in order to do another and the woman with the bad husband found instant relief in the character of her husband.

It at least can be said of a system of justice so confused as to the gravity of acts and of their relation to society that it is hardly free from the dominant personality of men. It may be that it reflects a concurrent popular confusion as to what actually is a crime against society.

PICCARD, LINDBERGH AND WILKINS.

The crossing of the North Atlantic in an airplane is a daring accomplishment, calling for great reserves of physical and nervous energy, skill in navigation, and great skill in the handling of the airplane. The men who have flown to Europe are great adventurers in the best sense of the word. They are deserving of high praise. Probably some improvements in the art of flying are to be credited to their experiences and ingenuity, but these ocean flyers do not belong in the category with Columbus and Magellan where some overenthusiastic admirers have placed them or even, we should venture to say, with Piccard and Beebe.

Even the admirable Lindbergh added next to nothing to the sum of human knowledge. It cannot be said that he ventured into the unknown or that he ventured in an untried apparatus. His compass had been developed by the bureau of standards in Washington and had long demonstrated its worth. His engine and his plane had undergone a long testing. Lindbergh was a pioneer, but he was not an explorer or discoverer. His place is with the Boones and the Crockets, not the Columbuses and Magellans.

Piccard, on the other hand, did venture into an area that with much more accuracy could be described as the unknown, though to be sure it was not unknown in the sense that America was unknown to Columbus before he sailed; and the apparatus which Piccard used for his trip had never been subjected to the strains of flight in the stratosphere. If Prof. Piccard's ascension was a stunt, it was also much more: it was a genuine attempt to discover what is to be found ten miles above the surface of the earth, a height never before attained by man.

Prof. Beebe is to be credited with a similar achievement. Instead of going higher in the air than man ever before went, he has dropped deeper into the sea. He is the first man to have seen the life that exists at a depth of a quarter of a mile. In a hitherto untried apparatus which he calls a bathysphere, a steel ball with a window of heavy quartz, he and a companion were lowered into the sea ten miles off Bermuda. At length they swayed at the end of a cable, a mile and a quarter from the floor of the ocean and a quarter of a mile from the surface. [What they saw on this trip of exploration is reported by Prof. Beebe in the National Geographic Magazine for June.]

There is no intention here to disparage the great feats of Lindbergh and his successors, but only to point out that Piccard and Beebe performed something more than record breaking stunts calling for great fortitude. Piccard and Beebe have, in addition, opened up new worlds if not for settlement then at least for study. Piccard and Beebe stand apart from Lindbergh, Post, and Gatty as those three stand apart from Wilkins in his Nautilus. Wilkins is also a man of great courage, but it is difficult to believe that if he succeeds in his venture of sliding under the ice to the north pole in a submarine he will have pioneered a route for any one else to follow. His feat, if successful, will be thrilling as circus acrobatics are thrilling, but of no importance probably to any one but himself and his crew. He may be as courageous a man as Lindbergh and as venturesome as Piccard; but so, too, is the man who goes over Niagara falls in a barrel.

JEFFERSON DAVIS TO THE SOUTH.

Several letters of Jefferson Davis giving his opinion on proposed national and state prohibition laws have come to light. The ex-president of the confederacy wrote them to friends from his home in Beauvoir, Miss., when asked what he thought of a liquor bill in the Texas legislature. This was in 1887. Davis had been head of an attempt at government which was to assert that the will of the state was superior to the will of the nation. The theory was that the state could not be coerced, that it was free to withdraw from the operation of laws it did not support and from association with other states when it wanted to.

The southern states, now dry, elected Davis as president of their confederation to defend rights incompatible with the integrity of the Union and the continuance of the nation. When the question of prohibition came to him after the war he was consistent. His confederation has proved itself inconsistent. He was also prophetic in his forecast. He said that a southerner who had been through reconstruction should know what to expect of an arbitrary power and he feared that if congress yielded to the prohibition petitions "the liberties our fathers left us could offer but a vain resistance."

Even the state, he thought, was too extensive a unit for the operation of sumptuary law, although he looked with hope upon local option, which enabled opinion and regulation to go hand in hand. "To destroy individual liberty and moral responsibility," he wrote, "would be to eradicate one evil by the substitution of another which, if submitted to, would be more fatal than that for which it was offered as a remedy."

The south has forgotten its objection to the extension of federal laws in interference with the liberties of citizens. It now demands that northern states in which national prohibition has been found a failure shall continue under the Volstead act. When its insistence upon state rights would destroy the Union and maintain slavery it held to its principles of liberty. Now that the principles of liberty require the freedom of the states and the citizens within the Union it has abandoned its doctrines.

The inconsistency makes a complete record. The south had the principles, but it was wrong both ways.

THE INVISIBLE GOLDFISH.

A Seattle storekeeper, maybe it was a barber, put a goldfish bowl in his window with the usual castle or rock grotto. A placard informed the passerby that the bowl contained some invisible Argentine goldfish, very rare. At last reports the crowds were still wearing out their feet and dislocating their necks to see the invisible fish, having the durable human conviction that the invisible would become visible some time or other if a fellow just had the luck to be around when it occurred. Moreover, there was always the thrill of looking at the invisible and marveling at the peculiarities of the fish. There was no proof that they were not swimming in the bowl and the observer could be fascinated by this miracle of intangibility.

The Seattle incident explains a number of American phenomena, political, social, and economic. The farm board has been showing the invisible goldfish and some people have permanently flattened noses looking for them. In another bowl you may see national prosperity in the Volstead act, wheat at $2 in the league of nations, the full dinner pail in a five billion dollar government bond issue, the three shift day in the cancellation of international debts, a skyrocketing stock market in the Kellogg peace pact implemented by world disarmament.

LOST IN ILLINOIS.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

There is a county in Illinois which has no railroad. It has only ten miles of hard highways.

It is Calhoun county, and it is merely a long strip of land between the Mississippi and Illinois rivers. Till last week Calhoun was a thin and inaccessible peninsula approachable only through a narrow neck which connects it with Pike county. Last week a long and expensive bridge across the Illinois river was opened, and Calhoun county came out of its obscurity and found itself safely joined to the rest of the state.

One who has never visited Calhoun county is privileged to conjure up pleasing mental pictures of its rustic simplicity. It was the cheese of the sandwich and the two great rivers were the rye bread. It was a vermiform appendix of Pike county, and surely that is enough to make certain its placid forgetfulness of passing years and outer hubbub.

But there's no telling what may happen now that the big bridge is built. If you wish to see the lost county of Illinois still tranquil in its sylvan enchantment you ought to start at once. Pictures of the big bridge are not hopeful. Filling stations and barbecue stands are likely to spring up like mushrooms all over this water walled Eden now that it is walled no longer.

HUMAN EMANATIONS.

By means of delicate apparatus, principally of his own devising, Dr. R. A. Walters has been able to show that living tissues give off radioactivity. He writes of the biologic sources of radioactivity in the Archives of Physical Therapy. It may be that he is on the way toward proving scientifically either that life itself is the result of radioactivity or that emanation is a necessary quality of life, if it is not the very essence of the thing.

Dr. G. W. Crile has been speculating and experimenting along the same line for several years. Such work raises the hope that we may know some time just what is life and what is death. The pragmatist may get from this research a practical method of diagnosing death—or life. To physicians and surgeons the investigations may solve questions of great practical importance.

Dr. Levine found that the radioactive emanations of human beings differed from those of lower animals. The amount given off by different parts of the human body varies. He used that given off by the hand at rest as the standard of measurement. The tongue gives off three times that of the hand. The solar plexus region, that is, the "pit of the stomach," gives off much less. The foot gives off only one-fourth as much. If the amount given off by the hand is stated as 100, the reading for the foot would be 25; and the tongue, 300.

Exercise increases the amount of emanation. Chewing caramel, or any tough candy, causes a material increase in the emanation from the cheek, and probably also from the tongue. Making a political speech should break the instrument used to measure the effect on the tongue. Wielding a heavy hammer for 15 minutes greatly increases the hand reading. Splinting the hand in an uncomfortable position for several hours also greatly increases the reading. Dr. Levine attributes the increase in both cases to fatigue.

Binding the arm with a tourniquet until the hand is badly congested decreases the amount of emanation. Holding fruit in the hands for half an hour markedly increased the emanation from it. There has long been a folk saying that flowers would wilt quickly when worn by some people. In these observations there may be found some basis for this old notion. At least it supplies a method of testing it.

In testing plants it was found that growing roots gave out more than twice as much emanation as did leaves and stems. No records of sprouting seeds are given. The soil about the roots of growing plants was found to have taken on increase in radioactivity.

HUNT FOR THE CAUSE.

A. A. writes: Please advise about my mother. She was born in the West Indies and lives there now. Her doctor says she has a swollen liver. She is 60 years old. Please let me know if there is any danger of death and a diet good for that sickness.

REPLY.

"Swollen liver" is only a partial diagnosis. It should be completed.

Among the causes of swelling of the liver are: Cancer, tumor other than cancer, cyst, abscess, hypertrophic cirrhosis, hepatitis.

People who live in hot countries are somewhat prone to a slight swelling of the liver due, possibly, to heat and to heavy eating. Those who have that trouble should live principally on vegetables, fruits, bread, cereals, and only a moderate amount of fat and proteids. They should go very light on whisky, rum, cordials, beers, catsups, condiments, tea, coffee, eggs, and meats.

DIET WILL NOT PROTECT.

Old Reader writes: I had rheumatic fever last winter. I like to eat raw fruit or tomatoes.

1. Is it harmful for me? I also take a full glass of orange juice every morning. I don't eat any meat or eggs.

2. How can I prevent another attack?

REPLY.

1. No.

2. Your diet will not protect you against rheumatism. Your disease was probably due to infection. Try to find out how you were infected. If you can do that you may be able to prevent a reinfection.

LEMON JUICE.

L. writes: I have been advised to take lemon juice for rheumatism, but I am advised that it weakens the heart.

REPLY.

Taking lemon juice will probably be of no service in rheumatism. At the same time, it will not weaken the heart.

INHERITANCE.

Madison, Wis., July 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Mr. A wills his real estate to four nephews, but one nephew passes away before Mr. A. Would the share of this nephew pass on to his daughter, or would that share be divided among the other nephews who were mentioned in the will? Mr. A resided in Illinois. J. O. H.

It is probable that the gift to the deceased nephew would lapse, but we cannot give an opinion of much value without having the wording before us.

Chicago, July 22. — [Friend of the People.]—Magnolia avenue is very dusty between Lawrence avenue and Argyle street. Would it not be possible to oil these two blocks? P. M. S.

Arrangements are now being made to repave this street within the next few weeks. It will, therefore, be unnecessary to oil the old pavement as requested.

DISCRIMINATION.

Chicago, July 22. — [Legal Friend of the People.]—I would like to find out whether the men should get preference over boys in a public park swimming pool during the day. In most of the parks they let the men in first but I went to Gage park swimming pool and the attendant there told me to wait or get in line with the boys and I did not want to mingle with the boys in their shoving and pushing so he told me to come in the evening. Please advise if the men are entitled to preference.

M. R.

If the park was under the jurisdiction of one of the park boards, your rights would depend upon the wording of the ordinance of that particular park district.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

AUGUST 2, 1915.

LONDON.—The anniversary of the beginning of the war passed without the Germans occupying Warsaw, which was understood to be part of their program. However, news of this climax to the Austro-German offensive, which was begun in the early days of May, is hourly expected. What little information is allowed publicity is to the effect that the Russians for several days have been withdrawing to the Brest line, leaving small forces to fight rear guard actions.

CHICAGO.—According to federal building rumors, Secretary Redfield will be summoned before the federal grand jury to tell of his inquiry into the Eastland disaster and its conduct. The secretary announced that he would continue his inquiry, saying that he saw nothing in Judge Landis' order limiting witnesses to grand jury appearance, which would stop his investigation. The Chicago Federation of Labor sent to President Wilson a demand that Redfield be supplanted and a commission independent of the steamboat inspection service be formed for the investigation. Another order by Judge Landis kept Inspector William Nicholas from going aboard the Eastland to obtain information for Secretary Redfield. During the day divers brought up three more bodies from the death ship and discovered several others entangled in wire netting.

LONDON.—A forty-five minute battle in the air between six German airplanes and fifteen French machines over Château-Salins is reported in an official Berlin dispatch. The dispatch says that several of the French machines were forced to land.

CHICAGO.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt stopped off in Chicago between trains yesterday to scratch the back of Rajah, the biggest tiger in Lincoln park zoo, and to have a good time generally in Cy De Vry's menagerie. Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied her husband to the zoo.

AUGUST 2, 1901.

CHICAGO. — George H. Phillips, whose meteoric career as a manipulator of the corn market has furnished several sensations on the Board of Trade, issued a circular which suggested the final fate of meteors—a sudden fall. All open trades of the George H. Phillips company were closed out during the day through another commission house. The discovery of grave irregularities in bookkeeping was the explanation given. The exceptional gravity of the errors is apparent from the fact that Phillips charges to that cause the loss of $300,000.

LINCOLN, Neb.—The bombardment of the sky with gunpowder in an effort to bring rainfall was begun last night by W. F. Wright, and continued until 5 o'clock this morning without producing the desired results. Lincoln is greatly in need of rain. The temperature ascended to a maximum of 101 today.

AUGUST 2, 1881.

WASHINGTON. — The President continues to get better. His appetite increases daily, and his physicians now say there is no reasonable doubt of his recovery. His bill-of-fare now embraces coffee and koumiss, besides the more solid fare hitherto partaken of. The afternoon fever was light and subsided quickly today, and the patient went to sleep earlier than usual and slept well.

PEORIA.—Patrick W. Crowe, an Irishman of Peoria, and one of the directors of the O'Donovan-Rossa's pet organization, the United Irishmen, stated in an interview with a TRIBUNE representative that the infernal machines recently discovered in Liverpool were manufactured in Peoria, and were intended to blow up English ships and English buildings.

LONDON.—Mr. Parnell incurred the displeasure of the house of commons for persisting in raising the question of the treatment of Irish political prisoners, and declaring that the authority of the house of commons was always on the side of power. Mr. Gladstone moved to suspend him and his motion was carried by a vote of 132 to 14.

DOWNSTATERS BEARING GIFTS.

Chicago, July 24.—I have read with much interest your editorial entitled "A Downstater on Illinois Problems."

What Editor Eichenauer says is thought-provoking, but I do not find myself reacting to his comment in any such cordially enthusiastic manner as yourselves. In fact, my own reaction may be well expressed by Virgil's famous line, "timeo Danaos et dona ferentes."

As far as I am concerned, I would prefer that our constitutional provisions relating to reapportionment and taxation remain unchanged rather than submit to a revison by downstate. I know something of the downstater's attitude toward Chicago. I was raised on a downstate farm; I attended downstate schools, from cross-roads schoolhouse to university, and I taught school in a downstate community. My observations covered a good many years and I became very definitely aware of the fact that the group mental attitude of downstate toward Chicago was marked by suspicion, hostility and cupidity. On the other hand, after a long residence in Chicago I am compelled to say that the group mental attitude of Chicago toward downstate has been, and is, wholly free from any such feeling as I have found exhibited by downstate.

By making further concessions to downstate, Chicago might derive some small temporary relief, but it would be the old story of selling one's birthright for a mess of pottage. Downstate, we may be sure, would drive a hard bargain and when the time came to pay, would demand its pound of flesh.

There is, in my opinion, only one effective solution of the problem. That is by the creation of a state whose boundaries would substantially coincide with the present city limits of Chicago. I would not favor the inclusion of nearby territory. Much of that territory, particularly in high-brow communities, such as Evanston and Oak Park, is less friendly to Chicago than many distant downstate communities.

A HEADLINE.

Chicago, July 22.—A beautiful day was spoiled for many of your readers by your last edition headline, "Slays Two Dry Trappers." While people of ordinary intelligence are not influenced by such tricks, you must realize that the young and the ignorant, of whom your paper has many readers, do get a distorted idea of the point at issue, not realizing the motives behind your policies. Are families of the deceased government officials less entitled to respect than the relatives of the ex-convict?

An honest headline would have been, "Ex-Convict Slays Two Federal Officials."

ABOUT SHORT SELLING.

Pine Village, Ind., July 24.—What is the language of the rule of the Chicago Board of Trade giving the seller of grain for delivery in any future month the whole of the month in which to deliver it, but requiring the buyer to stand ready to take and pay for it whenever tendered?

When was that rule first adopted?

Has it ever been changed or amended?

Was it not designed to prevent a corner in grain at a time when there was not so much grain tributary to Chicago and a corner was more easily managed?

Does this rule favor the short seller and put the bull at a disadvantage, or otherwise?

Is not this rule the real evil aimed at by President Hoover, rather than the evil of mere short selling?

JOHN CLINE.

PEDESTRIANS' RIGHTS.

Chicago, July 23.—As a pedestrian I appreciate the protection afforded by the traffic signal lights in the loop. It is easy to accommodate my pace to them so that I arrive at the right moment to cross with traffic.

But I am continually amazed at the disregard of these signals by automobiles and at the complacence of the police. Every one knows that the orange signal provides a period to clear the intersection, and is a definite order to cars not in the intersection to stop. But pedestrians are frequently held on the sidewalk by automobiles which not only have entered the intersection on the orange, but also many times on the red signal. No apparent effort is made by the police to stop this dangerous practice.

There is only one policeman in the loop [so far as I can observe] who appreciates his duty in this regard. His station is at Randolph and Wabash avenue, where many street cars swing south around the corner. When this man is not on duty I have seen the welter of traffic here become so great that pedestrians have been obliged to wait through several complete signal revolutions before being able to pass on eastward to their suburban trains.

SALOON LICENSES.

Chicago, July 22.—In a recent issue of THE TRIBUNE under the heading, "Thirty Years Ago in Chicago," appeared an article wherein Mayor Carter Harrison was quoted as saying he was thinking of quitting as it was an empty honor to be mayor of a city that had no revenue to meet its bills. Now at that time, as we all know, we did not have prohibition, so where was that large revenue from the saloons that the wets are so fond of prattling about and which they claim would help the city now in its present dilemma?

SCATTERED RAINS BRING RELIEF TO BAKED CORN BELT

More Showers Forecast for Midwest.

Farmers Win

Oelwein, Ia., Aug. 1.—[U.P.]—Oelwein farmers learned today their efforts to capitalize on the sudden raise in July corn prices had been successful. They pooled corn for a trainload. They hauled all night Wednesday and Thursday. The North Western railroad made a 17 hour run putting the grain into Chicago ahead of the dead line Friday. The corn brought 71 cents a bushel, a premium of 17 cents over September quotations.

BY PAUL POTTER.

August was ushered in yesterday with the weather man promising to do all he could to continue reporting the scattered yet widespread and much needed rains which came down on parched crops and hot city streets Friday and yesterday.

The weather will be unsettled in Chicago today, with showers and thunderstorms, according to the forecast. Monday will be cloudy to partly cloudy, and the temperatures will remain moderate.

Although the rains were scattered and local, they brought relief to hundreds of communities from North Dakota to Kansas and the northwest counties in Illinois. Meteorologist W. P. Day said last night all signs indicated the scattered precipitation would continue for several days and that it looked like most of the corn belt would be covered before the clouds rolled away.

One of the heaviest showers was reported at Galva, where 1.87 inches was recorded yesterday. Corn fields that had started showing brown "firing" at the base of stalks and with leaves curling in the dry spell that July left behind, were said to have been aided at a critical time in the formation of harvestable ears.

LOANS ARE DUE SEPT. 30

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Weather conditions during the next few weeks in the drought areas of last year will go far in determining how much of the $46,500,000 loaned to farmers last winter and spring for seed, feed, fertilizer and rural credit assistance would be repaid when loans come due, beginning Sept. 30.

A total of 45 million was made available by congress for farm emergency, and President Hoover has announced he will ask the department of agriculture and seed loan office to use the 17 million not yet loaned for the northwest, hit hard by drought and grasshoppers in recent weeks.

G. L. Hoffman, head of the seed loan office, said that at the present time it was a guessing matter to estimate what percentage of the loans would be repaid this fall. The first due date is Sept. 30, other loans coming due Oct. 30 and Nov. 30.

He indicated the drought and grasshopper plague might be expected to cut down the certainty of payments from those areas.

On the basis of past evperiences, Hoffman said, the repayments might run somewhere between 75 and 80 per cent, but that up to the present only [illegible] has been repaid, mostly in small amounts as partial payments by farmers able to make a slight profit in early vegetable and fruit crops, and who have started voluntary repayment of loans not yet due.

In 1929, he said, 84 per cent of a $6,000,000 loan was repaid and hope for the remainder has not been entirely given up. Last year, because of the drought, the record was not so good. Agents of the seed loan office have been obliged to issue several warnings against impressions given out by farmers that the government would never force them to repay their loans.

Yesterday more than 500 miners of the Franco No. 1 local union voted to join the United Mine Workers of America.

Blaine indicated to Attorney Samuel Hoffman, who is representing him, that he will plead guilty.

HELD AFTER FATAL STABBING

ARTHUR ARNOLD.

DORIS WILLIAMS.

Defender Slain

Arthur Arnold, 20 years old, of Kansas City, was arrested last night on the charge of slaying Louis Coleman, 55 years old, who was stabbed Friday night when he went to the aid of his landlady, Mrs. Bertha Timm, manager of the apartments of 4839 Winthrop avenue. Arnold confessed the stabbing.

With Arnold was his sweetheart, Miss Doris Williams, 18 years old, also of Kansas City. They were found in his car at Kenmore and Lawrence avenues by Sergts. William McCarthy and Roy Van Herrik of the detective bureau, and were locked up at the South State street station. They had just returned from the beach, and wore swimming suits.

The killing occurred when Mrs. Timm tried to quiet Arnold in the apartment of his mother, Mrs. Violet Kean. Attracted by the argument, Coleman and Frank Farmer, tenants, went to Mrs. Timm's aid. Arnold slashed Farmer and stabbed Coleman. The latter died yesterday in the Lake View hospital. At the detective bureau Arnold said: "I must have had too much to drink." He and his sweet heart are being held.

BANK PRESIDENT IS THREATENED BY KIDNAPERS

Benld, Ill., Aug. 1.—[U.P.]—Fear of kidnapers who a week ago telephoned him that unless he left $10,000 at a designated spot it would cost him and his family their lives had sent Joseph Rizzie, local banker, his wife and daughter into hiding today, leaving behind the cryptic remark that "the affair would be straightened out by Monday."

Rizzie, who lives at Staunton but is president of the Benld National bank, notified authorities at the time he received the threat with the result that state, county and local police united in guarding him and his family and had machine guns ready to repel kidnaping attempts.

Walter L. Moody, chief of the state police, said that Rizzie had received the threat from gangsters who telephoned it from a public pay station booth in the Union station at St. Louis, Mo.

State police escorted Rizzie to and from his work this week and guards were posted at his home in Staunton and at the bank here.

Rizzie declined to say where he was going when he left here last night, except to say that he might be in the southern part of the state.

Turns Vise on Cartridge; Bullet Pierces His Hand

A metallic object in the street attracted the attention yesterday of Rocco Muscari, 15 years old. It was a cartridge. He picked it up, took it to the basement of his home at 2163 North McVicker avenue, and stuck it in a vise. He turned the handle. The cartridge exploded, and the bullet pierced Rocco's right hand. He was taken to the County hospital.

CHARGE CLAYTON ACT IS VIOLATED BY PARAMOUNT

Boston, Mass., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Seven New England companies, operating motion picture theaters, today filed suits in the federal court under the Clayton anti-trust act, charging conspiracy and restraint of trade on the part of the Paramount-Publix corporation.

The complainants, who describe the defendant corporation as the largest producers of motion pictures in the world, set forth that it controls all but two of the largest producing companies in the country; that it has bought controlling interests in certain theaters and so conducted them as to compete unfairly with the defendant companies. The total damage asked is $1,250,000.

Williamson County Wheat Farm Sets Wheat Record

Marion, Ill., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—The record yield of wheat for Williamson county was reported today to the farm bureau by H. J. Dahmer, living four miles east of Marion, whose grain made fifty-one bushels to the acre. The big yield was due to the favorable season and soil treatment, lime, limestone, and phosphate having been applied to the fields. Many fields have yielded from forty to forty-five bushels.

87 Today, He Helped to Drill the First Oil Well

Titusville, Pa., Aug. 1.—(AP)—A man who helped drill the world's first oil well will be 88 years old tomorrow.

Samuel B. Smith, who as a lad of 16 helped his father, William A. Smith, put down the famous Drake well, which marked the beginning of a gigantic industry, talked today of that time, nearly 72 years ago, when that first hole "came in."

FARMERS RALLY TO FEED POOR BY PLAN OF PASTOR

Philanthropists Aid in Myers' Drive.

The orchards and fields of Cook county will contribute their overflow for Chicago's poor during the coming weeks. This was made evident yesterday as farmers of three states and Chicago philanthropists sent offers of foodstuffs or cash to the Rev. Dr. Johnston Myers, 71 year old pastor of Immanuel Baptist church, 2320 Michigan avenue.

Earlier in the week, the pastor had signified his interest in retrieving for the hungry unemployed of Chicago the surplus fruits and vegetables from the countryside. His offer in THE TRIBUNE columns has set in motion trucks and willing hands to gather the crops from nearby farms in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan.

Pledges Farm Bureau Aid.

"You will find the farmers of Cook county anxious to have their surplus or unmarketable produce distributed under such a plan," declared O. G. Barrett, farm advisor of Cook county, in pledging the aid of the Cook county farm bureau. "It hurts farmers to see their foodstuffs going to waste when they know there are worthy and hungry families in the city.

"Last winter, upon learning that people were suffering in Arkansas, our members willingly filled two carloads of potatoes, cabbage, and other wholesome foods, for which they didn't receive a cent. We will take steps immediately to see that Chicago's needy are shown something of how we in the country sympathize with them."

Barrett indicated that the farm bureau, an organization of farmers coöperating with the state university, the state farm bureau and with commodity marketing agencies, would canvass the area and report to the Rev. Dr. Myers where he could send trucks to be supplied without charge by Chicagoans, to pick up onions, potatoes, carrots, and other foods that could be stored for winter if necessary.

Offers Pour In.

And others continued to pour into Dr. Myers' office their offers of aid in his project. Farmer Watson, near Ducks' Lake, Mich., asks him to send a truck out for "at least a load, and maybe more." Other farmers already have volunteered enough produce that Dr. Myers will send a truck into southeastern Michigan Monday, manned by husky unemployed fathers who jump thankfully into the chance to pick and help distribute the crops donated.

From Dr. J. M. Gray of Moody Bible institute came an inspired message to encourage Dr. Myers in his project. With a check for $25 he said came his heart and daily prayers for such a worthwhile work. Dwight L. Moody, in his time, had carried out just such a plan for bringing the farm surplus into the mouths of the city's hungry, Dr. Gray said, calling upon others to lend aid to Dr. Myers.

Other Chicagoans with means and open hearts are expected by Dr. Myers to swell his cash receipts to be doled out to families recommended by charity groups next winter. He is expecting at least four other men to match the anonymous offer of $5,000 that greeted his announcement of the plan last Thursday.

POLICE SEEKING HONOR DEBATER OF DARTMOUTH

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Police were asked today to search for E. Edward Rhetts, 21-year-old Dartmouth graduate, who disappeared shortly after his return Monday from England, where he headed his college debating team on a competitive tour.

He is the son of Dr. F. Rhetts of Detroit. V. Erskine Rockhill, his former roommate at Dartmouth, reported Rhetts missing after receiving word from the young man's mother that he had not been heard from since he landed in New York.

Rhetts was an honor student at Dartmouth. He left with the debating team in April after making arrangements to take his final examinations for graduation in a London university. He planned to enter Harvard law school this fall.

URUGUAY PLANS RIGID DEFENSE TARIFF SCHEDULE

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Prohibition of the importation of all articles that are not of prime necessity, and all that can be replaced by domestic products, was advocated today by President Gabriel Terra.

It was learned on reliable authority that two tariffs are being prepared by the government, one of them totally prohibitive and the second with intermediate schedules which would apply to those countries signing commercial treaties with Uruguay.

The financial crisis resulted today in the closing of the Montevideo branch of the Anglo-American bank, which has been operating more than 40 years.

Mexican Floods Take Toll of Lives and Property

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Dispatches from Tampico tonight report that serious floods along the Panuco river, following upon torrential rains, already have caused loss of some lives and forced thousands of persons living in Panuco, Reventadero, Buena Vista, Tamapache and Topila to flee for their lives. Large food stores in Panuco City were ruined. The number of deaths was not estimated, but it was said several families were missing.

Daughter of Policeman Admits Driving Holdup Car

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Miss Genevieve Finney, 19, daughter of police Sergeant Harry Finney, today confessed she was the brains of a gang of youthful bandits. She admitted she drove the bandit car in many gas station holdups which netted nearly $1,000 in the last month. On her left arm is tattooed the initials of her confessed accomplice, Edward Monarch, 19. A third youth is sought.

Genius Rallies After Collapse

and was contemplating retirement were denied by members of his family and business associates, but he was not well enough on July 1 to accompany the king and queen of Siam on a visit through his laboratories and forbade photographers and reporters to enter his home.

Henry Ford, after his three day visit to the Edison home which ended on July 26, scouted reports of Mr. Edison's ill health, although admitting the inventor "wasn't very well after his return from Florida."

Shortly after this statement was made, it was discovered that Mr. Edison has discontinued his daily automobile rides, and, for the last few days, has been confined to his home, receiving daily visits from Dr. Howe.

Absent from Laboratory.

The lack of his customary visits to his laboratory was the basis for reports that he had decided to retire. Denials were made.

However, shortly before he left Florida it became known that he was using a wheel chair to travel a short distance from his home there to his winter laboratory.

Until the doctors' statement was released tonight the exact nature of Mr. Edison's ailments was not known.

2 CHICAGOANS HURT IN CRASH; 1 BELIEVED DYING

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Private Roland Mack of the 202d coast artillery, Battery H, of Chicago, was believed dying in St. Anthony's hospital tonight from injuries suffered in an automobile collision near Belvidere.

Mack, with Private Hubert Cerler of Battery F, was driving an army truck loaded with supplies to Belvidere from Camp Grant. Near Belvidere the truck collided with an automobile driven by Ralph Luhman of Belvidere. Private Cerler was injured.

Luhman told police the truck was without lights.

Dawes' Daughter to Learn Amount of Fine by Phone

Miss Virginia Dawes, 17 year old foster daughter of Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, will not appear in person before Justice of Peace Harry H. Porter of Evanston next Thursday to explain how her automobile happened to be going 45 miles an hour past the Northwestern university campus on July 28. An arrangement has been made whereby Miss Dawes will telephone the justice of peace, learn what her punishment for the offense is to be, and dispatch a messenger to pay her fine, it was learned yesterday. The fine, it is understood, will probably be $5 and costs.

HENDERSON WIDOW CALLED INCOMPETENT IN FIGHT OVER ESTATE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—(AP)—A legal document portraying the late Mrs. Mary F. Henderson as a generous but mentally incapacitated woman, today further complicated the litigations standing in the way of settlement of the dowager's big estate.

Charles W. Arth, guardian ad litem for Augusta Arnold, minor grandniece of the widow of Senator Henderson of Missouri, filed the document in the District of Columbia Supreme court.

Asking the court to appoint a conservator of the estate, Arth described an interview with Mrs. Henderson on last March 2, in which, he declared, she leaned for advice upon Jesse S. Shima, Japanese private secretary, richly endowed in two of six wills now awaiting disposition.

"She was a small, frail woman, but seemed in fair physical condition, considering her age, which I understood to be about 90," Arth's report said, "but in my opinion she was wholly incapacitated mentally for the transaction of business."

TRYING TO BUY AN ICE BREAKER BYRD REPORTED

New York, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Information that Admiral Richard E. Byrd is negotiating with the Russian government for the purchase of an ice breaker was received here today.

The explorer is on an island near West Tremont, Me., and could not be reached for a further explanation. While no one can guess specifically what he would do with an ice breaker, the best some of his fellow scientists hazarded was the suggestion that another polar expedition might be in the planning.

SALVATION ARMY TELLS 5 MILLION EXPANSION PLAN

Projects Will Be Spread Over Five Years.

A five million dollar improvement program for the Salvation Army in Chicago and the central states territory for the next five to eight years was announced yesterday following a meeting of officers in the headquarters at 719 North State street.

In the statement, William A. McIntyre, commissioner in the eleven midwestern states, called attention to the growth of the Salvation Army in Chicago since the first mission was founded here in 1885. The effort of these years, he said, has resulted in 61 separate branches of activity, a growth of the principle of brotherly love as implanted in the organization by its founder, Gen. William Booth, and the sincere interest and support of the general public.

"Must Expand Service."

"A time is now upon us when old buildings and much wornout equipment must be replaced if the army is to continue to merit the enviable reputation it has established in Chicago and the central states," Commissioner McIntyre explained. "The time has come when the army must expand its service in order to meet the increased need for substantial welfare activity.

"To do this completely we have figured the cost at about $5,000,000 in addition to the regular maintenance funds for the present program. This additional fund will be used for a new training college for cadets, a young women's boarding home, a boarding home for children, a central auditorium and headquarters, and replacement of some of the old buildings and extension of some of the present activities."

Buy Site for College.

The site for the new training college has already been bought at the southwest corner of Western and Berwyn avenues. A home is needed, Commissioner McIntyre said, for babies of unwed mothers, where they may be given proper care while the mothers are permitted to work.

Commissioner McIntyre suggested that the fund should be raised out of legacies, special grants, or endowments by men and women of wealth.

CHILD VICTIM OF GANG GUNS BURIED IN EAST

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The casket containing the body of 5 year old Michael Vengalli, victim of gangdom's gun play, was carried through the streets of Harlem's "Little Italy" today by 40 of his playfellows.

Thousands crowded the streets through which the funeral cortège passed, and many fell sobbing to their knees, mingling prayers for the dead boy with imprecations against the gangsters who scattered bullets through a crowd of playing children.

Fifty uniformed police maintained order and fifty detectives in plain clothes moved through the crowd, hoping that in the emotional stress of the moment some one might let drop a clue to the identity of the slayers.

From the Vengalli home in East 107th street the little procession moved five blocks north and east to the church where a brief ceremony was performed. Then the casket was borne back to the house.

Robert Fletcher's Funeral Will Be Held Tuesday

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning at the chapel at 63d street and Evans avenue for Robert Fletcher, 26 years old, of 8134 Ingleside avenue, who was drowned Tuesday in Green Bay, Mich. He was the son of Ridgley Fletcher, known to thousands of radio listeners as "Mike" of the team of "Mike and Herman," which performs over station WBBM. Fletcher was fishing near Cedar River at the time of his death. He is survived by his parents and a brother, William. He will be buried in Oakwoods cemetery.

Warburg, Famous German Physicist, Dies, Aged 85

BAYREUTH, Germany, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Prof. Emil Warburg, eminent physicist, died today in Grunau, aged 85. He was formerly president of the Federal Physical Technical institute and was a member of the Prussian Academy of Sciences. His standard work on experimental physics ran twenty editions.

E. J. Batten, Attorney, Dies After Long Illness

Ernest J. Batten, 69 years old, 6930 South Park avenue, an attorney in Chicago for many years, died yesterday at the Billings Memorial hospital. Mr. Patten had been ill for several months from a complication of diseases and a general physical breakdown. He is survived by his widow, Sadie Batten, and two sons. The funeral will be private.

NAB ALLEGED ATTACKER OF GIRLS.

Charged with attacking two girls, each 10 years old, John Carlson, 29 years old, of 9917 Ewing avenue was arrested by East Side police last night. He was found at the beach at 103d street.

GALESBURG'S NEW AIRPORT READY; CELEBRATE EVENT

Galesburg, Ill., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Dedication ceremonies for this city's new 140 acre airport were started this afternoon with races and contests of various kinds being held. The demonstrations will continue tomorrow, Col. B. M. Chiperfield of Canton delivering the principal dedicatory address in the afternoon.

Nearly 100 planes were on hand, many of them taking part in the various events. Both the army and navy were represented, a squadron coming from the Great Lakes station and Lieut. C. James A. Mars, new commander of Chanute field, bringing 15 army planes from Rantoul. The demonstration by the government planes was one of the features of the afternoon.

Included in the army delegation were officers of two foreign governments, Lieut. Manuel Boninatgne of Cuba and Lieut. Louis Giron of Guatemala.

Maj. Reid Landis and Lafe Whitney of Chicago are running the meet off for the Galesburg commission.

Among those who flew here to attend the dedication were Warden Henry Hill of Joliet. He was accompanied by Mrs. Hill. A crowd estimated at 10,000 persons was on hand to watch the maneuvers today.

WORK ON OBELISK TO DEAD IRISH REBELS STOPPED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELFAST, Ireland, Aug. 1.—The Ulster government today forbade continuation of work on a monument which was being erected at Carrickmore, County Tyrone, to members of the republican army who were killed in the Ulster campaign of 1921 and 1922, when the northern government was taking over power from the British government.

Funds for the monument were raised largely in Chicago, Philadelphia and New York. The Ulster order warned the contractor that he would be severely punished if he continued the work. The home office has ordered removal of the portion already completed, and the heavy base for the 30 foot granite obelisk will be blown up Monday.

The government was afraid that the monument might become a meeting place for young republicans, from whom trouble is feared, and indignation has not changed the official attitude.

Kills 2 Farmers, Shoots Another; Gives Self Up

Lenapah, Okla., Aug. 1.—(AP)—After shooting two farmers to death at their homes near here today, W. H. Bates, 66 year old farm hand who had apparently become deranged, probably fatally wounded W. H. Owings, another farmer, walked to Lenapah and surrendered to the constable.

KILLED BY AUTO AS SHE RUNS TO DODGE ANOTHER

Woman Stumbles Into Second Machine.

Miss Margaret Nolan, 50 years old, 2428 Wilcox street, was fatally injured last night when she stumbled and fell into the side of an automobile driven by Edward Japek, 40 years old, 3831 Kenilworth avenue, Berwyn.

Miss Nolan, who was the sister of Sergt. Thomas Nolan of the Fillmore street police station, was crossing Western avenue at Jackson boulevard with Miss Mary Cabral of the same address. They ran to get out of the way of an approaching car, and Miss Nolan, stumbling, fell against the side of the car driven by Japek. She died in the county hospital.

This death and four others yesterday raised the Cook county auto total for 1931 to 660. The victims:

Policeman Jeremiah Hogan, 39 years old, 8243 South Paulina street, assigned to the Englewood station. Died in St. Bernard's hospital from injuries suffered earlier in the day when his automobile crashed into a safety island at 66th street and Ashland avenue.

John Fenton, 22 years old, address unknown. Died in St. Luke's hospital after being struck at Roosevelt road and Outer driv by the automobile of George I. King, 6901 Oglesby avenue.

Benjamin Abrams, 31 years old, 1651 South Lawndale avenue, driver of a laundry truck. Fatally injured in a collision at Sacramento and Logan boulevards with an automobile driven by August Hermon, 5619 North Maplewood avenue. He died in the Belmont hospital.

Unidentified man about 40 years old. Killed when run down at Lafayette avenue and Garfield boulevard. The man was barefooted and wore a white shirt and dark trousers.

Mrs. Mary Jenkins Lewis, 53 years old, 4508 Magoun avenue, East Chicago, was fatally injured yesterday when struck by an automobile at Magoun avenue and Lewis place, half a block from her home. She died in St. Catherines hospital, Hammond. She was the wife of George N. Lewis, secretary to Mayor Thomas O'Connor of East Chicago. The driver was George Deak, 4311 Northcott avenue, East Chicago.

Judge Who Fought Slot Machines Is Fired On

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Police today announced that they were investigating an attempt on the life of Judge Leon McCord of Montgomery Circuit court last night. Five shots were fired into his home. During the last few years Judge McCord has waged warfare on slot machines and helped draw the anti-slot machine bill on which charges of attempted bribery of a legislative official have been made.

HOOSIER KILLED BY HEAT.

Petersburg, Ind., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Heat claimed its first victim of the summer here this afternoon when Luther Boger, 75 years old, was overcome and dropped dead in his front yard.

"Funerals by Hursen" Of Course

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smaller or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

U. S. OUTLAY UP 47 MILLION FIRST "THRIFT MONTH"

Fiscal Year of Economy Opens Badly.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Despite President Hoover's warning to departments that there must be extensive reductions in governmental expenditures, the general outlay for the first thirty days of the new fiscal year was $47,000,000 greater than for the same period a year previous.

The treasury's daily statement, giving the condition of the government to the close of business July 30, showed that the general departmental expenditures had amounted to $237,186,634, compared with $190,502,921 in the first thirty days of the 1931 fiscal year.

The 1932 fiscal year started off with a deficit $43,000,000 greater than in the same period of the previous year, totaling $195,624,252 on July 30, compared with $148,302,984 in the first thirty days of the preceding year.

Income tax receipts fell off $7,000,000 compared with a year ago, totaling $22,650,420, while miscellaneous internal revenue declined approximately $4,000,000 to $49,311,095. Customs receipts, however, were $33,417,050 this year, compared with $26,196,399 last year. Collections by the government dropped $11,000,000 in the thirty days to an aggregate of $113,585,555.

While public debt expenditures, refunds of customs and internal revenue receipts and the postal deficit showed slight decreases compared with a year ago, the federal farm board spent $28,-[illegible]790 during the thirty days, compared with $10,476,751 in the same period of last year.

Total receipts of the government, including special funds, amounted to $116,063,948, while total expenditures, including special funds, amounted to $311,818,637.

ARID LAND SALE DRIVE IN WEST IS UNDER FIRE

Riverside, Cal., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—The planning commission here has directed an appeal to the California state real estate commission to block what is termed unfair advertising and sale of desert lands.

The appeal follows the activity of real estate sharks to capitalize on Boulder Dam publicity by subdividing raw waterless desert patches which will be reclaimed under any aspects of the Boulder Dam enterprise.

The appeal to Real Estate Commissioner Joseph P. Smith criticizes proposed sale of nine sections of land in the Chocolate mountains near the boundary line between Imperial and Riverside counties. The deal is being engineered by a Los Angeles firm.

It is pointed out that county chamber of commerce data on minerals and citrus fruit wealth are embodied in the real estate prospectuses, as though the land was possible of development in this manner. Such development, it is stated by local business men jealous of this section's good reputation, is impossible. The attempt to sell the useless arid land is being conducted here, in Los Angeles, and in Rocky mountain and middle west cities, it was asserted.

Rich Widow Kidnaped and Robbed; Woman Is Held

Denver, Colo., Aug. 1.—(AP)—A report of Mrs. Clara Dadisman, 62, wealthy widow, that she had been kidnaped by a woman, robbed of $3,000 in jewelry, and tortured nearly ten hours, was before detectives here today. Miss Olive Stricland, 23, whom Mrs. Dadisman identified as a former roommate, was held for questioning. Police said they found two of the victim's rings at the girl's apartment last night. The widow reported that she was trapped in a hotel shop to which she had been lured by a telephone call.

2 Immigration Clerks Held for Alien Re-entry Plot

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Edward Burns, 23, and Elbert F. Vorrelli, 23, clerks in the immigration department at Ellis island, were held today under charges of violating the immigration law. Arrested in the office of Acting United States Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, they admitted having provided another clerk, Simon Rothberg, with information enabling him to issue fraudulent reëntry permits to aliens. Rothberg was arrested Wednesday. Dewey refused to estimate the extent of the admission of aliens through the use of fraudulent permits.

U. S., IN REPLY TO CANADA, DEFENDS SHELLING OF SHIP

Upholds Killing of Rum Skipper by Guards.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—A note upholding the contention of the coast guard that it was within its legal rights in shelling the Canadian rum running schooner Josephine K. prior to the seizure of the vessel on Jan. 24 off the New Jersey coast was handed to the Canadian government today by the state department. The communication was in answer to a Canadian note of protest received by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson in March.

Captain of Ship Killed.

Capt. William P. Cluett of Lunenberg, N. S., master of the vessel, was fatally wounded by a one pound shell fired from one of the guns mounted on the coast guard cutter 145. The cutter fired when the Josephine K. attempted to escape.

In protesting the killing of Capt. Cluett the Canadian government contended that the coast guard used an unwarranted amount of force. It was also argued that the Josephine K. was outside the jurisdiction of the United States when the shooting occurred. The state department note backs up the contentions of the coast guard that it had the right to use force to stop the vessel.

Similar to I'm Alone Case.

The case of the Josephine K. is somewhat similar to that of the I'm Alone incident of March, 1929. The schooner I'm Alone was sunk 200 miles off the Louisiana shore by the coast guard with the result that one sailor, a Frenchman, was drowned. The Canadian government protested on the grounds that the United States had no authority to pursue the schooner so far at sea when the vessel was not first sighted within the three mile territorial waters limit.

This case is now in process of arbitration. The Canadian government protested that the coast guard did not have authority under the anti-rum smuggling treaties to actually shell and sink a vessel and endanger its crew.

Two Killed as Chileans Hail Return of Ex-Chief

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Two persons were killed and four injured today when a large crowd gathered about Mapocho station to welcome former President Arturo Alessandri home from exile. A group climbed on an electric locomotive for a better view of the celebration, and two of them were electrocuted.

DREISER LOSES PLEA TO BLOCK FILM SHOWING

New York, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Holding that it is a matter of opinion whether the picture version of Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" represents the letter and spirit of the novel, Supreme Court Justice Graham Witschief in White Plains today denied the novelist's motion for a temporary injunction restraining the Paramount Publix corporation from displaying the picture, now scheduled for its New York premiére next week.

Justice Witschief pointed out that it cost $500,000 to produce the picture and that Dreiser was paid $138,000, having signed an agreement giving the company the right to change or alter his story while the company was obliged to accept suggestions from him only "in so far as it may, in the judgment of the purchaser, consistently do so."

There is still pending Dreiser's application for a permanent injunction against the producers, but ten days ago counsel on both sides tentatively agreed to abide by the decision of Justice Witschief in regard to the temporary injunction.

The novelist fought public display of "An American Tragedy" on the grounds that while his novel was an indictment of the social system for molding such characters as Clyde Griffiths, the picture shows merely an ordinary murder story, and instead of indicting society really justifies it, and indicts Griffiths, who is depicted as a "designing, mean and contemptuous individual."

Creighton Hale, Veteran Movie Actor, Weds Again

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Creighton Hale, 35, veteran motion picture actor, and Mrs. Kathleen Zering, 30, were married today by Superior Judge Samuel R. Blake. Charles Coleman, actor, and Mrs. Eugene Ford, sister of the bride, attended the couple. Mrs. Zering is not connected with films. Hale starred for many years in the once popular serial films. Each has been married once before.

HOLD FEET, NOT WEATHER, CAUSE PAINS IN FEET

Chiropodist Says Aches Cost 100 Million.

Folks used to blame the weather for tired, aching feet, but these days, according to chiropodists, they blame the feet. Dr. Louis Weiss, of Detroit, a member of the board of directors of the Michigan Chiropodist association, said yesterday that American industries lost $100,000,000 a year because of employés' foot ailments. He is attending the meeting of the International Organization of Foot Specialists which opened yesterday at the Hotel Sherman.

"Not only is industry the loser," Dr. Weiss said, "but a survey of school children between the ages of 8 and 14 years disclosed that 80 per cent of the girls and 65 per cent of the boys have defective feet. As for adults nine out of every ten are affected with some form of foot defect."

Dr. Paul F. Mahaffey of Springfield, Ill., maintains that the highly mechanized civilization of modern life is causing men and women to lost the art of walking. He added that the feminine foot, considered small and dainty by masculine critics, is small and dainty no longer.

"Women who a few years ago wore a 4 and 5½ size shoe are today taking sizes ranging from 6½ to 7. I would advise women to wear low heeled service shoes while doing their housework and if they wear these service shoes five hours a day while their feet are active, they can then wear French heels for dress with no fear of harm to their feet."

A free foot clinic will be held this afternoon and Monday at Jefferson Park hospital where minor surgical operations will be performed on those suffering from foot ailments.

QUARREL ENDS IN DEATH; WOMAN'S SUITOR ACCUSED

Wilfred Olson, 29 year old steamfitter, quarreled last night with his sweetheart, Mrs. Anna Larson, 40 years old, 313 South Winchester avenue, at Jackson boulevard and Irving avenue. He ended the quarrel, police were told, with a blow of his fist on Mrs. Larson's face and she fell to the sidewalk. She died while she was being taken to the county hospital.

Olson fled, but was caught a short time later by Sergt. Patrick McShane and his squad at Lincoln and Van Buren streets. Evelyn Rosser, 7 years old, 309 South Winchester avenue, who saw the woman fall, identified the steamfitter at the Warren avenue station. Olson admitted being at the scene, but asserted he and Mrs. Larson had been drinking whisky on the steps of a building and that she was injured in falling to the ground. The little girl, however, insisted that he struck the woman.

Neighbors of Mrs. Larson said that she and Olson met almost every night. She supported herself by working as a domestic, they added. Olson said that he had no steady home.

FIRST OF NEWEST PUBLIC FOES IS SEIZED BY POLICE

George Downs, south side hoodlum whose name appears in the new list of public enemies published by the Chicago crime commission on Friday, was arrested yesterday as he stood at 63d street and Kedzie avenue. Sergt. Thomas Gorman and his detective bureau squad get credit for bringing in the first of the new enemies.

Downs was taken to the detective bureau where he is being held for investigation. Sergt. Gorman said that he will have victims of recent crimes look at Downs at the regular weekly show up.

Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the crime commission, said that he expects Acting Commissioner Alcock to furnish every member of the department with the new list of public enemies. Chamberlin added that he expects to confer with State's Attorney Swanson next week regarding means of harassing the new enemies.

CHICAGO WARNED BY OHIO ABOUT LAKE DIVERSION

Columbus, O., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Attorney General Gilbert Bettman today sent a letter to William Rothman, Chicago, attorney for the Chicago sanitary district, protesting the slow progress made by that city in eliminating the diversion of water from the great lakes.

Bettman sent copies of the letter to attorney generals of other states bordering on the great lakes and to the clerk of the United States Supreme court, where the report on the progress of the sewage disposal plant construction in Chicago was filed recently.

The attorney general warned the Chicago attorney that Ohio will fight any application of Chicago for an extension of the eight year period decree by the court for Chicago to cease diversion of water from the lakes.

PASSENGERS CHASE THIEF.

FORM BODY TO BOOST CHICAGO'S WHOLESALE AREA

John B. Mallers Jr. Head of Corporation.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

JOHN B. MALLERS JR.
[Walinger Photo.]

Chicago's great wholesale district, bounded by Wells, Lake, Harrison and the river, is scheduled for an era of progress and expansion according to John B. Mallers Jr., president of an organization formed yesterday which is known as "The Wholesale District of Chicago, Inc." This new body is composed of practically all of the big realty interests in the area.

It has a board of directors numbering fifteen. Of these, in addition to Mr. Mallers as president, J. L. Kesner, John Q. Adams, and John T. Pirie are vice presidents; K. J. Scheckler is treasurer, and William W. Geary is secretary.

Perhaps the most significant single project announced in the new organization's program of expansion for the district is the development of Wacker drive south from Madison street, along the east bank of the river, eventually reaching Archer avenue, as contemplated in the Chicago plan. This will give the wholesale district a magnificent waterside boulevard along its entire western boundary. It is estimated that the same increase in realty values will accrue to property along the drive and to the east that followed the opening of the present Wacker drive along the south bank of the river.

Will Start at Once.

"The activities of the organization, which will start to function immediately, will be to promote the advantages of the wholesale district to the outside world," explained an officer of the new corporation. Also to maintain the district at all times as an attractive and most convenient center and to induce additional industries to come into this area.

"The organization feels that this wholesale district of Chicago offers to the manufacturer's representatives and to the wholesaler of dry goods and kindred merchandise generally, advantages to be found in no similar district in any city of America.

"It has easy access to all railroad stations; it's but a short walk to the most concentrated retail center in the world; the downtown hotels and places of amusement that will add as an attraction to out of town buyers, are close at hand. In fact, it's in the downtown heart of things."

Sees A Great Future.

President Mallers had this to say regarding the organization's ambitions: "We see a great future for our district known as the wholesale center of the country. With the new railroad station to be built at La Salle and Van Buren, on the south; the new post office at Van Buren and Canal; the Union and Northwestern stations, on the west and other large buildings on the north, and bounded on the east by the entire financial district of Chicago, this district offers untold possibilities for future development as a merchandise center.

"It will be our purpose to exploit the advantages of this district at every opportunity and to act as a body in constantly improving the outward appearance of its buildings, streets, etc., so that the most desirable of mercantile firms will be anxious to add their names to the long roster of those progressive firms who have successfully done business in this area for half a century.

"We feel it will add to the name and fame of Chicago as a whole and we're enthused about the effective work that can be done by our newly formed organization."

The fifteen directors are: J. Q. Adams, Graham Aldis, J. B. Clow, Charles Dennehy, Newton Grey, J. L. Kesner, J. B. Mallers Jr., Magnus Meyers, C. B. Miller, Hamilton Moses, Henry Rissman, K. J. Sheckler, Emanuel Selz, L. K. Smith, and Judson Stone.

JOSEPH LEITER LEASES HOUSE IN BANKS ST.

JOSEPH LEITER.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who have been spending the summer at Lake Forest, yesterday leased the residence at 44 Banks street for use as their town house during the next four years. The building contains sixteen rooms, with six master chambers, and is owned by the Ryerson estate, of which Edward L. Ryerson is a trustee. Mr. and Mrs. Leiter will occupy it with their son. Thomas Leiter, and Colin Leiter Campbell. Edna T. Merrill, of Ross and Browne, was the only broker.

St. Louis Firm Establishes Offices in Builders Bldg.

The Bridges Asphalt company of St. Louis, Edward B. Steele, representing the Alabastine company and Block & Wasserman, steel cabinets, have established Chicago offices in the Builders' building. Other new tenants reported by L. J. Sheridan & Co., agents, include Robert Pedin, architect; World Motor company, the Mortensen Engineering company, and Hec Barth, representing the Prima Colour company.

CLYDE AVENUE DEAL.

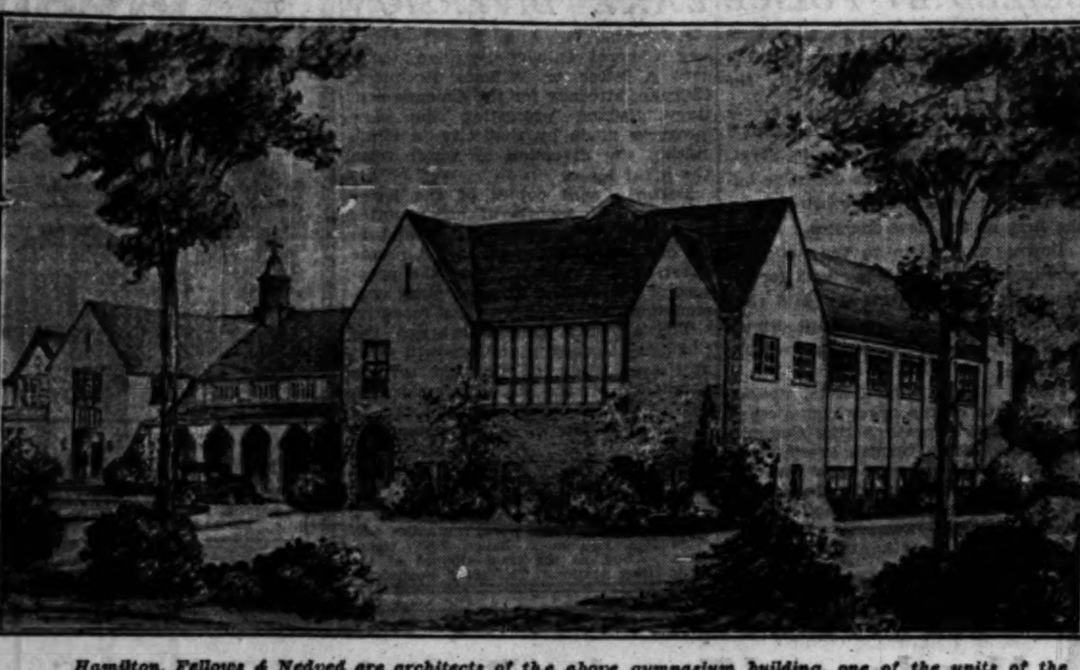
WINNETKA'S NEW COMMUNITY GYM



Hamilton, Fellows & Nedved are architects of the above gymnasium building, one of the units of the Winnetka community house of the Winnetka Congregational church, at the southwest corner of Lincoln avenue and Pine street, in the north shore suburb. It will be known as the Douglas Smith Memorial gymnasium and is the gift of Kenneth G. Smith, president of the Pepsodent company, in honor of his father, founder of that concern. Mr. Smith gave $45,000 toward the new structure. In addition to a complete gymnasium, with gallery for spectators, it will have locker rooms, showers, Boy Scout rooms, a manual arts room, etc. The exterior will be of gray brick, with trim of Wisconsin Lannon stone. Work has just started and completion is set for Jan. 1.

On your left in the above picture, Rudolph Nedved, a partner in the architectural firm of Hamilton, Fellows & Nedved, who made this perspective, has shown how it is suggested that Mats hall should be built, with a proposed loggia and gable.

Realtors to Have Outing at Crystal Lake

A. W. DRAPER JR.
[Walinger Photo.]

Realtors will hold their annual fall outing at the Crystal Lake Country club on Wednesday, Sept. 16, according to an announcement from the Chicago Real Estate board. In addition to golf, there'll be tennis, horse shoe pitching and other events, with prizes. Under the supervision of Al Myren, chairman of the board's outing committee, preparations for the outing already are under way.

It will be an all day affair, starting at nine o'clock in the morning and lasting until late evening. Tickets are to be on sale at the realty board rooms and will provide for both luncheon and dinner in the club house.

The golfing competitions, to be held on the two eighteen hole courses, will be under the direction of a committee composed of Arthur Draper Jr., chairman, J. J. Fischer, Leo Varty, Herbert J. Lorber and George L. Drollinger.

James Belanger, R. J. Chinnock and J. C. Hill are making arrangements for the baseball games. Benjamin L. Coolidge, Hugh Michels and A. H. Parker are planning the horse shoe pitching contests.

Percy Wagner and C. T. A. Anderson compose the tennis committee; Stanley Roe and Kenneth C. Brown the committee on races; George Stromberg and S. A. Bernbach, the nail driving contest and Harry Peel, Edward Scott and Mr. Myren are on the committee of awards.

CRAIG SAYS FIVE DAY WEEK IDEA IS SPREADING

Builders throughout the nation are gradually accepting the five day week schedule for building trades mechanics, according to Edward M. Craig, executive secretary of the National Association of Building Trades Employers.

Mr. Craig's opinion was voiced after he had analyzed the reports received on building conditions from contractors in 130 American cities. The survey reveals approximately 65 to 70 per cent of the nation's building trades workers unemployed, a condition that has been more or less acute for the last eighteen months.

"In 1930," states Mr. Craig, "thirty-five cities employed building artisans on the five day week basis and today reports reveal more than sixty cities are hiring building workers on the short week schedule."

In the compilation of the cities having the five day week, Robert D. Steele, the builders' statistician, reports the following: "The five day week has been established entirely in Boston, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Elizabeth, Jersey City, Kansas City, New York, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Springfield, Mass.; St. Louis, and Trenton.

The forty hour week has been inaugurated in part in Akron, Buffalo, Butte, Chicago, Charleston, Danville, Dayton, Denver, Detroit, East St. Louis, Evansville, Fall River, Grand Rapids, Great Falls, Hammond, Harrisburg, Hartford, Houston, Louisville, Lowell, Lynn, Madison, Memphis, New Bedford, New Haven, Peoria, Philadelphia, Portland, Me., Portland, Ore., Providence, Rochester, Rock Island, Sacramento, San Diego, Scranton, Seattle, Spokane, Springfield, Ill., Syracuse, Utica, Washington, and Wilmington."

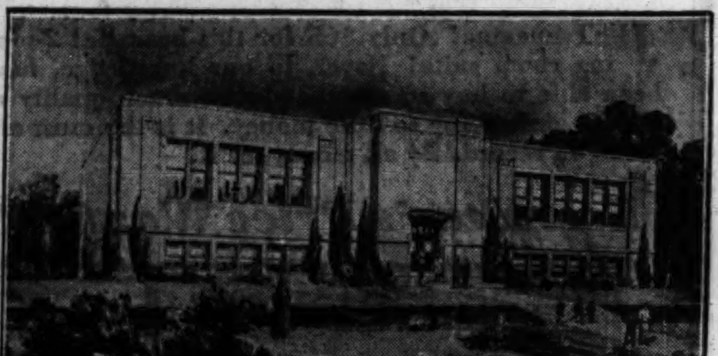
Viceroy Hotel Bldg. Stores Now 100 Per Cent Rented

The Cantilever Shoe Shop, Inc., has leased the store at 1049 Lawrence avenue to Leonard O. Moburg, radios. Arnold T. Linder & Co. were brokers. They report that the Viceroy hotel building stores are now 100 per cent rented.

BROKERS' NOTES

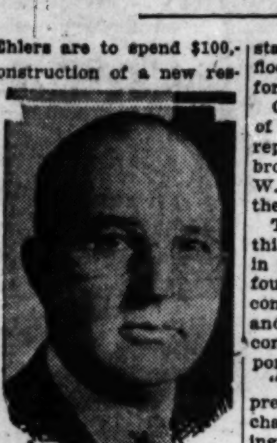
Le Roy J. Keneval, treasurer and general sales manager of the Frederick H. Bartlett Realty company, sailed yesterday from New York on the Isle de France for Europe. He will spend a couple of months touring England, France, Germany, and Holland, devoting considerable time to the study of water front and seaside developments.

AT BEVERLY SHORES



Work is now being rushed on the above $35,000 public school under construction in the Frederick H. Bartlett Realty company's Beverly Shores on Lake Michigan. Willard Elwood of South Bend, Ind., is architect. It will have large classrooms and an auditorium for the fifth and upper grades. Foundations will permit another story when needed and additions can be built at one side. Completion is promised by Sept. 15. Charles P. Eppinghousen made this picture.

Pixley & Ehlers Plan New Restaurant on West Madison



ALBERT J. PIXLEY.
[Moffet-Russell Photo.]

Pixley & Ehlers are to spend $100,000 in the construction of a new restaurant at 808 West Madison street, which will give employment to approximately 100 workmen during erection and which will give permanent work to forty people when completed, according to an announcement made last night by Albert J. Pixley, president of the company.

The Pixley & Ehlers corporation has leased the four story building at No. 808, just west of Halsted, and will transform the first floor into a modern restaurant along lines the firm uses in its eating places. Frank O. Demoney, architect and contractor, has started construction. The upper three floors will be used as store rooms and for recreation facilities for employés.

Completion is expected by the end of September. The annual rental is reported to be in excess of $7,000. The broker handling the transaction was W. H. Ames of L. M. Willis & Co., the attorney was Ernest Severy.

The new restaurant will be the third established by Pixley & Ehlers in the last two years, and will be the fourteenth of the chain. The last two completed were at 68 East Lake street and 33 West Madison street. The total construction cost of the three is reported at $400,000.

"We've paid no attention to the depression," Mr. Pixley, president of the chain, stated. "Instead, we're building for the future, confident that present business conditions soon will improve. We believe in the future of Chicago and now have fourteen restaurants here. We've not laid off a single employé nor, reduced a pay check because of the times, and we don't intend to do so."

A few weeks ago Pixley & Ehlers distributed a total of $40,000 in bonus checks to 450 employés. The bonus plan has been in effect for fifteen years without interruption.

SOLOMON SMITH LEASES A SUITE ON SHORE DRIVE

[Walinger Photo.]

Solomon A. Smith, president of the Northern Trust company, has leased a sixteen room, eight bath apartment at 1242 Lake Shore drive for a five year term commencing in the fall. The suite comprizes all of the 17th and half of the 18th floors. Mr. and Mrs. Smith and their two sons and daughter, Caroline, who made her début in Chicago society last winter, will occupy the apartment. Dorothy R. Sprague of Ross & Browne, was broker. Other tenants of 1242 include: Samuel Insull Jr., George Lytton, Robert H. Morse, Mrs. William Niblack, and William E. Graham.

Buy Factory to House the Continental Beverage Co.

Albert and Harold Giusti, doing business as the Continental Beverage company at 2518 Irving Park boulevard, have purchased the factory building at 2623 Belmont avenue for an undisclosed consideration from Walter J. Spengler. Frank Warneke was broker Arthur A. Maina was attorney for the purchasers.

Feltman & Curme Rent Shop at 3229 Lincoln Ave.

The Feltman & Curme Shoe Stores company, operator of a national chain, has leased the 25x100 space at 3229 Lincoln avenue, from Jacob Wolf for fifteen years at an undisclosed rental. Harry F. Tate represented both parties. Extensive alterations, including a new store front, are planned. The opening is set for about Aug. 1.

PLAN $50,000 MASONIC TEMPLE AT LIBERTYVILLE

Libertyville is to have a $50,000 Masonic temple. Plans have been drawn by John A. Scribbins for a two story structure, to occupy a 50x150 foot site opposite the Methodist church, on Brainard avenue. The Libertyville Masonic Temple association, of which Benjamin H. Miller, attorney, is president, consists of about a hundred members of the Libertyville Masonic lodge. The new building will have a front elevation of stone and will contain lodge hall and club rooms. In addition there'll be an entertainment hall and kitchen in the English basement. Work is expected to get under way about Sept. 1.

AURORA TO GET STATE MEET OF REALTY BOARDS

Realtors from all parts of the state will meet at Aurora next October when the 15th annual convention of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards will be held on the 14th, 15th and 16th. George F. Nixon, president of the state body, announced yesterday that the board of directors had accepted the invitation of the Aurora Real Estate board to meet in that city. Oscar Bjorseth, president of the Aurora board, has appointed Layard G. Thorpe general committee chairman to prepare for the convention.

AIR LINES WILL HAVE FLOOR IN LA SALLE-WACKER

United Leases Space for General Offices.

Leasing of the entire thirty-eighth floor of the La Salle-Wacker building by the United Air Lines, announced yesterday, will make Chicago the executive headquarters of the world's largest air line in point of miles flown, according to officials of the company. The executive and general offices will open tomorrow in the new quarters overlooking the river and Chicago's financial lane.

United Air Lines, recently formed through the concentration of management of four individual air lines—Boeing, National and Pacific Air Transport, and Varney Air Lines, will occupy the space with offices of P. G. Johnson, president, and other operating, traffic, and accounting officials.

Formerly in Other Cities.

Executive offices of the subsidiary lines formerly were maintained in several cities, including Chicago, Cheyenne, and Seattle. About fifty employés will occupy the new offices, which consist of 3,700 square feet of floor space.

When the four subsidiary lines of the United System were put under the one management last month a system was formed which flies more miles yearly than any American or European air transport system, it is claimed. Including the twenty-six air mail and passenger schedules operated through Chicago daily on the N. A. T. and Boeing subsidiaries, the United system flies twelve million miles annually, with about five million miles being flown at night.

From Coast to Coast.

The United system extends from coast to coast with a 28 hour transcontinental schedule between San Francisco, Chicago, and New York; from New York to Chicago and the southwest; from the Rocky mountain region to the Pacific northwest, and from Mexico to Canada, providing the only daylight service along the length of the Pacific coast.

A branch traffic office is maintained at 400 South Michigan avenue and a field office at the municipal airport, 5936 South Cicero avenue, Chicago.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

DON'T REMODEL UNTIL YOU'RE SURE OF FUNDS

Learn Cost and Deal with O. K. Firms.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

LOUISE BARGELT.

After one has decided beyond all doubt that a house deserves modernization and is well worth the necessary expenditure to improve its appearance, to render it more comfortable and increase its monetary value, there remains one important point to settle before going ahead with the actual work. That is the determining of just how much the project will cost, where the money is coming from in case one has not the total cash on hand, and how long one has in which to pay off the indebtedness. Where a modernization undertaking is a sizable one, this matter of definite financing is as important as it is in the building of a new home.

Most of us can bring to mind instances of men in times past who have started building without adequate provision made to secure the needed funds, and have discovered too late that they had a partly completed house—and no money to finish it.

Financing institutions, banks, building and loan associations, realtors and the like, will tell a man precisely what they will advance him for the work he wants done before he starts.

Knows Exact Cost.

Competent, reputable home remodeling organizations, and substantial firms handling building materials offer comfortable terms of payment for the modernizing work they do, so that a man knows before the remodeling starts, just how much he has to pay and how long a time he has to complete his payments.

But whatever medium a man chooses through which to accomplish home rejuvenation of any sort, the important points are to deal with reliable institutions and to know before he starts in that he can carry through to the finish.

Often there is the serious question to be settled as to whether a house is worth the money required to transform it into a thoroughly modern dwelling. Where there is any doubt in the owner's mind on this question, expert advice should be sought to determine just how obsolete the house is and if the major operation involved is so complicated as to make it seem wiser to build entirely anew.

In the case of this home of Mr. Gillies, however, there was no such question to be settled since the house was a well built, substantial seven room stucco residence. The modernization desired here was to add sun room and a breakfast room, with deck space above for recreation area, and to remove unnecessary door openings between the interior music room and living room, and add in this way to the spaciousness of the latter.

As can be seen from the pictures, the dormer in the front bedroom was cut on the new roof, with bright awnings to give a dash of color in summer time, and a special waterproof deck of asbestos and asphalt given to the deck floor.

Below, in the addition, the owner did not wish a partition between the sun room and the breakfast room and therefore a case with book shelves on one side and a china case on the other side was provided which gave the desired privacy without entirely separating the two rooms.

The house also received a new coat of soft buff stucco and a new roof of green wood shingles. New casements were installed throughout, small panes used where the windows were large in order to reduce the effect of size and keep them from looking out of proportion. Despite the fact that smaller panes are a little harder to keep clean, they offer compensation in the way of much added charm.

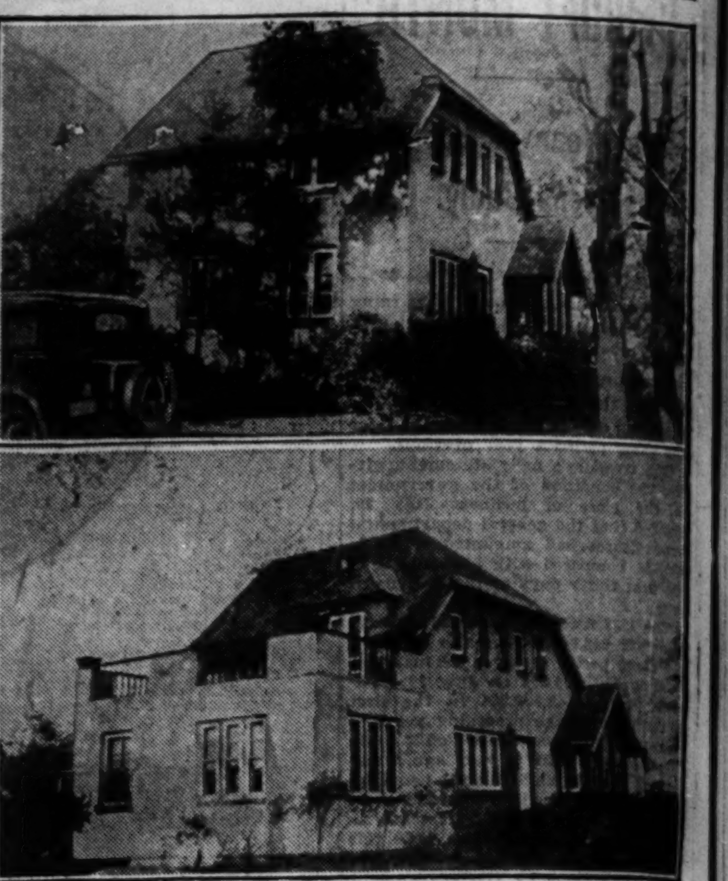
Should Harmonize with Old.

At the present time we find many modernization projects centering around the porch, removing an old one in some instances, or adding, as in this case, both a generous sun room and breakfast room.

It is important, also, in adding so materially to the home structure that the work should be artistically and competently done so that the new part of the house should have the logical appearance of belonging entirely and harmoniously to the old.

No one can say at the present time just what the future has in store, but certain signs point toward extreme simplification of detail. For this reason it is not without wisdom to refrain in our modernization work as well as in our new building from too many illogical frills and furbelows and trimmings; in short, to modernize and build anew in a like simplicity of manner so that we may keep our homes from looking too obsolete—too fusty—twenty or thirty years from now!

BEFORE AND AFTER



The home of Gordon Gillies, Park Ridge, Ill., before and after its modernization. Semi-Italian in spirit, this seven room residence was given an addition of sun room and breakfast room, with space on upper deck opening into a second story bedroom. The exterior was given a new coat of soft buff stucco, a new wood green shingle roof and metal casement windows. Architect for the remodeling, W. F. McCaughey, Pickwick building, Park Ridge.

BIT OF HOLLAND FOUND NEAR TO CHICAGO MARKET

Dutch Farmers Make Onions a Business.

BY PAUL POTTER.

It's not so far from Chicago to Holland as one who has never explored the southern area of Cook county might think. Just run your index finger down the map, follow Michigan avenue, through Riverdale and Dolton, and you will find it.

Here, spread upon the old lake bed, is nestled a quaint little village called South Holland, dissected by a constant stream of travelers who, only when they alight and inquire about, discover a settlement where many Dutch customs and the native tongue of the dyke country still prevails.

One may find hand carved wooden shoes in the shop windows. The little homes are trim and neat, and the several churches, some of them a half century old, are objects for architectural study. Within their well painted walls the erect pews still are filled each Sabbath morning with a devout and rugged people.

Farming Still Has Drudgery.

Since the days described by Edna Ferber in her "So Big" this country has yielded prolifically of onions, cabbage, carrots, asparagus, sweet corn, turnips, and such truck for the Chicago market. Much of the work is still done painstakingly on hands and knees.

Yet the thrifty immigrants have laid by for the lean years. Typical of the older pioneering generation is John Ravesloot Sr., who came to South Holland when he was 4 years old, and today at almost 80 he drives his car about the farms and continues his active interest, with his son, in an acreage of onions.

Two townships in this part of Cook county—Bloom and Thornton—annually produce over eighty per cent of all the onion sets of the nation. Some sets are also produced in Racine and Kenosha counties, Wis., and a little in Iowa, Maryland, Oregon, and Montana.

Haven't "Beat the Dutch."

But the other onion growers haven't yet been able to "beat the Dutch" around South Holland. Buying their seed at 75 cents to a dollar per pound, and sowing 65 to 70 pounds of seed to the acre, they use horses and machinery for only the sowing and cultivating. Some are experimenting with harvesting equipment now.

The ground having been cropped in onions for many years, the seed is treated with formaldehyde to prevent smut. The land must be heavily fertilized. A normal yield is considered to be about 300 bushels to the acre, the sets last year bringing a dollar to $1.50 per bushel of 32 pounds.

But this year's crop, just now being harvested, has suffered from drought. During the spring and up until the last good rain on June 22, an extra large acreage and heavy yields were in prospect. The weather man, instead of a federal farm board, disposed of the surplus for these farmers.

Stored Away Until Winter.

As the sets [small onions which next season will be grown to full market size] are turned out of the ground, they are gathered into "flats" or crates, and removed after drying to one of several long low sheds or warehouses to be seen in this neighborhood.

They are kept cool and dry with ventilating and heating equipment, to prevent sprouting, and are shipped to the four corners of the nation beginning late in December or early in January, as well as in February and March. The crop now being harvested was placed in the hands of brokers last spring, although another eight months will elapse before the farmers realize cash on their shipments.

In spite of controlling so much of a crop of limited production in so small an area, the growers have continued with one exception to deal individually or in groups with brokers. A bargaining association has been formed, of which Teunis Verduin, near Chicago Heights, is president. It has about 100 members.

Local Organization Aiding.

The gardeners and farmers of this region almost without exception belong to a local unit of the Cook County Truck Gardeners' association. Although it is a commodity organization, the principal activities for these farmers have been to adjust land values in the interest of easing an increasingly heavy tax burden on farmers, and the conducting of a growers' "school."

Many farmers in this section are also members of the Cook County Farm Bureau, which affiliates them with the state farm bureau, the Illinois Agricultural association, and the American Farm Bureau federation.

ENATOR EXCITES PHILIPPINES BY LIBERTY ORATORY

Hawes of Missouri Leaves Manila Gasping.

BY A. H. ESCODA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, Aug. 1.—Manila has played host to a good number of congressional visitors during the last year, but the palm for arousing the greatest public interest with his utterances and his general stand on the Philippine independence question goes to Senator Harry B. Hawes of Missouri, who left here today. He will visit China before returning to the United States.

HARRY B. HAWES.
(Harris & Ewing.)

The senator from Missouri prepared a statement before landing in Manila to the effect that he was coming out to see for himself conditions in the islands and to let the Filipinos convince him, if they could, that they really wanted independence. In the same statement, however, Senator Hawes told the Filipinos that if they wanted independence they should unite and tell the United States what they wanted, at the same time urging the sending of another independence mission to Washington.

Has Manila Gasping.

Senator Hawes spent six weeks in the islands, visiting the provinces and took advantage of his opportunity to tell the Filipinos that only by being united could they hope to achieve independence. He took issue with those who claimed that the islands were not yet ready for independence, and frequently he openly called those who counselled 20 or 30 years of preparation for independence "hypocrites," declaring they did not have the courage to say they did not want independence at any time.

Utterances of equal vehemence succeeded one another until the Missouri senator had Manila gasping and asking itself the question: What next?

Senator Hawes arrived in Manila when Gov. Gen. Davis was in Baguio. Members of the congressional party made the trip to Baguio to see the governor general and pay their compliments to him as chief executive. Not so with Senator Hawes. He departed from the ordinary practice of Manila visitors from the United States, remaining in Manila to confer with political leaders on the independence question and on the bill he said he intended to introduce at the next session of congress.

Recalls "Boston Tea Party."

At a secret conference with leaders in Filipino politics, the Missouri senator was reported to have been outspoken in his advice to Filipinos regarding what they should do to achieve freedom, going to the extent of urging them to remind American business men in the islands, if "they got too rough," that there was such a thing as a "Boston tea party."

The Manila Daily Bulletin, the only American paper in the Philippines, voiced its protest against senator Hawes' effort to arouse the Filipinos unduly on the independence question in utter disregard of the economic phase of the matter, and openly questioned the senator's motives.

The Missourian countered with a vitriolic speech before Filipino business men, attacking the paper and demanding that it come out openly with a statement of its policy. This the Daily Bulletin did the next day, calling for independence after a period of preparation along economic lines of not less than twenty-five to thirty years.

In one of his interviews Senator Hawes advanced the theory that in case of independence the United States should relinquish everything, including naval stations and fortifications.

Davis Mum Over "Departure."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Gov. Davis, now on a tour of inspection through the southern islands, today refused to comment on a statement made by Sergio Osmena, acting president of the Philippine senate, that the governor was going on a leave of absence and would not return. This is the first time Gov. Davis did not deny the report that he was leaving, which was interpreted to be a virtual confirmation of Osmena's statement.

While Osmena declined to make any further comment, reliable sources state that Osmena's statement, in which he praised Gov. Davis, was the initial step in a campaign to get the authorities in Washington to persuade the governor to return to Manila after having visited his family in France.

It is well known that on account of the ill health of Mrs. Davis the governor general feels that it is his duty to be with his family, now in Paris.

WALKER DENIES HE'LL RESIGN AS MAYOR FOR FILM CZAR JOB

New York, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—On the eve of his departure for a month's rest and recuperation in Germany, James J. Walker, New York's mayor, denied today that he intended to resign his official position to become either czar of the radio industry or czar of the clothing industry and said he was perfectly contented with the position he holds.

Both reports were published. One rumor said he was to guide the destinies of the radio industry at a salary of $75,000 a year. The second report apparently grew out of his activity as mediator between the garment manufacturers and their employés, which resulted in an agreement last week that checked a general strike. This rumor said he was to receive $100,000 a year from the clothing industry. Reached by telephone today the mayor said:

"I've heard indirectly about the radio job but I have no intention of accepting the offer. As for the clothing industry job I've never heard of it until now."

Three Drowned When Auto Plunges Into River

Sparta, Tenn., Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—Three persons were drowned in the Caney Fork river at Hodgen's Ferry today. Their automobile stalled on the approach to a bridge, rolled backward and plunged over the bluff into the stream. They were William Judd, Miss Lorene Medlay, and Miss Hattie Parrish.

GERMAN POLICE BATTLE MOBS IN 'RED DAY' RIOTS

Two Slain; Showers Curb French Disorders.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—Berlin was dotted with riots today when communists and radicals observed Moscow's appeal for world-wide demonstrations. One police sergeant was killed and two communists are dying after a pitched battle between rioters and police. At 10 o'clock tonight there was still sporadic fighting.

The demonstrations had been prohibited by authorities, but the communists massed in the eastern section of the capital. Using doorways and advertising pillars as strategic posts, the Reds opened revolver fire on the advancing police.

The police were overwhelmed and a sergeant was struck down and killed. Police reinforcements shot into the mob, wounding several demonstrators. The ringleaders were seized. In other sections of Berlin Reds commandeered street cars and hurled stones, shattering many windows. Rioting also occurred in Hamburg. In the harbor district 300 communists fired on and hurled stones at the police. One rioter was killed and two were seriously wounded.

Paris Reds "Drowned Out."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Radical and communist efforts to turn Aug. 1 into a Red demonstration throughout France failed dismally. There were 36 arrests in Paris, chiefly for waving red flags. The assistant to the mayor of Bagnolet and several foreigners were among those seized.

The taxicab drivers failed to strike as they had threatened. A heavy rain emptied the streets in the early afternoon and drenched the enthusiasm of most of the bolshevik ringleaders.

Because authorities had prohibited parades the communist party hired a former amusement park for a monster demonstration. Police guards searched suspected characters on entering, demanding identification papers, and 12 arrests were made. In Marseilles a steeplejack climbed to the pinnacle of a cathedral and hung a red banner. I took firemen three hours to remove it.

Warn of "Capitalistic War."

MOSCOW, Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—"International Red day" demonstrations were held throughout the country today to warn the people of an impending "capitalistic war" on the soviets. The meetings were of a distinctly military nature and speakers as well as editorial writers in the soviet press urged the necessity for unlimited military preparation against external attack.

Shots Fired in Havana.

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Pistol shots were fired into the air during a communistic demonstration here late today. Another meeting began earlier, but police arrived before any manifestation could be held. The would-be demonstrators fled.

HURLEY HOPS FOR TULSA, EN ROUTE TO PHILIPPINES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley left Washington today for Tulsa, Okla., the first lap on his way to the Philippines for an inspection tour. The war secretary left by airplane for the Oklahoma city, where he will join Mrs. Hurley.

Secretary Hurley is making the trip to Manila to procure first hand information on the Philippine situation for President Hoover. He will stop over at Honolulu on the way to the Philippines. The certainty that the Philippine independence problem will come up in congress this winter prompted Mr. Hurley to go to Manila at this time.

Just How Smooth is ★Smooth★ in a Motor Car Engine

"Smoothness" is another of those relative terms which make it so difficult to clearly describe automobile performance. In fact, when anybody brings up the subject, you are thoroughly entitled to ask yourself this question . . . "Just how smooth is 'smooth' in a motor car engine?"

Frankly, there's just one way for us to answer you, and that's to invite you to come in and drive Oldsmobile and make your own comparisons.

We can give you this much information beforehand. Oldsmobile is smooth . . . as smooth at all speeds as many cars much higher in price. The Oldsmobile engine is balanced by the most modern fine car methods. Connecting rods are weighed, matched, and balanced in sets. The crankshaft is counterbalanced to the fraction of an ounce. In addition, it is fitted with a new-type harmonic balancer. And, most important of all, workmanship conforms to the very highest standards.

Come in and see for yourself what these things mean to your motoring enjoyment. Learn what thousands of owners already know . . . that Oldsmobile offers you at moderate price that same luxurious smoothness commonly associated only with high priced cars—an inherent smoothness which results from Oldsmobile's progressive design.

★Your Oldsmobile dealer will gladly place a car at your disposal so that you may test Oldsmobile's smoothness first-hand. In this way you can prove to yourself how much such Oldsmobile features as Syncro-Mesh Transmission, Quiet Second Gear and Down-Draft Carburetion mean to the smooth, quiet delivery of power. Above all, you will feel the inherent smoothness of the Oldsmobile engine throughout the entire speed range. Visit your dealer today.

Oldsmobile may be purchased on the convenient G.M.A.C. time payment plan. $845, the two-door sedan, spare tire and bumpers extra.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[illegible] Johnson, the curving genius of the Cardinals' pitching staff, had [illegible] not luck yesterday. Dueling with Pat Malone for seven innings, the St. Louis expert had the Cubs [illegible] the air and 25,000 spectators singing the blues. Then fickle Dame Fortune assumed charge. Two Cubs [illegible] on by two fluky doubles and a clean single, swept over the plate in the eighth, and that was enough to slow down the Cardinals with a 3 to 2 defeat. The Bruins now are seven and one-half games from the top and there's still a lingering hope.

It probably was poetic justice or justice of some kind that intervened in the waning moments to give Malone his tenth victory instead of his sixth defeat. The big speed baller was hit well during his eight innings, but he kept them well scattered and didn't deserve being scored upon. That he was scored on in two instances can be charged directly to Gabby Hartnett, [illegible] with a passed ball and failure to throw on a steal put two runners in position to score.

Cubs Start in Eighth.

Two were out in the eighth before the Cubs began doing the thing which brought the much needed break. One of these was a strike out of Vin Barton, who tried to bat for Malone. Up to this point the Cubs had the unenviable record of having put only [illegible] men on base against Johnson's pitching. One of these was on the only hit produced in the first four innings. Three of them gained base running distinction in the fifth by singling. Two of these served to furnish the Chicagoans with their first run. The last of the five runners, prior to the eighth inning outbreak, got on through an error.

After Barton's strike out, Blair [illegible] a harmless looking fly close to the line in short left. Gelbert, Hafey, and Adams all raced toward the ball [illegible] arrived in time. When Hafey picked it up, Blair was on second and other hats were sailing out into a [illegible] atmosphere.

May Holds Cards.

English followed with the same variety of fly except that it was in short center. Watkins, Gelbert, and Frisch closed in just as Hafey, Adams, and Gelbert had done a moment previous. The ball landed among them and Blair headed for the plate. In the excitement the Cards had left second base unguarded and English raced for there to [illegible] out Gelbert, who was racing in from center holding the ball. It was a costly blunder.

In another instant Cuyler singled [illegible] first base and English scored the winning run so speedily that Johnson intercepted the return throw instead of letting it go to the plate. Next Taylor walked but with two on Hornsby, whose bat accounted for the run in the fifth, struck out. Then Jakie May brought his southpaw foolers in to keep the champions in check in the ninth. One of them, Hafey, singled with one out, but the next two were easy.

Root to Hurl Today.

Charley Root and Paul Derringer, the rookie from Rochester, will carry the pitching burden in this afternoon's battle. Both will be seeking their thirteenth victory of the season.

Adams, who has a weakness for two

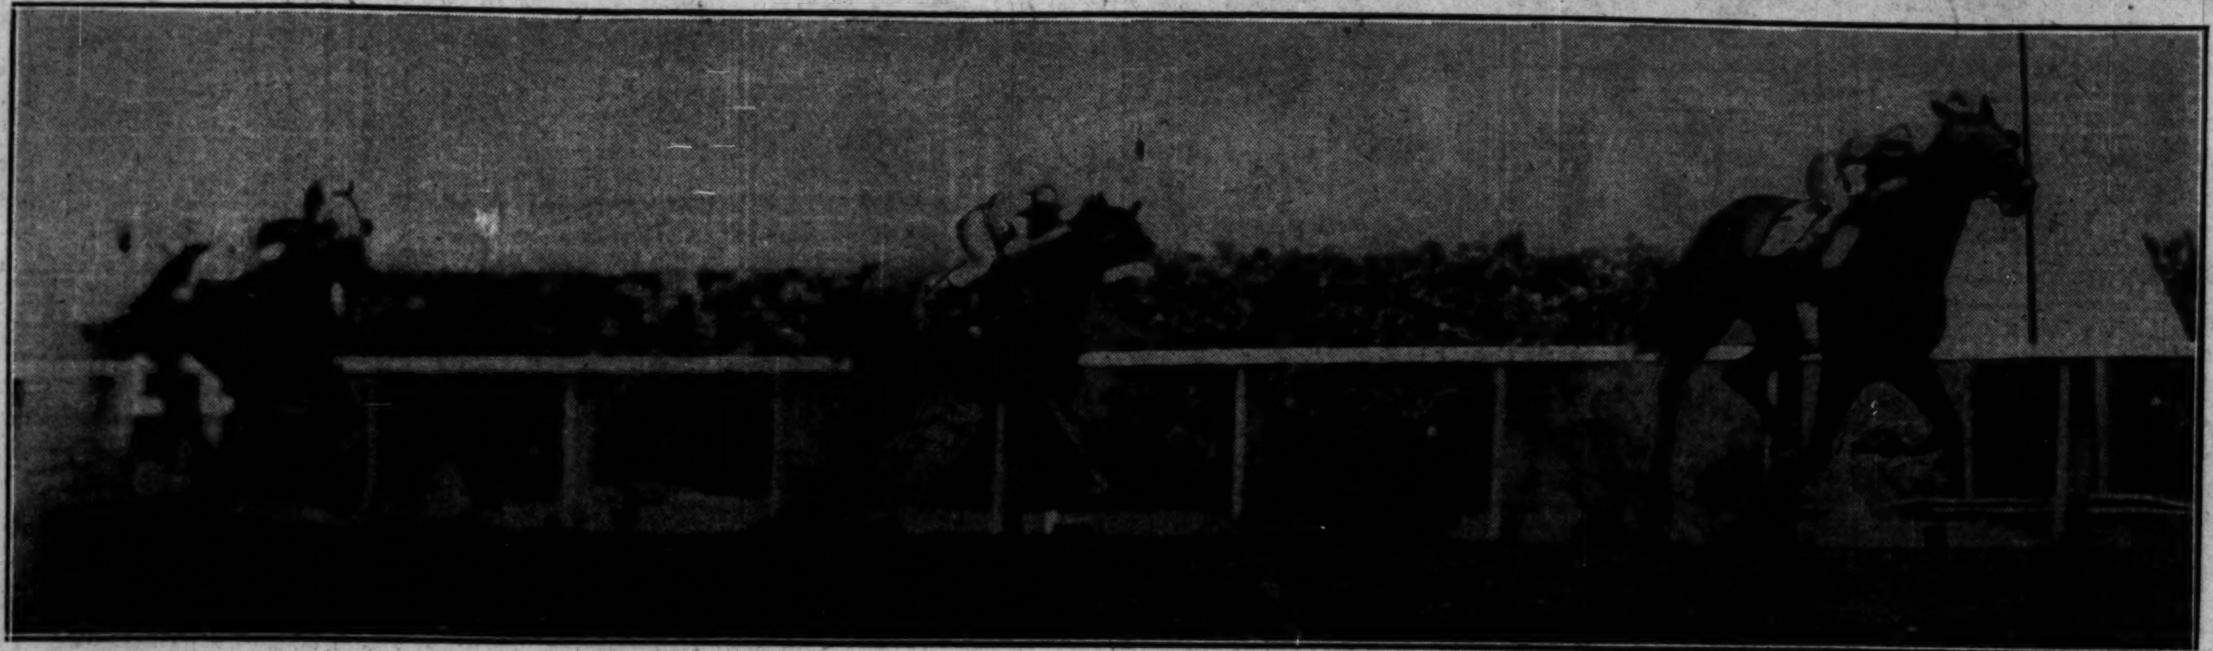
Pass Up Shires

WILLIAM VEECK, Cub president, declared before the Cub-Cardinal game yesterday that he had practically abandoned the idea of purchasing Art Shires from the Milwaukee club. The Cubs are willing enough to take a chance on the ex-American leaguer, but aren't in a position to meet the demands. Milwaukee asks $35,000 and two acceptable ball players.

AT THE END OF ARLINGTON'S GOLD RUSH



Sun Beau runs off with $27,300 of Arlington's gold and boosts his turf money winning record to $330,044, the highest total ever won by a thoroughbred. The Willis Sharpe Kilmer six year old is galloping across the finish line of the Arlington handicap with a three lengths margin over Satin Spar, with Plucky Play a distant third. A crowd of 40,000 hailed the sparkling race run by Sun Beau in the closing day feature of the brilliant summer meeting of the Arlington Park Jockey club.

Frasier Celebrates 4 Day Rest; Holds Detroit to Six Hits.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 1.—Victor Frasier, reveling in four days' rest, turned in a swell job of pitching for the White Sox this afternoon to hang up his ninth victory of the season. It was a 6 to 0 shutout in which nary a Detroit Tiger reached third until Benny Tate muffed a fly with two out in the ninth.

Two scratch singles by Alexander formed the total of Tiger slugging in the first five innings. And until the aforementioned Tate error with two out in the ninth, Alexander was the only man to reach second. He accomplished the feat twice, once on Frasier's error and once after his third hit, which was followed by Quellich's single. None of the six hits off Frasier was for an extra base and his wildness had disappeared completely—he didn't walk a man.

Sullivan Hits Two Triples, Single.

The burden of run production was well scattered throughout the lineup, but the best smacking was done by young Billy Sullivan, who had two triples and a single. Billy did no scoring because he bats just ahead of Carl Reynolds, who has developed a prejudice against hitting with men on bases.

Tate and Blue were busy with their bats, Benny having a double and two singles and Blue three singles, all of which figured in the scoring.

The Tigers must win tomorrow from Red Faber or the series will cease to be a crucial series for last place. If the Tigers sweep the remaining three games their percentage standing will be .375, as compared with .370 for Chicago.

Ted Lyons Back Again.

With Frasier turning in such a classy performance the pitching dilemma of the Sox might easily have been forgotten but for the surprise appearance this morning of Ted Lyons, who was sent home from New York earlier in the week, ostensibly to rest for a month or perhaps the remainder of the season.

It seems that when Ted arrived in Chicago Secretary Harry Grabiner advised him that his dead arm was an hallucination. Ted, it was reported, was urged to forget about the matter of his so-called imagined incapacity and was ordered to rejoin the club immediately.

The implication, of course, is that Manager Bush, 23 years in the major leagues, does not know a dead arm pitcher when he sees one, and the bouncing back of Lyons after Bush had sent him home is interpreted here as a reprimand to Bush by Grabiner.

It's a Laugh to the Boys.

The bouncing back of Lyons, however, caused no great indignation, but rather merriment was the reaction.

The Sox are feeling rather proud of their eight victories on the road to date, and with the other two pitchers, Faber and Thomas, well rested, have high hopes of taking the series without imposing on the health of the likable and willing Mr. Lyons.

Blue started the game with a fly to Johnson, after which Sullivan singled to right. Reynolds forced Sullivan and then scored on Fonseca's double. Fonseca went to third on a wild pitch and trotted home on Watwood's single to center. On a hit and run play Kerr singled to right and Watwood went to third, but the inning ended with Cissell's fly to Quellich.

Tate Scores in Second.

The Sox fourth was productive of a run. Frasier led off with a single and went to third on Blue's single to center, Blue pulling up at second when the ball got past Stone. The runners held on while Sullivan grounded out to Alexander, but Frasier scored and Blue went to third on Reynolds' long fly to Johnson.

A perfectly good triple by Billy Sullivan went to waste in the sixth. Billy knocked it with one down, but was out at the plate when he sought to score after Stone pulled down Reynolds' fly.

Sullivan Smacks Another.

Tate got his third hit, a double, with one out in the eighth, went to third on Frasier's out and scored on Blue's third single. Blue scored when Sullivan socked his second successive triple but young Bill again sank when Reynolds folded up for the fifth time in the game, in each instance with runners on base.

Gehringer led off the ninth with a single. Stone fanned and Alexander popped to Kerr. Quellich popped in front of the plate and Tate dropped the ball, Gehringer thus becoming the only Tiger to reach third, while Quellich pulled up at second. Sullivan ended the game when he threw out McManus.

Mrs. Moody Is Love Set Victor at Seabright

Seabright, N. J., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, playing her second tournament of the year, required just twelve games in 32 minutes today to prove she has no serious rivals in the United States as a tennis player.

In that length of time she defeated Helen Jacobs, her California neighbor, in the finals of the Seabright invitation tennis tournament, 6-0, 6-0. Mrs. Moody thereby gained her first leg on the big silver bowl which Miss Jacobs was attempting to put out of circulation.

Mrs. Moody gave her younger rival from the Pacific coast as emphatic a beating as the latter ever has experienced in a major tournament.

Mrs. Moody on Back Line.

Staying on her base line most of the time, Mrs. Moody chased Miss Jacobs from one corner of Seabright's center court to the other, driving back at the latter with stunning speed the soft shots Miss Jacobs attempted to use to break up Helen's game.

Advancing to the net only at rare intervals and then to no particular effect, Mrs. Moody ran her rival until she was arm and leg weary and let Miss Jacobs defeat herself. The latter had 33 outs in the twelve games and drove 13 balls into the net. It was only in the first game and the last three that the match resembled a contest.

In the first game Mrs. Moody, warming up, was missing the corners with her long, flat drives, while in the last three Miss Jacobs, defeat staring her in the face, started to smash and drive with the speed and power of which she is capable and made Mrs. Moody hustle to win. Mrs. Moody did not let this closing flurry disturb her, however, and always had matters under control.

A capacity crowd of 3,000 persons filled the stand and stood along the side walls for the match, but they found little to cheer about. It was merely a teacher giving a pupil a tennis lesson.

The heat of the last few days, which caused Mrs. L. A. Harper of Oakland, Cal., to default her semifinal match to Miss Jacobs Thursday, was gone. The day was cool, with a thin layer of clouds shutting off the sun to make for ideal conditions.

Mrs. Moody lost only nine games in her march to the title. Seven of these she lost Thursday in the semifinals to Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup, first winner of the Seabright woman's singles, in 1920.

Miss Jacobs was seeking her third Seabright title and permanent possession of the bowl, having won in 1928 and 1929.

The men's doubles title went to the old Davis cup firm of John Van Ryn, Philadelphia, and Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex. They defeated Berkeley Bell, New York, and Gregory S. Mangin, Newark, conquerors of the national champions, John Doeg and George Lott, by scores of 7-5, 6-2, 6-4.

Van Ryn and his wife, the former Marjorie Gladman, won the mixed doubles from Ellsworth F. Vines Jr., Pasadena, Cal., and Josephine Cruickshank, Santa Ana, Cal., in straight sets, 6-3, 6-4.

DAVIS PASSES CHARLEY GRIMM IN BIG SIX RACE

Virgil Davis and Charley Grimm exchanged places in the Big Six standing yesterday, Davis going to the top of the National league half as he hit twice in four attempts and brought his average up three points to .348. Grimm's mark remained at .347. He hit once in three tries. Chuck Klein took undisputed possession of the last place as two hits in five times up kept his mark at .344, while Harvey Hendrick failed to connect. Babe Ruth and Al Simmons suffered small losses, while Earl Webb gained one point with two hits in five times up. The standing:

SANTA PAULA AND ROSLYN END POLO MATCHES TODAY

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 1.—[U.P.]—The Santa Paula polo team from Argentina and the Roslyn four will meet tomorrow afternoon in their third and deciding game. The Argentines were six goals better than the Long Island team in their first meeting, and lost by one goal in Wednesday's game, when Harrington missed numerous easy shots. Harold Talbot is expected to lead Roslyn's attack tomorrow.

BURKE DEFEATS GEORGE VON ELM IN EXHIBITION

TECUMSEH, Ont., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Billy Burke, American open champion, triumphed over George Von Elm today when he got a 71, one stroke under par, on the course of the Lakewood Golf and Country club in an exhibition game. Von Elm turned in a 76.

Burke was out in 38, one over par, and in with 33, two below par. Von Elm was out in 41 and in with a par 35. The game was the first of a touring series between the champion and runnerup, who gave him a 144 hole fight at Toledo.

Betty Derr Wins $10,000 Latonia Oaks

Latonia, Ky., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Never more than half a length apart, Betty Derr, an outsider that showed stamina and driving power, surprised turfmen today by winning the $10,000 added Latonia Oaks from Blind Lane by a neck.

The time for the mile and a quarter was 2:05. Cousin Jo, winner of the Ashland and Kentucky Oaks, was third, three lengths behind Blind Lane. Sunny Lassie was fourth.

Betty Derr, owned by Herbert P. Gerdner, Amsterdam, N. Y., was sired by Sir Galahad III. out of Uncle's Lassie. She paid $19.20 to win on a $2 ticket, $7.56 to place, and $4.82 to show. Blind Lane paid $4.82 to place and $3.10 to show. Cousin Jo's price was $3.28 to show.

The race was the thirty-fifth renewal of the Latonia Oaks. Today's card closed the Latonia spring meeting which lasted thirty-one days.

FRANCE LIKELY TO COMPETE IN OLYMPIC MEET

PARIS, Aug. 1.—(AP)—France may participate in the 1932 Olympic games at Los Angeles after all, officials of the Olympic committee and the ministry of the budget announced today. The announcement reverses a recent decision of the Olympic committee, saying France would not send a representative team to Los Angeles due to the lack of funds.

Offer Canzoneri $50,000 to Fight Berg in London

New York, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Receipt of an offer of $50,000 for a bout on Sept. 7 involving Tony Canzoneri of Brooklyn, lightweight champion, and Jack Kid Berg of England, was announced today by Sam Goldman, manager of the titleholder. The offer was made by Jeff Dickson, American promoter who makes his headquarters in London. Berg and Canzoneri have met twice. Berg won a decision in January, 1930, and was knocked out by Canzoneri in their meeting in Chicago, in April, 1931.

Arlington Has More Patrons; Fewer Bet

Total attendance figures for the Arlington Park racing season which ended yesterday were not complete last night, officials of the Arlington Park Jockey club said. Neither were the mutuel betting figures, so a comparison with last year's Arlington season cannot be made.

Jockey club officials said, however, that incomplete figures indicated with certainty that the attendance at Arlington has been greater than the attendance at other races courses in America this year.

"It was a wonderfully successful meeting, far more so than even the more optimistic members of our board of directors expected," John Hertz, chairman of the executive committee, said. "Our attendance was larger this year on numerous occasions than it was last season. The mutuel play was slightly less than in 1930.

"The attendance grew in volume as our meeting went along, and for the final week was far ahead of last year's mark. There will be a nice surplus to go into additional improvements.

"There will be no change in the Arlington Jockey club's policy. We have interested all the leaders in Chicago's social, financial and business life in racing as it is conducted on our nonprofit, sport-for-sport's-sake basis, which already has established Arlington as one of the great racing centers of the world. There will be no curtailment in our prizes for next year. It will always be Arlington's ambition to attract the best there is in racing. We believe we have achieved that ambition this year."

Already an Arlington Futurity, which may have a gross value of $75,000 or more, has been added to next year's program.

Flint, Mich., Girl Breaks Outboard Motor Record

Bay City, Mich., Aug. 1.—[U.P.]—Florence Burman, 21, of Flint, today set a new American record for women in class 'C' outboard motorboat racing when she drove her entry in the eastern Michigan water carnival 41.3 miles an hour. The old record was held by Hilda Mueller, Bay City, who placed second to Miss Burman today.

6 YEAR OLD PUTS BANK BALANCE UP TO $330,044

Burning Blaze Takes Post and Paddock.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Sun Beau is the new champion among the race horses of the world.

In a dramatic finish in which he once faltered and then came with a terrific drive midway in the stretch, the long striding six year old son of Sun Briar-Beautiful Lady, owned by Willis Sharpe Kilmer of New York, won the Arlington handicap by three lengths as the curtain rolled down on the racing season at Arlington Park yesterday.

As Sun Beau came pounding down the stretch in his rather awkward fashion, eating up distance at each of his magnificent strides, a riotous cheer greeted him. For he had won $27,300 and had increased his total earnings to $330,044.

The world's record had been held by Gallant Fox, champion 3 year old of last season, which had $328,165 to his credit. Zev, a winner of $313,000 way back in 1923, dropped back into third place.

Satin Spar Leads in Stretch.

It was Satin Spar, the California iron horse, owned by Willard Mack, the playwright and author, which caused cold chills to run up and down the spines of everybody in the crowd of 40,000 as he romped into the stretch a leader by two lengths. Sun Beau had challenged rounding the lower bend and had wilted under the terrific pace R. Jones was making on Satin Spar. But dropping back just for an instant didn't mean that old Sun Beau had quit, for he never has quit.

The old fellow must have heard the fans urging him on, for he started running in his best stride despite the 128 pounds which he was carrying. He began running so fast that Satin Spar glanced back with a distressed look in his eyes. The others were far behind.

Sun Beau to the Front.

Then Sun Beau smashed his way forward. At every jump he gained on Satin Spar and a sixteenth of a mile from the line of finish he was going to the front. The crowd let up a roar that echoed over the huge Arlington race course, for Sun Beau was running, going along in the way most of the 40,000 expected him to go. He was closing Satin Spar, Plucky Play, old Mike Hall, Quarter Deck, Spinach, and Paul Bunyan behind him.

The new world's champion was showing 'em how to run. And the nearer he came to the line of finish the faster he ran. He didn't approach the track record he made a week ago in the Arlington cup, but he ran as if he could have shattered that record if somebody back behind him had made an issue of it. C. Phillips rode Sun Beau to victory.

Plucky Play Third.

Old Sun Beau, in smashing the world's money earnings record, ran his mile and a quarter in 2:03 1-5. Faster races have been run, but seldom under an impost of 128 pounds. Plucky Play finished third, but was so far behind Sun Beau it didn't seem to make any difference.

Mike Hall, with 12 pounds' advantage in the weights, finished fourth, but never made a bold bid for honors. Spinach ran fifth all the way and Quarter Deck, fresh from New York, was sixth. Last in the field of seven was Paul Bunyan. It didn't rain enough for Paul Bunyan to do much running, for he is strictly a mudder.

In the mutuels Sun Beau paid $3.26 to win, $3.34 to place and $3.06 to show. Satin Spar was at $9.50 to place and $6.06 to show. Plucky Play paid $5.08 to show.

The fractional times were :23 3-5, :47, 1:11 4-5, 1:36 2-5, 2:03 1-5.

French Will Say Ksar Surpassed Sun Beau, But—

Frenchmen will probably rave this morning as they read that Sun Beau, with total winnings of $330,044, has shattered a world's record and become the greatest money earning race horse of all time.

The French will claim Ksar, bred and raced in France, had total earnings of $355,340 in 19 starts. He won 16 of his 19 races and was third three times, according to the records.

But Ksar's high money winning mark, according to the best statisticians in America, included the value of all the pieces of plate and the cups he won. At the same time the value of the francs was way up and he actually won about 200,000 American dollars, it was estimated by the record keepers.

America—Sun Beau................	$330,044
England—Isinglass	291,275
Australia—Amounis	241,468
France—Sardanapal	211,505

Even if the French dispute Sun Beau's record, it will not be many days before old Sun Beau rolls up another $25,000 or $30,000. He could do it in the Hawthorne handicap to be run next Saturday.

SENATORS SCORE 2 TO 1 VICTORY OVER ATHLETICS

Fred Marberry Outhurls Rube Walberg.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Washington defeated Philadelphia, 2 to 1, here today in a revival of their two years feud over the American league leadership. The victory cut Philadelphia's advantage to 11 games.

The contest was one between Marberry and Walberg, each pitching himself out of frequent holes. Walberg was touched for ten hits to seven off Marberry.

Myers' single opening the third was turned into a run after two were out. He stole second, advanced to third on Cochrane's wild throw on the play at second, and scored on a hit to right by Harris. Two were out again when Washington got one in the fifth. A double by West, a single by Kuhel, and a double by Spencer brought the winning run over.

The champions made their big threat in the eighth. Cramer led off with his fourth consecutive single. Cochrane advanced him to third on a hit to right. Simmons beat out a slow roller to third and Cramer counted. Score:

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns, occupants of the American league cellar a few weeks ago, advanced to within a game and a half of the first division today by taking the first game of a series of five with Cleveland, 7 to 5.

Bill Killefer's men hopped on Clint Brown for four runs on as many hits in the fourth inning to get the lead, which they maintained in spite of late threats by the Indians. Vosmick hit a home run for Cleveland. Score:

Boston, Mass., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Boston slugged its way to a 9 to 2 win over the Yanks here this afternoon. The Red Sox pounded Henry Johnson and Jim Weaver, while Horace Lisenbee held the Yanks to six hits.

Rhyne made four hits in a row and then was robbed of a fifth by a sensational stop by Lyn Lary. Oliver drove in three runs. Al Cooke made his first appearance at bat for the Yanks since his shoulder was hurt in Washington April 26, and was called out on strikes.

With two out in the fifth Lazzeri singled, Johnson doubled, and both scored on Byrd's single through short. Score:

M'KALE PICKED AS NEW ARIZONA ATHLETIC CHIEF

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 1.—(AP)—J. F. McKale, for eighteen years head football coach at the University of Arizona, today announced his resignation to become director of athletics of the institution.

McKale will be succeeded by Fred Enke, varsity line coach since 1925. Enke, a graduate of the University of Minnesota, where he played tackle and center, came to Arizona from the University of Louisville, where he was head coach and director of athletics from 1923 to 1925. Previously he was assistant coach at Dakota State college for two years.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—Jackie Fields today said he had received a telegram from his manager, Jack Kearns, advising him he had been matched with Young Jack Thompson for a world's welterweight championship fight at Cleveland Sept. 17. Fields, who has been out of competition with an injured hand, is in training at Murrietta hot springs. Thompson won the championship when he defeated Fields at Detroit on May 9, 1930. Previously Fields had defeated Thompson twice.

base hits, uncorked a hit of this kind to open the game, but Malone proved equal to the task and retired the next three batters. Another double to left center, Hafey being the author, started the second inning and became a run. While Orsatti was at bat, Hartnett perpetrated his passed ball and Hafey went to third on it. Then Orsatti hit a long fly to Wilson in left and Hafey scored easily.

Cards Score in Third.

Johnson struck out to start the third, but this didn't prevent the Cards from getting another run. Of course, Hartnett's second offense was of assistance. Adams scratched a single past English and Watkins popped out. Adams started to steal and made it unmolested when Hartnet, just as he was about to throw, let the ball drop from his hand. Frisch followed with a single straight over second and Adams scored from second.

For all the good the Cubs did they could have saved time by not using bats during the first four innings. Exactly one man reached first base against Johnson during this period. He was English, who singled in the first inning and was retired along with Cuyler in a double play.

Adams Makes Error.

Improvement in the Cub attack developed when D. Taylor opened the fifth inning with a two base hit in the projecting corner of the left field bleacher. Hornsby lost no time singling to right, sending Taylor home. Hack fouled out to the usual razzberry accompaniment. Grimm bounced a single off Adams' shin. Hartnett received a cold reception when he came up and another when he forced out Hornsby. Malone also grounded into a force out.

Adams put Johnson on the spot in the sixth when he picked up English's grounder and tossed it into the dug out. Woody went to second on the error. One was out at the time. Johnson showed himself equal to the emergency by getting Cuyler on a fly to Frisch and then fanning Taylor. But a few minutes later his luck turned against him and skill meant nothing.

Charley Grimm selects his favorite bat and starts his jog up to the plate. The Cub first baseman, who is fighting for the National league batting leadership, made only one hit in three attempts and relinquished the pace to Virgil Davis of the Phils.

CALIFORNIANS IN FINALS OF CUP NET MEET TODAY

Grand Haven, Mich., Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—Junior tennis players from California held most of the leading positions tonight in the challenge cup championship here, with the finals in both singles and doubles set for tomorrow afternoon.

In the singles, Gene Mako, Glendale, will meet Jack Lynch, Taft, seeded No. 2. Mako, seeded No. 3, defeated Jay Cohn, Santa Monica, today, 6-0, 7-5. Cohn is seeded No. 1. Lynch reached the finals when he won from Hal Surface, Kansas City, 6-3, 5-7, 6-1.

Cohn and Lynch will play Surface and Wilber Hess, Fort Worth, Tex., in the doubles finals. The Cohn-Lynch combination won today from Barlley and Williams, Austin, Tex., 6-3, 6-4, and Surface and Hess defeated Mako and Russel of Hollywood, Cal., 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

CRANO BATTLES CLYDE CHASTAIN TOMORROW NIGHT

Jerry Crano, Chicago middleweight, and Clyde Chastain, Texas, who went back to the gymnasiums when rain forced Promoter Billy Cepak to postpone their ten round bout at Denemark Stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, Friday night, will fight tomorrow night.

Both went through strenuous exercise yesterday and light work outs this morning. Chastain will be making his first Chicago appearance since he met Rene De Vos of Belgium in March, 1930.

Two new batters will appear in the preliminaries. Phil Herrera will meet Bobby Hynds in a six round bout. Herrera replaces Mickey McLaughlin. Paul Dempsey will substitute for Babe Kellar against Young Geno, Kewanee, Ill.

Oxford-Cambridge Tennis Team Leads Harvard-Yale

EASTBOURNE, Eng., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The combined Oxford-Cambridge tennis team today led the Harvard-Yale forces, 5 matches to 2, at the end of the first day's competition. Two more days of play remain, 12 singles and 9 doubles matches being scheduled.

SOUTH BEND WINS.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Teams from Princeton and South Bend advanced to the state final in the American Legion junior baseball tournament to be held here Aug. 6 and 7, by winning their regional games today.

At the state meet Princeton will meet the winner of the regional to be held Monday at Greensburg, and South Bend will play the team victorious in Monday's games at Frankfort. Winners of those two games will play for the state title and the right to compete in the national regional at Richmond, Ind., Aug. 14 and 15 against champions from Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan.

Princeton nosed out Huntingburg, third district winners, 6 to 4, in the morning game and coasted to a 9 to 3 victory over Bloomington in the afternoon.

GERMAN A. A. TO HOLD MEET AT LOYOLA TODAY

Many outstanding athletes of the German-American Athletic association will compete at 9 a. m. today at Loyola university field in the fourth annual track and field meet. Wrestling and weight lifting championships of the association were held yesterday at Wicker Park hall. More than 200 have entered the track meet which is sanctioned by the Central A. A. U. Medals will be awarded to the winners.

New York Pitcher Holds Boston to Five Hits.

New York, Aug. 1.—[U. P.]—Carl Hubbell bested Ben Cantwell in a pitching duel today as the New York Giants defeated the Boston Braves, 2 to 0.

The Giants bunched three of their five hits off Cantwell in the second inning to score all of their runs. Hubbell held the Braves to five hits and was only in trouble twice. On both occasions he struck out a man to retire the side.

PIRATES BLANK REDS, 1-0.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Glenn Spencer hurled the third consecutive shutout by a Pirate hurler when he blanked the Cincinnati Reds, 1 to 0, here today. The string of runless innings by the Pirate pitchers is now 31. Larry French shut out New York on Thursday and Kremer whitewashed the Reds yesterday.

Spencer yielded only three hits, two by Crabtree, one coming in the first and the other in the ninth. The other was registered by Cuccinello in the fifth.

CUBS SEND ARMY OF SCOUTS AFTER STARS IN MINORS

Hornsby Needs Six Good Men in Plan to Rebuild.

Hitting the Ball

CHARLEY GRIMM, the Cubs' veteran first baseman, is pounding the ball this year in a manner that reminds fans of his best year in the majors, 1923, when he hit .345 for Pittsburgh. Charley's batting record:

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

There's plenty of work ahead for the gentlemen who draw compensation from the Cubs for going into the minor league jungles to seek out possible bits of big league ivory.

In anticipation of the breakdown of the machine which a couple of years ago was a pennant winner, the club now has the largest staff of scouts in history and no minor circuit is too small to receive their attention.

The gentlemen are looking for athletes of all varieties because the Cubs are going to need a little of everything. But no big league club ever has gotten just what it wanted, so it is fairly safe to say that some of the Cubs' weaknesses of today are going to be the weaknesses of next year. Of course, some owner in the National league might succumb to the William Wrigley gold and that would help. They've fallen for it several times in the past and the lure is as strong as ever.

Hornsby May Bench Himself.

It is probable that next year, granted that Owner Wrigley meant what he said about Hornsby being manager after a lot of the others have gone, will see Rogers removed from the rôle of player. His legs already are so bad that even the leisurely duties at third base are too much for him. Take him out of the lineup and a big portion of the attack is gone. They are not going to find anybody to fill Hornsby's place, any more than the Yanks are going to come up with a second Babe Ruth as soon as the original fades out, which won't be long now.

What the Cubs are going to need for rebuilding purposes next spring is a couple of outfielders, a pair of infielders and a pair of right handed pitchers. You might even go farther and say that the club must provide for a possibility that English will be the only infielder worthy of regular employment. If both Jurges and Blair should continue to improve as they have thus far, the infield problem will be simplified. But it looks as if neither ever will soar much above the status of every day hitters.

A third infielder really is needed, because there is nobody to understudy Grimm at first base. Charley is having a good year both at bat and in the field, but it may be the last gasp. If he should be hurt this season the club would have to depend on Blair, who is not familiar with the bag. Of course, there is a possibility that the Great Shires might be purchased at any minute.

Need Two Outfielders.

Two outfielders are needed, because Cuyler now is the only one in whom any dependence can be placed. Stephenson, still a great hitter, has slowed down in the field. Wilson, home run king of 1930, has gone back both as a hitter and fielder. Hack undoubtedly has seen his best days. It is likely that during the coming winter he will be moved to some other team in the league. A change of scenery might revive some of his waning skill.

Danny Taylor, who has done considerable outfielding under Hornsby this season, hasn't been satisfactory as a hitter. Barton, who was recalled from Los Angeles and immediately given a chance at regular employment, didn't start battering down the fences the first day. But he was an outstanding hitter in both the International and Coast leagues, so must know something about it.

Relief Pitching Weak.

If Root, Malone, Smith and Bush could be worked regularly there would not be much need to bother about starting pitchers for next season. Where the real pitching help is needed is in the relief line. Hornsby has enough southpaws for this sort of work, but when conditions make it advisable to relieve with a right hander, one of the regular starters must be used.

CHICAGO OWNED TWO YEAR OLD GALLOPS TO VICTORY BY A NOSE IN POST AND PADDOCK STAKE WORTH $39,400. Burning Blaze, property of the Nash brothers, is heading Morfair in the final strides of six furlong dash at Arlington Park, with Liberty Limited third. Coming down the stretch Morfair led by four lengths, but Jockey W. Fronk applied the whip and Burning Blaze responded gamely, gaining on the pacemaker with every stride. Tellico, Etcetera, and At Sunrise fell, giving Arlington's closing day throng of 40,000 a thrill.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

There's plenty of work ahead for e gentlemen who draw compensan from the Cubs for going into the nor league jungles to seek out posle bits of big league ivory.

In anticipation of the breakdown the machine which a couple of ars ago was a pennant winner, the th now has the largest staff of outs in history and no minor cirit is too small to receive their attion.

The gentlemen are looking for athes of all varieties because the Cubs e going to need a little of everyng. But no big league club ever s gotten just what it wanted, so it fairly safe to say that some of the bs' weaknesses of today are going be the weaknesses of next year. course, some owner in the Nationleague might succumb to the Wilm Wrigley gold and that would p. They've fallen for it several nes in the past and the lure is as ong as ever.

Hornsby May Bench Himself.

t is probable that next year, granted t Owner Wrigley meant what he d about Hornsby being manager er a lot of the others have gone, l see Rogers removed from the of player. His legs already are bad that even the leisurely duties third base are too much for him. ke him out of the lineup and a portion of the attack is gone. They not going to find anybody to fill rnsby's place, any more than the nks are going to come up with a ond Babe Ruth as soon as the ginal fades out, which won't be g now.

What the Cubs are going to need rebuilding purposes next spring is ouple of outfielders, a pair of inders and a pair of right handed chers. You might even go farther say that the club must provide a possibility that English will be only infielder worthy of regular ployment. If both Jurges and Blair uld continue to improve as they e thus far, the infield problem will simplified. But it looks as if neir ever will soar much above the us of every day hitters.

third infielder really is needed, ause there is nobody to understudy mm at first base. Charley is hava good year both at bat and in field, but it may be the last gasp. e should be hurt this season the would have to depend on Blair, is not familiar with the bag. Of rse, there is a possibility that the at Shires might be purchased at minute.

Need Two Outfielders.

wo outfielders are needed, because ler now is the only one in whom dependence can be placed. Stephon, still a great hitter, has slowed n in the field. Wilson home run of 1930, has gone back both as tter and fielder. Hack undoubtedas seen his best days. It is likehat during the coming winter he be moved to some other team in league. A change of scenery ht revive some of his waning skill. anny Taylor, who has done comrable outfielding under Hornsby season, hasn't been satisfactory hitter. Barton, who was recalled n Los Angeles and immediately n a chance at regular employt, didn't start battering down the es the first day. But he was an tanding hitter in both the Internonal and Coast leagues, so must something about it.

Relief Pitching Weak.

Root, Malone, Smith and Bush d be worked regularly there would be much need to bother about ing pitchers for next season. re the real pitching help is needed n the relief line. Hornsby has gh southpaws for this sort of , but when conditions make it able to relieve with a right handne of the regular starters must sed.

CANOEIST NEEDS DREDGE TO MAKE FOX RIVER TRIP

Weeds and Low Water Are Handicaps.

BY BOB BECKER.

St. Charles, Ill., Aug. 1.—The enthusiastic canoeist who would attempt the Fox river between South Elgin and the thriving river towns below had better bring as part of his equipment one good dredge and one sharp edged underwater weed cutter, because midsummer finds the stream choked with vegetation in the shallow water below the dams.

Because of this situation THE TRIBUNE's canoe, which is traveling down stream to survey the Fox as a canoeing and boating stream, was a lonesome craft today.

Dams Are Too Numerous.

The river in this section is not for the canoeist or the speedboat enthusiast, too many dams without locks, midsummer low water levels making navigation difficult and a bumper crop of aquatic vegetation forming too stiff a combination for the watercraft.

After buying a copy of the CHICAGO TRIBUNE we left Dundee around 8 o'clock this morning. We found that for a while riverbed walking was more effective than paddling. The water from below the Carpenterville dam beyond Dundee is so shallow over the rapids that in some places our canoe couldn't move ahead without roller skates, so we had to step out and pull the craft through the shallow water. Several miles below Dundee the backwater from the Elgin dam begins to show and from there on one finds plenty of water for any kind of a craft.

River Is Deserted.

It is significant, however, that not one canoeist or outboard motorboat had been seen between the Algonquin dam and South Elgin.

Mayor Mayron M. Lehman of Elgin, Commissioner of Public Property Milton A. Grow, and City Commissioner William Trentlage, representing Elgin's city administration, were waiting for THE TRIBUNE canoe a couple of miles above the city to extend a greeting and discuss the recreational values of the Fox river. Seats were made for the mayor and Mr. Grow in our canoe so they could paddle down stream with us to the first Elgin bridge.

Mayor Lehman, who spent his boyhood on the Fox river, expressed the opinion that greater use would be made of the stream by outdoor fans if it were dredged below the Elgin dam, thus giving the stream bed more depth and suitable water for all kinds of boats.

They Land on Dam.

Landing on the Elgin dam, a stunt that is possible because no water is going over it, our canoe was received by W. F. Hagel, president of the Elgin Izaak Walton league chapter, who discussed the fishing situation around Elgin. Sitting on top of the concrete dam was ideal for a water level and fishing conference because 6 feet below us sat three youngsters angling for rock bass and sunfish in the shallow water at the foot of the concrete wall.

As Elgin authorities pointed out, it is unlikely that the Fox will appeal to the canoeist and the long distance traveler by small motorboat until there are locks in the many dams which block travel down the stream, nor will the canoeing fans turn to this stream in numbers until some adjustment is made on water levels over the whole river. To jump from deep stagnant water 10 feet deep above a dam to 4 or 5 inches and downstream hiking below a dam is not conducive to crowding a stream with canoeists and outboard motor fans.

The Water Is Clean.

Although this river has many cities hugging its banks the water is surprisingly clean. Some of the smaller towns along the river are pouring untreated sewage into the stream but Elgin has a sanitary district which takes care of its wastes. It is fortunate that this waterway is quite clean. Hundreds of bathers could be seen in the shallow water all along our route and ever since leaving Fox River grove the shady banks also had been occupied by more hundreds of patient fishermen.

Judging from the demands of the hook and these enthusiasts, and in view of the money they are contributing to the state, the conservation department could well afford to spend many thousands of dollars stocking this popular and intensively used waterway. In so doing it would add to the pleasure of thousands of anglers.

Princess Wins Jackson Park Q Boat Race

The weather went to extremes in its deportment yesterday during the race held by the Jackson Park Yacht club, beginning with a calm which lasted more than an hour, and finishing with a breeze which sent the fleet bowling along at a rapid pace. Princess, the Q boat owned by Ed Jedzry-Kowski and Carl Kallgren, was the first across the line, turning the regular course of approximately six miles in 2 hours 13 minutes and 40 seconds. The O'Rourke brothers' Intruder was next and Chaperon third.

Following a period during which there wasn't a single puff, the boats finally got away under a southwest breeze, which hauled almost directly west when they rounded the 67th street crib, the first mark on the course. They maintained the same positions almost throughout the race, Princess heading the fleet at the crib, with Intruder, Columbia and Chaperon close to each other on the way to the second mark, the Hyde Park shoal buoy.

F. M. Reutter, sailing his star boat, Dan, turned in a good job to bring her home fifth, in front of the two yawls, Quest and Beaver.

Rain struck the boats shortly after they rounded the crib, and brought with it a miniature blow which had all hands busy for some time.

Princess	2:13:40
Intruder	2:15:29
Chaperon	2:22:32
Columbia	2:24:50
Dan	2:29:30
Quest	2:40:48
Beaver	2:43:43
Barnacle	2:51:55
Finch	2:52:18

Charles Wiman's Alert IV. was first across the line among the R class boats in the Chicago Yacht clubs race over the triangular club course off Belmont Harbor yesterday. Other leaders in their respective classes were Bob Haney's Falcon among the Eagles; George Dalsey's Bee among the stars, and Haven A. Requa's Ulysses among the pup boats. The elapsed time for the fleet follows:

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—This German prize fighter Max Schmeling who looked so comic a couple of years ago is likely to be the heavyweight champion of the world for a long, long time. The young man is a good student, smart enough to realize that he always will have a few little things to learn. He enjoys fighting, he is hard to hurt and less easy to hit than he used to be and, as he showed in his work with Willie Stribling, he has the come-from-behinder's kind of courage.

On the offensive he throws a punch peculiarly his own, a short right hand to the body or the head, which seems rather trivial at first but, repeated a hundred times, causes serious damage. And, in the business office he has a manager, Mr. Joey Jacobs, who may be relied on the avoid the tough ones until age and the wear and tear of the business softens them up.

This always is very important to a heavyweight champion. The heavyweight class now consists of Schmeling, Sharkey, and Carnera in the first rank, and if any one objects to the inclusion of Carnera on the ground that he has licked nobody to date I will agree, but insist, nevertheless, that he belongs in the group because he is a drawing card. As often as not, if not more so, heavyweight fighters are elevated to this rank merely because the customers are curious to know how they would look stretched out. On this score, Primo Carnera qualifies.

HE WHIPS OUT HIS LITTLE WHISKBROOM, DUSTS OFF A SPOT ON THE CANVAS AND LIES HIM DOWN TO TEAR OFF A FEW YAWNS.

Loughran Heads Second Rank.

The second rank consists of Tommy Loughran, who might be a sharp enough boxer to outfumble Schmeling in ten rounds if given the chance, but never will do so because he never will get the chance. Schmeling is a 15 rounder who is likely to be outscored by a fast, clever fighter in the first five rounds. In ten rounds, then, by cautious, timid fighting, Loughran might beat him on points, but in 15 rounds Schmeling would catch him with that right hand and wear him out.

Mr. Jacobs will see to it that Loughran never outscores Max in a ten rounder and the customers, by their apathy, will see to it that they never will fight at the only distance which would be safe for Schmeling.

In the third rank there are some new boys now beginning to mature. The leader of this group is Ernie Schaaf, who stood as a model for the figure of the prizefighter which adorns the celebrated Tunney-Muldoon tombstone trophy of the heavyweight championship, bequeathed to the game by Mr. Tunney with love and raspberries when he retired.

Schaaf a Killer—Against Maloney.

In the ring Schaaf has been at times like his master, pal and tutor. Sharkey, a bit of a bore, but at other times he has been a bit of a killer. However, it is interesting that he has been most ferocious in his two fights with that amiable mediocrity, Jimmy Maloney, who was Sharkey's favorite victim also. In fact, Maloney is the only man Sharkey ever really knocked out in all his fights in New York.

But the association of prizefighters who have knocked out Jimmy Maloney is almost as big as the order of Elks, so Schaaf's victories over gentle James need not be accepted as evidence of a savage nature and a killing attack. Say boo to Jimmy Maloney nowadays and he whips out his little whiskbroom, dusts off a spot on the canvas and lies down to tear off a few yawns.

It is almost too early to start booking a future for either Steve Hamas, the college fellow, or Charlie Retzlaff of Duluth, although both of these aspirants have shown early promise. Hamas knocked over a fellow in New York lately in such positive style that some of the customers went away comparing him to Dempsey. However, the fellow he knocked over was only Ted Sandwina, like Willie Stribling a son of circus folks, who had only enough talent to go just so far, and not very far either, before he stopped. It wasn't so much the quality of the fellow he knocked over as the style in which he went about doing it that momentarily endeared Hamas to the trade. This young man may be heard from.

Retzlaff claims several knockouts in a brief career to date. He is tall and long legged, with big shoulders and more skill than most fighters of the same experience, largely derived from a skinny young man named Hurley, a bush league sports writer who likes to box his own fighters and claims that there is no excuse for any man's being hit in the face with a right hand. Hurley has a trick system, involving a kind of two step, a dip to the right and some confusing hand motions by which to avoid right hands to the face, all of which boils down to the old familiar formula, "don't forget to duck." Hurley is Retzlaff's manager.

I have a very dignified letter advising me that the amateur fist fighter who knocked down about six exuberant young Yales on the railroad tracks at New London on the day of the Harvard-Yale boat race, using a curious right jab to the nose, was not a Dartmouth man, as the white and green band on his straw hat seemed to indicate, but a Harvard boy who stroked one of Harvard's recent varsity crews.

The hat band was not a Dartmouth band but the insignia of an aristocratic or, let us say, expensive eastern yacht club.

Look to Harvard for Next Champ.

Remembering what a fighter was Tim Clark, the Harvard football guard and oarsman of a few years ago, and remembering the way this young man popped over a bevy of angry Yales in the cinders along the sidetrack, I just wonder if Harvard couldn't manage to send some one with a certified Harvard intellect to win the heavyweight championship of the world one of these years.

But I doubt that Harvard can produce any more the dumb, foggy type of college athlete and it is the dumb, foggy type that takes to professional sport after school is over. To get through Harvard nowadays a young man must be able to add, subtract, divide and tell off hand who Julius Caesar was. Most of the collegians who have been turning pros in recent years are fellows who merely studied the romantic natures of cows, pigs and goats in the agriculture department, or the science of rubbing a sore leg, which is something like the barber trade, in the physical education branch. They don't teach those things at Harvard.

GIRL FLYER IS POWDER PUFF IN AIR DICTIONARY

Violet Westerman Is One Who Rebels at Term.

BY BETTY ECKERSALL.

Powder puffs.

That's what aviators call women flyers; you can take the word of Miss Violet Westerman, Chicago girl who flew her plane in the air meet sponsored by Aviation post, No. 651, American Legion, at Curtiss-Reynolds airport.

"And," Miss Westerman added, "the men are always disparaging the way we handle the ships."

Talking to her as she awaited her second appearance in the air, one never would have believed she had been in an almost disastrous accident, when another plane cut in front of her ship on the landing field, a little less than an hour before. It affected her no more than a puncture frightens a motorist. And she's only 21 years old.

Stunts Safer, She Says.

"I would rather stunt than race," said Miss Westerman. "One has more of a chance to escape unhurt in case of accident. It is dangerous roaring around the pylons at that terrific speed, and many times the planes cut the corners too sharply, or do not judge the distance correctly, and there is trouble.

"In stunting I have no regular routine to follow, but just perform any stunt that happens to come into my mind. I like to stunt; I should—it is my profession. I always have the utmost confidence in my ship."

Miss Westerman is a rather unusual girl. She has no interest in fluffy clothes, but says she feels more comfortable in a pair of plain jumpers. Once in a while she attends dances, but the most of her time is taken up at the Municipal air port.

She arises at 7 a. m., and as she lives 15 miles from the air port, drives over in her car, which she handles as proficiently as her plane. She arrives home between 10 and 12 o'clock at night—long hours in any business.

Has to Convince Mother.

"Mother cannot quite reconcile herself to my flying; she thinks it's dangerous. But I wear a parachute on every flight, so that pacifies her a little. Father, however, thinks it is great. They come out to the field and watch me perform, but I am always careful not to do too many dangerous appearing stunts when they're among the spectators.

"I decided I wanted to fly when I saw Badger and Johnson in a show at Grant park. One of them was seriously injured during the event, but even that did not detract from the glamour the game had and still has for me. It's a wonderful sport, and it seems as if I never enjoyed life until, after six and a half hours of instruction, I soloed for the first time.

"I think women probably don't make as good pilots as men, but they are more careful. Men are always trying to outdo one another, and that is one reason for a great many accidents. Men naturally find it easier to learn the mechanical features of flying.

Prefers Open Planes.

"I always fly an open ship. I flew an open job practically all winter. It does not seem like flying when you're all cooped up in an enclosed ship."

We walked back into the hangar and looked at the Winnie Mae, the white ship that carried Post and Gatty around the world.

QUINCY TO OPEN THREE-WAY GOLF TOURNEY AUG. 17

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Entries for Quincy's three way golf tournament will close Aug. 10. State amateur, professional, and pro-amateur titles will be decided.

The tournament will be conducted under the auspices of the Chicago District Golf association, entries for the professional and pro-amateur events being made at its Chicago office.

Play for the state professional title will be held Aug. 17 and 18. Five hundred dollars in prizes will be awarded, $250 for first place. The pro-amateur twosome tourney will start Aug. 18. Cash prizes will be awarded the professional winners and trophies the amateurs.

Wednesday, Aug. 19, a 27 hole qualifying round will be played in the amateur tourney. Amateur entries are restricted to players of 16 handicaps or less. Eighteen hole match rounds will be played until Saturday. Entries for the amateur tourney will be received at the tee.

U. S. RUNNER WINS MARATHON IN GERMAN MEET

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—(AP)—German athletes today began their two day battle for national track and field championship honors, but the chief prize fell to a German-American, Paul Debryun, who captured the marathon as a representative of the Deutscher Social Club of New York City.

The huge crowd at the Berlin stadium leaped to its feet with a wild cheer as Debryun trotted home, beating his nearest rival, Geisler of Charlottenburg, by about 2-3 of a mile. The winner covered the full marathon route of 26 miles 385 yards in the good time of 2 hours 47 minutes 19.3 seconds.

Debryun, who came here without any ballyhoo, achieved his ambition and immediately packed up for his return to New York.

TILDEN PREDICTS END OF FRENCH TENNIS REIGN

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The decision of Henri Cochet to turn professional was hailed today by William T. Tilden, professional tennis player, as the virtual end of French supremacy in Davis cup competition.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

PRO FOOTBALL.

PROFESSIONAL football has gained a definite place on the American sports calendar. Unless mistakes of policy or management occur that place promises to be definite. When first started The Wake had no great enthusiasm for the pro article. That was due to conditions which need not now be elaborated. Most of the elements to which we objected have since been eliminated.

BRONKO NAGURSKI

Pro football's main source of supply is the college gridiron. That, in a measure, enhances interest, because the fellows you see playing the pro brand have been seen or read about while collegians and so are familiar to you. The Green Bay Packers, champions of 1930, have just signed Hank Bruder, Red Woodworth, and Frank Baker of Northwestern, Gantenbein of Wisconsin, and others. The Chicago Bears' roster will include only ex-collegians. That is the tendency throughout the national circuit.

When the college boys turned to football, with the advent of "Red" Grange in 1925, we foresaw gradual development and change in the pro sport. However, we always had misgivings whether this money actually was a good thing for the boys. We had no objection to their getting their money after their arduous training and play on campus gridirons, but we feared lest "easy money" might have other disadvantages; that, in short, they might become what is sometimes denominated "athletic tramps."

Partially but not entirely convinced this danger was passing, we sought George Halas, major domo of the Chicago Bears, and said, "George, just what has every member of your 1930 team done in the time intervening since last fall?"

Before recording his answer let us explain that players on the big pro teams receive from $100 to as high as $400 per game. Perhaps $150 would be a fair average. The Bears played 17 games last season, or an estimated earnings average of $2,500 per man. The players' expenses are paid on the road and their equipment is furnished except shoes, of which two pair costing from $10 to $18 a pair are necessary. They pay their own board and expenses while in Chicago.

Here is Manager Halas' data to convince us his athletes are not wasting their time and money in the pursuit of professional football:

Dick Nesbitt, Drake—Married and in insurance business in Des Moines.
Broncho Nagurski, Minnesota—Used money to finish school.
Laurie Walquist, Illinois—In real estate business with Halas (George) and Kraft.
Bill Senn, Knox—To finish school.
Joe Lintzenich, St. Louis U.—Salesman in St. Louis.
Bruny Brumbaugh, Florida—Potato farm in West Milton, O.
Walt Holmer, Northwestern—Working in East Moline.
Link Lyman, Nebraska—Used earnings to buy cattle for grazing in Nebraska.
George Trafton, Notre Dame—Real estate after brief ring career.
Zuck Carlson, Oregon Aggies—Working in New Mexico.
Danny McMullen, Nebraska—Farming in Belleville, Kas.
Paul Schuette, Wisconsin—With father in store at Manitowoc, Wis.
Hoot Drury, St. Louis U.—Working in St. Louis.
Luke Johnsos, Northwestern—Salesman shirt company.
Garland Grange, Illinois—Salesman for stationery and printers' supplies.
Bert Pearson, Kansas Aggies—Farming in Lawrence, Kas.
Larry Steinbach, St. Thomas—Loan company in Chicago, part owner farm in North Dakota.
Joe Savoldi, Notre Dame—Professional wrestler.
Red Grange, Illinois—Now in Hollywood for part in movie.

According to Halas, many of these boys used their first earnings to liquidate debts contracted while working their way through college.

Springfield to See Attempt at Trot Record

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Hanover's Bertha, the world's greatest 3 year old trotter last season, will appear on the Illinois State Fair race track here Thursday afternoon, Aug. 27, in an attempt to lower the world's record by trotting a mile faster than 1:58½, the mark held by Nada.

At the Illinois State fair last year this horse stepper set a low mark for 3 year old trotters when she won the Horse Review Futurity trot in 2.01¼. Her driver, Tom Berry, says she likes the going here far better than elsewhere.

Later last year, Hanover's Bertha campaigned on down to Lexington. On the track conducted by the Kentucky Trotting association, she eclipsed her Springfield mark by trotting the mile in 1:59½.

Yanuskus 3d Kewaneean to Lose Grid Captaincy

Kewanee, Ill., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Pete Yanguskus, ruled ineligible to serve as football captain at the University of Illinois this year, is the third Kewaneean to be deprived of college football leadership. Some years ago Don Peden, now coach at Ohio university, was ruled ineligible as grid leader at Lombard college. A third Kewaneean to be deprived of the honor was Dr. C. W. Spears at Dartmouth. Spears is now coach at the University of Oregon.

TILDEN, KOZELUH MEET TODAY AT ONWENTSIA CLUB

William T. Tilden, professional tennis champion, will meet Karel Kozeluh, European champion, this afternoon in an exhibition match on the courts of the Onwentsia Country club in Lake Forest.

Tilden, who scored victories in the majority of his matches with Kozeluh last winter when they toured the indoor arenas, may find the stocky little Czech a tartar today on the outdoor courts.

Kozeluh Likes Clay Courts.

It is possible for Kozeluh, in perfect condition, to weather the storm of Tilden's drives on a clay court, where his play becomes more effective and Tilden's shots lose a fraction of their speed.

The little European is also seeking to offset a Chicago defeat sustained last winter at the Chicago Stadium when Tilden tired him by a barrage of piercing drives, and Kozeluh was forced to default the match because of exhaustion.

The match today, which is expected to attract 2,000, marks Tilden's first outdoor appearance in Chicago since 1927, when he breezed through the Illinois state tennis tournament at Skokie.

Pare Meets Sellers.

In a preliminary match at 3 o'clock Emmet Pare of Chicago, former U. S. clay courts champion, will meet Bobby Sellers, ex-Pacific coast titlist, in the best two out of three sets. A doubles combination of Pare and Tilden will face Sellers and Kozeluh following the singles.

Chicago tennis officials will aid in the officiating, it was announced today by Charles Garland, of the Onwentsia committee. Pat O'Hara, Lee Smith, Ellis Klingeman, Phil Brain, Louis Volpe, and Paul Bennett will serve.

RAIN HALTS MEET

Because of rain, only two matches were played in the third annual open lawn tennis tournament which began yesterday at Washington park. M. Sullivan of La Grange, Ill., defeated L. Le Cesne of Indianapolis, Ind., 6-1, 6-3, and Wilfred Jones of the University of Chicago defeated Charles Sebree of Evanston, 6-0, 6-1.

Play will be resumed at 2 p. m. today with Dr. M. Goff of Wheeling, W. Va., meeting George Thompson of Minneapolis, Minn., and J. H. Woodard of Washington, D. C., meeting Sidney Cohen of New York City.

The tournament will continue through Aug. 9 and is open to all races.

COLLINS RANKED NO. 1 IN AMATEUR BILLIARD LISTS

Percy N. Collins of Chicago, present national amateur 18.2 balk line billiard champion and a six time holder of the crown, retains his position at No. 1 in the official ranking list just announced by the National Billiard Association of America. Collins assisted the ranking committee of the national body in making the selections. The first five in the 1931 rankings are the same as in the 1930 list.

Collins earned first position in 1930 by winning the national championship tournament in St. Louis, but last fall he lost the title to Edgar T. Appleby of New York in a national challenge match. Collins returned to the top position in the national tournament at New York last March.

The 1931 ranking list:

No. 1. Percy N. Collins, Chicago.
No. 2. Edgar T. Appleby, New York.
No. 3. Ray V. Fessenden, Madison, Wis.
No. 4. Monrad C. Wallgren, Everett, Wash.
No. 5. Aris Schaap, Chicago.
No. 6. James Peabody, Chicago.
No. 7. H. T. Galey, Tulsa, Okla.
No. 8. D. H. Goslin, Los Angeles.
No. 9. Charles Connor, Philadelphia, Pa.
No. 10. Cecil Olaguer, Portland, Ore.

SIR ASHLEY WINS $6,550 FEATURE AT EMPIRE CITY

Son of Sir Gallahad III. Carries 122 Pounds.

New York, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—William Woodward's Sir Ashley, with the same sire as Gallant Fox—Sir Gallahad III—won the Empire City Derby at Empire City this afternoon, to make his 3 year old score a respectable one, even though it is far more modest than that of his famous stablemate. Sir Ashley now has won the Shevlin stakes, Knickerbocker handicap, and lesser races, to amass winnings of more than $20,000 when the $6,550 he garnered today is included.

Sir Ashley carried 122 pounds, top weight, and conceded 9 or 10 to each of the five others, only four of which ran. The Audley Farm's Rocky News, well backed at 7 to 2, was left at the post when the colt refused to break. Raymond Workman, Rocky News' jockey, did not even send the son of Rockminster after the field.

Coming past the grandstand Workman was unjustly booed, the demonstration being intensified because he had been left at the post in the first race with Chicatie, and then finished third on C. V. Whitney's Fall Apple, the favorite in the Wakefield handicap.

The happenings were racing luck, nothing more, and Workman was no more to blame for the poor showing of his mounts than the spectators who did the booing. The Empire City Racing association announced that Chicatie's entry would be refused in the future because of his actions.

Sun Beau Wins Handicap; Sets Money Record

Paddock stakes, worth $47,425. The victory caused him to stand out as the best 2 year old in the country. He came from far back and beat Morfair, the favorite from New York, owned by Victor Emanuel, by a nose. Liberty Limited, a representative of the Three D's stock farm stable, was third.

Three horses went down in a sensational spill as the field of 14 wheeled around the last turn in the rich juvenile fixture. Tellico was first to fall. Etcetera and At Sunrise, owned by John Schorr and heavily backed, tumbled over the sprawled Tellico. Jockeys Jones, Finnerty and McCoy escaped with bruises. Tellico suffered a severed tendon in the rear left leg and had to be destroyed.

Burning Blaze ran the six furlongs in 1:11 4-5 and in the mutuels paid $13.48 to win.

Beats Best Juveniles.

If old Sun Beau had not shattered the world's money winning record, Burning Blaze's sensational victory would have been more widely acclaimed by racegoers. He beat the best juveniles in America. He made the spectacular Morfair quit in the stretch. Earlier he had bounced on past W. R. Coe's Osculator and made him stop. Not long ago Osculator won a National Stallion and a Grand American stakes in New York.

Pair by Pair, owned by Mrs. John Hertz, the winner of the Hyde Park stakes at Arlington, was never a match for this slightly regarded color bearer of the Nash brothers of Chicago. Modern Queen, the Clipsetta stakes winner at Latonia, could not catch him. He would have won much more easily but for the wild jamming which took place as the field reached the lower turn, in which Tellico, Etcetera, and At Sunrise went down.

Ends Checkered Career.

Tellico had been sort of a freak horse since he first came to the races. He turned in marvelous efforts, and he also ran some very bad races. Twice lately at Arlington he had stumbled, causing him to lose decisions. But after these stumbles he kept his feet and managed to finish out his races and was usually going very fast near the end.

But when he stumbled in the big field of the Post and Paddock he went down with a bang. He had nerve enough to get up and hobble down to the middle of the stretch before the ambulance arrived to carry him away.

They say a good horse overcomes bad luck. That's what Burning Blaze seemed to do. During the excitement of the jam he plodded along and made his move on the extreme outside soon after the stretch run began. Morfair couldn't stop him, and when the son of Berwich gave up it was evident Chicago was to score in the Post and Paddock stakes.

Son of Big Blaze.

Burning Blaze may not go east to show his heels to the best at Saratoga and Belmont. But he will be strutting around Chicago.

If you ask him what it's all about, he probably will neigh: "Didn't I trim 'em all in the Post and Paddock?"

East and West Divide Honors in Stake Races

In the twelve rich stakes decided during the Arlington Park season of 30 days eastern and western horses broke exactly even. Six of the stake victories were turned in by representatives from each part of the country. Here's how the battle for stake race honors was waged at Arlington:

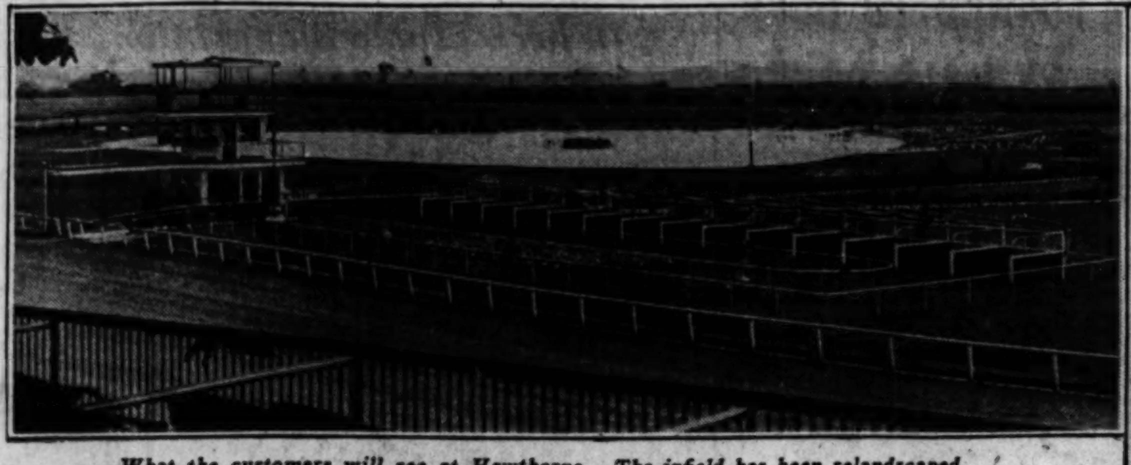
GLIMPSES FROM PRIVATE LIFE OF JOHN J. THOROUGHBRED



What the customers will see at Hawthorne. The infield has been relandscaped.

Knows his oats. Chief John, owned by John Marsch, eats a hearty meal served by Robert Bludan, exercise boy, which is calculated to put him in fine fettle for the Hawthorne meeting.

A good fit. A Stuyvesant Peabody horse, T. S. Jordan, accepts delivery of some new shoes from W. Moore, blacksmith, and has them put on at once. Steve Hecam swings the towel and Fred Meyer holds the horse.

Going to school. Imelda and Martha Florence, of Ald. John Coughlin's stable, take a lesson at the Bahr starting gate at Hawthorne under direction of B. Smith and Eddie Thomas, assistant starters.

Handicap to Mark 1st Day at Hawthorne

Hawthorne Facts

Opening day—Tomorrow.
Length of meeting—18 days.
Post time—2:15, daylight savings time.
Opening day feature—Inaugural handicap, $5,000 added.
Eight race programs—Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.
Innovations—Electrical timer and place and show totalizer.
Stewards — Joseph A. Murphy, Martin Nathanson, H. P. Conklin.
Placing judges—Joseph McLennan, C. F. Henry, John Carey.
Racing secretary and handicapper—Joseph McLennan.
Starter—Harry Morrissey.
Transportation—I. C. to gate; L and bus to gate; by motor or cab, Ogden avenue to Cicero avenue or 52d avenue; surface lines to gate.

The Chicago Business Men's Racing association opens an 18 day meeting tomorrow at Hawthorne, pioneer track of the Chicago district.

While Hawthorne is old in point of years and tradition, it is spic and span for the meeting, with several improvements and innovations. The innovations are: electrical timing of the races, with the clock starting when the barrier is sprung and stopping when the track timer touches a button at the finish; and a place and show totalizing board that keeps the public informed as just what amount is bet in those two pools, and the exact amount on each horse.

Infield Relandscaped.

A new steward's stand will greet the fans, a triple deck affair at the finish line, alongside the infield paddock. The landscaping scheme in the infield has been changed.

The new six and a half furlong course out of a chute is expected to prove popular. It provides a straightaway run of almost three-eights of a mile before a turn is reached. Carrying out the idea of a fairly long starightaway before a field must go into a turn, the management has abandoned all mile and 70 yards races and the distance will jump from the new six and a furlong course to a mile and a sixteenth.

With Latonia closed and no Kentucky track going, and only Thistledown operating as a major track in the west, Hawthorne will have 3,000 horses available for racing. Of this number 1,390 will be on the grounds, while the others will be quartered at Lincoln Fields and Washington Park.

Six Stakes on Program.

There are six stakes on the Hawthorne schedule, starting with the $5,000 Inaugural handicap tomorrow afternoon. There were 29 nominations for this stake, including Gallant Knight, Satin Spar, Listo, Knight's Commander, Best Man, Epithet, Ladder, Nellie Custis, My Dandy, Brown Wisdom, Silverdale, Tannery, Uliniu, No More, Morsel, Calf Roper, Ironsides and Martha Jones.

The $25,000 Hawthorne handicap, for which Mate, Gallant Knight, Scuttle, Mike Hall, Panchio, Burning Up and some 35 others were nominated holds the spotlight next Saturday. On the following week-end, the $10,000 added Illinois Owners handicap and the Fort Dearborn handicap share honors. On Aug. 22, the closing day of the meeting, the $10,000 added Hawthorne Juvenile handicap and the Great Lakes handicap are scheduled. Eight races are scheduled for every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoon.

CANADIANS LEAD YANKEES, 22 TO 18, IN SLOOP SERIES

Seaside Park, N. J., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The Canadian sailors defeated the Americans, 22 to 18, in the first four of the series of eight races for the international class "E" sloop championship here today. Two of the four races were held yesterday.

The Americans, representing the Barnegat Bay Yachting Racing association, captured the third and fourth races held today. They gained four points on their opponents as the result of the morning race, in which they finished first and second, and split the ten points in the afternoon contest with the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht club, of Dorval.

The Canadians won the two races yesterday to lead this morning, 14 to 6.

U. S. Oarsmen Win 7 Canada Henley Titles

ST. CATHERINES, Ont., Aug. 1.—(AP)—United States oarsmen captured seven of the ten finals on the closing day's program of the Royal Canadian Henley regatta today, but could not prevent the singles championship from falling into the grasp of Bobby Pearce, diamond sculls title holder from Hamilton, Ont.

Pearce beat Ken Myers of the Bachelor Barge club, Philadelphia, and Joe Wright Jr. of Toronto, 1928 winner of the diamond sculls, in the finals to win by nearly three lengths.

Rivaling Pearce's triumph was the victory of the Penn A. C. in the Hanlan Memorial trophy race for senior eights. Penn, off to a fast start, held a margin of six lengths on the Detroit Boat club, defending champions, at the finish.

The Detroit Boat club won the championship for 140 pound senior eights and for 150 pound senior fours; the Bachelor Barge club of Philadelphia accounted for titles in the senior fours without coxswain, senior fours with coxswain, and the senior doubles with Garrett Gilmore and Myers teaming up. The Buffalo West Sides were credited with the seventh United States triumph in the championship for 150 pound senior eights.

The only titles that escaped oarsmen from below the border today were the singles championship, the 140 pound senior fours crown which went to the Don Rowing club of Toronto, and the 140 pound senior singles in which F. Burns of the Toronto Argonauts defeated two Philadelphians, R. Cumming and Tom Clark, in that order.

ROBINS DEFEATS BERT RIEL FOR 'SIPPI NET TITLE

Iowa City, Ia., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Merle Robins, of Ames, 1930 Iowa champion, defeated Bert Riel, Watseka, Ill., Northwestern university tennis captain, for the Mississippi Valley singles championship here today. The scores were 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-1.

Robins overcame Riel with his steadiness, after losing the first set to 3-6. Robins began his rally after going behind 3-1 in the second set, winning four straight games and the set. He did the same in the third set with five consecutive games to win, 6-4. Riel, who appeared shaken by Robins two rallies, went down in the deciding set, 6-1.

Play in the finals of the women's singles between Mrs. Mary O'Malley, Los Angeles, Cal., and Ella Poe, Cedar Rapids, was postponed because of rain, as were the men's doubles finals. Miss Poe, who was conceded little chance against her more experienced rival, won the second set 11-9 after she had lost the first set, 6-3.

Richard Goepel and Roland Reddig, Rock Island, Ill., were leading Robins and Dick Boyles, Iowa City, 6-4, in the first set when doubles play was suspended. Both the women's and men's doubles finals will be played Monday.

BLANTON WINS COUNTY CROWN FROM BOYWID

16 Year Old Mid-City Golfer Shoots 65.

The Cards

Blanton	543	443	532	33
	434	444	333	32
Boywid	445	433	644	37
	344	444	342	32

Joe Blanton, 16 year old Mid-City golfer, wrested the Cook county boys' open championship from Chuck Boywid, a clubmate, in the 18 hole final at the Garfield park course yesterday. Blanton played consistent golf, shooting a 33 on the par 31 first nine and followed with a 32 for a total 65.

Drives out of bounds on the first round gave Boywid a 37, but brilliant putts on the last nine enabled him to score a 32 to finish four strokes behind Blanton.

Blanton reached the finals by eliminating Johnny Hayes in the semifinals yesterday morning, 3 and 1. Boywid, who became the favorite when he scored two victories Friday in the second and quarter-final rounds, scored a 2 and 1 triumph over Frank Ghiselli, Shorewood, in the semifinals.

George Jennings, Edgewood Valley, won the consolation flight, defeating Joseph Williams, 4 and 3. Jennings won from T. McDonald in the semifinals, 4 and 3, while Williams triumphed over M. Lucheon, 1 up in 19 holes. The semi-final and final results follow:

Trapshooters Meet for U. S. Title Aug. 24

Vandalia, O., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Now that the various state championship trapshooting tournaments have been held, the clay target breakers of the nation will turn their attention to the Grand American Handicap championship tournament which will be held here Aug. 24 to 29.

Usually about 1,000 shooters attend this tournament and take part in the 12 events. The majority shoot in the Great American handicap, which is the largest trapshooting event held anywhere.

Winner Gets $1,000.

The winner of the blue ribbon handicap is rewarded with a purse of $1,000, a $600 five-piece tea set, and the Gates trophy. There are about 200 cash prizes to the next high scorers. The guaranteed purse for this event is $10,000.

Other events on the program are the clay target championship of North America, where every one shoots from the 16 yard mark, women's championship of North America, Junior championship, class championships, double target championship, women's double target championship, state five man team championship, preliminary handicap, race for state champions, east-west team race, the veterans' race, subjunior championship, and the Consolation handicap.

Open Event on Aug. 22.

In addition to those events, the executives of the Amateur Trapshooting association have arranged for an open championship event to be staged on Saturday, Aug. 22. Amateurs and professionals alike are eligible for this event which will be at 200 16-yard targets.

WHITE SOX POP VENDERS ENTER A. A. U. FIGHTS

Lou Comiskey, treasurer of the White Sox, has become interested in the forthcoming Central A. A. U. outdoor boxing championships and is rounding out a team made up of concession boys at White Sox park.

"It amounts to about ten miles of road work each day," he says.

The tournament will be held for three days, beginning Aug. 25, at Northwest stadium, Irving Park boulevard and Milwaukee avenue. More than 2,000 invitations have been sent amateur boxers from Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. Chicago will be represented by several strong clubs, including Kid Howard's team, victor in the Golden Gloves competition last winter.

SWEET CAPTURES ROLLING GREEN'S CROAK'S TOURNEY

175 Compete in Annual Medal Play Meet.

Rolling Green's fifth annual Croaks' invitational golf tournament took its place among the largest attended events of the season yesterday, attracting an entry of 175 who competed through 36 holes of medal play.

Art Sweet of Ridgemoor conquered the field with 76—74—150 to win the low gross prize. Second honors went to Bert Kincaid of the home club. His score of 77—78—155 was equaled by two others, Carleton Smith, also of Rolling Green, and Glenn Clark of Crystal Lake. Kincaid, however, won the draw.

Sweet and Kincaid also figured in the low gross foursome, playing with Werner Schmidt and George Schneberger. They had a low gross of 643. Low gross honors for the morning round went to Carleton Smith, home club champion. His score of 36—41—77 for the first 18 was one point better than the 78 carded by Glenn Clark. W. Zingheim and W. Schmidt turned in 80s to win low gross honors for the afternoon.

Sweet shot a par 35 on his final nine holes in the afternoon, after taking a 39, four over par, on the outgoing nine. His morning card consisted of a 36 going out and a 40 coming in. He had two birdies, the first on the par 4 third in the morning and the second on the par 5 fourteenth in the afternoon.

W. P. Cagney and N. T. Ladenson with 67s took low net honors for the day. Cagney's card was 82—15—67 and Ladenson's was 84—17—67. Other leaders in medal play were B. J. Kavanaugh, 100—30—70; C. W. Jordan, 84—13—71; G. E. Holmes, 82—11—71, and C. M. Case, 80—9—71.

LA GRANGE.

In the match play against par, E. Hancock won, finishing 4 up. An event for low net on the first nine and low gross on the last was won by H. E. Spear. He had a net of 40—3—37 and a gross of 35 for a total of 72. Results of the class ball sweepstakes: Class A—H. E. Spear, 75—5—70; C. S. Egbert, 80—9—71. Class B—E. E. Barrett, 79—12—67; R. C. Ross, 83—15—68. Class C—F. W. Reed, 92—22—70; H. K. Clark, 93—20—73. Class D—R. W. Jefferson, 94—25—69; A. Russell, 103—29—74.

KNOLLWOOD.

H. K. Sarrar and R. W. Starrett won the twosome event with 65. R. H. Fleming and R. W. Sommers took second prize with 67. Sarrar also won in the ball sweepstakes, shooting a 68. S. T. Brown tied with R. H. Fleming for third prize with 73.

MISSION HILLS.

L. E. Erbman defeated R. H. Farrell in the second round for the C. G. Darling trophy, 4 up. Other results: C. W. Smith beat R. W. Jones, 3 and 1; R. S. Danforth beat F. J. Schmidt, 1 up; D. J. Cranston won from C. A. Luerham by default, and G. J. Blackburn won from E. F. Mayer, also by default. Blind bogey winners: Charles Dubsky, A. S. Benzing, W. E. Wettber, C. F. Frykman, R. V. McCroskey, F. Gagen, and R. W. Jones. E. B. Glidden won the class A ball sweepstakes with 71. C. H. Kreger won class B with 88—13—75. R. V. McCroskey took second with 104—24—80.

NORTH SHORE.

S. J. Dexter finished 1 up in the match play against par. J. J. Kutten took second prize, finishing 3 up. In the ball sweepstakes Harry H. Wolf and S. J. Dexter tied with 73. J. J. Kutten and G. L. Brammen tied with 72 in class B, while A. J. Mick took class C with 72. G. H. Dickerson, G. J. Biehl, and B. H. Hanwork tied for second prize with 73. W. C. Rodian won class D with 72.

RIDGEMOOR.

F. W. Liatzow defeated C. W. Cairns, 1 up, in the third round for the Directors' trophy. Other matches were postponed because of rain. In the first round for the class A championship A. Hussar beat Dr. J. R. Ballinger, 3 and 1. Other results: L. F. Olson beat H. A. Rohrer, 2 and 1; E. A. Thornton beat R. J. Russell, 2 and 1; R. E. Williams won from P. J. Dunn by default; Charles Kairns beat J. C. Wiesert, 3 and 2; Dr. E. Shatch and E. A. Herrick finished even and F. Laitzer beat J. J. Quinn, 2 and 1. Matches in classes B and C resulted as follows: L. A. Bailey won from Dr. L. B. Longstale by default; T. L. Warner won from T. F. Gallagher by default; A. H. Wengel won from R. W. Mallott by default; T. N. Billings beat R. C. Bierdeman, 3 and 2. George A. Scott won the Veterans' trophy.

RUTH LAKE.

Scoring 71, F. M. Glasser won the class A ball sweepstakes. C. H. Mann shot 76—3—72 to win second prize and B. W. Maas took third with 86—10—76. Fourth prize went to W. L. Schultze with 83—7—76. Class B winners: J. T. Foster, 81—12—69; G. E. Plenegleith, 88—17—71; J. A. Robinson, 88—14—74. W. H. Hose won class C with 71, W. F. Stegmer taking second prize with 94—19—75. F. C. Hall won class D with 94—25—69. Low net winners in the 18 hole tournament: F. M. Glasser, G. W. Penent, W. H. Hose, and F. M. Ballings.

SKOKIE.

C. W. McGuire won the Sunset cup. Ball sweepstakes winners: R. D. Stevenson, 80—11—70; C. W. McGuire, 80—10—70; J. Sheldon, 88—17—71; M. Brever, 84—12—72; C. Guectler, 89—17—72; D. R. Kimbark, 84—12—72; T. E. Moritz, 93—22—71; H. G. Clark, 85—14—71; F. Marks, 92—20—72; G. B. Haskins, 83—11—72.

DISTRICT CHAMP TURNED TO GOLF AT PA'S ORDER

Jane Weiller Started at Fourteen.

Jane Weiller's first experience with golf was not by choice, it was revealed by the 19 year old Chicago district champion, yesterday, following her victory Friday over June Beebe in the title final at Calumet.

When 14, Miss Weiller spent the winter in Hot Springs, Ark. One day she accompanied her father to the golf course. Not wanting to be bothered with Jane, Mr. Weiller turned her over to the club pro.

"She knows nothing about golf, but give her a lesson and keep her occupied until I get back," he said. The old Scotchman chuckled.

"That's fine. I like 'em raw; it is easier to teach 'em."

Swing was Good.

When her father returned the pro called his attention to Jane's swing. She had grasped the idea quickly. Her's was the free, easy, rhythmic swing of youth, unhampered by thoughts of technicalities. She merely imitated what she saw.

Returning to Chicago she received instructions from Bert Krogstad, Vernon Ridge professional. He endeavored only to develop in her the correct mental attitude. Last week in the district she was down at the turn in three matches, but never gave up, overcame the disadvantage and finally won. Her match with Mrs. E. T. Nicholas Jr., Lincolnshire, went 19 holes. She showed her mettle by shooting a birdie four on the extra hole.

In the final against Miss Beebe, when Jane saw her three hole lead vanish hole by hole, she again exhibited her competitive requisites by carrying on to the 21st hole, where she captured her first championship.

Handicap is Cut.

Starting the season with an eight handicap she was determined to reduce it low enough to be eligible to enter the women's national championship at Buffalo, N. Y. this month. By constant practice she built up her game. In the western open she reached the semi-finals, shooting several near par rounds, thereby cutting her handicap to six. Her consistent golf throughout the district meet, where she shot an 80 in the finals, again reduced her handicap.

Winning the silver cup pleased Jane, but the thing over which she seemed most elated was the announcement that her handicap had been cut to three.

Miss Weiller's putter is the best club in her bag. Twenty-eight putts was all she required on the district championship round.

Public Links Golfers Seek Titles Tuesday

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The boys to whom golf is a pastime knocked on the door to the national public links golf championship today. The annual tournament for the team championship and individual title will be played over the Keller club links, starting next Tuesday and ending Saturday.

The greatest entry list in the tournament's history comprises the field, challenging Robert Wingate, Jacksonville, Fla., for his individual championship and the Brooklyn quartet for team honors.

Twenty-nine cities have entered four men each for the team title, a number exceeding that of previous competitions, and the 180 players gunning for individual honors is 33 more than the mark set two years ago at St. Louis.

There will be two days of qualifying play, 18 holes Tuesday and 18 Wednesday, with the next two days devoted to two rounds each of match play, also over the 18 hole route. Saturday the finals will be run off over 36 holes. Keller's course is 6,686 yards long. Par is 72.

SWANSON WINS GOLF MEET HELD IN HIS HONOR

State's Attorney John A. Swanson yesterday carried off low gross honors in a tournament held in his honor by Chicago lawyers and judges at Medinah Country club yesterday. He scored 45—44—89, while Joe Nagle, who was second, had a 90 for the 18 holes.

The members' net winners were Jimmy Brown, 104—32—72, and J. L. Murphy, 129—50—79. Bill Wallrath, a guest, turned in the best card of the day with 40—39—79. Scores of the legal fraternity competed and they called it John A. Swanson day.

Ray Stanley won first low net yesterday at Cherry Hill in the golf tournament of the Swift post American Legion. He had both low gross and low net with 76—7—69, and chose the low net prize. F. R. Davis had second low net. J. C. Stamm, with 43—39—82, won the low gross award. Some of the best scores:

Sy Totgman, 92—30—62; R. M. Knowles, 91—28—63; J. D. Fleming, 99—30—69; M. M. Kloser, 95—25—70; A. D. White, 95—24—71; E. C. Cook, 99—28—71; B. R. Chapman, 89—18—71.

Officials and employés of the Ingalls-Shepherd company in Harvey shot monthly golf tournament at Cherry Hill yesterday and President Dick McGuire won low with two rounds of 39. Vice President John Wolf was only one stroke behind, with a 79. The bulk of the prizes went to low net shooters and John Ford, with 82—16—66, led that division. Joe Cenorke landed second with 79—12—67 and Louis Bissette, with 79—10—69, was third.

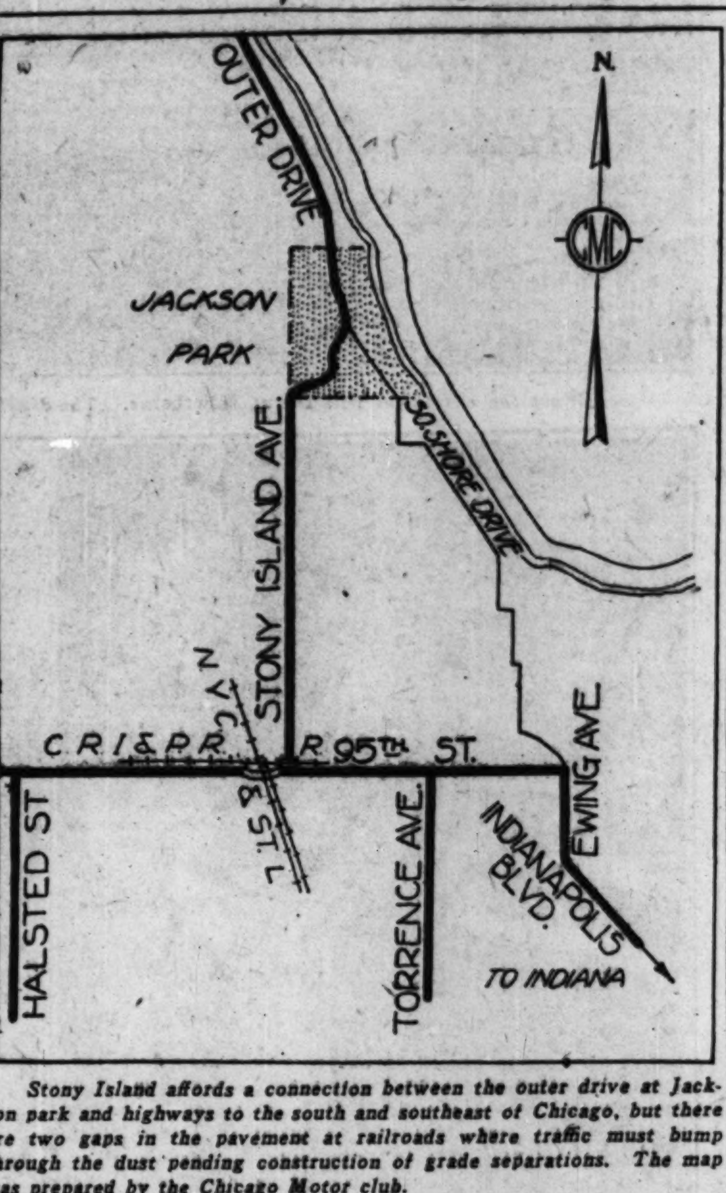
MOTORS · TRAFFIC · HIGHWAYS

Where Traffic Bumps Along



Stony Island affords a connection between the outer drive at Jackson park and highways to the south and southeast of Chicago, but there are two gaps in the pavement at railroads where traffic must bump through the dust pending construction of grade separations. The map was prepared by the Chicago Motor club.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

Motorists are invited to address the Voice of Traffic, The Tribune, Chicago, with complaints against speed traps, crooked justices, abusive policemen, and similar annoyances.

INDIANA'S 40 M. P. H.

Chicago, July 28.—The Illinois state police ought to take a ride on the Dunes highway to see how to handle holiday crowds. Those Indiana coppers on their white motorcycles are on the job keeping traffic moving and keeping traffic in line, saving time for the motorists and preventing accidents.

I've driven quite a bit on Sundays around Chicago and have yet to see an Illinois policeman making a slow driver step on the gas to get out of the way of folks who want to go some place. Why can't Illinois enforce a 40 mile an hour minimum limit the same as Indiana is doing on the Dunes highway on week-ends?

ROBERT N. DAVIS.

SPEED TRAP QUIZ.

Chicago, July 29.—I knew when THE TRIBUNE started going after speed traps again that there would be some prosecutions. I wasn't surprised when I read that the grand jury had started an inquiry. Here's hoping that the grand jury will be as vigorous in its investigation as THE TRIBUNE for years has been in exposing these small town coppers and magistrates who prey on Chicago motorists.

L. S. N.

WISCONSIN ROAD WORK.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 29.—I was glad to see THE TRIBUNE investigate the Wisconsin highway administration. There has been so much political palaver over our road affairs that it was refreshing to read a few cold facts. It is now obvious that these facts are: First, Gov. La Follette raised the gas tax and got some political friends in control of the highway department by promising to give a lot of jobs for the unemployed; second, grade separation projects have been delayed and few jobs have been opened; and third, the La Follette administration tried to keep the facts covered up.

EMIL SCHWARTZ.

LAKE FRONT PARKING.

Chicago, July 28.—Along the lake front east of the loop, wage earners park their cars on coming to work. The late comers plow in low over rocky ridges and through spine skaping craters to find available space away from the drive and nearer to the lake.

Why not put to work ten able bodied men to remove tire destroying boulders and to level this waste land? Or would this be unfair competition to the 25 cent parking space the commissioners now maintain?

CAR DRIVER.

FOR ALL NIGHT PARKING.

Chicago, July 29.—I propose that the city license tag for passenger cars be divided into two classifications. The first should be on the present price basis, but which does not permit all night parking in the public streets. The second classification with a distinctive tag, that could be easily read at night by police officers, would permit such parking in the public streets, but on a higher fee basis.

Second—Would reduce the tremendous congestion which now limits many streets to one way traffic lanes.

Third—Such reduction of parking would meet the approval of police and fire departments as well as the transportation companies.

Fourth—It would bring a certain amount of business to garages, who have invested their money in Chicago real estate and who are paying exorbitant taxes.

Fifth—It would bring to the holders of vacant lots, where cars could readily be parked all night, a certain moderate income which would aid in paying some of the now delinquent taxes.

J. A. J.

LIBERTYVILLE POLICE.

Chicago, July 16.—I have heard a great deal of speed traps, etc., I would like to say a few words on the other side. In the last week I have had some business with the police of Libertyville, Ill. and have always found them courteous and obliging. Sunday between 11 a. m. and noon I sat in the park in Libertyville and watched the police directing traffic. The cars were passing to the number of 1,500 or 2,000 an hour and the largest delay was not more than a few minutes. I witnessed a number of arrests, all of which were well deserved. Quite a few more who to my mind should have been arrested were simply warned.

I am a motorist myself and drive on an average 500 miles a week, but never before have I found such a combination of courtesy and efficiency as at Libertyville.

THOMAS O'NEIL.

RAILROAD CROSSING DEATHS.

Chicago, May 7.—If our legislative bodies are interested in the safety of highways, the matter of railway grade crossings and accidents resulting therefrom should be carefully considered. M. O. Lorenz, director of vital statistics, United States government, Washington, D. C., states that in the last three years—1928, 1929 and 1930—there were 1,601 known grade crossing accidents in the state of Illinois, involving the death of 772 people and the injury of 1,777 more. In more recent weeks at Mount Carroll, Ill., a mother and three children were killed at a grade crossing. At Antioch, Ill., five young men were killed at a grade crossing.

There will be no lessening of grade crossing accidents and deaths 1931 indicates unless this situation is dealt with in a sane and forceful manner. The solution is comparatively simple and is strictly an engineering and financial problem. The railroads have consistently fought against the elimination of grade crossings either by depression or elevation.

A total of better than $50,000,000 is available in the state of Illinois for highway construction work. The railroads are fighting all highway commercial transportation, advocating higher taxation and strangulation of the movement of merchandise and passengers over the highways.

Isn't it time that this situation be looked at from its fundamental characteristics and not with a hue and cry to the public for sympathy that is not deserved nor earned, and a concentrated attack on the legislative bodies for further monopoly?

Our railroads are necessary. Our highway transportation is necessary in this modern age. Let's deal with it sanely. A definite step taken towards elimination of the grade crossings will in a short time reduce this terrific death rate.

The Bureau of Vital Statistics at Springfield, Ill., sets forth that regardless of the heavily congested traffic in the city of Chicago, on account of the elevated grade crossings the yearly death rate is less than 10 per cent of that of the state of Illinois outside of the city of Chicago. The remaining grade crossings in the city of Chicago are "death traps" and must be eliminated.

Have these live been sacrificed in vain? Are these permanently crippled and injured persons to go through life without some definite recognition being given immediately to this potential machine gun of the highway? The bandits and gangsters make the front pages of the newspapers daily by their killings. Are these lives more valuable than our citizens who can be protected by the elimination of the grade crossing?

TWO GAPS IN PAVEMENT RUIN SOUTH GATEWAY

A Few Hundred Dollars Would Bring Relief.

BY HAL FOUST.

Pending construction of grade separations a few hundred feet of paving is badly needed on Stony Island avenue under the Rock Island railroad and on 95th street over the Nickel Plate tracks. The expenditure of a few dollars would give temporary relief from two dangerous and uncomfortable bottlenecks, would increase the utility of an investment of thousands of dollars in pavement, and would open a new gateway from the city to the south and the southeast.

Stony Island, with the exception of a couple of blocks just south of Jackson park, consists of two commodious one way drives, separated by a broad esplanade from the park to 93d street just north of the Rock Island embankment. There is an old subway under the embankment, but the roadway is rutted and dusty.

Over the Rough Brick.

Notwithstanding this dead end of the through traffic facilities, many automobiles en route from the loop to northern Indiana use Stony Island south of Jackson park in preference to the narrow and congested boulevard system that carries the traffic south and east of the park, where the outer drive ends. Rather than use the unmaintained viaduct on Stony Island the cars turn east over the rough brick of 93d street to Colfax avenue for the jog under the tracks to 95th street. On 95th these motorists go east to connect with Indianapolis boulevard or turn south on Torrence avenue for a connection with the Ridgeland road or the Lincoln highway.

West on 95th street are connections with Halsted street and Western avenue. The county in the last few years spent considerable money in laying a forty foot concrete pavement on this east and west artery for the far south side. But a gap was left in the pavement for the construction of a subway under the Nickel Plate tracks. At present traffic bumps through the dust over the railroad embankment in low gear.

Dropped by County.

When the present gasoline tax was enacted in 1929, the Cook county highway department laid out a program for the expenditure of its one cent portion and among the projects was a new Stony Island subway between 93d and 95th streets. The improvement was to have been built in 1930.

However, Cook county dropped its plan to construct the grade separation when the corporation counsel's office reported that under an ordinance of 1911 the railroad was to build the subway. A similar ordinance applies for the 95th street grade separation with the Nickel Plate tracks.

The Nickel Plate case was taken before the Illinois commerce commission. The commission two weeks ago directed that the railroad should construct its viaduct, with the city paying for the right of way, the paving and the property damage.

Appeal Planned.

The city had not expected to participate in the cost of the improvement. Since the decision might set a precedent for other railroad grade separations on which negotiations are pending, the city is planning to appeal the commission's ruling to the courts. Pending the outcome of the controversy over the proportioning of costs of the projected grade separations, the motoring public is exposed to hazardous bottle necks that prevent gasoline taxpayers from receiving a fair return on their investment in pavements.

"Is there anything that would prevent the county from paving these few hundred feet to serve temporarily?" County Highway Superintendent Quinlan was asked.

Either Could Do It.

"As far as I know," he replied, "the city or the county could do this temporary job, or 95th and Stony Island might be on the state's plans for routing state highways in Chicago so that the state highway department could lay the pavement. We don't know what the state's plans are.

"I'll try to find out who's responsible for the present condition of that crossing and subway and perhaps it can be arranged for the county to spend a little gas money there for the benefit of the motorists who want to use these routes."

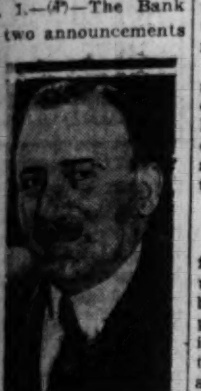
U. S., PARIS GIVE BRITAIN LOAN OF 250 MILLION

Federal Reserve to Take One-Half.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The Bank of England made two announcements today which are regarded in British financial circles as of the highest possible importance in connection with the world's disturbed monetary position.



CLEMENT MORET.

The first was that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Bank of France each had granted the Bank of England a credit of £25,000,000 [about $125,000,000].

The second was that the British treasury had authorized the Bank of England to increase its fiduciary note issue by £15,000,000 [about $75,000,000] for a period of three weeks.

Credit Carries 3½% Interest.

The fiduciary issue, which is that portion of the Bank of England's note issue against which the bank does not hold gold in its vaults, is thus raised to £275,000,000 [about $1,375,000,000] instead of £260,000,000 [about $1,300,000,000], which up to today was the highest figure authorized by law.

The rate of interest on the American and French credits was not officially stated, but it is understood to be 3½ per cent.

Both announcements were warmly received in banking, financial and commercial circles. The new credit is regarded as an instrument which will put a decisive stop to the flow of gold from London, especially toward France.

The Bank of England, it was explained, has left large sums of gold in Germany to assist the rehabilitation of that country. If it were exposed at the same time to constant gold withdrawals by France, its position sooner or later would become untenable.

Used to Help Germany.

From this point of view the action of the Bank of France and the federal reserve bank is regarded rather as a friendly agreement to maintain the German financial structure rather than a move to "save British finance."

In their larger aspect, the credits, which were negotiated at Paris by Sir Robert Kindersley, a director of the Bank of England, are regarded as certain to have a widely beneficial psychological effect.

Not only is it felt that the nervousness caused by recent bullion movements and the consequent uncertainty regarding the position of the pound will be removed, but it is also believed that the action by the three banks is an illustration of coöperation which will have excellent reactions through the whole world of international finance.

The increase in the fiduciary issue was welcomed as releasing for use as credits "frozen" money which otherwise would have had to remain in the bank's vaults as backing for notes.

The August currency demands, however, are regarded as the immediate cause of the treasury's action. At the end of the three weeks period it is expected that the August notes will have returned from circulation and the bank may also have been enabled to increase its gold stock.

U. S. Bank Accepts Plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, N. Y., Aug. 1.—The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in association with other Federal Reserve banks of the country, announced today an arrangement with the Bank of France for the extension of a $250,000,000 credit to the Bank of England, divided equally between the American and French institutions.

The credit arrangement is in the form of an agreement to purchase from the Bank of England upon request prime commercial bills to the extent of $125,000,000 by the Federal Reserve bank and to the same amount by the Bank of France.

The credit may never be needed, for the mere fact that the Bank of France and the Federal Reserve bank, with their immense financial strength, have sufficient confidence in the soundness of the Bank of England to throw their support behind it is expected to quiet such nervousness and fears as touched off the recent run on London.

George L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, was authorized by the directors of the bank at their weekly meeting Thursday to undertake negotiations for the credit. He was in constant touch by trans-Atlantic telephone during the last two days with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and with Clement Moret, governor of the Bank of France, until an agreement on the form of the credit had been reached.

GERMANY AIDS BANKS

It was officially announced tonight that the government will take over [illegible] worth of new preferred shares of the Dresdner bank with guaranteed dividends of 7 per cent. Only part will be paid in cash and the other part in treasury bills. The reich does not intend permanently to hold the new shares, but proposes to tender them to "interested circles." Back to Farm Trend Seen During '30

BY SCRUTATOR.

For the first time in more than a decade the population of American farms showed an increase last year. The department of agriculture in its 1931 yearbook places the total on Jan. 1 at 27,430,000, compared with 27,222,000 a year before.

The increase of 208,000 is partially accounted for by the department's estimate that only 1,543,000 persons left farms for cities last year, the fewest in years. There arrived on farms from cities 1,392,000 individuals, more than in any year since 1924. Migration to the country has been even more pronounced this year.

The Manufacturers' Record after surveying the south and southwest concludes that a definite back to the land movement has developed. Its canvass of banks indicates also that sales of farm lands have increased this year.

Has Latent Drawing Power.

In times of economic stress the farm always has power to draw population from the cities. It has no bread lines, no soup kitchens. Unemployment may mean no money coming in, but there is usually a roof for protection and a place to plant radishes and beans.

But of late years there has been a more positive reason for going back to the country. Good roads, motor cars, improved implements and better homes, and now the rapid extension of central station electric service are rapidly bringing the rural standard of living up to that of the city.

Then, too, farm land values have reached a level attractive to purchasers and farming is being placed more generally on a business basis, with prospects of obtaining a more satisfactory return on the investment.

Dr. L. C. Gray of the department of agriculture says that "farm land values have reached a level in many areas at which farmers could earn a fair return under a moderate improvement in prices of farm products."

Farm Sales Stimulated.

Replies to the Manufacturers' Record's questionnaire reveal that farm sales have been stimulated by deflation of land values. A. G. Brown, president of the federal land bank at Louisville, says farm sales there increased about 25 per cent in the first four months of 1931.

"Most of the buyers," he explains, "were local people living in the communities, while a few were folks who, having lived in cities, are glad of the opportunity to go back to the farm."

Wood Netherland, president of the federal land bank at St. Louis, reports that farm sales for the first four months of 1931 were 50 per cent over the entire number of sales for last year. From South Carolina, Georgia and Florida comes word that if the present rate is continued the total farm sales this year in that area will be almost double those for 1930.

"We are still importers of a number of staple agricultural commodities which can be produced cheaper than they can be purchased," says F. H. Daniel, president of the federal land bank at Columbus, S. C.

"Until this condition is changed there is ample room for local initiative in putting idle acres to work. The present purchasers are proving their judgment to be correct by the fact that few fail to make the grade."

Many Secure Fair Return.

Times have changed on the farm, and they're going to change more. The farmer has the same kind of clothes, automobiles, talkies and stores as his city cousin. He's getting electric power. And the price he pays for land is down to a place where with the return of something like normal times he will be able to make a fair return on his investment and have a good time doing it.

The most serious financial troubles besetting farmers today arise out of a necessity for making land of reduced value earn enough to cover fixed charges on a valuation set when land prices were highly inflated. The purchaser today avoids these troubles.

Melville Shoe Co. Earns $1.37 a Share for 6 Months

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The Melville Shoe corporation today reported for the first half of 1931 net profit of $593,562, equal to $1.37 a share on the common stock, against $955,705, or $2.33 a share, in the like period of 1930.

Timken-Detroit Axle company and subsidiaries for the six months ended June 30 had net loss of $275,178, compared with net profit of $655,427 in the first six months of 1930. Fred Glover, president, said that conditions in the industry have been such that "red figures were unavoidable."

CHICAGO BANK STOCK TRADING IS INACTIVE, PRICE CHANGES MINOR

Chicago bank stocks in another week of inactivity showed only minor changes. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company sales ranged between 296 low to 301 high, closing 297 bid with stock offered at 299.

First National Bank of Chicago was slightly easier, closing 429 to 432. Central Republic company stock, when issued, improved 2 points at 239 to 242. Northern Trust company showed a strong undertone closing 458 to 461. Terminal National bank was 3 points better, closing 28½ bid with stock offered at 32. Chicago Bank of Commerce was again fractionally lower at 36 to 38, off 1½ points. Harris Trust and Savings bank was 4 points easier at 425 to 430. Peoples Trust and Savings bank was 10 points lower at 275 to 280.

In the miscellaneous group, Chicago Daily News common was off ½ point at 9 to 10; the preferred was 1 point lower at 72½ to 73½. Chicago Title and Trust company improved from early sales of 385 to high and last transactions of 388, additional stock being offered at 390, with bids of 386. Wahl preferred was wanted at 11 without attracting sellers. Lincoln National Life Insurance company closed a trifle lower at 44½ to 45½.

LOWER FREIGHT RATES ON WHEAT GO INTO EFFECT

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—(AP)—Lower freight rates on wheat from western states became effective today under a ruling of the interstate commerce commission.

Railroads opposed the new rates, which first were ordered into effect by the commission early last June. The carriers took the matter to court and obtained an injunction in a Chicago federal court restraining the commission from placing the lower rates into effect. They contended they would lose millions of dollars in revenue. The court, however, vacated the injunction, and the commission yesterday denied all protests in the case. Ten days ago it ordered the new rates into effect today, and railroads have published the changed schedules.

While wheat growers will benefit from these changes, the farm board became advised of friction among coöperatives in the northwestern states. At a lengthy session yesterday coöperatives resisting the expansion policies of the Farmers' National Grain Coöperation, national sales agency for all grain coöperatives in the country, submitted their side of the controversy.

The Farmers' Union Terminal association, St. Paul, also is involved, it being charged this organization had attempted to gain supremacy in the northwest. C. E. Huff, president of the Farmers' National, and M. W. Thatcher, general manager of the Farmers' Union, are to submit arguments to the board today.

A purported program of the Farmers' National, designed to absorb smaller coöperatives into one large unit, has been assailed by its opponents, who charge it would result in the loss of direct contact of the farmer-member.

FRAZIER JELKE INDEX SHOWS DROP IN VALUES

The market appraisal of 100 representative common stocks decreased $1,555,559,000 or 7.8 per cent in month of July, to $18,286,575,000 according to a computation prepared by Frazier Jelke & Co.

The same stocks were appraised at $19,842,134,000 on June 30 and at $15,951,646,000 on June 2, the low thus far in the bear market. At the August 1929 peak the appraisal was $43,447,945,000. On a percentage basis the largest decline in July was in the steels, which dropped 17.4 per cent, and the smallest was in the motors, which lost 1.2 per cent. The mines depreciated 16.4 per cent, the chemicals 11.9 per cent, the rails 10.7 per cent, th amusements 10.5 per cent, the equipments 9.8 per cent, the miscellaneous industrials 8.1 per cent, the electrical equipments, 7.7 per cent, the utilities 7.3 per cent, the foods 5.5 per cent, the oils 5 per cent, and the merchandising issues 1.9 per cent, as compared with their bull markets peaks, the largest declines have been in the mines, motors and amusements, while the smallest losses have been in the foods.

The 100 stocks are now appraised at a figure approximately equal to the Aug. 30, 1929 valuation of only eleven constituent issues, namely General Motors, General Electric, U. S. Steel, New York Central, Penna Railroad, Consolidated Gas of New York, Standard Oil of N. J., North American company, Anaconda, Union Carbide, and Woolworth.

Link Belt on 5 Day Week; Makes 8 Pct. Cut in Wages

Wages of factory employés of Link Belt company have been reduced 10 per cent and all of the company's factories and offices have been placed on a five day week basis, effecting a further reduction in pay rolls of 8 per cent, it was announced yesterday.

While office salaries were reduced 10 per cent on Jan. 1, 1931, factory wages have been maintained up to the present time. Total reduction in the income of factory workers as a result of the wage cut and the shortening of working hours will be approximately 18 per cent.

Weekly Debits Decline, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended July 29, by 199 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $986,091,000, a decrease of 6.6 per cent, compared with a week ago [$1,055,259,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$1,280,103,000], a decrease of 23.0 per cent was shown.

Wiggin Sails to Study Germany's Credit Needs

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the governing board of the Chase National bank, sailed today for Europe to undertake his duties as American member of the international banking committee which is to study German credit needs.

"The duties of the committee on which I am to serve, as I understand them," said Mr. Wiggin, "are to inquire into the immediate further credit needs of Germany and to study the possibilities of converting a portion of the short term credits into long term credits.

"It is, of course, too early to make any statement with respect to the studies to be pursued by the committee or its ultimate conclusions."

North American Aviation Reports $540,410 Income

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—North American Aviation, Inc., today reported for the first half of this year net earnings of $540,410, equal to 25½ cents a share, compared with $861,709 for the preceding six months and $1,001,401 in the first half of last year.

C. M. Keys, president, said the decline in earnings was due to two main causes of temporary character and that the decrease in earnings of Eastern Air Transport was due to a reduction in air mail rates which is being overcome by an increase in schedules and in passenger traffic.

Graham-Paige Reports $833,056 Six Months' Loss

Graham-Paige Motors corporation and subsidiaries yesterday reported a net loss for the first half of 1931 of $833,056 after charges, compared with a net loss of $880,960 in the corresponding period last year.

For the June quarter net loss was $654,533, against net loss of $391,480 in the second quarter of 1930.

Current assets as of June 30 were shown at $9,095,931 and current liabilities at $2,895,643, compared with $14,355,599 and $3,652,143 respectively a year earlier.

BOND MARKET'S SALES SLUMP TO LOW FIGURE

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The bond market experienced one of its dullest days this year. Sales totaled $3,472,000 at par value, the smallest total for a short session since Feb. 28 when the turnover totaled $3,400,000. Such dullness is not unusual for a Saturday in midsummer, especially when the market of late has not been inclined toward activity anyway.

However, the market was not exactly a routine affair. The overnight news of the negotiation of an agreement for the purchase and sale of sterling bills among the central banks of France, Great Britain and the United States was followed by unusual activity in United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland 5½s of 1937 and higher prices in them. European obligations generally were strong. Argentine bonds made a group decline ranging upward to 3½ points in some instances.

Domestic corporate issues fluctuated narrowly in dull trading. Railroad and public utility issues made numerous declines but industrial loans were steady or firm. The average price of thirty representative bonds made up of ten issues of each of these three groups was one-tenth of a point lower at 94.5.

The Wabash railway has asked authority from the interstate commerce commission to pledge certain stocks and bonds as security for $10,000,000 of short term notes which it proposes to issue. The proceeds of the notes will be used to repay $8,450,000 of notes held by banks in New York and St. Louis and to provide the Wabash with cash for sinking fund and capital expenditures up to July 1, 1932. The notes will run for not more than one year and will bear 4½ per cent interest.

The collateral pledged will include 258,929 shares of Lehigh Valley common stock, 1,217 shares of American Refrigerator Transit company stock, and 8,250 shares of stock of the New Jersey, Indiana and Illinois railroad.

ILLINOIS AUTO SALES REVEAL GAIN IN JULY

New car sales in Illinois took a spurt upward in July, according to the monthly report of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce showing July total sales of 13,874 new cars, as compared to 11,241 for June. The July sales, however, are 3,010 less than for the same month a year ago. The total brings the number of new cars sold in Illinois for the first seven months of the year up to 88,179 cars, an average of 12,597 cars a month for the period, as compared to 125,847 car sales for the seven months' period in 1930, or an average of 17,987 sales per month. The upward trend for the current month of July over June was interpreted by the chamber as an indication that some measure of confidence is being restored in the minds of buyers. Cook county accounted for 7,296 cars of July's sales.

Packing House Review Finds Business Spotty

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions says:

"Extreme hot weather throughout much of the eastern portion of the country, including the larger consuming sections, caused some irregularity in the markets for the principal meat lines last week. The fresh pork market showed the greatest spottiness, eastern centers failing to readily absorb shipments. Lamb, which is so largely consumed in the east, likewise weakened after a good opening, while veal was a little easier.

"Beef trade reflected a generally fair demand at steady prices. Smoked meats continued to do fairly well for the season. Foreign business was fair. Collections were moderately good."

LOREN MILLER STORE IS SOLD TO GOLDBLATTS

Department Chain Has Five Links.

Purchase of the Loren Miller department store at the corner of Broadway and Lawrence avenue by Goldblatt Brothers was announced last night following completion of negotiations which have been under way for two weeks. Goldblatt Brothers will start operating the store tomorrow.

The Miller store, located in the center of the Uptown business district, is the largest in that area and one of the oldest of the outlying department stores. It has been located in the Wilson avenue district for 35 years, occupying its present five story building, with a frontage of 220 feet on Broadway and 200 feet on Racine avenue, for about twenty years.

Plan Future Expansion.

In connection with the purchase, officials of Goldblatt Brothers revealed that they have purchased real estate south of the building for a contemplated future addition.

Acquisition of the Miller store by the Goldblatt concern, of which Maurice Goldblatt is president and Nathan Goldblatt vice president, gives Goldblatt Bros. its fifth outlying department store. The first store, established 17 years ago, was a small 25 foot shop on West Chicago avenue.

The growth of the first Goldblatt shop into a department store culminated in 1928, when an addition to the new 5 story building on Chicago avenue brought the total frontage to 325 feet. In the same year Goldblatt Bros. bought the Oppenheimer store at Ashland avenue and 47th street. Recently a $450,000 five story annex has been added to this building.

Sales Volume Grows.

In 1929 two more stores were added to the chain. These were the Lederer store at 91st street and Commercial avenue and the Struve store at Lincoln and Belmont avenues. At the same time plans were announced for expansion of this building to give it a frontage of 250 feet on Lincoln avenue.

The Goldblatt firm acquired a large warehouse in the central manufacturing district two years ago to be used as a receiving and distributing center for the stores, for which the total sales volume has grown until in 1930 it was more than $15,000,000.

SHIPMENTS OF FRANKLIN FIRM HIGHER IN JULY

Shipments of Franklin automobiles in July show an increase of 36 per cent over June according to a statement issued by President H. H. Franklin. More than two and one-half times as many dealers' orders were received during the month than in June, while the last week's business showed over $1,000,000 worth of merchandise sold, he said. Mr. Franklin announced that in order to keep pace with increased consumer demand factory production schedule for August is being stepped up considerably over the schedule maintained in July.

Pumps Race as Gov. Murray Seeks $1 Oil

Oklahoma City, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Governor W. H. [Alfalfa Bill] Murray again threw down the gauntlet today, this time for a showdown in his fight to force the major oil purchasing companies to increase the price of crude oil to $1 a barrel.

GOV. W. H. MURRAY.

Although his threat to close wells in all state prorated areas, except stripper wells, had not been issued late this afternoon, the governor said it would come if a price advance was not made tonight.

Oil men could only guess when it would be issued but in a race against it, began early today to pump their allowable August quota under proration before the order went into effect. The governor said the delay in issuance was caused by a necessity to redraft the edict.

At dawn, great valves were turned on in a score of oil fields and frantic race between throbbing pipeline currents and time was on.

Much Gas is Lost.

As valves in fields all over the state released the once precious "black gold" into pipelines, great quantities of gas hissed into the air, never to be recovered. The idea was to get the few dollars that crude at its present low price would bring before Murray's executive order should start the drastic experiment that may determine whether the governor can bring needed price relief through a general closing in of wells.

In phrases of unmistakable meaning, Governor Murray reiterated that his order, when issued, would be backed by troops if necessary with a possible test in the United States Supreme court to determine "whether the eleventh amendment still holds and whether state's sovereignty may be violated."

Stripper Wells Exempt.

Murray announced more than a week ago he would order the wells closed unless prices reached $1 a barrel by tonight. He said only "stripper" wells would be exempt.

The price today remained at levels from 50 cents downward. Crude purchasers gave no indication of willingness to pay more.

The "stripper" wells expected to be exempt from the shutdown order are the producers of ten barrels or less daily which might be ruined by salt water encroachment if kept idle long.

As curtailment of the flow would seriously hamper operations of many refineries, rumors grew of contemplated plans to tap the prolific East Texas pools by pipeline. In the opinion of observers, such action would obviate much of the effectiveness of enforced idleness of Oklahoma wells.

Moody's Makes Survey of 225 Utility Companies

A survey by Moody's, based on a study of 225 utility companies, all of whose bonds are rated "A" or higher, shows that fixed charges were earned by these companies, after allowing for depreciation, on an average of 3.62 times in 1930. This compares with an average of 3.69 in the preceding year and 3.58 in 1928.

BY FRED HARVEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, N. Y., Aug. 1.—What little life there was to today's week-end stock market must be set down to the account of the newly announced $250,000,000 credit by the federal reserve bank and the Bank of France to the Bank of England. Up to the time of the announcement, the session was all but a total loss, with trading at a standstill and prices generally lower from their own weight.

Evidently the speculative community, or what there was of it on hand, saw a glimmer of hope for better conditions abroad through the willingness of the central banks to coöperate in the economic crisis, for business perked up right smartly for a while. Prices continued on the mend right up to the close, although the improvement with most of them was too slow a process to get very far. The gains were largely fractional, in fact, and advances of more than 2 points were very rare.

United States Steel got back above 86, but eased off slightly again, while other pivotals managed to annex plus signs for themselves for the week-end record. American Can, which yesterday sold to the lowest price in two years, recovered nearly a point, and Westinghouse managed to retrieve a fraction of its loss. Other key issues to register gains over the previous closing levels were Allied Chemical, New York Central, General Motors, and Consolidated Gas.

Comment on the showing of Bethlehem Steel, as compared with United States Steel, in the earnings reports just made public this week helped the Schwab-Grace concern to make some progress on the upside. At one time the stock was ahead nearly 3 points, but some selling developed toward the last and wiped out most of this gain.

Rail Issues Quiet.

Railroad shares were generally quiet and few of them registered any wide swings from yesterday's closing figures. The earnings for the railroads of the country for the first half of the year are about 30 per cent under those for the corresponding period of last year on the face of the statements made public this week.

Case Threshing Machine continued under pressure due to the crop situation out west, dropping to a new low of 52½. Talk was heard that the company is in need of new financing as a result of the large credits which the company is still to collect. At its worst today the stock of this thresh-

FIND SENTIMENT GAINING TO STOP COPPER OUTPUT

Seen Best Way to Reduce Huge Metal Stocks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 1.—Since the failure of the conference a little more than a month ago to agree on a further restriction of output, sentiment in the copper industry for a complete shutdown of production for a few months has been gaining ground rapidly.

In view of the low level of copper consumption, together with the unfavorable outlook for a material increase in the near future, Wall street hears that several important copper executives are beginning to realize more and more that a complete shutdown of production such as was resorted to in 1920 is virtually the only way for the industry to establish itself again on a sound operating basis. In this way, it is asserted, the huge stocks of the metal above ground, which preclude a fair price for copper, would be reduced to a normal basis.

Reason Conference Failed.

The main reason for the failure of the last conference to agree on a further restriction program of 20,000 tons monthly was due to the belief by some that it was inadequate. Such a program, it is claimed, would not have resulted in an increase of the price of the metal while at the same time it would have increased the cost of production, which becomes greater in nearly every instance with a decrease in operating capacity.

At this meeting there was some sentiment for a complete shutdown, but with an advance in the price of the metal at that time due to the effort of President Hoover to obtain a debt holiday on international obligations growing out of the world war, the conference broke up without taking any action.

At present the situation in the copper industry is just drifting, with conditions gradually getting worse, an important copper executive said this week. Stocks above ground, which are already at the highest level in the history of the industry, are steadily accumulating and prices for the metal are establishing new low levels almost daily. Additional production from the newly developed mines in Africa recently came on the market and further additional supplies of the metal from that source are expected around January next.

With the consumption of copper at unusually low levels, due to the worldwide depression and financial unsettlement of Europe, it is maintained that something drastic must be resorted to by the producers or else further unsettlement in the industry is inevitable.

One of the arguments against a shutdown in the industry now is that there is no use of clarifying the situation by a shutdown so that the newly developed mines in Africa can start operating on a more favorable price basis next year.

Not Blamed for Conditions.

In this connection it is pointed out that, although these new African mines may be responsible for what happens in the future, they are not responsible for the conditions that now exist in the industry. It is understood that the interests responsible for the new copper developments in Africa would be willing to start production on a reduced basis provided a shutdown arrangement for a few months could be agreed upon.

Recently a few mines in this country have voluntarily shut down operations. The Magma Copper company, considered a low cost producer, has shut down for three months, partly, it is said, as an example for the rest of the industry to follow. United Verde has been shut down for some time because it would not sell any copper below 12 cents a pound. Some other mines have also closed down because operations at the present price for copper are not profitable.

Unemployment Problem.

One of the main objections to a shutdown just now is the effect that it would have on the unemployment situation. Also, the copper companies do not wish to see their laboring forces scattered, which their executives believe would result if a complete shutdown for any length of time was brought about. The Magma Copper company, in order to keep its employés intact, is using as many as possible on development work. The management has also assured them that all will receive one-half of the pay normally received while the company was in operation.

DISMISSES SUIT OVER MOFFAT TUNNEL BONDS

Denver, Colo., Aug. 1.—Suit of eastern bondholders to force payment of interest due on Moffat Tunnel supplemental bonds and establish their validity has been dismissed in federal court here by District Judge J. Foster Symes.

Judge Symes' action followed a memorandum opinion he issued a week ago in which he declined to accept jurisdiction, at least until similar litigation in state courts had been settled.

Litigation pending in the state courts is the suit of the Denver Land company to have the bonds declared invalid. This suit was decided in favor of the Moffat Tunnel district in District court here and the $8,750,000 issue of supplemental bonds declared valid. Attorneys for the land company have announced an appeal to the Colorado Supreme court.

Illinois Central Starts New Bus Service Today

The Central Transportation company of Illinois, newly organized subsidiary of the Illinois Central railroad, will inaugurate a new bus service between Kankakee and Matteson and 211th street today. Matteson is the southern terminus of the electrified suburban line.

Combination rail-bus schedules, using the high speed electric suburban trains between Chicago and Matteson, and the motor bus service between Matteson and Kankakee, will provide a run of approximately two hours between Randolph street and Kankakee.

TIMBER BOARD IN REPORT URGES CURB ON OUTPUT

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—Restriction of production and easier mortgage terms for small home buildings have been reported by President Hoover's timber conservation board to be the best available means of assisting the lumber industry.

The board, reporting to Secretary Lamont, its chairman, said that during the remainder of 1931 at least two and three-quarters billion feet of lumber should be drawn from surplus stocks and production limited "to the minimum which financial and community exigencies permit."

The report asked that finance companies consider the practicability of better coördinated methods of deferred financing as a means of "converting potential demand for building into active demand, especially for farm buildings and small homes."

Due to the depression of farm prices and oversupply of business and factory buildings, the board said the most practicable plan of increasing lumber use appeared to be through construction of small homes.

Chicago Curb Exchange Stocks

Mild week-end selling appeared in the Chicago Curb list yesterday and the final bell found most of the traded stocks in fractionally lower ground. Mining stocks, which have recently been leading in volume, were quiet and somewhat easier.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Cotton goods were inactive in the unfinished division today. Quoted prices on many cloths were at the lowest points of the year. Unfinished goods were selling moderately. New offerings of wool and rayon mixed fabrics were attracting attention and larger use of spun rayon was noted. Silk was quiet, silk merchandise was in fair demand, chiefly satins and canton failles. Burlaps were quiet with some inquiry for October-December shipment. The new carpet season will open Monday at lower prices quoted on odd size rugs.

WILL MOVE OFFICES.

Newton Steel company plans to move its executive and principal sales offices from Youngstown to Detroit and its general office to Monroe, Mich. The Detroit office will be established by Sept. 1.

Unusual Opportunity

An established Investment House with a program for the redistribution of high grade securities selling at present bargain prices has openings for a few men and women of character and education who would be interested in making a permanent connection on an attractive commission basis.

If you have had a broad experience in other lines and a large acquaintance or otherwise possess the necessary qualifications, this connection affords an opportunity to learn the investment banking business. At the same time a substantial income is assured.

In replying state in detail age, extent of education and business experience, together with at least three references.

To those qualified an early interview will be granted and all communications will be held strictly confidential.

Offerings of Bonds, Notes 43 Millions

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 1.—New security financing here this week amounted to but $43,592,000, consisting of bonds and notes, of which the latter, due in one year or less, accounted for $20,749,350. Last week total bond and note financing aggregated $83,887,500, and during the corresponding week last year the total was $123,460,400.

As was the case during the two weeks immediately previous, this week's new offerings consisted of public utility and state and municipal issues. The new utility issues, aggregating $25,000,000, consisted of but three issues—viz.: $10,000,000 for the West Penn Power company, $9,000,000 for the Pennsylvania Electric company, and $6,000,000 for the Delaware Power and Light company.

The two largest state and municipal issues marketed this week were notes issues, $5,500,000 bond anticipation notes of the state of New York, due Oct. 5, 1931, and $5,549,350 Westchester county 1.88 per cent certificates, due June 5, 1932, the former offered on a 0.625 per cent basis and the latter at a price to yield 1.65 per cent.

The new offerings of bonds by groups for this and last week follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Public utility......	$25,000,000	$65,500,000
State and municipal	18,592,208	12,897,000
Foreign	....	5,490,500
Total	$43,592,208	$83,887,500

The downward trend of bond prices this week on the average, particularly in the case of railroad and industrial bonds, as far as domestic issues were concerned, operated to bar new rail and industrial financing, since it is the desire of these corporations to do long term rather than short term financing. The further upsets in foreign bond prices this week precludes of coursse any new long term foreign financing other than Canadian for some time to come.

CITES GROWTH OF NATURAL GAS PIPE SYSTEMS

Last year approximately two trillion [2,000,000,000,000] cubic feet of natural gas were produced in the United States, amounting to three-quarters of the total gas consumed, according to John J. Bergen, authority on natural gas securities.

"The market for natural gas is expanding rapidly and by the end of the next ten years," says Mr. Bergen, "the United States will have a 150,000 mile system of natural gas lines serving practically every section of the country, both rural and urban. Last year over 8,000 miles of natural gas lines were laid, for which the cost of the pipe alone amounted to over $100,000,000. At the present time there are under construction more than 11,000 miles of 10 to 30 inch main trunk lines and fifty compressor stations. It is expected that the outlay by the industry during 1931 will be around $250,000,000 for pipe alone.

"The total length of pipe lines in the United States is now over 100,000 miles, and it is estimated that the industry represents an investment of $2,000,000,000, to which hundreds of millions of dollars are being added each year," continues Mr. Bergen. "It is estimated that the industry now serves 16,000,000 people and 8,000 large industrial plants embraced in 3,000 communities in thirty states. The markets for natural gas are rapidly expanding.

"For many years the natural gas industry did not attempt to reach distant markets. Up to five years ago the longest pipe line was only 200 miles in length," continues Mr. Bergen. "Now a pipe line 1,000 miles in length is nearing completion. Until a few years ago a pipe line pressure of 150 pounds per square inch was high. One of the largest pipe lines is now working on a pressure of 600 pounds and it is expected that 1,000 pounds pressure will be common in the future. Through the use of higher pressures to drive the gas along distant markets are opened up to the industry."

The St. Paul system for the first twenty-one days of July handled 84,704 revenue freight cars, against 102,338 in the same period of last year.

CANADIAN BANK DEBITS FOR JUNE SHOW BIG DROP

In June, "reflecting inactivity of the month," a dominion bureau of statistics report stated, financial transfers in Canada amounted to $2,693,500,000, a drop, after seasonal adjustments of 10.4 per cent from May.

Bank debits of $2,693,500,000 in June compared with $3,397,700,000 in the same month of 1930, a decline of 20.7 per cent.

Bank debits during the first half of 1931 were $16,425,000,000, a decline of 13.7 per cent from the same period of last year. Declines were general in the five economic areas of Canada. The maritime provinces made relatively the best showing, the recession being limited to 5.7 per cent.

NORTH AMER. LIGHT RISES 2½ POINTS IN QUIET CHICAGO TRADE

Stocks maintained a steady tone in yesterday's quiet week-end trading session on the Chicago exchange. U. S. Radio and North American Light and Power, both of which made headway on the upside on comparatively heavy turnover, were speculative features of the day.

The utility issue turned over to the extent of 10,000 shares, advancing 2½ points to 2¼, which is within a fraction of the best price it has sold at during 1931. Other utility shares, including the Insull stocks, held around their previous closing prices on a meager volume of sales.

U. S. Radio climbed to 33⅝, reflecting the strong market support which it has been receiving from professional sources for several days. Marshall Field common was in slightly better demand, improving a fraction following the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend by directors. Only 700 shares of Grigsby appeared on the tape following the publication of the company's annual report which showed a net loss of $2,169,000 for the fiscal year ended May 31. The price was unchanged at 3.

According to a compilation by Paul H. Davis & Co. fifty representative stocks traded in on the exchange last week showed a depreciation in market value of $11,219,766, or less than one per cent as compared with the closing prices of the preceding week. The total market value of these issues at the close yesterday was $1,956,059,143, as compared with $1,967,278,909 at the close of the preceding week.

MARTIN J. INSULL SEES INDUSTRY LEAVING CITIES

Power Makes Possible Rural Development.

Industry, headed for more than a century toward concentration in the cities, is likely to reinhabit the countryside, Martin J. Insull, president of the Middle West Utilities company, predicts in a symposium for the Engineering foundation on "Benefits from Engineering Progress."

The industrial evolution of the nation need not be viewed with despair, according to Mr. Insull, who points out that industry is retracing its steps and is again tending toward diffusion. Just as power changed the decentralized industry of 1731 into a centralized industry by 1831, he declares, power in 1931 appears to be changing industry back into a decentralized structure.

"For some peculiar reason, in comparisons of present day life with that of preceding times, it seems to be assumed that progress invariably moves only in one direction," Mr. Insull says, discussing "1731-1831-1931." "This, of course, is not necessarily true. We see this easily if we review the history of the primary factor underlying the industrial changes of the twentieth century and the two centuries which preceded it.

Power Primary Factor.

"That primary factor is power. Our industry, with its machinery, its mass production and its teeming cities, is an outgrowth of changes in the nature of our power resources. The life which it supplanted, the rural life, likewise was determined by the nature of its power resources of the time.

"The human race's work and welfare naturally varies according to the amount of energy at its command. If energy is limited to human and animal muscle, depending upon vegetation for its fuel, it sets certain limits on the amount of production that is possible. It likewise dictates a dominantly agricultural mode of existence. On the other hand, if energy is derived from coal and water, the limits upon production tend to disappear, and the importance of agriculture diminishes.

"If we examine the nature of our energy resources in 1931 and compare them with the energy resources of 1831 and of 1731, we shall see rather clearly how the form of industrial structure has always been dictated by the energy factor. And we shall see, if we examine it closely, that the direction of these changes is not always the same.

Population Diffused in 1731.

"The year 1731 was one in which population was widely diffused. Why? Because it was necessary to derive from agriculture the greater amount of the energy necessary to do the world's work; and agriculture is necessarily a scattered activity. Furthermore, without mechanical power there was little incentive to develop machinery or organize people into factories.

"Violent changes occurred in the following hundred years. Freed from the definite limitations of human energy, and with the infinite resources of the coal pit at its command instead of the meager annual crops, industrial production multiplied. To take advantage of this greater energy supply, it was necessary to concentrate production, because the power supply itself was concentrated.

"Great cities drew population from the countryside. The countryside could spare it, because agriculture no longer had to produce the entire energy supply, and because agriculture itself simultaneously became more efficient.

"That trend toward concentration, when superficially considered, seems to have continued to the present day. There are, to be sure, ample evidences of it. But there are still more striking evidences to the contrary—evidences that industry is tending once more away from concentration and toward diffusion.

Power Brings Changes.

"These changes, too, are concerned with the nature of our energy supply. Power changed the decentralized industry of 1731 into a centralized industry by 1831. In 1931 power appears to be changing industry back into a decentralized structure. The power supply of today is widely distributed. Electricity is available in any quantity at virtually every point on the map, whereas its predecessor, steam power, was to be had at relatively few points.

"The same is true of transportation, which is, after all, another form of power. And industry is not slow to recognize the advantages of decentralization in terms of lower costs and improved working conditions.

"There is hope in this for those who view our industrial evolution with despair. Let them not conclude that, because we were headed toward industrial concentration for a century or more, we cannot reverse the direction of our development. We need not necessarily expect still more congested cities, still higher skyscrapers, and a depopulated countryside.

"The industry of the future is more likely to reinhabit the countryside; to possess all the advantages of power machinery without the disadvantages of congestion which have hitherto accompanied it."

been on the verge of a breakdown for several weeks, into the most powerful commercial bank in Germany.

Feared Great Crash.

The main reason the government agreed to back the Dresdner bank on such a lavish scale is that most of the coöperative associations and vital industries in Germany have been working with this bank, and it was feared that even a partial breakdown would virtually ruin hundreds of thousands of persons. This, the government felt, could not be risked at the present moment.

The government also decreed that there shall be no restrictions placed on payments of interest or the amortization of foreign credits which remain in Germany under the financial status quo agreement reached a few days ago with foreign bankers. But, the government decreed, no foreign currency will be advanced by the Reichsbank for the repayment of these loans should they be canceled before the time agreed on by the foreign creditors.

Another decree tonight prescribes banks next week. Restrictions on savbank next week. Restrictions on savings accounts will be maintained throughout the coming week, during which depositors will be allowed to withdraw only $12.

Regulate Money Deals.

A central office for the administration of foreign currency was created through an emergency decree issued shortly before midnight. The decree was an 11 page closely typewritten document, regulating all dealings in foreign currency.

Whoever desires to purchase foreign currency must provide proof that he needs it for a reason of vital importance to the nation, and local finance offices, vested with extraordinary powers, will decide whether the needs are vital or not. Foreign currency can be obtained for the payment of interest or the amortization of foreign long term loans. All option business in foreign currency and precious metal is forbidden.

Germany is not allowed to extend credits in reichsmarks to persons living abroad. The document provides for ten years' imprisonment and confiscation of all property for violations of the decree.

"Santa Claus Is Dead."

The real estate mortgage bond market today is suffering from lack of public confidence. This lack of confidence is not due solely to the defaulting of numerous issues. It springs from a confusion in the investor's mind, an inability to distinguish between the good and the bad, and from a welter of misinformation peddled by sharp traders whose game is to frighten the unwary bondholder into trading what he has for something of less value.

It is no wonder that uncertainty exists in the mind of the bondholder. He finds it difficult to get the information that he needs. Even if a bond is in good standing he may have trouble in getting facts about it. Either the borrower is slow to provide the facts, or the underwriter, his sales reduced, is reluctant to spend money in gathering and disseminating data to his old customers.

For the guidance of investors who may make costly missteps through ignorance the Louisville Better Business bureau urges the following precautions:

1. Before giving up bonds you hold, get impartial information as to their present status and market. The price may be down, but the value good.
2. Before trading, check the merit of the issue offered. Don't jump from the frying pan, real or imaginary, into the fire.
3. Check up the standing of the house offering the exchange and the authority of the man who calls on you.
4. If asked to deposit bonds with a protective committee, check up on the members of the committee. Sometimes there are several committees. A good one may help you. A poor one may cost you money and handicap those who have your interest at heart.
5. Beware the man who carries his wares with him. Few good houses run the risk of holdups. They prefer to clear your securities and theirs through banks. The crook is more afraid of the bank or broker than of the holdup man.
6. Beware the man who first says your bonds are worthless and then offers you 100 per cent for them in exchange for something "as good as gold." Santa Claus is dead.
7. Beware deals in which your defaulted bonds are acceptable as "down payment." The balance you promise to pay is usually more than a fair price, and you may be sued for it.
8. There is more danger in closing a deal without investigation than in a brief delay.
9. Good houses welcome investigation. It's not always wise to follow the salesman's advice as to where you check on his statements.

CAUSES OF OIL DIFFICULTIES OF NATION OUTLINED

Austin, Tex., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—One of the features of the inquiry which the legislature has been conducting into the oil industry was the mass of statistical information in regard to production, prices, and other branches of the business which was given in the testimony of William R. Boyd Jr. of New York, executive vice president of the American Petroleum institute.

He said that since the advent of the petroleum industry, more than seventy years ago, there has been steady improvement in every department of its activity except in the all important particular of the relation of the producer to his immediate territorial surroundings and competitors. Competition starts with the struggle to obtain leases of oil producing land.

"The fundamental difficulty with oil production is not that we have too much oil for the nation's future needs, but that we possess and exercise, individually, the unrestricted power to produce too much oil at a given time," Mr. Boyd declared.

He asserted that prohibitive laws and competitive conditions prevent the industry from solving its own problems. Unnecessary drilling must be discouraged. Proration and fair ratable taking of oil must be established and preserved as a permanent policy, he said.

Peak in 1929.

"The year 1929 witnessed the peak production for all time in the United States," Mr. Boyd told the investigating committee. "A daily average production of 2,973,000 barrels was reach about Sept. 1, 1929. The year ended with an increase in crude storage of 35,816,000 barrels. There was a slight decline in imports, but a large increase in both domestic and export demand for crude. The substantial increase in domestic demand proved to have resulted in the building up of a large surplus of gasoline which depressed the refined market.

"The net change for the year indicates an increase in the average price per barrel of 10 cents. The small increase instead of a decrease in average price is probably accounted for because during seven months of the year the posted price was at a higher figure than at any time during the previous year. The large increase in gasoline consumption, which continued well into the third quarter of the year, stimulated the refiners' demand for crude. However, beginning with the end of the third quarter a sharp and unexpected drop in gasoline consumption took place which resulted in the large gasoline stock addition referred to.

Demand Shows Decline.

"The year 1930 was the first year since 1918, when complete crude oil statistics first became available, to show a decline instead of an increase in the total demand for crude oil. Demand dropped from 1,050,000,000 in 1929 to 978,163,000 barrels in 1930. This was the direct result of the tendency of refiners to decrease crude runs to stills in an effort to reduce the large amount of gasoline in storage due to the gasoline overproduction in the fall and winter of 1929 and the spring of 1930.

"However, the year 1930 also witnessed the withdrawal from crude oil storage of almost 20,000,000 barrels despite the declining crude market and the plentiful supply of new oil available. An unprecedented decline in demand for gasoline and refined products, intense competition for gasoline gallonage, and reduced revenue from the sale of products and reduced cash positions of refiners undoubtedly necessitated the conservation of their cash and forced, in many cases, the withdrawal by them of high cost crude from storage despite the plentiful supply of low priced crude available.

"The year 1930 was a year of continued decreases in crude prices. The year opened with 36 degree gravity, Mid-Continent crude quoted at $1.45, the highest posted price since March 12, 1927. The year ended with a posted price of 95 cents, a decline of 50 cents during the year. In the latter part of 1930 the east Texas field was opened."

GERMANY SILENT ON U.S. OFFER TO SELL HER WHEAT ON CREDIT

Washington, D. C., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—No answer to the American offer to sell Germany farm board wheat and cotton was received today.

The willingness of the board to carry through such a sale on long term credits was expressed by Chairman James C. Stone in the following statement:

"The farm board has no definite proposals before it from the German government, but if it would aid Germany and if it would increase consumption of American agricultural commodities, the farm board would authorize the stabilization corporations to sell Germany on credit terms."

U. G. I. EARNINGS IN JUNE QUARTER ARE $9,020,779

New York, Aug. 1.—United Gas Improvement company today reported for the June quarter earnings of $9,020,779 applicable to U. G. I. capital stocks, compared with $9,500,186 in the like quarter of 1930.

The figures included earnings from subsidiary companies acquired during the period, excluding Philadelphia Gas Works company, only from date of acquisition and do not include nonrecurring income. Per share earnings for the period this year amounted to 35 cents on the common stock outstanding at the end of the period, against 39 cents a share in the June quarter last year.

ALTORFER SIGNS CONTRACT WITH WESTINGHOUSE

Signing of a contract between Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company for manufacture of washing machines by Altorfer Bros. company of Peoria has been announced.

This marks the entrance of Westinghouse in the electric washing machine field. Three models will be made for Westinghouse by Altorfer. Altorfer factories will be closed two weeks beginning Aug. 5 for repairs and tooling up for the new production.

Directors of Altorfer Bros. company have voted to omit the regular quarterly dividend of 35 cents a share on the common stock, due Aug. 1.

Hear of New Auburn Model.

Evidently the pool supposed to be working in Chrysler was giving itself a rest today. The shares sold off nearly a half point. Other motors were firm. Auburn jumped ahead about 3 points following the announcement that it is planning to put out a new model.

Close students of the market are of the opinion that a test of the early June low levels, in other words, the lows of the bear market to date, is near at hand. During the last few days there has been growing evidence of a prospective breaking of the spell of lethargy which has hung over the list for a fortnight. The larger professionals evidently are finding the current activity trying on the nerves, and, having rested from their labors for a period, may be expected to test the situation. The market itself, particularly in the closing days of the week when a scattering of stocks has been singled out for special pressure, would seem to indicate that a "selling climax" may be witnessed soon.

Mexican Cost of Living Seen Bounding Upward

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 1.—(AP)—A general increase in prices in Mexico City and other parts of the country, following upon the fall of the exchange rate of the silver peso against gold and the dollar, reached the point today where suggestions were made to the government to establish regulating committees which would have power to fix prices.

An increase in the prices of imported goods was expected as a result of the jump in the dollar exchange rate, but prices of domestic articles, including foods and other necessaries, are also rising, threatening materially to increase the cost of living.

New York Clearing House Makes Weekly Statement

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House shows as follows: Total surplus and undivided profits $1,198,758,400 unchanged. Total net demand deposits [average] $15,595,000 decrease. Time deposits [average] $2,761,000 decrease. Clearings week ending today $4,217,776,705. Clearings week ending July 25, $4,041,706,429.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Bleachable cottonseed oil closed easy today, 5@20 points net decline and at new lows for the season for October, January, and March. Sales were 12 contracts, equivalent to 1,800 barrels. The easier cotton market and the favorable cotton weather brought out scattered liquidation, especially in October. Crude oil was nominal. Bleachable spot and September closed 6.50c; December, 5.65c; January, 5.85c; March, 5.90c. Prime summer yellow contracts were neglected, closing as follows: Spot, 6.50c; September, 6.50c; December, 5.60c; January, 5.30c.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday. Cattle, 18,000; hogs, 36,000; sheep, 10,000.

Outlet for light weight hogs narrowed abruptly late in the week and top prices took a nose dive on yesterday's session. Stock averaging under 225 lbs showed losses of fully 35@50c and some of the lightest are selling 75@85c lower than two days ago.

Many of the best hogs are being carried on $1.00 lower bids in hopes that the country will hold back supplies next week. The slashing of light hog prices spread over the whole country on the week-end session. Wires from leading points in the west quoted extreme top hogs down to $7.00 at many places. Only two lots of light weights at Chicago sold above $7.50 yesterday, the practical top. One lot early in the day reached $7.90. The general average declined 25c at $6.25.

There was a decrease in hog receipts last week, which was accompanied by an advance in the wholesale market for fresh pork loins and good eastern demand for top classes. Until late in the week when the market suffered a setback, activity featured trading, particularly in lighter weight stock.

Sharp gains were scored, the market at the high point of the week standing 50c to $1.00 above the low point of the preceding week. Light weights sold up to $8.40 in midweek, against $7.60 at the low time a week ago and $6.20 at the low time last May.

The week's general average price moved up to $6.50, but is still $2.15 lower than a year ago, and $4.35 under two years ago. Smaller local houses, among the most aggressive buyers on the upturn, balked at paying additional advances toward the end of the week.

Hog Futures Dull.

Light weight hogs for September delivery were offered at $9.00 on the futures market yesterday, but there were no bids made and the market was practically at a standstill. Mediums for September were offered at $7.75. December medium and heavy were offered at $6.90.

Cattle prices averaged $8.10 last week, the highest since week ending April 4. There have been only five weekly averages above the $9.00 line this year. Prevailing quotations are $1.10 lower than a year ago. A month ago cattle were selling $3.00 lower than in 1930 and two months ago cattle showed a decline of almost $5.00, compared with the same week in 1930.

Receipts were larger during the week, but demand was broad and local outlet for beef was much better than usual. Larger houses were some of the strongest competitors for well finished steers and yearlings. Buying on the wholesale market shows a decided preference for lighter weight cuts, but the scarcity of prime corn fed steers has elevated 1200@1500 lb steers above the $8.00 line and to the highest point in recent weeks.

Lambs Average Higher.

Lambs averaged higher on smaller receipts during the past week, but finished in a slump with a big share of the earlier gain erased. Prices for the whole week averaged $7.35, against $7.00 last week, $8.50 a year ago and $13.10 two years ago. Compared with a year ago the lamb market makes a more favorable showing than it did early in June, when prices were running $3.50@4.00 lower than in 1930.

Despite the serious drought reported in some parts of the west where a record crop of lambs has been produced this year, supplies are smaller than in 1930 and 1929. Only 52,500 arrived at Chicago a year ago and 62,900 two years ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 36,000 hogs and 10,000 sheep, against 18,035 cattle, 29,612 hogs, 7,856 sheep a week ago, and 12,806 cattle, 29,999 hogs and 7,747 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 37,000 cattle, 110,000 hogs and 65,000 sheep, against 38,305 cattle, 114,895 hogs, and 57,206 sheep a year ago, and 36,184 cattle, 121,955 hogs, and 73,365 sheep two years ago.

COTTON DROPS AGAIN

The first day of the 1931-'32 cotton season finds cotton prices off around $20.00 a bale from the season's high on the near months, and the trade facing a discouraging statistical situation.

All markets opened weak and lower and continued downward to the close which was at net losses on futures of 10@20 points at Chicago, 5@18 points at New York, and 4@13 at New Orleans. Hester reports a loss of over 2,000,000 bales in world's consumption of cotton, with a carryover of 9,130,090 bales compared with 6,344,000 bales a year ago, and predicts a crop of 13,893,000 bales or a slight decrease from the official harvested the previous season. Prices showed losses of 10 points at New York and New Orleans, the former closing at 8.15c and the latter at 8.00c, with Houston 7.95c, and Galveston 8.05c. Prices follow:

CORN AND WHEAT PRICES GAIN IN SHORT SESSION

September Futures Are Trading Feature.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A greater disposition to work on the constructive side of the grain markets, particularly corn, featured yesterday's abbreviated session. Sentiment, although mixed, leaned more to corn, the market being oversold for September, and an advance of 3½c was made, with a close at 50½@50⅝c, while December gained only ⅛c and closed at 54½@54⅝c.

A new all time low was made on September wheat at the opening, 49½c. A rally followed and the close was at 50½@50⅝c, a gain of ½c. December finished at 54½@54⅝c, a net gain of ⅜c. Oats closed ⅛@⅝c higher and rye ⅜@½c higher.

The week was one of unusual excitement, with all time low records being established by wheat, with the close 1⅝@1½c lower than a week ago. A squeeze in July corn was one of the biggest surprises the trade had, with an advance of nearly 20c. New lows were made on September and December early in the week, with September up 4c at the last and December off ½c. Oats were 1@1½c lower and rye unchanged to ⅛c lower. Lard lost 5@32½c, the latter on December, and bellies gained 2½c.

Might Improve Trade.

Confirmation of recent reports that German interests were in the market for a good part of the government's supply of wheat, provided credits can be arranged, was taken by Chicago wheat traders as indicating the possibility of the government being able to sell a considerable part of its holdings abroad. This, it was said, would change the entire situation in North America and on confirmation of a reduction in acreage that the trade looks for a better trade would result.

Trading in all grains yesterday was lighter, with a general disposition to even up for the week. The coming week is expected to be full of more uncertainties than usual. Crop reports from private statisticians are expected to be bullish on spring wheat and bearish on winter, the latter being estimated at around 720,000,000 to 735,000,000 bu, with spring at 120,000,000 to 138,000,000 bu. Corn estimates are for a big drop, one estimate being for a loss of over 100,000,000 bu, with a range from 2,865,000,000 to 2,900,000,000 bu.

Starts General Buying.

Good buying of September corn, credited to a large local operator, took the surplus off the market and started general buying, with an advance of 3⅝c from Friday's close to a finish around the top. The cash market was well sustained, with contract grades around 63c or better, or around 10c over September, and it was said the cash corn taken in by Thomas M. Howell was not likely to come out in the near future, and with small receipts there was an absence of selling pressure.

Oats were bought by small cash interests and sold by hedgers, with the market following the upturn in corn.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders, at the close on Saturday, were disposed to look for a better market for wheat and corn on Monday, unless there are good general rains over the entire spring wheat and corn belt. The short interest, it was said, had evened up and traders were in good condition to follow the news. With wheat lower than any of the present traders have known, there is a disposition to buy on the weak spots, around the 50c level. An impression prevails among the corn traders that prices are to work irregularly higher.

Harvey S. Williams, crop expert of Thomson & McKinnon, started on his annual investigation of the corn crop throughout the leading corn belt states. He expressed himself as optimistic on both wheat and corn, believing that both grains have been badly damaged in spots by excessive heat and drought.

"Never before in this generation has such an attractive opportunity existed to buy wheat at prices that guarantee profits," said George E. Saunders of J. S. Bache & Co. Economic laws will reduce acreage tremendously. Existing values will ruin any producer who attempts to grow. This great bargain is already appealing to a number of investors. The rank and file, however, evidently prefer to await proof that our winter wheat acreages have positively eliminated the United States as an exporter."

LARD STOCKS GAIN

An increase of around 13,500,000 lbs in lard stocks in Chicago for the month came after the close, while the trade was figuring on only 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 lbs above a month ago. The trade in lard yesterday was small, with commission houses and shorts buying and packers doing the selling and closed with net gains of 10@12½c on the most active futures. Liverpool lard was 9d to 1s lower. Bellies were unchanged to 5s higher. Exports of lard were 7,500 lbs, and of bacon 53,200 lbs. Hog prices were sharply lower, with good receipts estimated for the coming week. Cash trade was quiet. Prices follow:

HAY RECEIPTS SMALL

The end of the week run of hay was a light one and rather closely reflected the result of recent advice given out by local commission houses relative to curtailment of country loadings for the immediate future. Receipts were: timothy, 6 cars and 1 each of southwestern prairie and wheat straw. Market still more or less unsettled.

The FIRST LADY BRANDON

by Robert Hichens

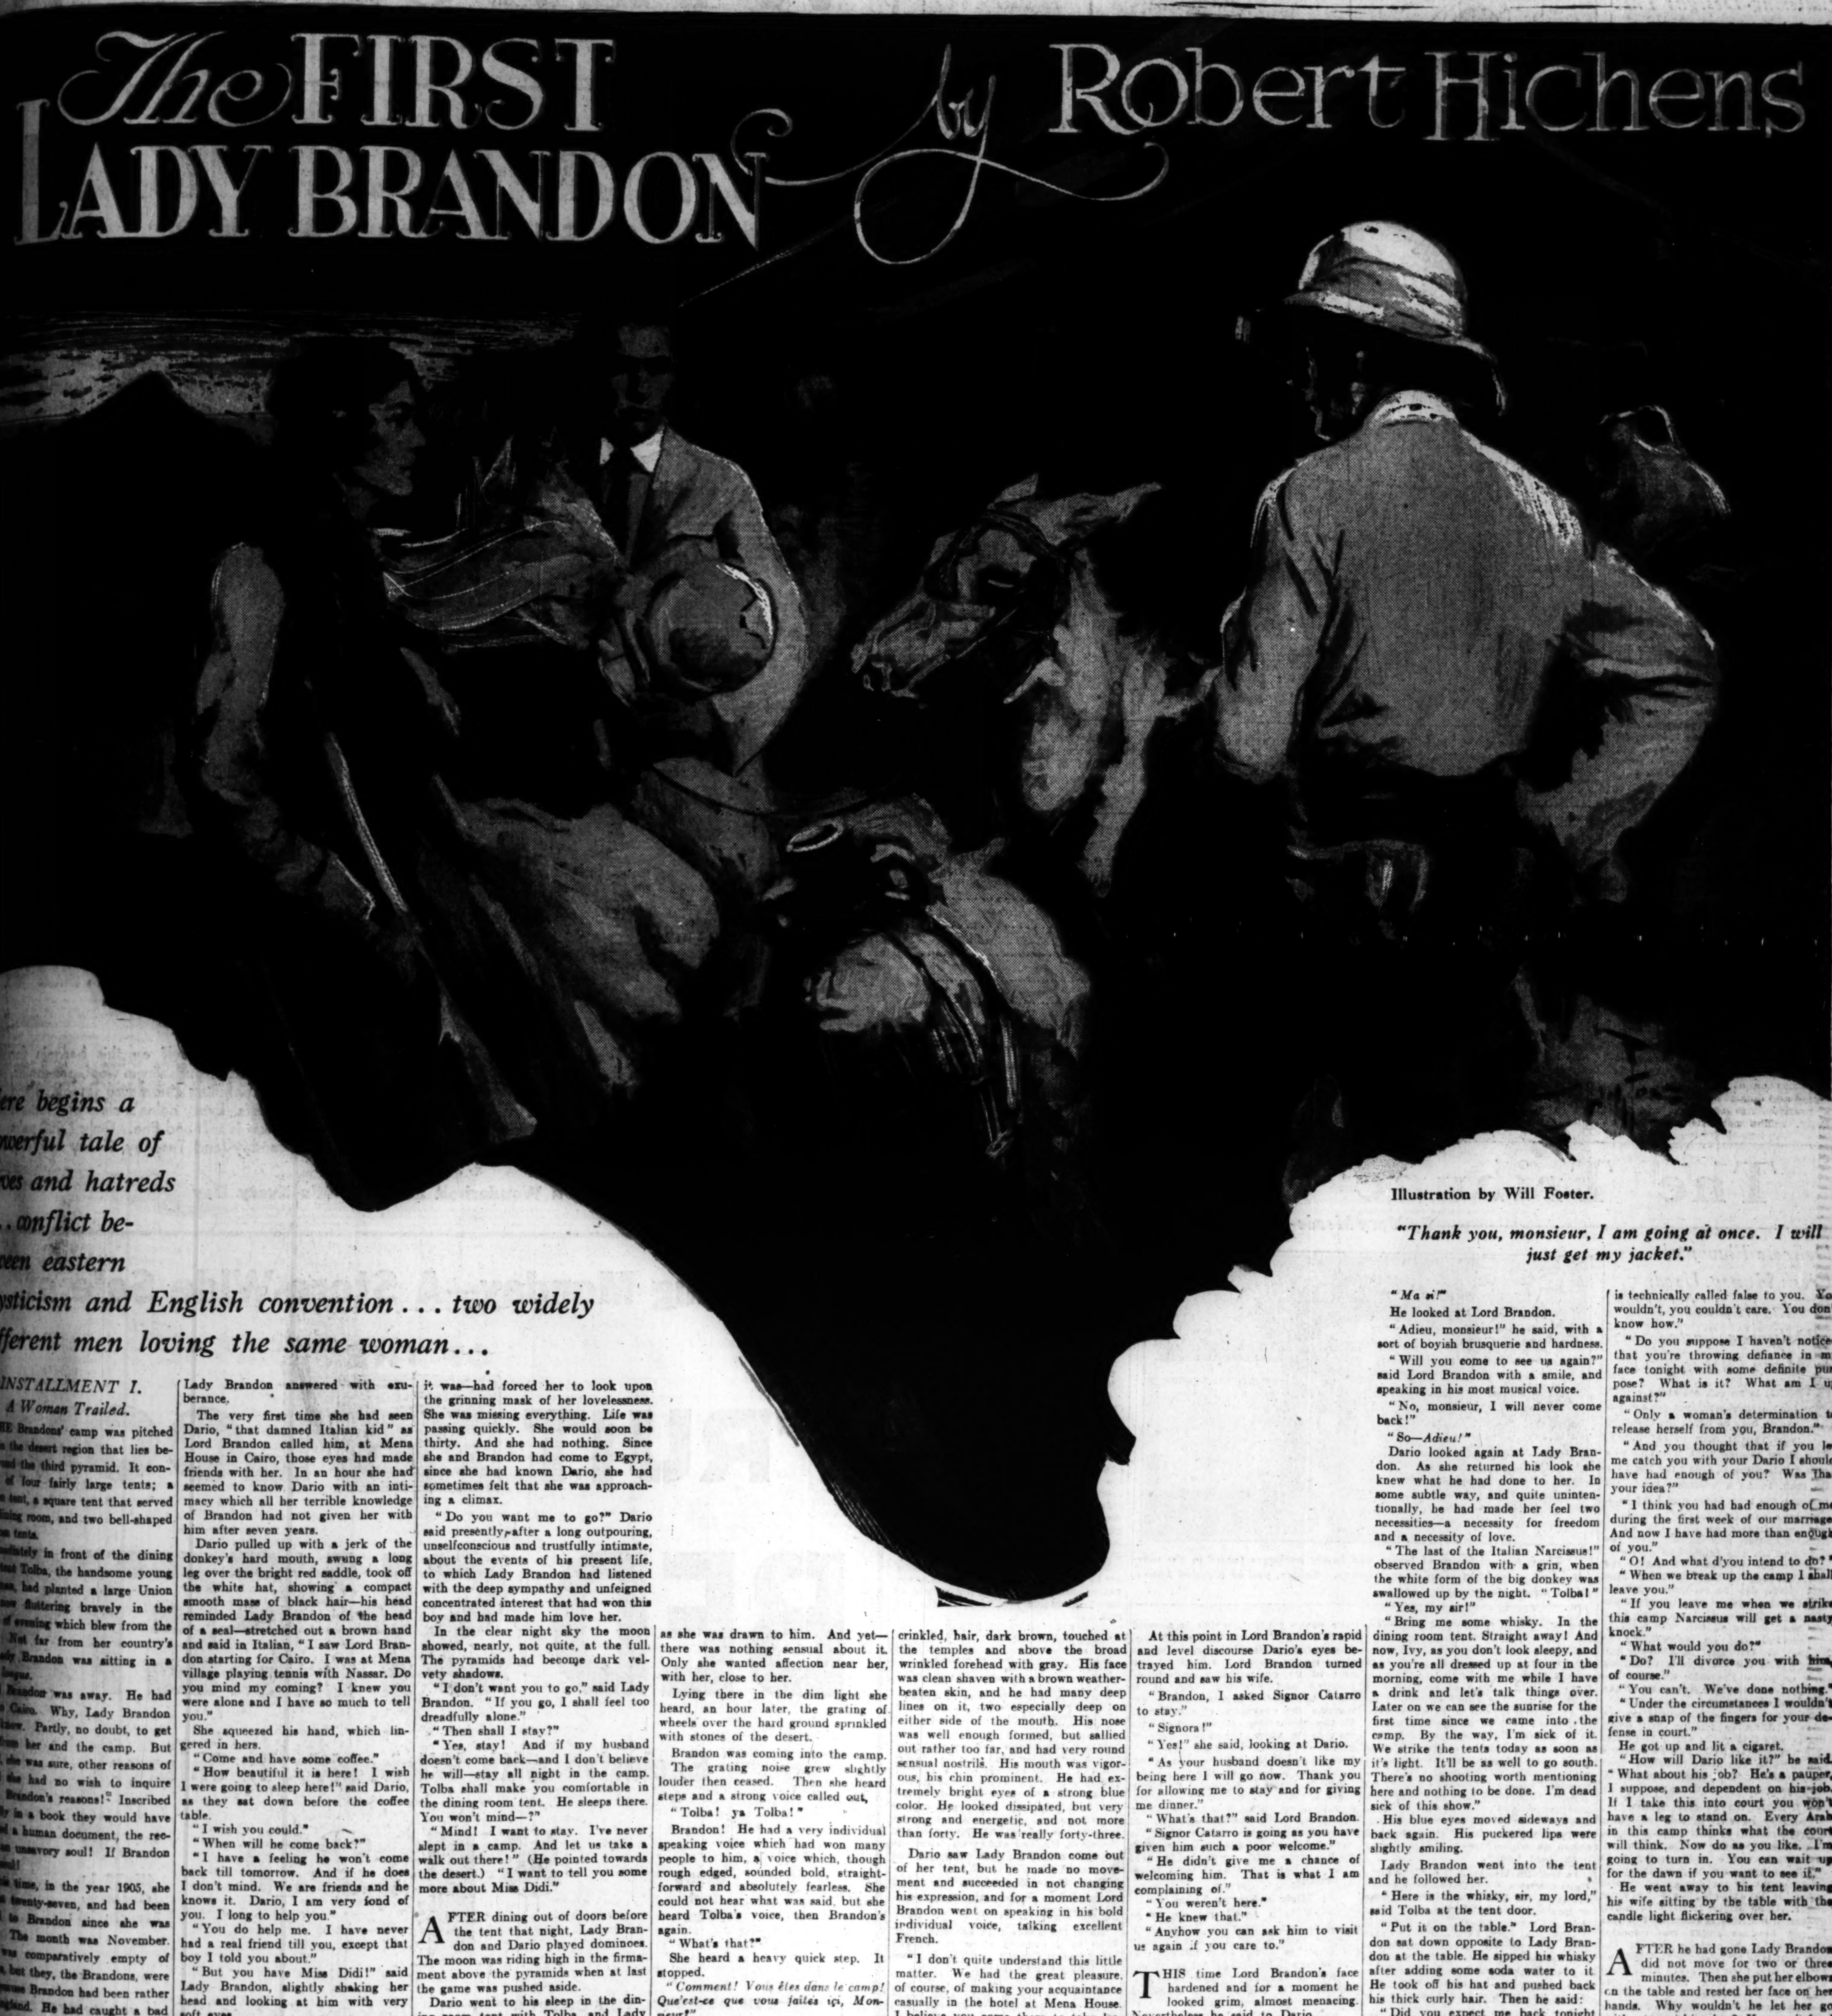

Illustration by Will Foster.

"Thank you, monsieur, I am going at once. I will just get my jacket."

Here begins a powerful tale of loves and hatreds . . . conflict between eastern mysticism and English convention . . . two widely different men loving the same woman . . .

INSTALLMENT I.

A Woman Trailed.

THE Brandons' camp was pitched in the desert region that lies beyond the third pyramid. It consisted of four fairly large tents; a kitchen tent, a square tent that served as a dining room, and two bell-shaped bedroom tents.

Immediately in front of the dining room tent Tolba, the handsome young dragoman, had planted a large Union Jack now fluttering bravely in the breeze of evening which blew from the north. Not far from her country's flag Lady Brandon was sitting in a chaise longue.

Lord Brandon was away. He had gone to Cairo. Why, Lady Brandon didn't know. Partly, no doubt, to get away from her and the camp. But he had, she was sure, other reasons of a kind she had no wish to inquire about. Brandon's reasons! Inscribed faithfully in a book they would have furnished a human document, the record of an unsavory soul! If Brandon had a soul!

At this time, in the year 1905, she was just twenty-seven, and had been married to Brandon since she was nineteen. The month was November. Egypt was comparatively empty of tourists, but they, the Brandons, were there because Brandon had been rather ill in England. He had caught a bad chill shooting duck on some marshes in Norfolk and it had developed into slight lung trouble. A specialist had ordered him to Egypt. So here they were!

Suddenly, although Lady Brandon was conscious of no movement in the camp, she felt something was changing the atmosphere. She got up from her low chair.

She was tall, very slim. Her widely spaced eyes—they sometimes looked black, but were chestnut in color—examined the desert at the back of the camp. Not very far off she saw a large white donkey galloping towards the tents, on it, leaning backwards, a tall thin male figure. The rider waved a hand, then lifted a large white hat. Lady Brandon answered with exuberance.

The very first time she had seen Dario, "that damned Italian kid" as Lord Brandon called him, at Mena House in Cairo, those eyes had made friends with her. In an hour she had seemed to know Dario with an intimacy which all her terrible knowledge of Brandon had not given her with him after seven years.

Dario pulled up with a jerk of the donkey's hard mouth, swung a long leg over the bright red saddle, took off the white hat, showing a compact smooth mass of black hair—his head reminded Lady Brandon of the head of a seal—stretched out a brown hand and said in Italian, "I saw Lord Brandon starting for Cairo. I was at Mena village playing tennis with Nassar. Do you mind my coming? I knew you were alone and I have so much to tell you."

She squeezed his hand, which lingered in hers.

"Come and have some coffee."

"How beautiful it is here! I wish I were going to sleep here!" said Dario, as they sat down before the coffee table.

"I wish you could."

"When will he come back?"

"I have a feeling he won't come back till tomorrow. And if he does I don't mind. We are friends and he knows it. Dario, I am very fond of you. I long to help you."

"You do help me. I have never had a real friend till you, except that boy I told you about."

"But you have Miss Didi!" said Lady Brandon, slightly shaking her head and looking at him with very soft eyes.

Dario kissed the back of her hand.

"I love Miss Didi. I love her terribly, but I have no money. If I had I would marry her. She loves me even much more than I love her. She would do anything I want, anything. But I respect her. She is mad about me. That makes it difficult for me because I am young and I am very hot, very. But I am not vicious. I cannot sleep at night wanting to be with her. That is really all there is in life—love.

This damned Italian kid was dangerous to Lady Brandon and she knew it; not because she had fallen in love with him. She felt that she loved him, but not in that way. He was dangerous to her because her association with him and her contemplation of his youthful passion for love—he called it Miss Didi, but that was what it was—had forced her to look upon the grinning mask of her lovelessness. She was missing everything. Life was passing quickly. She would soon be thirty. And she had nothing. Since she and Brandon had come to Egypt, since she had known Dario, she had sometimes felt that she was approaching a climax.

"Do you want me to go?" Dario said presently, after a long outpouring, unselfconscious and trustfully intimate, about the events of his present life, to which Lady Brandon had listened with the deep sympathy and unfeigned concentrated interest that had won this boy and had made him love her.

In the clear night sky the moon showed, nearly, not quite, at the full. The pyramids had become dark velvety shadows.

"I don't want you to go," said Lady Brandon. "If you go, I shall feel too dreadfully alone."

"Then shall I stay?"

"Yes, stay! And if my husband doesn't come back—and I don't believe he will—stay all night in the camp. Tolba shall make you comfortable in the dining room tent. He sleeps there. You won't mind—?"

"Mind! I want to stay. I've never slept in a camp. And let us take a walk out there!" (He pointed towards the desert.) "I want to tell you some more about Miss Didi."

AFTER dining out of doors before the tent that night, Lady Brandon and Dario played dominoes. The moon was riding high in the firmament above the pyramids when at last the game was pushed aside.

Dario went to his sleep in the dining room tent with Tolba, and Lady Brandon entered her own tent and dropped the flap. When presently she got into the narrow bed, pulled down the mosquito netting, faint moonlight, thwarted by the canvas fastened closely down to the tent pegs, made a suggestion beyond where she lay. She heard a footstep and sat up in bed. Could it be Brandon come back from Cairo? She called, "Brandon!" There was no answer. She called again louder. This time there came to her a sort of heavy mutter in a deep voice. It was the ghaffir, the guardian of the camp, on his round. She lay down again with a sense of relief that was terrible. She was so thankful that it was not Brandon.

If it had been Dario! She knew that she wished it had been. She wanted him to be drawn to her that night as she was drawn to him. And yet—there was nothing sensual about it. Only she wanted affection near her, with her, close to her.

Lying there in the dim light she heard, an hour later, the grating of wheels over the hard ground sprinkled with stones of the desert.

Brandon was coming into the camp.

The grating noise grew slightly louder then ceased. Then she heard steps and a strong voice called out,

"Tolba! ya Tolba!"

Brandon! He had a very individual speaking voice which had won many people to him, a voice which, though rough edged, sounded bold, straightforward and absolutely fearless. She could not hear what was said, but she heard Tolba's voice, then Brandon's again.

"What's that?"

She heard a heavy quick step. It stopped.

"Comment! Vous êtes dans le camp! Que'est-ce que vous faites içi, Monsieur?"

Brandon knew no Italian, Dario scarcely any English. The few times when they had spoken together at Mena house they had used the French language.

As she came out of her tent she saw two dark forms in front of the dining room tent, Dario and her husband, who had his back to her.

Dario stood full six feet and was almost excessively thin. Lord Brandon was taller still and bulky about the shoulders. He was not a fat, protruding man weighed down with flesh, but he was a very big man, with a broad chest, a broad back and a strong pillar of a throat. His head, too, was large and was covered with curly, not crinkled, hair, dark brown, touched at the temples and above the broad wrinkled forehead with gray. His face was clean shaven with a brown weather-beaten skin, and he had many deep lines on it, two especially deep on either side of the mouth. His nose was well enough formed, but sallied out rather too far, and had very round sensual nostrils. His mouth was vigorous, his chin prominent. He had extremely bright eyes of a strong blue color. He looked dissipated, but very strong and energetic, and not more than forty. He was really forty-three.

Dario saw Lady Brandon come out of her tent, but he made no movement and succeeded in not changing his expression, and for a moment Lord Brandon went on speaking in his bold individual voice, talking excellent French.

"I don't quite understand this little matter. We had the great pleasure, of course, of making your acquaintance casually in the hotel at Mena House. I believe you come there to take lessons in tennis, don't you? I have seen you several times endeavoring to get to the ball. You live in Cairo, I think, and are Italian. Isn't that so? Please don't think that I have the least hostility towards you. But we haven't the pleasure of knowing you very well—I think I've only seen you about four times in all—and we don't know your people—if you have people. And this, you see—" he moved a muscular arm—"happens to be my camp. If you had let me know at Mena House, when we were together, that you were keen on sampling camp life, had given me the chance of pleasing you of my own will—that's the point, you know—probably I should have said, 'Come along one night and I'll put you up with pleasure.' But—what are you looking at, Monsieur?"

At this point in Lord Brandon's rapid and level discourse Dario's eyes betrayed him. Lord Brandon turned round and saw his wife.

"Brandon, I asked Signor Catarro to stay."

"Signora!"

"Yes!" she said, looking at Dario.

"As your husband doesn't like my being here I will go now. Thank you for allowing me to stay and for giving me dinner."

"What's that?" said Lord Brandon.

"Signor Catarro is going as you have given him such a poor welcome."

"He didn't give me a chance of welcoming him. That is what I am complaining of."

"You weren't here."

"He knew that."

"Anyhow you can ask him to visit us again if you care to."

THIS time Lord Brandon's face hardened and for a moment he looked grim, almost menacing. Nevertheless he said to Dario.

"By all means sleep here till you have to start to your work in Cairo if you care to, Signor Catarro."

"Thank you, monsieur, I am going at once. I will just get my jacket."

He went into the tent. Lord and Lady Brandon stayed where they were. They neither spoke nor looked at each other till Dario came out wearing necktie and jacket and holding the white hat.

He went at once to Lady Brandon and held out his hand.

"Good-by, signora, and thank you very much."

She pressed his hand and at once felt the pressure strongly returned. For a wild instant she was on the edge of saying, "I'm coming with you!" But something held her back.

"Arrivederci!" she said.

"Ma si!"

He looked at Lord Brandon.

"Adieu, monsieur!" he said, with a sort of boyish brusquerie and hardness.

"Will you come to see us again?" said Lord Brandon with a smile, and speaking in his most musical voice.

"No, monsieur, I will never come back!"

"So—Adieu!"

Dario looked again at Lady Brandon. As she returned his look she knew what he had done to her. In some subtle way, and quite unintentionally, he had made her feel two necessities—a necessity for freedom and a necessity of love.

"The last of the Italian Narcissus!" observed Brandon with a grin, when the white form of the big donkey was swallowed up by the night. "Tolba!"

"Yes, my sir!"

"Bring me some whisky. In the dining room tent. Straight away! And now, Ivy, as you don't look sleepy, and as you're all dressed up at four in the morning, come with me while I have a drink and let's talk things over. Later on we can see the sunrise for the first time since we came into the camp. By the way, I'm sick of it. We strike the tents today as soon as it's light. It'll be as well to go south. There's no shooting worth mentioning here and nothing to be done. I'm dead sick of this show."

His blue eyes moved sideways and back again. His puckered lips were slightly smiling.

Lady Brandon went into the tent and he followed her.

"Here is the whisky, sir, my lord," said Tolba at the tent door.

"Put it on the table." Lord Brandon sat down opposite to Lady Brandon at the table. He sipped his whisky after adding some soda water to it. He took off his hat and pushed back his thick curly hair. Then he said:

"Did you expect me back tonight or had you made up your mind that you were safe till tomorrow?"

"Safe?"

"I said safe."

"Till about eleven o'clock—I suppose it was—I thought you might come back. After that I thought you might quite well stay away, perhaps for two or three nights as you did in Paris during our honeymoon."

"What d'you mean by all this? Let's have this clear. Do you expect me to keep quiet while you have an intrigue with an Italian bank clerk or whatever he is before all the tourists and Arabs of Mena? Cairo, too, perhaps!"

"This is all no use, Brandon. There's no guilt on me. What you really believe I don't know. But I know you're incapable of caring genuinely, caring in your heart, even if I had been what is technically called false to you. You wouldn't, you couldn't care. You don't know how."

"Do you suppose I haven't noticed that you're throwing defiance in my face tonight with some definite purpose? What is it? What am I up against?"

"And you thought that if you let me catch you with your Dario I should have had enough of you? Was that your idea?"

"I think you had had enough of me during the first week of our marriage. And now I have had more than enough of you."

"O! And what d'you intend to do?"

"When we break up the camp I shall leave you."

"If you leave me when we strike this camp Narcissus will get a nasty knock."

"What would you do?"

"Do? I'll divorce you with him, of course."

"You can't. We've done nothing."

"Under the circumstances I wouldn't give a snap of the fingers for your defense in court."

He got up and lit a cigaret.

"How will Dario like it?" he said. "What about his job? He's a pauper, I suppose, and dependent on his job. If I take this into court you won't have a leg to stand on. Every Arab in this camp thinks what the court will think. Now do as you like. I'm going to turn in. You can wait up for the dawn if you want to see it."

He went away to his tent leaving his wife sitting by the table with the candle light flickering over her.

AFTER he had gone Lady Brandon did not move for two or three minutes. Then she put her elbows on the table and rested her face on her hands. Why wouldn't he let her go without punishing her? He wasn't fond of her. She knew that. There were moments, occasional moments that she had learned to hate long ago, when he wanted her. But they, with the years, had become fewer and fewer. She tried to devise some plan of escaping from Brandon without injuring Dario.

A man seemed to rise up before Lady Brandon in the windy tent. It was as if he came up out of the ground and stood before her in the dim candle light.

He was not very tall, slightly, perhaps, over middle height, with broad brows, steady honest eyes, full of intellect but holding something of latent melancholy, and a strong but very sensitive mouth slightly turning up at the corners. He was about thirty or thirty-

Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde

Flattering Designs That Anticipate Late Summer and Early Fall Needs May Be Easily Fashioned at Home.

IF you will study the smart dress made by pattern No. 2859, you will see that it is really quite slenderizing, besides being thoroughly wearable. The deep V front that reaches to the waistline is a real aid in giving a slender appearance, and the softly falling jabot revers detract from the breadth.

Another good point is the deep, perfectly fitting hip yoke cut in a deep point at the center front. The waist and skirt are cut separately and joined under a narrow self fabric belt. The pattern provides for long or short sleeves.

One who sews will find no difficulty about making this dress. A printed silk crepe in brown and white, with plain white crêpe is chic, while navy blue silk crêpe in combination with white is smart, as is also black with white. For resort wear shantungs, pastel flat washable silk crêpe, linen, batiste prints and printed chiffon voile are ideal materials for this dress.

The circular skirt adds to the gracefulness of the dress. Where the skirt is more or less bias it is bound to stretch, so after it has been set on the yoke, the dress should be allowed to hang for a number of days. Then lay the skirt on a table, and pin the material together around the bottom of the yoke, then around the bottom, and even it all around.

One way to do this is to place the front of the skirt pattern so that the center front is exactly on a line with the center front of the skirt, with the top and side seams exactly on the corresponding parts of the dress. Pin in place, and then put pins in at close intervals around the bottom, following the line of the pattern. Do the same in the back, then remove the pattern pieces and hold the skirt up to you and see if the line given by the pins is an even one. After the skirt is cut evenly around the bottom, finish with a narrow hem, bind or picot, according to the material.

The capelet frock is as becoming to small girls as to grown ups, and pattern No. 3126, is a one piece, slip-on frock, gathered at the front and back to the three piece collar. The dress is slashed down from the neck at the center front, and the edges bound and finished for closing. This is about as easy a dress to make as one could find, and a pretty design too. Children can hardly have too many frocks, especially in warm weather, and several made from this would be desirable.

A pink striped cotton broadcloth with the collar of white piqué and bias binding of the striped material would be adorable, then a yellow dotted swiss or a dimity, with white ground and dots of skipper blue would be pretty. Tub silks are cool and pretty, and for something a little dressy, organdy in any preferred color or crêpe de chine would be lovely.

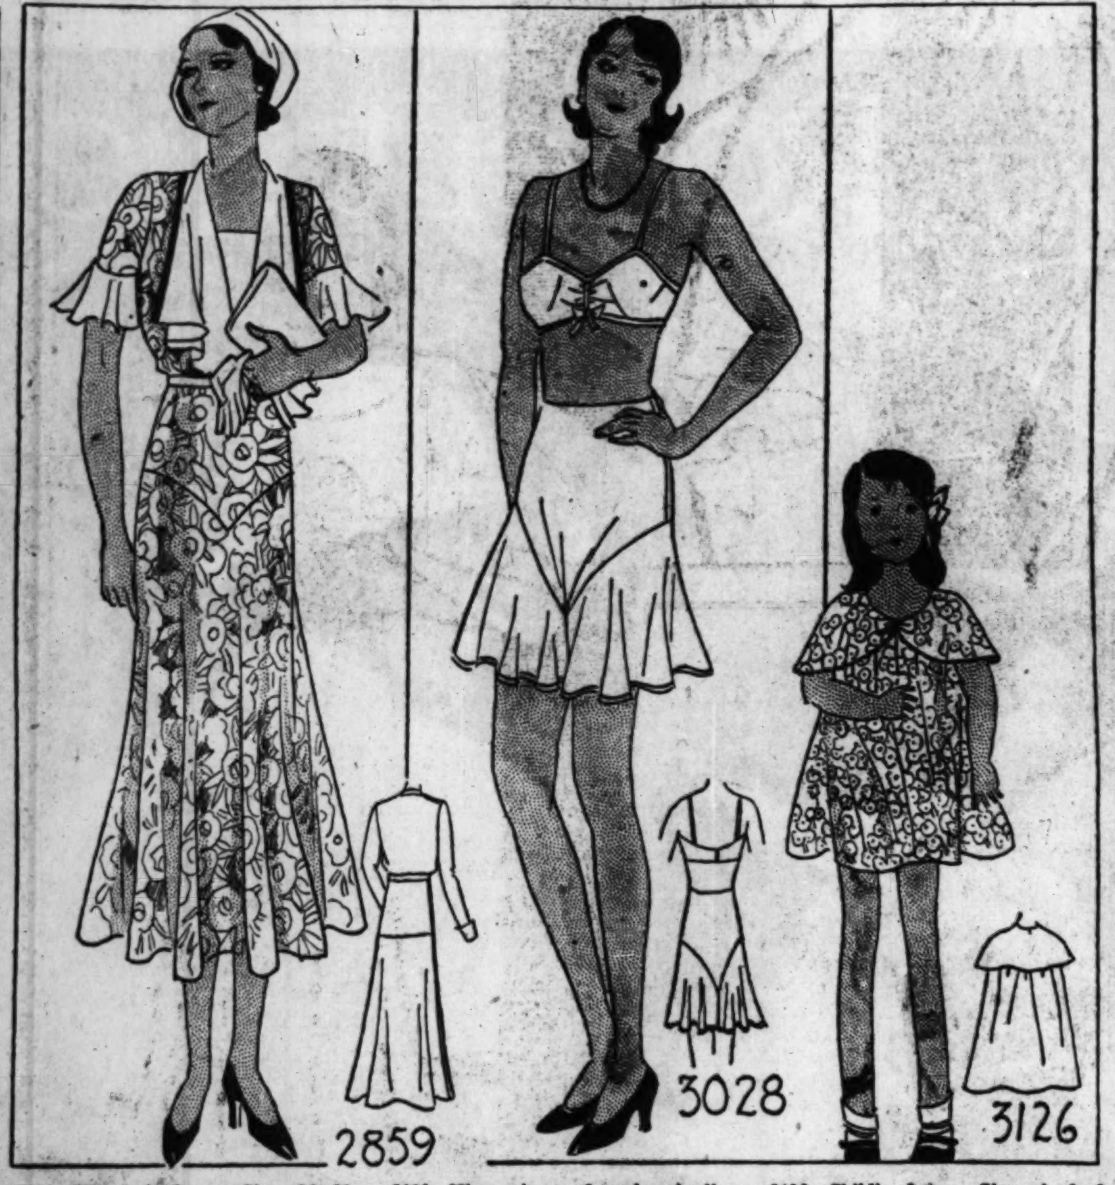
As you can see, the panties are cut in a deep point at the front and back, and the lower part is flaring. The closing is on the left side. Nothing is prettier for lingerie than crêpe de chine, and a flesh or delicate pink is prettier than any other color. Lace can be used with good effect, or the garments may be made with no trimming.

The bandeau is shirred at the center front, and opens in the back, and hooks and eyes will be the best way of fastening it. The shoulder straps may be of the bandeau material or ribbon.



2859—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Sizes 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material with ¾ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

3028—Woman's and misses' lingerie. Sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 1⅝ yards of 39 inch material with 5¾ yards of binding.

3126—Child's dress. Sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 2⅛ yards of 35 inch material.

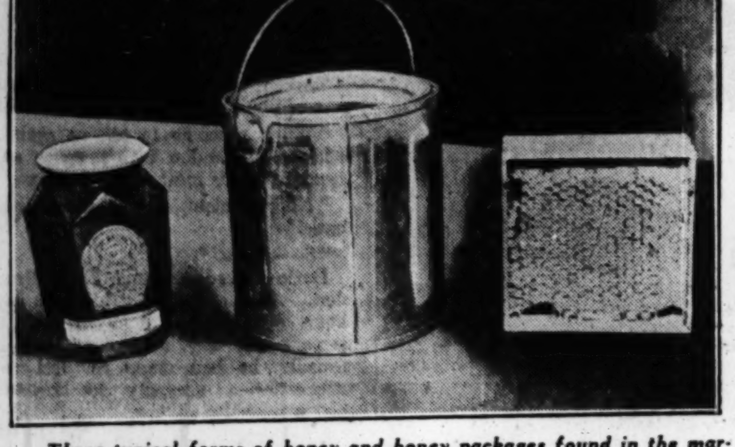
The Tribune Cook Book

By Mary Meade

Delicate Flavor of Fresh Honey, Used Sparingly, Adds a Delicious Taste to Many Dishes.



Three typical forms of honey and honey packages found in the market. Left, a jar of strained orange honey. Center, pail of blended honey. Right, white clover comb honey.

THERE is an old, old story crediting a lubberly yet epicurean young bear as being the creature who taught man to eat honey. The story relates that a man, who was out hunting one day for the family food, found a wounded bear. He brought the bear home and kept him. The bear was inclined to be sociable and particularly so with the man's little daughter, who looked after the bear and fed him fruits and herbs.

When his wounds were healed the bear set out to hunt food for himself. Each day he returned with his snoot full of honey and honey comb, and each day he made motions with his head trying to help the child to understand that he wanted her to taste. At last she understood and tasted, and the story ends by telling how delighted the little girl and her family were with the discovery of the daintiest of all sweets.

As far as authentic records go, we have nothing to tell us just when honey was first eaten and just how it was first appreciated. But we do have considerable literature showing that honey was a highly prized food as far back as five thousand years ago.

Delicate Flavor and Aroma.

From the culinary and dietetic point of view honey is still highly appreciated. Considering it for its flavor and aroma alone in cookery, it is doubtless the most important of all sweeteners. As for energy or caloric value, it is exceeded only by cane sugar. Cane sugar is used in much greater quantities in cooking, but this is not because sugar has superior qualities. It is perhaps duo to the fact that it is more easily handled and stored. And then there are more good sugar recipes than honey recipes available to the cook.

Bees produce two kinds of honey, floral and honeydew. The former is made from the nectar off flowers and the latter from honeydew, which is a sweet substance deposited on the leaves of plants by insects. Floral honey is abundant, it is the honey of commerce, it is the kind the family prefers and the kind referred to in all food discussions. Honeydew honey is obtained only in the smallest quantities.

The flavor and aroma of floral honey are the qualities which make it superior to honeydew. These qualities are contributed by the flowers from which the nectar is obtained. Each kind of flower nectar contains certain volatile oils—substance that give the particular blossom its special fragrance, and these substances in the nectar are retained to a large degree in the honey.

Bouquet of Flavors.

Some honeys are a magnificent bouquet of various flavors and perfumes, while in others only one sweet flavor and one sweet smell predominates. Because the perfume of many flowers attract them it is difficult to keep bees from visiting more than one kind of flower during the honey season. This is especially true if a great variety of flowers rich in nectar are within easy access of the bee hives. Nevertheless, when the hives stand near large fields of one kind of blossoms, such as white clover, alfalfa, etc., the bees will obtain such large quantities of nectar from the kind of flower that the flavor and the aroma of that flower can be recognized in the honey. It is therefore correct to use such terms as white clover, goldenrod, or buckwheat honey.

In bulletin 110, bureau of chemistry, United States department of agriculture, Dr. C. A. Browne lists a dozen or more kinds of honey and gives their different compositions. Some of the unusual ones, in addition to those already mentioned, are: locust, dandelion, goldenrod, aster, apple, raspberry, cotton, basswood, sumac, and tupelo. Orange blossom, sage, and clover honeys are well known varieties.

Choosing between honeys from different flowers is not yet our privilege in most markets, and perhaps it is fortunate that we do not develop a liking for one flavor more than another. Beekeepers cannot count on a regular crop of uniform honey. Because conditions vary from year to year and from season to season, we cannot expect honey to be anything but a variable product. But many people insist on uniformity, even in honey. So, to meet this requirement, many of the large distributors have adopted the practice of blending their honey to obtain a uniform flavor. This is difficult, however, and a great deal of skill is necessary to produce a blend that will please the great mass of consumers.

Besides differing in flavor, honeys also vary in their composition. But as a rule in their sucrose or ordinary cane sugar content, which is around 2 per cent, they are quite uniform. The invert sugar in honey, which often makes up as much as 83 per cent of its composition, consists of levulose and dextrose. And it is these two invert sugars which determine the character of the honey. If the proportion of dextrose happens to be large, the honey goes to sugar or granulates easily, and if the levulose is the predominant sugar, the honey will not granulate.

Alfalfa honey is a variety that contains a large percentage of dextrose, and it often forms a mass of sugar crystals so solid that it may be sold in the cake form. When honey is used for cake fillings or for a sandwich spread that needs to be free from stickness, the solid form is an advantage.

High in Energy Value.

Honey is a food with almost as much energy value as cane sugar. Nearly one-fifth of the total weight of honey is water, so it follows that the energy value is approximately one fifth less than that of sugar. One tablespoon of honey contains 100 calories and one pound, 1,485.

Many people insist that honey is more easily digested than any other sugar, but this depends upon the person. It is true that the person in normal health does not have to expend quite so much energy in digesting honey as in digesting cane sugar. A large part of the sugar in honey is already in the inverted state. Cane sugar must be inverted in the process of digestion before it is ready to pass into the blood stream.

Honey, therefore, passes into the blood stream more quickly than does sugar, and it satisfies the appetite more quickly. Because it satisfies the appetite so quickly there is not so much danger of eating too much honey.

The question of the medicinal value of honey is still one for debate. Some writers have suggested that its high levulose content makes it a permissible food for diabetics, but no honey has been found that contains a dextrose content sufficiently low to be a safe food for the diabetic patient.

The following recipes suggest a few ways of using honey in some cooked foods that appeal to us in the summer time.

PARISIAN SWEETS.

1 lb. figs.
1 lb. shelled nuts.
2 lbs. orange juice.
¼ cup honey.

Clean the fruit and nuts and put through a food chopper. Mix thoroughly, then add orange juice and honey. Shape the mass into a long cylinder and roll in more chopped nuts, then in cocoanut or cover with dipping chocolate that has been melted at a low temperature [110 degrees F.] This melting of the chocolate requires considerable time. A good way is to place the fruit-nut-honey roll on a heavy piece of waxed paper, melt the chocolate and carefully pour it over the roll so as to cover the surface. By carefully manipulating the roll with a couple of forks the entire surface is easily coated, and the work is not nearly so messy as when one tries to dip the roll.

FESTIVE FRUIT PUNCH.

½ cup lemon juice.
1 cup orange juice.
1 bottle creme de menthe cherries.
¾ cup strained honey.
1 inch piece stick cinnamon.
2 whole cloves.
1 bunch fresh mint [at least 12 sprigs.]
1 qt. ice cold fresh cider.
2 qts. cracked ice.
2 qts. ginger ale.
1 qt. orange ice.

Strain the lemon and orange juice into a container that can be closely covered. Add the crême de menthe cherries with the cordial, the honey, spices and the cleaned fresh mint that has been bruised. Let stand on ice several hours. When ready to serve remove the spices and mint and add the cider, ice, and ginger ale. Put the orange ice into a punch bowl and add the liquid.

Yield: 30 to 35 servings.

1 cup honey.
2 cups hot water.

Blend the honey with hot water and keep in a covered glass jar in the refrigerator. Combine with fruit juices for iced summer drinks.

LEMON TINGLE.

Blend the lemon juice and honey sirup in proportion to suit the taste and dilute to desired strength. To each glass of iced lemonade add 1 teaspoon of honey mint sirup. The flavor of this iced summer drink is delightfully refreshing.

HONEY MINT SIRUP.

1 tsp. mint extract.
¼ cup honey.
2 tbsp. lemon juice.

Combine the honey and lemon juice, then add the mint extract. Keep in a bottle in the refrigerator, and use for iced summer lemonades, fruit punches, and cocktails.

HONEY FRENCH DRESSING.

1 cup oil.
6 tbsp. honey.
½ cup cider vinegar.
3 tbsp. lemon juice.
3 tbsp. catsup.
1 tbsp. paprika.
1 tbsp. salt.
1 tsp. mustard.

Beat the liquids together or shake thoroughly until well blended. Mix the dry ingredients and add to the liquid. Shake well before using.

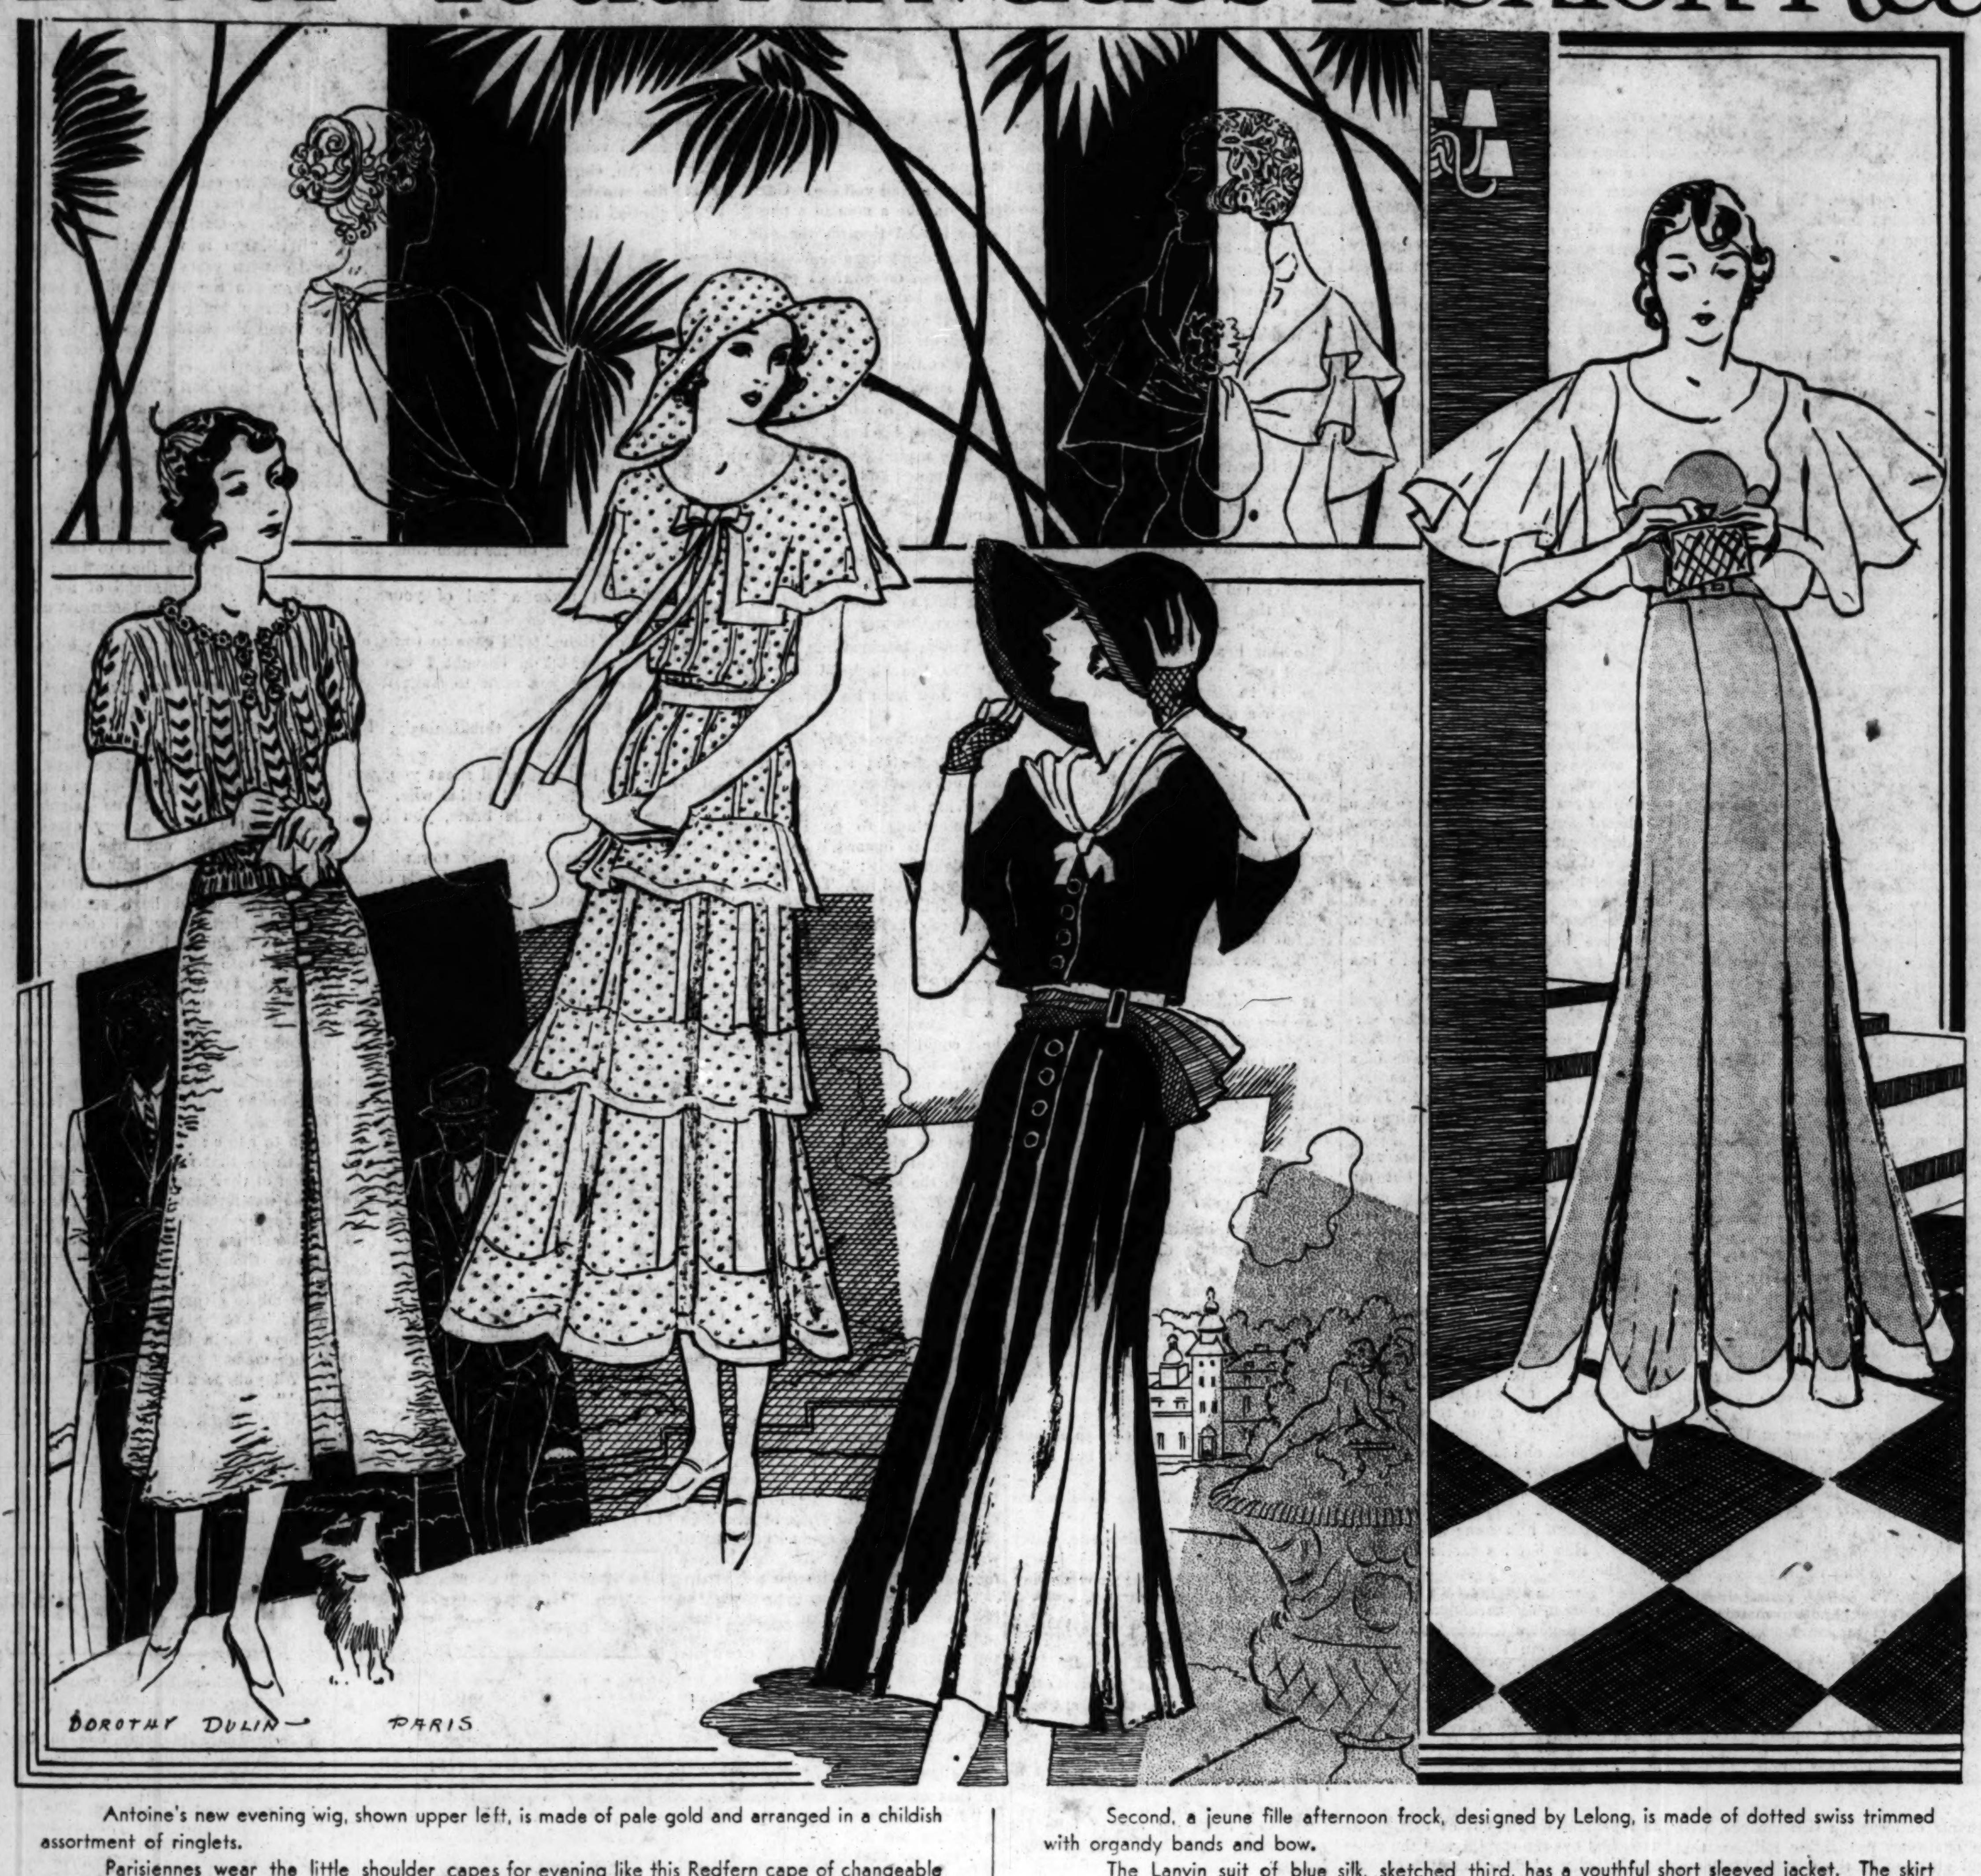
Spirit of Youth Invades Fashion Realm



Antoine's new evening wig, shown upper left, is made of pale gold and arranged in a childish assortment of ringlets.

Parisiennes wear the little shoulder capes for evening like this Redfern cape of changeable taffeta, upper right. The point lace bonnet is from Le Monnier.

Schiaparelli's new girly sweater, sketched left, is made of white cotton knitted into a lacy weave, with a yoke and puff sleeve. The neckline is edged with tiny flowers. The skirt is made of black crinkly crepe silk closed by clips.

Second, a jeune fille afternoon frock, designed by Lelong, is made of dotted swiss trimmed with organdy bands and bow.

The Lanvin suit of blue silk, sketched third, has a youthful short sleeved jacket. The skirt is box plaited and the sash is in shades of blue. The blouse and fichu collar are of white muslin.

Paris is all excited about the new Lelong evening gown that has a yoke, full circle sleeves, and hem of white organdy, while the lower bodice and skirt are made of green chiffon. Shown fourth.

Smart Styles Daily Growing More Girlish

Chic of Jacket Rests on Its Length.

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

Jewelry ensembles that fashionable women wear with evening clothes include a necklace, a ring, and one or two bracelets, no more. Carved amber is the newest of evening jewels.

Shades of pale blue and pink are beginning to appear around Paris. They are made into simple daytime frocks with short circular sleeves. Premet is responsible.

Natural colored linen and crash suits and jackets, worn over black frocks, are seen at the Ritz and other smart restaurants for luncheon. They look newer than the white jacket and black dress.

Kahlocher's tweed patterned taffeta silks are being worn by some of the most fashionable women in the French capital.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The way in which women are wearing Paris styles today is a warning to look out for dangerous curves ahead. If the rest of the feminine world outside Paris is going to take up fashions in turn, there'll have to be such a reducing and rejuvenating as has never been known before.

The girlish, ingenue tone of present styles is getting louder and louder as clothes turn truly summery, and from this to real adolescence is no more than baby's first step. We are at the end of a fashion cycle. Something is going to happen, and this growing girlishness in summer clothes may turn the whole of fashions into prattling artlessness.

Go out on to any fashionable place from the Lido to Ostend at this moment, and what do you see? Grown women wearing loose and childish pajamas, strapped on over bathing suits, and looking perilously like the rompers of six year olds. A big, floppy straw hat with a ribbon band on head that is fringed with tiny tassels, barefoot, heelless sandals complete the childish sartorial aspect. All that's missing is a pail and toy shovel.

Seek Childish Effect.

Makeup in town and on the beach has lost that girlish brilliance that passed as sophistication, and while lip stick and eyebrow pencil are assiduously applied, the approved result of fashion is the natural rosy color of childhood, with its softly shadowed eyes and young red lips. A painted-on mouth is downright dowdy, if it shows as such. Nature's curves are followed in lip stick application.

If you can't believe that styles are going girlish you haven't concentrated on the sweater and the jacket, that's all. Since early spring, jackets, whether they are part of a tailored suit or separate wraps, have been shrinking, getting smaller and smaller, younger and younger.

A buttoned up Eton jacket, an open bolero, is quite sufficient for a wrap this summer. And if any younger wrap is to be found it will take some hunting. Evening wraps are merely little ruffled capes and miniature jackets. Sleeves, too, are shrunk for both day and evening wraps, just to make them look younger, and childish short gloves several sizes too big are part of this back to childhood movement.

Waistline Sweaters.

And the sweater! It has become a fetching little thing, just to the waistline, with short puff sleeves, if any, and a babyish neck line. You've got to look young as young to wear it, and it is being worn all over France today.

The hair that women are wearing is being included in this side of Paris styles. The greatest French coiffeurs are urging women to bob again, to get rid of the Garbo complex. Wear your hair in little curls, or in feathery bangs over your foreheads, and cut it to what resembles a shingle in the back, they urge. An imposing list of fashionable ladies is having these haircuts, too.

That isn't all, either, to the new hairline, as Paris sees it. The Antoine wig for evening is a piece of the new styles, and a big slice, too. He makes these wigs on a chiffon jersey foundation, with thin youthful curls in varying arrangements, and he varnishes the curls. These wigs are to be slipped on over your bobbed hair for evening, and they come in all natural hair shades as well as pastel tones of pink, blue, etc.

Wig of Pale Gold.

Look at the hairdress in the upper left hand corner of the sketch. It's one of Antoine's new wigs, in pale gold, and it is a direct inspiration from the hair of a little girl, twisted up in the back in loose curls so that mamma can give an ear and neck inspection before the school bell rings. There is a fringe of ringlets all around the head to soften the effect.

Such hair above the newest evening decolletage, shown in the same sketch, is devastatingly young. The décolleté reminds one of nothing so much as a big bib napkin tied around a child's neck, high in front and close to the sides of the neck, clipped with a diamond clip, and brought down to the sides in the back.

Another evening gown feature that is girlish is the huge evening sash of one or two color satin ribbon tied at one side in loops and ends that fall all over the skirt.

Another exhibit in the girlish section of summer styles is the tiny taffeta shoulder cape shown in our sketch, upper right. This Redfern model is made of changeable taffeta, with flat, short ties in front, into which is tucked a bouquet of little field flowers. On the head of this figure is pictured Le Monnier's little evening bonnet of point lace, which is just an enlarged edition of what our best babies have worn since point lace was invented.

New Evening Silhouette.

Sketched at the extreme right is Lelong's new evening silhouette, just out, which is a sane and appropriate exposition of girlishness in clothes. This frock combines organdy and chiffon, making something sweet and fresh in evening clothes. The full circle organdy sleeves and shoulder yoke of this dress remind one of the almost extinct "sweet girl graduate." Some of Lelong's organdy sleeves like this are embroidered in red hand stitched edgings.

The lower bodice and the gored skirt of this frock are made of sea green chiffon, and the skirt stands out like the starched skirt of a graduating maiden because of the white organdy hem. The belt is made of white organdy. This creation bears the romantic name of Jasmine.

At the opposite side of the picture is one of the smart sweaters of the season, designed by Schiaparelli, who can tell sports styles where to begin and end. This little garment is made of pure white cotton thread knitted into lace stripes, and a square shoulder yoke and puff sleeves do the necessary thing to make the spirit very ingenue, but for good measure the neck is circled by a garland of tiny knitted flowers. The skirt of crinkly crêpe silk is clipped on. Schiaparelli is clipping us children into our clothes for all occasions.

Girlish Afternoon Frock.

Next in the picture is an afternoon dress from Lucien Lelong made of white dotted swiss, and lavishly trimmed with white organdy bands that border the bertha of the bodice and the three flat tiers on the skirt. The vertical bands that give the blouse and skirt a striped effect are set-in bands of organdy, and the bow at the neckline, with its girlish long ends, is also made of white organdy. Cotton frocks like this are only at the beginning of a long life in fashions, according to folks who ought to know.

The third figure illustrates the rejuvenation of the summer suit by means of the shortest of jackets and other details. Jeanne Lanvin makes the jacket and skirt of blue ribbed shantung. The childish flared sleeves of the jacket do not cover the elbows. The jacket buttons up the front just to the white fichu collar. The jacket is purposely made short enough so that a bit of the white muslin shows below, and below that is a shaded sash held by a buckle at the side.

Forget "Perfect Man" Myth

By Doris Blake.

IT'S a curious thing, with all the daily contact with men in business, how girls go on creating mythical beings out of these same male beings when they think of them in terms of marriage.

It is suggested by one student of blasted marriages that this refusal on woman's part to take man for what he is results in a great deal of the so-called incompatibility.

Men, my informant insists, are far more generously disposed to take on woman "as is," with her faults and her foibles. At any rate, he isn't duping himself into thinking his future life is to be lived out with saint and goddess rolled into one.

"If," says this hard headed observer, "a man draws seventy-five per cent of the good qualities along with his girl, he's willing to admit it's a good break. But the girls want a hundred per cent male, or they're going to exchange him for better or worse before long."

That may be one of the gross exaggerations that belong with any sweeping statement. But girls are given to embroidering ordinary facts to suit their dream dispositions. They may not mean to expect too much of the ordinary human being they'll try marriage with—but they are less disposed, than marriage calls for, to realize that you just can't have everything in one person.

Disappointing Discovery.

This is a sample of what I hear to substantiate the above conclusion: "To my disappointment, I find my husband critical and pretty selfish, really. Not about money, but about his time and about little things."

Well, men who make money haven't the time nor the talent for the little things that women usually mean when they write about them. If they're critical, it may be all in the plan of carrying a woman along to the heights the ambitious one has in mind for them both later. What such a woman forgets is that she can't have the quiet and the calm and the constant attention from the successful go-getter that a husband with less initiative would prescribe.

As has been said before, the price paid for success both by the husband and the wife is high. It robs the pair, as a rule, of the close companionship that one sees as the cementing feature in less prosperous looking marriages. But if a woman chooses her man from among the success getting group, she has to realize that her "dreams" about what her marriage is to be must undergo a compromise, if not a complete change.

On the other hand, women often complain of the lack of initiative of their husbands. They are ambitious for their children and though they chose the man originally for his endearing attentions and his calm nature, they often turn face about and expect his character suddenly to be revolutionized into that of one diametrically opposed.

Vari-Colored Humans.

Around a place of employment a girl sees men as they are; sometimes, as aggressive, impulsive or power loving creatures. She sees them sometimes as gossipy, busybody beings not at all fashioned after the mythical being in mind for marriage. She sees them as ruthless humans sometimes; again as stolid, sterling characters; as kindly, sweet and very dear human beings.

Yet she doesn't try to fit the pattern of the gentle ones into the high powered executive's chair. She measures the former and gives his qualities full due. But marrying him she would begin checking him up with this mythical male with every imaginable asset she can remember to bring to the picture.

A great many young women are now engaged in their first year on the marriage job. If suddenly one of you discovers that this hero of yours is beginning to act like an ordinary human being and not like a hero at all, don't blame him. He never drew the hero picture of himself. You did that.

Instead of putting on the bonnet and running off to consult mother—or the lawyer—just think about some of the other men you have known and met up with, including your dad and your brothers. Would the behavior of these latter, under similar circumstances of marriage friction, have behaved so differently? Probably not.

Anyway, from the mere fact that you get down to analyzing your mate from the angle of other men you're in a fair way to recover from the myth-gentleman disease that is said to afflict marriage more or less.

THE FINE ART OF GUIDANCE

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

IT'S been raining for days as I put these words in a row. But now big blue patches are appearing in the sky to make us literally rejoice.

The birds must be ravenous after this continuous downpour, we decided, so we threw handfuls of bread crumbs broadcast. Then peace descended, all the family having gone to see the brook, which usually babbles along but now is a roaring torrent, swollen by the rains.

Quiet is conducive to writing and thinking—how Harriet Beecher Stowe ever wrote Uncle Tom's Cabin, rocking the cradle as she did so, is a miracle!

The quiet, however, doesn't last . . . a tremendous commotion has arisen in the grass out near the turtle pen.

I look out of the window and see a husky father robin putting a big piece of bread into his wife's mouth. How amazing and how chivalrous! I think to myself. And stop writing to witness the sight.

Mealtime for Young Robins.

There he goes again, I notice—but on looking carefully I see that, though it is a big bird he's feeding, it's not his more soberly dressed spouse he is stuffing food into, but a great big baby—almost as big as he is. You know how easily you can tell young birds, no matter how large they are, by the look of their bills and their feathers, and also by the ridiculously helpless fashion in which they keep cheeping for food. I should think that the way they open wide their big yellow bills and keep up that deafening demand for food would make nervous wrecks out of their parents.

Another young heir joined the party a minute later, and didn't they keep father busy, though! Poor man, he once tried to sneak in a bite of bread when they weren't looking and they hopped right over to him and cheeped, and actually looked reproachful. It makes you feel like saying, "You two little humbugs, you're old enough to rustle your own food."

Father evidently thought this episode of the reproachfulness a bit too much, because an hour later when they all came back under my window he changed his tactics. He pulled up a worm, tossed it to his nearer offspring as much as to say, "I'll help you that much and no more," and then turned his back. In a moment the babyish cheeping stopped and the worm became the object of a violent tug of war between the two big young robins.

And then one of them, observing father's cool tail instead of his attentive head, began to hunt for crumbs and eat them quite capably—while the other stood twittering and cheeping, as much a baby as ever, going hungry with crumbs all about him. Finally father, with an eye in their direction, flew away, and they frantically abandoned all thought of crumbs and, with a couple of distracted cheeps, flew after him.

Eagles at Home.

And there's the eagle. I have no first hand experience of his ways but some of the great naturalists have watched him in those remote, precarious places where he rears his young, and their tales are absorbing as any novel. Listen to this extract from "Wilderness Ways" by William J. Long.

Long had followed to its nest a great eagle that he had been hunting for months. In a really marvelous description of the scene with the mother and father circling around the two young birds high above the wilderness, he reaches the point in his narrative where the mother eagle arrives with food in her talons. One eaglet, evidently the more daring, has already flown off—see those old individual differences again?—and the other one is perched trembling on the edge of the nest. She tries to tempt him by flying slowly away with the food and calling to the big young eaglet to come and get it.

"He called after her loudly from the edge of the nest, and spread his wings a dozen times to follow. But the plunge was too awful; his heart failed him; and he settled back in the nest, and pulled his head down into his shoulders, and shut his eyes, and tried to forget that he was hungry. The meaning of the little comedy was plain enough. She was trying to teach him to fly, telling him that his wings were grown and the time has come to use them; but he was afraid.

An Absorbing Adventure.

"In a little while she came back again, this time without food, and hovered over the nest trying in every way to induce the little one to leave it.

"Suddenly, as if discouraged, she rose well above him. I held my breath, for I knew what was coming. The little fellow stood on the edge of the nest, looking down at the plunge which he dared not take. There was a sharp cry from behind, which made him alert, tense as a watchspring. The next instant the mother eagle had swooped, striking the nest at his feet, sending his support of twigs and himself with them out into the air together.

"He was afloat now, afloat on the blue air in spite of himself, and flapped lustily for life. Over him, under him, beside him hovered the mother on tireless wings, calling softly that she was there. But the awful fear of the depths and the lance tops of the spruces was upon the little one; his flapping grew more wild; he fell faster and faster. Suddenly—more in fright, it seemed to me, than because he had spent his strength—he lost his balance and tipped head downward in the air. It was all over now, it seemed; he folded his wings to be dashed to pieces among the trees. Then like a flash the old mother eagle shot under him; his despairing feet touched her broad shoulders, between her wings. He righted himself, rested an instant, found his head; then she dropped like a shot from under him, leaving him to come down on his own wings. A handful of feathers, torn out by his claws, hovered slowly down after them."

Strike A Delicate Balance.

That is really touching and thrilling, is it not? And it says so much to us, which in a way hardly needs to be put into words, but which we parents could well take to heart. See what qualities those birds showed—fine judgment, an uncanny recogniton of individual differences in nestlings—that some need pushing and some do not, and a tender protective feeling, all of which we losely call by the name of instinct. We, of a higher intelligence, could take a leaf from the eagle's and robin's book—we might learn a great deal by joining the Robin and Eagle Parent's association.

We would do well to strike as delicate a balance as they between two extremes—between too much guarding and protectiveness and too little.

Growing children must find their feet, of course. At the same time in finding them they must not have too many falls or they will either be hurt or lost confidence in themselves. Often we need to be on guard but without their knowing it, as the robin was when he tossed the worm to his two big children and then turned his back, and apparently left them to their own devices. As the eagle did when she pushed her young man from the ledge.

Sensible Outlook.

In following an ideal of making our children independent for their own good we must not cut them suddenly adrift and expect them, on a limited experience, to make mature decisions and to be adequate as adults.

We must remember that in their teens, when a mother may have to look up to meet her son's eyes or a father may find his daughter's bonny head almost on a level with his own, it does not mean they are full-fledged. They are still a mingling of the mature and the immature.

We must take that into account, so that we do not expect either too much or too little—but just enough, as did the robin and the eagle.

Point the Toes Straight Ahead for Foot Comfort

Position Also Minimizes Size of Shoe.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Are your feet happy?

A new form of beauty address that! Not a bad one, either, to apply to other features beside feet? You could say fairly enough, "Are your teeth happy? Your eyes? Your complexion? O, and your figure, by all means!"

But the feet have a happiness all their own—or a sadness. And it seems from a recent report given out by Dr. William M. Scholl, who has a case record of more than fifty thousand pairs of ailing feet, that feet keep on giving what might be a whole countryside of glad girls a look of gloom.

Dr. Scholl says that modern civilization has strengthened our brain power, but weakened our feet, because we no longer walk enough to give feet proper exercise. We ride though the destination is but a few blocks away.

The extremes of fashion and abuses of the feet in the desire to be smartly shod are blamed for the fact that now seven out of ten persons have foot trouble.

Known by Their Walk.

If you want to get an idea of just who these unhappy seven sisters out of the ten may be, all you need do is to stroll along a busy street and observe how people walk. The three lucky ones will swing along with an easy, elastic stride, erect and buoyant. The unlucky seven may be counted among those who lean their heads forward, wear slumped chests, shoulders and abdomen.

"For every one you see with feet pointing straight ahead and with a light graceful step," the foot authority observes, "you'll see many others with feet turning out at perceptible angles and coming down heavily on their heels. This puts a strain on the arches. This fault in walking often develops into flat foot, if the position of the toes is not corrected."

I wish parents would be more observant in regard to their youngsters' toes. It's so easy to correct bad habits in childhood. But if you walk along with toes pointed out for twenty, thirty, or forty years, it's a terribly difficult job to learn the proper way.

Point the Toes Ahead.

I have sort of a complex on this subject of pointing the toes ahead. And rising up and down smartly on the foot when you stride along. I don't think that there is one thing in the whole category of advice on youth preservation that can compare in importance with this. The age you can incorporate in the walk is simply overwhelming. And a shame, too.

And another vastly important thing to women, whose nether extremities are not as shapely and refined as they might be. Pointing the toes straight ahead minimizes the size of feet. The moment you spread the foot out at an angle the optical illusion is one of greater breadth and size of shoe. That fact alone ought to set women to walking the plank line without a turn of the toes.

Instead of trying to crowd feet into smaller sized shoes—try this forward movement of the foot in a right sized shoe, instead. And when sitting, too, remember that that "forward front" of the foot is the most flattering command you can give the resting foot. If you are seated and you spread those feet out at an angle, the effect is not only of greater size, but of sheer ugliness of line.

Danger in High Heels.

But to get back to the more scientific slant on the unhappy feet. Heels so high that they throw the body's weight forward on the ball of the foot cause arch depression and calluses, burning sensations on the soles and corns on and between the toes. At the first signs of an ache or pain in the arch or up the back of the leg, action should be taken. In the early stages of foot weakness, the arches can be strengthened with exercises. Rising on the ball of the foot and down lightly on the heel helps strengthen the long arch that extends from heel to toe.

Corns, calluses, and bunions are indications of foot weakness beside their own individual complications. The correct type of footwear simply has to be adopted to straighten out the joint of the great toe that shows sign of enlargement.

Ingrown toenails are caused by improper cutting of the nails and tight shoes. The nails should be cut once every week with nippers straight across. Don't cut the corners back deep or you'll get into some real foot trouble.

Simple Exercise Does Wonders.

I was just told about the ankle reducing value of an exercise that is wonderful, too, for arch weakness. It's simple to do and you can pause in your day's occupation frequently and do it. Simply rise up on the toes and down. But when your heels are down then lift the toes up off the floor and let them down. Repeat first rising movement, then the second. Do this about thirty times at each stretch.

When you try it, you will see for yourself that there is a tug on the ankle flesh and leg. If you will keep at this exercise two or three times a day for a month, you will see a noticeable change in the ankle and leg circumference.

With the exercise, the ankle and leg it was worked on was presented, too, and it was something not to be ashamed to parade the beach with, I'm here to say.

The CALENDAR

by Edgar Wallace

INSTALLMENT XI.

Conclusion.

HILLCOTT, leaning over Garry's shoulder, prompted him as he drew up a plan of Welbury house.

"There's another bedroom there," he pointed. "There's the landing, and that sticking out bit is the dressing room or bathroom. There's the window—there's another one there. There's the bed—a very nice bed, too, though personally I like a bed to be a bed and not covered with cupids and whatnots."

Garry sketched the marvelous bed.

"And there's the safe." Hillcott pointed. "Put an 'e' against it, for 'easy.' It's about so high from the floor." He indicated his throat. "You can't see it; there's a little picture that hides the door of the safe."

"A picture of what?" asked Garry.

"Young women," said Hillcott. "It's classical—they've got no clothes on. The frame works on a hinge—it opens like that." He waggled his hand to and fro.

"Supposing she's got a gun?" said John.

"Don't be silly!" said Hillcott outrageously. "If she had a gun she'd only shoot herself. Women can't use firearms, as all the world knows. Now listen, captain, I could do this job for you sweet."

Garry shook his head.

"No, you're not coming near the place."

"It's not a job for an amateur," said Hillcott.

"I'm not an amateur, I'm a professional bad man," said Garry grimly. "Now tell me where that ladder's kept?"

It was kept, as Hillcott explained, in a potting shed behind the hedge, and he drew Garry's attention to the fact that he had not drawn the hedge.

"Now, Hillcott, you know nothing about this."

"Naturally," said Hillcott complacently.

"You're not coming into it at all."

Hillcott smiled.

"Don't worry about me; I know how to talk to a judge."

"I know," agreed Garry. "That's what I'm afraid of. If anybody goes to prison it will be Mr. Dory or me—probably both."

John blinked hard.

"That'll be very interesting.

"You won't go to prison," said Hillcott. "If you do, ask to be sent to Parkhurst; the food's better."

"What is it like at Brixton? I'd rather be in town."

Hillcott, who had very little sense of humor, accepted the inquiry literally and was explaining the relative values of prison dietaries when an idea struck him, and he turned to Garry.

"I know what you're going after—that hundred!" And, when Garry nodded: "I'll go and watch and see when the lights go out," he said.

"Now listen, Hubert! You'll stay here with the housemaid and establish an alibi. Ask her to sit up with you."

"I'd sooner do six months!" said Hillcott loudly.

"You're out of this, Hubert—you understand?"

"What do we want in the way of clothes?" asked John.

The novelty of the situation was brightening up an otherwise dismal prospect.

They would want, explained Hillcott, rubber overshoes and gloves, preferably thin gloves to work in. Gloves were an essential part of the burglar's equipment; they left no finger marks. And a little electric torch was necessary. There was one upstairs, he remembered. And also a pair of thick socks.

"To put on your feet?" asked the interested John.

"Put 'em on the top of the ladder, so that you don't make a noise against the brick work. But for the Lord's sake don't forget to bring 'em back—they've got your name on!"

"Do we want a jimmy?"

HILLCOTT made faces to express his derision.

"A jimmy! Why, a paper knife ain't necessary! I'll go and see if I can work out the combination—jag jug jog jig, beg big bog bag, din, dun, don den."

"Look at my hand," said Garry, when he had gone. It was trembling.

"That's not too good," said Dory.

"I'll get over that in a minute," said Garry. "It isn't the fear of burgling a house, it's the thought that I can go tomorrow to Garth and Innsbrook and stop that notice."

"Tomorrow? When is the Calendar published?"

"In the afternoon."

"The warning off notice will be there—"

"It won't!" Garry almost shouted the words. "If I have to kill somebody it won't!"

Then came Hillcott, unbidden, carrying in his hand a little red notebook. For a moment Garry thought that it might contain some secret instrument for the accomplishment of his purpose.

"I forgot all about this," said Hillcott.

"What is it?" asked Garry curiously.

The man was turning the thing over in his hand, rubbing off against his cuff the dust that covered one side of the book; a reprehensible practice of Hillcott's but one which Garry was prepared for the moment to overlook.

"Do you remember old Lascarne," he began.

"Mr. Lascarne—yes," said Garry. "I don't have to exercise my memory very hard. He was here tonight."

"Do you remember old Mr. Lascarne losing this, the week he was here at Ascot?"

Garry frowned.

"Why, of course. You looked for it and couldn't find it. I'll give it to him tomorrow. Where did you find it?"

"In the cupboard under the stairs."

As Hillcott handed the book across, something fluttered to the floor.

"What's that?"

"A bill," said Hillcott.

Garry looked at him sternly.

"I supposed there's nothing in this pocketbook you haven't read?"

"Nothing at all," said Hillcott. "Otherwise"—this with great unction—"how did I know it was old Lascarne's?"

Garry opened the bill and looked at it uncomprehendingly. It was a hotel bill—a Liverpool hotel—and it was made out to Mr. and Mrs. Sundridge. Even then he did not understand. And then dimly he remembered the scene in that very room on the morning of the first day of Ascot, and Willie's accusation, and Wenda's indignant denial. Here was the bill, in Henry Lascarne's pocketbook.

"Well, I'll be—" began Garry.

Fate had given him a tremendously powerful weapon, a weapon he would not scruple to use if the occasion arose.

Under the direction of Hillcott he equipped himself for the evening's work. Hillcott refused to be left behind; he also was a holder of ladders, and might be—probably would be—invaluable on the field of action.

The thin gloves were most difficult to come by. Garry ransacked his bureau to find two pairs. Eventually Hillcott got them from the cook—two pairs of cotton gloves, one white, one a genteel grey. They had been bought in Ostend.

"It's funny, you wouldn't think the old girl had ever been out of England, would you? She went on a two days' excursion—"

"Spare me details of the cook's follies," said Garry.

He tried on the gloves; they would serve. Hillcott had found a couple of electric torches, and there were rubber goloshes in plenty. Garry reduced the lights in the study to one, and they crept out into the garden.

THE easiest way would be through the garden itself, which adjoined Welbury; but Hillcott counseled the road.

"There's nobody about at this time of night," he said. "The village copper goes home at nine. His wife's expecting a baby. The patrol sergeant went by a quarter of an hour ago—I saw the light of his bicycle."

They walked in single file along the dark road. On the right, midway between the two houses, was a narrow lane, and, passing this, Garry threw up the light of his lamp, more to test it than for any other purpose.

"Don't go flashing that about," began Hillcott sharply. "Is there anything there, sir?"

Garry had stopped. Parked in the lane he had seen a car.

"That's a pretty big fellow," he said. "Come and have a look, John."

It was not only big but new, an Italian car of imposing performance, with an enormous upstanding radiator that had glittered in the rays of his lamp. It was brand new, the paint work shone like lacquer. It could not have come from the makers' hands more than a few days before. Throwing his lamp on the speedometer, Garry saw that it had covered less than a thousand miles.

"Who on earth leaves a brand new Isotta in a dark lane with all its lights out?" he asked. "Who's got an Isotta round here, Hillcott?"

Hillcott had never seen it before, did not even guess its ownership. Garry was puzzled. He walked around the machine. Three huge suit cases were strapped to the grid behind. There was a heavy overcoat on the driver's seat.

"That's odd," he said, and came back to the main road.

Before he had time to discuss the mystery of the car he saw a figure walking slowly towards it. He was in the middle of the road, and recognized the shape and movement of it.

"You two fellows get back and try the garden entrance," he whispered. "I'll go on. I think he spotted me."

"Who is it?" asked John.

Garry signaled him to make a quick retirement. He himself went on, lighting a cigaret. Lascarne stood in the middle of the road, waiting for him. He wore a light overcoat turned up to his ears, for the night was chilly.

"Hello! Taking a stroll?" he asked. "I'm just off to Ascot."

"I thought you were spending the night here."

"Don't be absurd, my dear fellow. I couldn't stay the night—Willie's in town. I'm walking over to collect my car at Ascot. I say, I'm terribly sorry about this business."

"I think you said that before," said Garry.

For the moment he had forgotten "this business," and he certainly had no wish to be reminded of stewards and racing calendars and the consequence of his Ascot indiscretion.

"Wenda's terribly upset. She's gone to bed."

"Willie's in town, is he?" asked Garry, more to change the subject than from any interest in Willie's movements.

"Yes; he's coming down tomorrow. What are you doing out so late?"

It was a bold question, coming from Henry. Mr. Lascarne was, as a rule, entirely incurious about other people's business.

He passed on, but Lascarne's voice brought him back.

"I say"—he was awkward and embarrassed—"I hope you don't think I'm too much of a pup . . . but if things aren't going too well with you—I mean financially—you can—er—call on me for anything you want—I mean . . . money. . . ."

He was so embarrassed, so obviously sincere, that Garry warmed to him. Henry Lascarne was the last man in the world he expected would offer him help; it was another of those curiously unexpected things that happen in real life.

"That's terribly good of you, Henry; but really, I don't want money."

"I know I'm not a friend of yours," Lascarne stumbled on. "I mean, I'm not exactly—"

"I know what you mean, old boy." Garry patted him on the shoulder. "I'm awfully pleased that you feel that way, and I'm grateful. But honestly, I'm rolling in wealth."

HE ould have gone on, but Henry again interrupted him.

"I mean, I'm not giving you something for nothing. I should charge you interest and all that sort of thing, because it's business."

Garry's laugh stopped him.

"Don't spoil it, Henry. I'm leaving you with a feeling that you're a generous old soul, and you insist on representing yourself as a usurer."

Henry puzzled him; but then, Henry had always puzzled him a little bit, he realized.

He was nearing Welbury house when he heard the sound of a motor car coming towards him and wondered if it were the new machine. The noise it made, however, was familiar. The big tourer slowed as it passed him, and he saw its tail light disappearing into the drive of Welbury house. Here was a new complication, for he had recognized the car as Willie's.

Going ahead cautiously, he turned into the drive, and had another surprise, for he found the car parked on the grass verge in the shade of a big chestnut. The radiator was hot. Why had Willie left it here? There was a big stable yard into which it was usually driven.

Garry went farther along, keeping a sharp lookout for the man, but did not see him. The house was in darkness. Wenda's room he could now distinguish, thanks to Hillcott's plan. There was no light in her window or in the lower part of the house.

Willie had a room in the farther wing, with obviously a private entrance. He moved noiselessly, keeping to the grass plot, to that wing, but found no evidence that the owner of the house had reached his apartment. Continuing, Garry came to the lower garden, and here he found John Dory and Hillcott and held a whispered council of war.

"It almost looks as if Panniford had come down from London to collect something and he's going away immediately. He's left his car in the drive near the gate."

"Everybody's leaving cars about tonight," said Dory irritably. The adventure had got a little on his nerves.

"We've got to take the risk, anyway," said Garry. "Where's the ladder?"

They found it after a brief search. It was chained to the wall, but then, as Hillcott explained in a whisper, ladders are very often chained to walls without really bothering the people who needed them. With the aid of an ingenious instrument he carried, he wrenched out the staples, and the three men lifted the ladder from the ground. Getting it through the complications of a kitchen garden, through lych gates, around peculiarly acute angles of walls, was a difficult and hair raising business. Hillcott seemed to have the eyes of a cat. He went ahead, with one hand steadying the end of the ladder which the two men carried, and, thanks to his guidance, they were able to reach the lawn without mishap, though John Dory had twice blundered into a frame, happily without hurt, for the glass lid of it was raised.

There was still no sound from the house, and no sign of life or movement. Hillcott drew the socks on to the end of the ladder and himself raised it and placed it gently in position. One of the casement windows was ajar. Again he repeated to Garry the exact location of every article of furniture in the room.

"Up you go," he whispered, and Garry began the ascent.

His heart was beating wildly; he was almost sick with excitement; his mouth and throat were dry; the hands that gripped the side of the ladder were trembling. Worse than this, his legs were curiously powerless; he could hardly drag his feet from rung to rung.

Half way up he stopped to get breath, and to gain resolution and quietude of mind, and then, continuing, he reached the top, pushed open the casement, lifted the catch noiselessly, and, with his head whirling, groped one leg into the room and gently lowered himself to the floor.

THERE was, in this room of Wenda's, a curiously lovely fragrance that was so faint as to be almost imperceptible. He stood in the shadow of the curtains, his heart quaking, listening. There was no sound but the loud thumping of his own heart. At that moment he would have given all he possessed to be safely in his own study.

And then there came to him a realization of what it would mean to him if he found what he had set out to find, and that thought steadied and nerved him.

Still no sound. He put out his hand gingerly and groped along the wall. Presently he found the outline of a picture frame. He pulled at its edge, as Hillcott had directed. It swung back like a door, and beneath he touched a cold steel knob.

He listened again; there was no sound. Wenda was sleeping heavily. It was odd to think that she was here, within reach of him, the woman who had betrayed him, who had lied him to ruin, sleeping peacefully. It was unbelievable, unrealizable.

He threw a pinpoint of light from his torch onto the dial beneath the knob of the safe and began working out combinations, listening for the click which would tell him he had found the first letter. Hillcott's hearing must have been more acute than his, for he heard nothing. He had tried twenty combinations and was growing desperate. Then, suddenly, a voice said:

"Who's there?"

It was Wenda. He stood still, hardly daring to breathe.

"Who's there?" asked the voice again, and he heard the creak of the bed as somebody moved, and the patter of bare feet on the parquet, that scraping sound of a woman drawing on her shoes.

He edged nearer to the window, when suddenly came a click and a flood of light. Wenda, her dressing gown wound round her, stood on the other side of the bed, staring at him.

"Garry!" she gasped. "Garry!"

He saw her eyes go swiftly to the bolted door, then they came back to him. Then they fell upon a little clock on a shelf near where he stood. He noticed mechanically that it was an alarm clock, and that the alarm hand was pointing at four. Why did Wenda want waking at four, he wondered vaguely.

"Good God! Garry! You! What are you doing here? You've been trying to open my safe!"

It brought his mind back to his objective and to his own position. He felt uncomfortably foolish.

"Yes, I've been trying to open your safe."

It was a futile, feeble rejoinder, but there was no other that suggested itself at that moment.

"What do you want?" she asked,

What did he want? Even that important detail had gone out of his mind.

"Money," he said.

Her brows met.

"Money?"

He nodded.

"A certain hundred pound note."

He was feeling more sure of himself, less of a fool.

"O, I see," she nodded. Then the corner of her lips curled. "I never had it. I'd forgotten that little fiction of yours, how ridiculous!"

"It doesn't make me laugh," said Garry.

There was a little pause; he saw the color coming back to the pale face. It was not embarrassment but anger which moved her.

"Get out of here before I call somebody."

She reached for the telephone. Garry could afford to smile.

"It's all right, my dear; you needn't bother to phone—the wires are cut. I have forgotten nothing." He pointed to the wall. "Open that safe."

"Are you mad?" she gasped.

"No, I'm very sane. I want that safe opened and I want to see what's inside it," he said.

HE was cool enough now. She had lost the first round of the fight, and knew it.

"If you don't get out of here I'll call Willie," she said. "It is monstrous."

"I shouldn't call Willie if I were you. It is much easier to open the safe. Just think how foolish I shall look if the thing I expect to find there isn't there at all!"

Again she looked at the door, and now her manner changed.

"O, Garry, don't be a fool! You're drunk! Just imagine how ridiculous you'd look if I sent for the servants and a policeman. Whatever induced you to do a stupid thing like this? Come over and see me in the morning—and talk things over."

Garry shook his head.

"I'll talk things over here and now. By the morning that note will be burnt. It would break your heart, but you'd do it. I want a hundred pound note with a message written on the back."

He could speak with assurance, almost with certainty. He knew now that the note was there, would have wagered his life on it. Wenda would never have parleyed if the safe had been empty. She was fencing for time, could even in her rage simulate the old attitude of geniality and friendship. How much of a simulation it was she showed him immediately, when her tone changed.

"I'll see you dead before I give it to you!" she breathed, and his heart leaped.

"A word will open this safe. Give me that word," he said.

She was clasping and unclasping her hands, her bright eyes never leaving his.

"O, Garry, don't be so melodramatic! Now go home and be sensible."

"I want to search that safe," said Garry, "and I'll not go until I do."

"Then you'll stay here until I send for the police," she said furiously.

His answer was to strip his gloves and throw them on the bed.

"Send for them. I'm sorry now I cut the wire."

He looked around the room. It was quite a charming room. Wenda did not hide her fury now: she almost sprang towards him.

"You beast . . . you cad!"

"Will you open the safe?"

"I'll be damned if I will!" she breathed. "You should have sent Hillcott to do this work—he wouldn't have wakened me. I should have left it to the alarm clock—"

"What's happening at four this morning?" he asked.

She drew back as though she had been struck.

"I—I don't know what you mean," she faltered.

"I notice your alarm clock is set at four."

"I never use it . . . it's been like that since I had it."

He lifted the clock and was about to turn the hands when she snatched it from him.

"How stupid you are! Garry, you're going on like a man in a play."

She looked towards the safe.

"You don't imagine you'd find anything here, do you? I paid the note into the bank."

"Did you rub out the message?" he asked.

"Of course I did."

No simulation now. She was being quite frank, to all appearance.

He shook his head.

"The message was written with indelible pencil and it couldn't be rubbed out—I suppose you discovered that for yourself."

"Will you go?" she said. "If Willie knew you were here—"

"Call him," he suggested, and she took hold of herself, checked the exasperation that was near to panic.

"You're blackmailing me!"

"Yes, I'm blackmailing you."

He took from his pocket a little red cover.

"Do you see this?"

She looked at it; for a moment it had no meaning.

"What is it?"

"Something to go into your safe when it is opened," he said slowly and deliberately; "a pocketbook containing a hotel bill. The Adelphi hotel, Liverpool, . . Mr. and Mrs. Sundridge. Somebody kept it as a souvenir and lost it."

HER face had gone a shade paler. Knowing all that he knew a few days later, he he could never understand what she found in that bill so discreditable that its possession by himself was unbearable to her. Was there an especial romance in this, or was it that she wished to clear up the one incident that might bring her into court and disturb the serenity of the life she had planned?

She walked swiftly past him, turned the knob deftly and surely, and he watched.

"Sin—s-i-n," he repeated. "Hubert didn't think of that."

She was going to put her hand into the deep recess that was revealed when the circular steel door swung open, when he caught her by the wrist.

"I'll look."

He pulled out paper after paper. Almost the first things he found were the bearer bonds that she had lost. He stuffed them in his pocket and continued his search. Then his fingers closed on something crisp, and he drew out a banknote and could have shouted with joy when he saw the blurred message written on its back.

"What have you got to say?" he breathed. "Here's the twenty thousand you lost and the message you never received."

He looked at the note again.

"You tried to rub it out, but you couldn't."

"Give me that book." Her voice was hard, unemotional.

His heart was full of sorrow for her in that moment of her humiliation.

"Wenda, how could you do it? How could you do it?

"Give me that book."

He took the bonds from his pocket and turned them over.

"There's fifteen thousand here. You used the other five. You thought you might as well hang for a sheep as for a lamb. Wenda, you fool, if you'd wanted money—"

"If I wanted money!" Her pent fury burst forth in a torrent. "Who are you? What are you to sit in judgment on me? I hate you! I've always hated you! You had no right to give me the money. You knew I was poor, that I hated poverty, that I'd got a sot of a husband; you tempted me—the only kind of temptation that a man like you could offer me! Now give me the book and get out!"

He held up his hand suddenly to check her. He had heard a sound outside, the creak of a floorboard.

"Where does Willie sleep?" he said in a low voice.

"He's in town—" she began impatiently.

"He's not in town; his car passed me on the road. I saw it on the drive as I came up."

Her mouth opened in consternation.

"You're trying to frighten me, you're lying!"

"Don't be absurd."

He caught her by the arm and drew her to the window. From where they stood he could see the dim lights of the car twinkling through the overhanging leaves of the trees.

"It's there."

He could hear her quick breathing.

"How long has it been there?"

"Over half an hour. The radiator was hot when I passed."

"But ——"

The palm of his hand went over her mouth. His lips went close to her ear.

"I saw the door handle turning. Is it locked?"

She nodded.

"Wenda! Open this damned door, will you? You've got a man there—I know you've got a man there!"

It was the roar of Willie's bull voice.

"Open the door or I'll break it in!"

The door shook furiously. Wenda was as white as death. She looked from the door to a small table by the side of the bed. For the first time Garry noticed that her open dressing case was there, and that on a chair near by were her folded clothes.

"What am I to do?"

He thought quickly.

"There's nothing for you to do. It's up to me."

To her horror he walked straight to the door, turned the key, slipped back the bolt and flung it open. Willie came staggering in. He was in disheveled evening dress; his tie had worked round under his ear, his hair was untidy, his red, inflamed face distorted with fury.

"Ah, Garry!" He almost screamed the words. "Garry Anson, eh. I guessed it!"

MOLLY came flying in, her face as white as death, drawing on her silken dressing wrap as she came.

"What is it? Willie, what is it?"

She stared at Garry, unbelievingly, and then at Wenda; and then her eyes wandered to the open safe, and Garry, watching her, saw her smile and knew that she understood.

"You want to know what it's all about, do you?" quavered Willie. "That's what it's all about!" He pointed to Garry. "I've known this has been going on for some time, now I've caught you!"

"Don't make a fool of yourself," said Garry.

"You thought I'd gone to town, eh, didn't you? You thought I was out of the way—you came to make it up, I suppose?"

He drew near threateningly, but Garry did not move.

"If I had a gun I'd shoot you, you swine!" He glared at his wife. "As for you, you little brute, you lying, deceitful . . ."

He lurched drunkenly towards her. Garry caught him by the lapels of his coat and swung him round.

"Old boy, when you've recovered from your hysteria you will see that a burglarly has been committed." He pointed to the safe.

"Don't tell me a lot of ——"

"Shut up! Do you want all the world to know what a mug you are?" said Garry, and pushed him bodily toward the evidence of burglary.

He staggered up, blinked at the open safe door and then at the stockinged top of the ladder against the window.

"Burglarly?" He rubbed his head stupidly, and then glowered down at Garry. "What are you doing here?"

"I'm being a good neighbor," said Garry lightly.

It was here that Wenda found her voice.

"Are you satisfied?" she asked.

"What's he doing here?" Willie pointed a shaking forefinger at the intruder. "That's what I want to know."

"If it comes to that," said Garry, "what is John Dory doing here?"

He walked to the window and whistled. John Dory, who had stood on the lawn, undecided whether he should fly or stand his ground, came to the foot of the ladder.

"Just step up and meet a friend of mine, will you, John?"

John came up with visions of prison and solitary cells dangling before his eyes. His first words, when he reached the window level, were:

"Well, I'm in it, too! I suppose we'll get ten years for this."

"You saw the burglar, didn't you?" said Garry loudly. "You remember, we found the ladder against the window, and we came over to see what help we could give."

Willie's fury had died out. He lumbered across the room to where Wenda was sitting, and laid his heavy hand on her shoulder.

"Sorry, old girl," he mumbled.

GARRY took Molly by the arm and led her to the door.

"You toddle off to bed. I'll not be seeing you in the morning; I've got a long journey ahead of me, but you will dine with me tomorrow night and we'll fix things."

He kissed her, and Wenda permitted herself to smile sourly.

"Replenishing your fortunes, Garry?" she asked acidly.

Garry nodded.

"Something like that," he said.

Willie went away, at his suggestion, to interview the police—it had been Hillcott's idea to cut the telephone wires, on the whole a very excellent idea. He waited until the drone of Willie Panniford's car had died away, and then Garry held up the little red book. She would have snatched it from him, but Garry had another request to make—a letter that he had brought with him, addressed to the stewards. For possibly it needed this confession to support the evidence of the banknote, and with amazing readiness she signed the document.

"I'm terribly sorry, Garry, that this happened as it has. I think I told you once before that I get panic stricken—I'm afraid you'll have to put it all down to panic and hysteria and all the odd things that women plead in extenuation of their most desperate deeds!"

She was flippant, almost gay, and he wondered why.

"You'll marry Molly, of course? I always thought you would—I hope you'll be happy. I suppose you don't want me to give you a receipt for this book?"

There was a touch of the sardonic in her voice.

"All you need do is to say 'thank you.'"

"Why 'thank you'?" she asked innocently.

"I've saved your fair name."

She laughed at this.

"I'm sorry you haven't got all your money back, but really my friendship was worth five thousand pounds. I've taught you something about women that you didn't know before. As for Henry—well, I'm awfully fond of Henry. By the way, have you seen his new car—that beautiful Isotta?"

Garry walked to the door and paused.

"Why did you want to be wakened at four?"

She waved him out.

"Curiosity brought trouble to the Garden of Eden, Garry," she said, and he remembered a certain morning at Ascot and shuddered.

They were waiting for him below, Dory, with the socks in his hand, all atwitter to be gone, Hillcott a little bored. They passed back into the house through the garden. It was nearly three o'clock before they finished celebrating the great event, and then Garry's chauffeur brought the Rolls around.

As they moved down towards the road a car roared past. Garry had a glimpse of it—a brand new Isotta, with three big trunks piled on behind. It was half past four. Wenda had not gone back to bed again, and the alarm that was to call her at four o'clock for an important engagement was unnecessary.

GARRY heard all about it when he came back from Doncaster. He stopped in London to collect the "Calendar," which was wet from the printers' hands.

"They must have gone straight to the continent, she and Henry. Willie, of course, was heartbroken for nearly an hour. There'll be a divorce, of course, and then I hope Mrs. Arkwright will make an honest man of Willie. But I do wish I knew where Wenda had gone—it would be so embarrassing to meet her when we're on our honeymoon, Garry."

"Look at this."

He picked up the Calendar from the table and paraded it triumphantly. It was the same sedate publication she knew, but with a difference. On the front page was a blank space, where evidently a notice had been expunged at the last moment.

"The printers had to saw off the tops of the type with a chisel," said Garry. "It was my warning off notice. I'm going to have that Calendar framed!"

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

Articles in Your Home, No Longer in Use, May Be Just the Things Needed to Relieve the Tedium of an Invalid's Life.

MOST of us have some cross to bear or at least we think we have until we hear about the case of some one who is worse off than we are. Perhaps the most trying fate to bear is that of the invalid, and particularly the invalid who has been denied not only his health but who hasn't much in the way of earthly goods either. These are the people you can help—people whom you probably would have helped before had you known about them.

It may be that you can provide these shut-ins with the articles that will help to make their illness less of a burden. Excerpts from their letters follow:

"Dear Miss Brown: I recently had an operation and am recovering in this home, for I have no family or friends to whom I can go. I need an elastic stocking, size 7, and an abdominal belt, size 40. If you can get these for me I shall be most thankful. "R. B."

It is most important that this woman secure the articles she asks for immediately. She is anxious to recover her health and begin looking for employment again.

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I am a patient in a tuberculosis sanitarium in South Dakota, and as I haven't any income I try to make a little pin money by doing and selling fancy work. I wonder if one of your readers has any old silk dresses that she is ready to discard. They make lovely pillows and are easily sold. D. B."

It is quite likely that more than one clothes closet will hold the material for one of D. B.'s decorative cushions. Won't you send it to the South Dakota sanitarium?

"Dear Miss Brown: I recently had an operation and have been in the hospital for six months. I need clothing to wear when I am able to be out of doors and I cannot buy it. Do you think you could get me a suit, size 38 or 40; a hat, size 7⅜, and shoes, size 7½ or 8. I am 60 years old and intend to look for some light work as soon as I am able. J. D."

And here's a pitiful case worthy of assistance. Can't you just imagine how happy Mary would be with a radio set? An interested friend writes:

"Dear Miss Brown: I want to tell you about a little friend of mine. Mary is 25 years old, has never walked, cannot use her hands to do fancy work, and has always been too nervous to read, but she's cheerful and her face always wears a smile. Mary's mother is a widow who has to work so Mary is alone all day and with nothing to break the monotony. I know her days must be dull. I think if we could get her a radio set she'd be happier than she's ever been in her life before. Do you know some reader who would give it? "Mrs. J. K."

Surely there is some one in this city with the radio set which will make Mary happy during her lonely days.

These are not the only invalids who have written to me. I have letters from scores of them, most of them asking for articles which have been used in nearly every home. If you have anything about the house which would help to make some invalid more comfortable, won't you write and tell me about it? I shall be happy to place it where it is most needed.

Crutches Offered.

"I have a pair of crutches, medium height, which some one may be able to use. I'll be glad to give them to any one you suggest. Mrs. J. J."

If you've recently had an injury which could be made less uncomfortable with the aid of crutches, here is your opportunity to secure a pair. Write me, if you want them.

Slippers for Pageant.

"Will you try to get some white slippers through your column, low heels, in sizes 6 or 6½ and 4½. My daughter and my niece are to be in a pageant soon and need these and I cannot afford to buy them. "Mrs. F. E."

If you invested in new white slippers this summer perhaps you have last year's to give away. These girls would be happy to get them.

Riding Habit for Some One.

"I have a brown cloth riding suit in fair condition, about size 14, and a pair of riding boots, size 5½ or 6, which I shall be glad to pass on to some girl who is taking up riding. "Mrs. S. A."

To the young working girl of ordinary means, a riding habit usually is a luxury far beyond her reach. Here's a generous offer for one of these girls to take advantage of. Write me, if you wear size 14; please do not telephone.

Pet Recipes

Do you have a favorite recipe that you'd like to pass on to others to enjoy? Address it to "Pet Recipes," Chicago Tribune.

Pear Salad.

8 halves of canned pears.
2 cups canned pear juice.
1 package lemon gelatine.
2 tbsp. chopped preserved ginger.
2 tbsp. ginger sirup.
⅛ tsp. salt.

Heat to the boiling point 8 pears, 2 cups of canned pear juice, 2 tablespoons of chopped preserved ginger, and 2 tablespoons ginger sirup. Remove the pears and arrange, rounded sides up, in a shallow pan. Add ⅛ teaspoon salt and 1 package lemon flavored gelatine to the boiling sirup. Stir until dissolved, then pour over the pears. Chill until set, cut in squares and serve on lettuce garnished with mayonnaise. F. C.

Fruit Cocktail.

1 cup orange or grapefruit pulp
1 diced banana
½ cup sliced peaches
½ cup stoned cherries
½ cup sugar
1-3 cup water

Mix the fruit together. Boil the sugar and water together for five minutes and cool. Pour cold sirup over the fruit. Chill the mixture before serving. M. F.

Pineapple Dessert.

2 cups sugar.
2 cups water.
1 cup chopped diced pineapple.
½ cup lemon juice.
1 cup orange juice.

Boil the sugar and water two minutes. Cool and add the rest of ingredients. Set in the ice box for a few hours. We find this dessert particularly refreshing at this time of the year. M. T.

Potato Salad.

2 cups diced cooked potatoes.
3 hard cooked eggs, diced.
2 tablespoons chopped pimentos.
2 tablespoons chopped onions.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
2-3 cup salad dressing.

Mix the ingredients. Chill. Serve on individual salad plates. Mrs. P. A. M.

Chili Con Carne.

To a can of red kidney beans add one cup tomato purée, 1 teaspoonful chili powder, a bit of onion, chopped if desired, and ¼ pound of ground beef. Cook together for thirty minutes. Salt to taste. H. E. M.

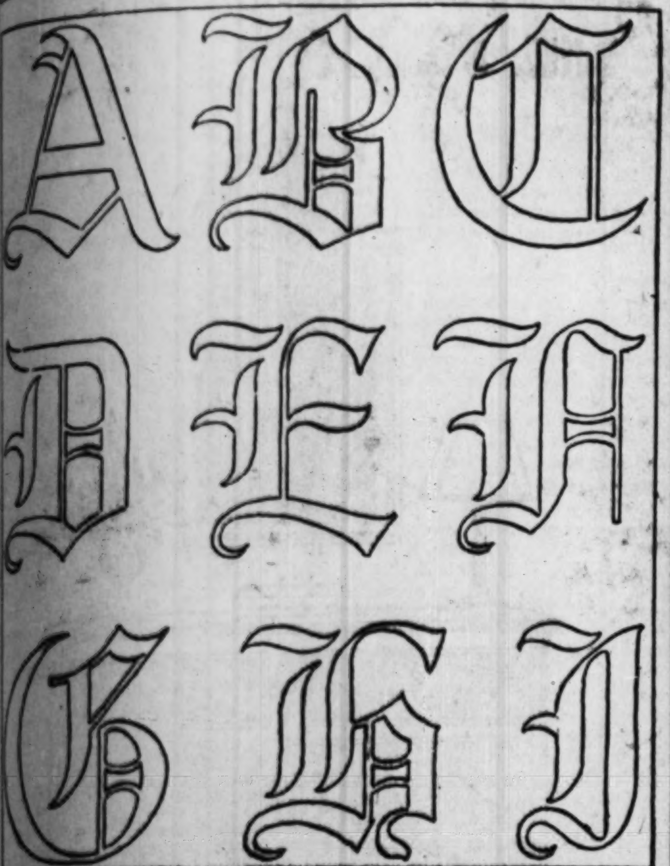
Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

Needlework

By Clotilde



Embroidered Initials Afford a Decorative Finish for Household Linens and Lingerie.

DURING the summer months is a good time to have some pick-up work; and embroidering letters on your household linens and lingerie is a delightful pastime, and adds much to the beauty of anything you may be making.

The alphabet shown today is rather unusual. Most of the work is in the padded satin stitch, with the single line in the outline stitch. If you are not so adept at the work, practice carefully on an old piece of material until you are able to do the work well. To copy the letters use some transfer paper. This may be bought at any artists' supply store. If you can't get transfer paper, the work may be done with a smooth piece of tissue paper. Lay a smooth piece over the letter to be copied, and go over every part of it accurately, using soft, well sharpened pencil. Then lay the penciled side of this paper down on another piece of paper—writing paper is satisfactory—and go over each line again. Use thumb tacks to hold the papers firmly in place while you are working.

Lay this second tracing on your material—traced side down—and go over the letter for the third time. This last work will transfer the marking to the material.

The reason for the second tracing is that the letter would be reversed if the first tracing were transferred to the cloth.

Outline the letter with a single strand of darning cotton. In the first work of outlining a letter, use a small running stitch. These stitches must be evenly taken, so as to perfectly follow the outlines of the letter.

The next step is the padding. This is done by using two strands of embroidery floss and taking chain or running stitches, keeping the stitches short on the under side. The filling should always be heavier in the center of a space, thinning down as the outlines are reached.

In the satin stitch the stitches are at exact right angles to the edge. It is an over and over stitch, and the work always must be done in a frame. Work slowly so that the work will be evenly done. Where there are curves the stitches are taken unusually close together on the inside, and no space is left on the outer edge. Try to have the stitches just meet; never let them overlap.

Answers to Puzzling Problems in Etiquette Are Given Today

By Helen Bartlett

TODAY we must attempt to catch up with a flock of correspondence dealing with many different situations.

"Dear Miss Bartlett: I am taking a position shortly as housekeeper for an elderly gentleman. Please send me your booklets on table setting and service and give me any information about my duties that you think would be helpful. Am I expected to sit at the table with my employer?"

"M. B."

Knowing so little of the circumstances it's a bit hard to give concrete advice, but I should say that you will not be expected to sit at the table with your employer, at least not early in your career as housekeeper. That comes usually after long years of association, if at all.

You are expected, I am sure, to be strictly impersonal and to be absolutely efficient. You should run the house smoothly and economically, bothering your employer as little as possible about things that come under your jurisdiction. You will undoubtedly be expected to keep accounts of expenditures, and to keep them in a businesslike manner. Learn your employer's likes and dislikes in food as quickly and as tactfully as possible. Serve the dishes he expresses a liking for and observe those he refuses, so you can avoid serving them. A good rule, I am sure, will be to observe much and say little. Let him start any conversations concerned with affairs outside household business. Be pleasant, but impersonal, and concentrate on running his house

Yes. Because it makes the woman conspicuous. Smoking among women is not yet so general that smoking on the street or on buses is commonplace. To be conspicuous is to be vul-

E. B.: Two superstitions cling to modern marriage. Every bride wears "something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue," and every bride is firm about not having to walk up the aisle at her wedding rehearsal. Please send a stamped, addressed envelope for answers to your other inquiries.

"What should I wear on a three days' train journey? K. B."

A suit or ensemble or some material that will neither wrinkle nor show dust. For summer silk is very warm—cotton materials are better. If you wear a suit keep a couple of fresh blouses in the upper part of your bag so you can change from day to day and look fresh. Wear comfortable low shoes.

"Would you suggest a gift for a young man friend whose birthday is coming? Would shirts and ties be suitable? L. S."

Shirts and ties would be most intimate; give something less personal—a camera, a pen and pencil set, a billfold, or smoking accessories.

Deep Mourning

"What is correct deep mourning? "H. K."

Lusterless black in silk or wool for dresses and coats; gloves and slippers of black; hose may be gunmetal or black heels. Satin is incorrect. If a hat is worn it should have [illegible]. Jet jewelry is incorrect; if any is worn it should be dull, such as black pearls.

It is largely a matter of sentiment or personal feeling. If such reminders of the past are not unpleasant she could continue to wear them. When a woman resumes her maiden name, however, she discards her rings.

Mrs. J. B.: Please send a stamped, addressed envelope for my trousseau lists.

Bridal Photographs.

"When are the bridal photographs taken? O. McC."

Generally the bride has her picture taken alone the day before the wedding or after the final fitting of her wedding gown. The entire party is usually taken at the bride's home before they leave for the church. There is no rule about this, however. It can be done whenever it is convenient.

Perfectly, if you know the bride quite well

"Are canapés served at the table or in the living room before dinner? "K. F."

Either. If they are the accompaniment of a cocktail they are usually served in the living room.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you care to see it in print address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Another Dream Comes True.

The night before our club meeting I dreamed that one of our ex-members, who had temporarily resigned because he was going to college came to our party and that he had a mustache. I noticed this, especially, as he had always said that he disliked them.

In the middle of our party the next night who should walk in but this fellow and if he didn't have a mustache. I certainly was surprised to see him, as I did not even know that he was coming. C. L.

STUBBORN RASH YIELDS AT ONCE TO RESINOL

"I had a very stubborn rash on my legs. It itched and burned and I could get no relief from anything I tried until I learned of Resinol. This ointment cooled and soothed it, and quickly cleared away the trouble. I also find Resinol is very good for chafing." (Signed)—
C. E. Cheesman, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Whether it is a single pimple or a pronounced case of acne—a mild rash or a form of eczema—a minor sore or tormenting piles, Resinol Ointment has proved to possess almost startling powers of relief and healing. Sold in all drug stores.

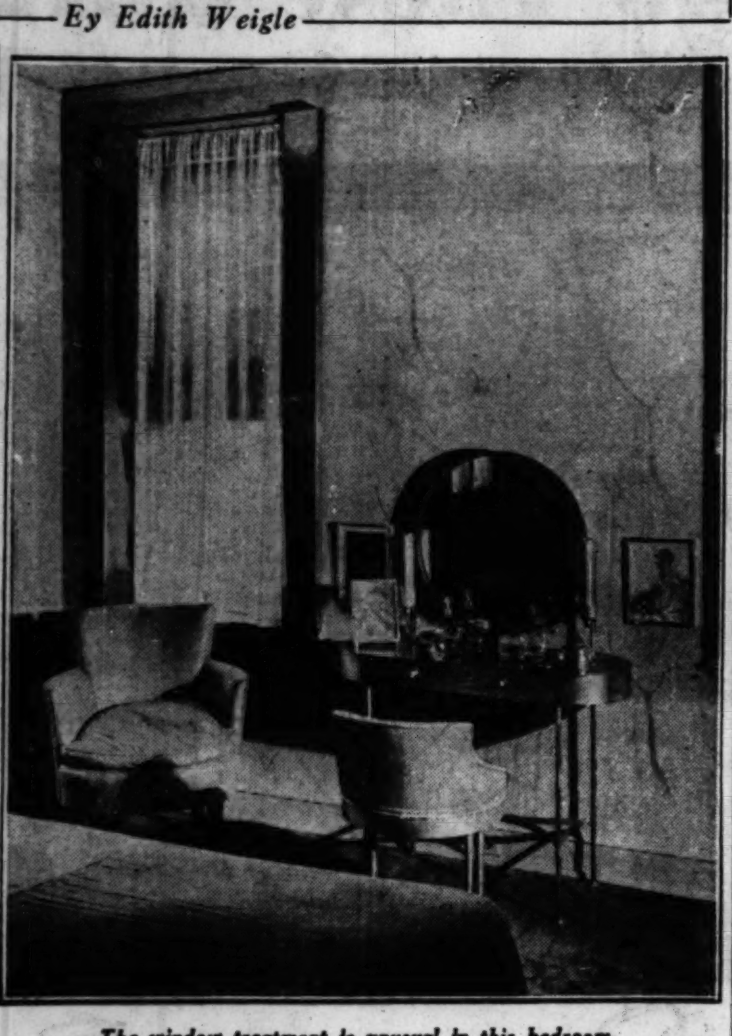
Apartment Reflects the Modern

By Edith Weigle

Chicagoans Are Becoming More and More Interested in Contemporary Furnishings; the Apartment of John W. Root Is a Case in Point.



The window treatment is unusual in this bedroom.

THE newest and smartest Chicago homes are going in more and more for modern decoration and furnishings. At least one room is done in modern vein, in most of them, while many are modern from attic to cellar. Penthouses, especially, afford excellent example of contemporary styles.

While New York and its environs still lead the country in popular demand for modernism, the urge for it is gradually increasing in the middle west. Numerous examples might be cited of apartments, town and country houses that exhibit the finest types of 1931 furniture, rugs, draperies, etc.

Among them is the new Chicago apartment of John W. Root, designed and arranged by the owner. The living room has cream walls, a tawny gold rug, and gold satin and varied shades of brown rep upholstered furniture. The lighting fixtures are of gold metal and the gold net window draperies complete the color scheme.

The fireplace exhibits an unusual treatment. The wall above it is covered with gold leaf on which David Leavitt has painted an unusual decoration in the modern manner in golden browns, greens and blues. The hearth, itself, consists of a built-in screen of polished bronze slanting sheets, or louvers. The heat comes from behind these layers of metal.

The bedroom, a picture of which is shown, has a henna carpet and maple furniture with a gray red finish. The wall paper is salmon peach and blue, accented by the blue curtains at the windows and the white metal dressing table and chair. The latter is one of those delightfully practical revolving chairs.

On either side of the round mirror of the dressing table are tubular lights with adjustable shades, permitting the direction and intensity of light to be controlled.

The window jambs are of white metal with a mat or satin finish and they add a decided decorative note to the room. There is also a chaise longue, not shown in the picture, which is covered in a material showing shades of blue and lavender.

The other photograph shows a corner of the dining room, most striking with its black rubber carpet, powder blue and silver wall paper and white metals trimmings. The chairs are upholstered with a white fabric closely resembling leather.

The exposed woodwork is ebonized. Black window draperies are so hung that both of the windows can be draped separately or together, or the draperies can be pulled back behind white metal pilasters in the corners. The Venetian blinds are finished with aluminum paint.

In front of the windows, mounted on tall tripods are two miniature models of the figure by John Storr which crowns the Board of Trade building, the goddess Ceres. They are executed in white metal.

The table in this room is of great interest. It is constructed of nickel chromium steel with a plate glass top. The glass panels on the sides are mirrored, and the center panel is sand blasted and conceals lights which are placed in troughs beneath. A switch permits two different systems of lighting.

Two side tables are of similar construction.

The effect of the whole apartment is sophisticated and chic. I understand that Mr. Root designed and arranged everything himself, down to the most minute detail.

Circus Is Next on Sally's List of Good Times

Rush Letters, Children, for Your Invitations.

By Sally Joy Brown.

MY announcement this morning is just the most exciting kind of news, boys and girls. It tells you that our next party will be out on the lake front, under the big top, with Ringling Brothers' and Barnum & Bailey circus on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 13. I know you'll all be anxious to attend this party because there isn't any one who doesn't love the circus, and this particular circus is such a magnificent one that it simply takes your breath away.

There are one hundred of the funniest clowns ever grouped together in one show. There are acrobats, tight rope walkers, trapezists, and other daring performers. There are 735 horses, many elephants, and 1,000 other wild animals in the menagerie. There are performing dogs and seals that not only toss a ball around but that actually play music.

Rodeo Entertainment.

There are equestrians who perform the most daring and unique feats of horsemanship and there is a rodeo replete with cowboys and cowgirls.

There are thrilling acts and daring stunts, and there is so much to see that several rings and stages must be kept going all the time. It is really no small wonder that Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus is known the world over as "the greatest show on earth."

As usual, I shall invite one hundred boys and girls to this marvelous party and I want them to be the ones who will get the greatest fun out of it. Each of you write me a letter telling what you like about a circus and why you think you'd have a grand time at this one. You have until Thursday to compose and get the letter to me, for on that day I shall select my guests.

Observe Requirements.

Every boy and girl in and around Chicago who likes the circus is eligible to enter this competition; the only requirements is that you write me a letter which will convince me that you do. In order to send you an invitation, I shall have to know your full name and address and your age, so do not forget include these items when writing. I'll tell you more about this party and more about what you may expect to see at the circus in tomorrow's paper.

Now here's the news that every one who wants to see Mitzi Green at the Oriental theater next Thursday has been awaiting.

The names of the boys and girls who wrote winning letters and will receive invitations to the party follow:

Maiden Meditations

—By Sara Moore

LOUDER, LADIES.

If it is love that makes this world
Spin 'round and 'round each day,
'Tis also love, one notices,
That makes big business pay.

For blonds and motors, jewels, homes,
Must man delight to hump.
So holler "Gimme" louder, girls,
And end this market slump.

The First Lady Brandon

—By Robert Hichens

two. A doctor, now practicing in London.

This man, Lady Brandon believed loved her. He had never said so or in any way hinted it. She had met him for the first time in Vienna four years ago. She had come to know him rather well. And he knew Brandon. It was as if Cleeve had risen up to tell her that she must not do harm to the boy, that she had not in her the ugly hardihood to do that without future bitter repentance.

And then it seemed to her that he sank down into the darkness of the earth. She was faced with a crisis and he had come to her. She wondered where he was, whether he was awake in this unholy hour and thinking intently of her.

She got up and went out of the tent.

There was no movement in the camp, but she saw Hassan, the ghaffir, in the distance walking slowly towards the piste, his gun slung round his shoulder.

The rising sun frightened her. It seemed to be lighting up her nerve ridden nakedness.

One of the donkeys began to bray fiercely, its long fiddle face turned towards the east.

"Damn that brute!"

He caught up a stone.

He drew back into the tent for a moment, then came out wearing red Arab slippers with a yellow and blue Chinese dressing gown over his white silk pajamas. "Made up your mind?" he said.

She hesitated. She felt at that moment a repugnance to staying with him that was almost invincible. But she thought of Dario.

"Do you really mean to go south?" she said.

"Of course I do. I told you so. Are you coming?"

"Yes, if you wish it."

Lord Brandon smiled, like a man who has got what he expected from some one and is contemptuous of the giver.

"Ah!" he said.

His lips stretched themselves in a sardonic grin. He ducked and disappeared in his tent.

Lady Brandon stood still. She looked on the ground.

"But it's only for a few weeks more," she whispered. "Only a few weeks!"

> "Dear Dario:
> My husband wishes to go up the Nile. I have to go, too. Some day I shall see you again. Don't forget me. I value your friendship.
> I am always your faithful friend.
> IVY BRANDON."

Dario kissed the paper and locked it up in a box where he kept a few small treasures. He felt very unhappy at the departure of his friend. How could she have married that brute?

IT was in the early part of the year 1906 that the news of Lady Brandon's separation from her husband became known in London. It caused a great deal of surprise in social circles, not because of the knowledge society posessed of Lord Brandon's character, but because it had made up its mind long ago about Lady Brandon. She was a "sweet woman who would stand anything." And now the Brandons had separated on the Nile, at Assouan to be absolutely exact, and Lady Brandon was on her way back to England!

When Lady Brandon arrived in London she went to a quiet hotel in Curzon street, took a couple of rooms and a room for her maid and prepared to face her new life. Her people, Sir John and Lady Marsham, had a house in Eaton square, and she dined with them on her first evening in London. They both expected that before the evening was over she would have been persuaded that "it" was all "nonsense," and would be induced to return to her husband. But they found her amazingly inflexible for so sensitive and highly strung a woman. She had made up her mind. Her association with Brandon was at an end. There was no question of a divorce, or even of a legal separation. They were simply going to live apart for the future. What about money? was the Marshams' next question. Their daughter horrified them by telling them that she was going to live on her own money. She had fifteen hundred a year of her own and she could be perfectly comfortable on that. Sir John, thinking he held a weapon that would be effective in bringing his obstinate daughter to reason, hastened to say that he couldn't possibly add anything to that ridiculous sum. Lady Brandon said of course not. She had never had any intention of asking him to. She had plenty to live on as she meant to live.

That night she left a pair of indignantly perplexed worldlings behind her when she left Eaton square. Before they went to bed they had decided that of course there was a man in it. There must be. Ivy must have fallen in love with some one. They were on the edge of some horrible scandal.

But time went on and their fears had not been realized. No dreadful scandal had occurred. Their daughter took a small flat in Hallam street Portland place, really an "upper part" shut off with its own front door, and settled down, with her personal maid, a cook and a house parlor maid as staff, to her new existence.

Lord Brandon remained abroad. He had left Egypt for Greece or Palestine, or Cyprus, or somewhere. Presently he was heard of at Monte Carlo. Brandon house was shut up.

Lady Brandon had never lived alone before. Till her marriage she had shared her parents' life. And they were rich, knew every one, went everywhere, received incessantly both in Eaton square, at their lovely place, Greenways in Wiltshire, and in Scotland, where her father had a big sporting estate.

She didn't satisfy the curiosity of her friends and acquaintances. She was resolved never to attack Brandon unless the differences between her and him came into the law courts. She had never confided her too complete knowledge of him to any one. She wasn't going to do that now. Incompatibility of temper was the well worn shutter which she put up to keep out the eager prying eyes which sought to gaze to the recesses of her common life with Brandon. She had not seen Cleeve since she had been in London. They had never corresponded. She did not hear from him. But she knew that he must very often be thinking of her.

Sometimes she wrote to Dario, intimate, friendly letters. His answers were full of a Latin vehemence. Some day they would meet again.

ONE day in April Lady Brandon saw in the morning Post this advertisement:

KING'S HALL.
On Sunday evening, April 15, at 7 p. m. precisely,
MRS. LIEBLING
will lecture on
"Our Duty to Ourselves."

There followed the announcement that at 6:45 before the lecture there would be an organ recital. The prices of the seats were given. Grand circle seats were five shillings.

Mrs. Liebling, a German who spoke English perfectly, was a famous woman who had written many books on occult subjects, and who had lectured all over the world. She was reputed to be one of the finest speakers of the day. The subject announced for her Sunday lecture was attractive to Lady Brandon, perhaps just because she herself was not given to thinking often of that particular duty, and she immediately decided to go. As she was fond of the organ she went early to hear the recital. She went in and sat in the front row a little to the right.

He was stepping unobtrusively down, when her eyes rested on him, a small man with a large walrus mustache under a rather red, oddly square nose. With a sort of careful precision he descended, took a seat in the front row, sat back and immediately looked at Lady Brandon.

By chance—so it seemed—she was looking at him and it at once struck her that the little man looked at her not by chance but because he knew she was there. She had certainly never seen him before. When he saw that she was looking at him he immediately looked away. But presently when the organ recital finished and she glanced at him again he was again staring at her.

The big hall was now almost full, though there were still some empty seats in the Grand Circle. She heard a clapping of hands from the platform. Mrs. Liebling was mounting the steps and walking slowly to the small raised dais.

She was amazingly white. Her impressive blunt-featured face was pure white. Her thick simply arranged hair was snow white. Her flowing and wonderful robes and laces were white. Her shoes were white. But her large eyes, smoldering at first, then blazing, were deeply dark. She looked very old but very strong. A tremendous gravity seemed to issue from her. Lady Brandon, away in the Grand Circle, felt as if it were a fluid actually flowing about her. And she felt controlled, that the whole audience, and she an item of it, was controlled by this white pope, Mrs. Liebling.

Mrs. Liebling had a peculiar power, possibly exercised unconsciously, possibly not, of creating in her hearers a sense of the mysterious. The ego became portentous when she spoke of it, portentous and precious. Duty to it was revealed as a sacred obligation, injury to it as the basest of crimes.

Lady Brandon began to see her seven years of association with Brandon as a terrific risk to which her ego had been exposed, to ask herself with painful trepidation whether it was possible that she had emerged from it undamaged. Why hadn't she escaped long before that day of fate in Assouan?

At a specially eloquent passage in the address which really frightened her instinctively she looked round for sympathy. And sitting a good way from her on the left of the Circle she saw Mervyn Cleeve. He must have come in late and filled one of the empty seats that she had noticed in the Circle during the organ recital. He was not looking at her, yet she felt at once that he had seen her, knew she was there. She kept her eyes on him for a full minute.

LADY BRANDON came out on the steps after the lecture and there stood Mervyn Cleeve waiting for her. He came up at once and held out his hand.

"I saw you at the lecture and thought I should like to say good evening," he said.

"I saw you, too."

"Did you? I didn't know that. I thought you were completely in the grip of that wonderful Mrs. Liebling."

"She is wonderful."

"Can I——"

"I'm going to walk home. I live close by in Hallam street. I've taken a small 'upper part' there."

"Shall I walk with you?"

"Yes, do."

As they started she said:

"The Brandon House days are over—for ever."

He only said gravely:

"I heard you'd come back to London and were living in a different way."

"Yes, it seems very odd at first," she said.

"I hear you are getting on very well," she added quickly.

"Yes. I have more patients than I expected. The Harley Street risk I took seems justified."

"Lady Agnes must be glad."

"I think she is. But she would much rather have seen me in diplomacy than medicine. Smarter! You know my dear mother was brought up in a certain tradition."

"Yes, of course."

"Diplomacy's too sly for my liking. Medicine, unfortunately, can be sly, too, at times. But there's no absolute obligation to be anything but absolutely straightforward as a doctor, whereas in diplomacy you are practically forced very often to be—shall I say sly?"

He was slightly smiling as he looked at her in the darkness that was lit at intervals by the lights of Portland place.

They stood still in front of her door. A small man with a walrus mustache and an overcoat which he wore unbuttoned crossed the mouth of the street, stepping carefully, and disappeared in Portland place, going in the direction of Regent's park. Neither of them saw him.

Lady Brandon opened the little bag she was carrying and took a key out.

"Let me put it in for you."

He took the key from her gently and opened the door. Across the mouth of the street the little man passed again. But this time his coat was closely buttoned. The wind was growing stronger as the night drew on. Standing by the open door Lady Brandon said:

"When you saw me in the hall did you happen to notice a little man with a very large drooping mustache sitting in the front row away to my right, did you? An ugly little man with an unbuttoned overcoat?"

"No. Why do you ask me?"

"Well, I had a feeling that——" she hesitated.

Suddenly she felt as if perhaps she were being ridiculous.

"What is it?" he asked. "Do tell me. I have a feeling you're nervous about something tonight."

"No. But Mrs. Liebling—she's so remarkable. She excited me. She stirred me up. I long to talk to some one about her."

Cleeve said nothing, only stood looking at her.

"Are you dining out?" she asked with some hesitation.

"No."

"I'm having supper." (She smiled faintly.) "Sunday supper. Something very ordinary. Would you care to come in and share it?"

"I should."

"Then do come in. And I'll show you my upper part. It's a good deal smaller than Brandon House."

After they had gone in and the door was shut the little man reappeared at the end of the street, looked down it and stood still. He waited a moment, then began to walk down it, stepping gently and with a certain precision, as he had stepped down to his place in King's Hall.

Lady Brandon and Cleeve sat down in the little dining room where an extra place had been laid by the interested houseparlor-maid, Kate. After a little ordinary conversation about the upper part, perhaps slightly disconnected, for they were both thinking of something else, Cleeve said, when Kate had left the room:

"About that man in King's Hall. Won't you tell me?"

And she told him her odd impression that the man had known she was there and where she was sitting, and had come there because of her.

"You'd never seen him before?" said Cleeve.

"Never, as far as I know."

"Please describe him to me—as exactly as you can."

Lady Brandon looked at him, surprised by the gravity of his face, of his voice, and did so.

"Thank you," said Cleeve when she had finished. "You are observant."

And then he at once began to talk about Mrs. Liebling.

The Sand Shop

By Eleanor Jewett.

Down by the shore I dig
With spade and pail,
And on the pier I make
A sand cake trail.

Sometimes Dad comes,
Clump—clumping by—
"Well, son," says he,
"Some cakes that I may buy?"

Sometimes it's Mother
Coming down the pier.
"Cakes?" then I cry and
She says, "Thank you, dear."

I must be very careful
When I bake,
For sand is just the easiest
Thing to break!

Japanese Girls Find Silk Cheap as Cotton

Silk has become so cheap in Osaka, Japan, that young women of the factories and even of the peasant class now wear silk garments every day in the week. It is almost as cheap as cotton.

A 3-Room Cottage

This Little House, Done in French Provincial Manner, Offers Ideas to Young Home Owners.

MOTORING through the country on a recent expedition, we were irresistibly attracted to a little shingled house, set well back from the road, with a flagstone walk leading to the entrance door. Peach trees and flowering shrubs make an effective screen in front, and a wooded grove affords an excellent background. Exterior shingles are soft, weathered gray, and the wood trim, door and window frames are painted mellow old blue. Flower boxes in the same blue holds red and white geraniums and fragrant mignonette.

There are only three rooms, just the size of many a city apartment! Because the young couple living here had spent several happy months in Normandy, the house has been decorated and furnished in French provincial style. Many of their treasured pieces were brought directly from France, while others are excellent reproductions made in this country.

The living room is especially charming. It is two steps below the hall, with a gabled ceiling. Opposite the fireplace, in the longest wall space is a group of four casement windows. Two single windows, one in the front, and the other in the back of the room assure plenty of light and air at all times.

Plaster walls in this living room are painted mellow old blue, the same color as the outside wood trim. Woodwork, including the ceiling beams, is stained beechwood. At the windows are Venetian blinds painted blue. Long draperies hanging straight to the floor are of glazed chintz with a gay floral pattern on a light blue ground. Valances match the draperies.

A comfortable sofa of simple lines has a slip cover of the same chintz. One large arm chair is upholstered in raspberry red strié rep, and another is done in blue and cream checked linen. Several French provincial side chairs in beechwood with rush seats have seat pads of quilted calico with tiny blue and white flowers on a dull red ground.

Book shelves built in at each side of the fireplace, and several small tables and decorative plant stands placed at strategic points, complete the furnishings. Tôle brackets in red and gold, electrially equipped, serve as side lights and there are a number of decorative lamps, some of tôle, some of French peasant pottery. The floor is almost completely covered by a large woven rug in dull red and blue.

In the kitchen, which serves also as a dining room for informal meals, the walls are done in washable paper with a plaid design in emerald green and yellow on a cream ground. Woodwork is stained walnut and the insides of the cupboards are painted yellow to make a pleasing background for gay French peasant china.

Walls in the bedroom are painted soft peach color and the woodwork is ivory, with a line of henna. Venetian blinds at the windows are ivory with henna tapes and cords. Their mechanism is hidden beneath valance boards, painted to match the woodwork. Full, sill length window draperies are of toile de Jouy with the design in henna tones on a cream ground.

French provincial beds of fruitwood have covers of finely striped henna and peach rep. A little fruitwood table between the beds holds an ivory and gold tôle lamp and shade. In front of one window stands a walnut poudreuse with its acompanying bench. The carved walnut chest of drawers with mirror above, shown in today's illustration, is placed against the wall between two doors.

Two little side chairs have toile seat pads and a comfortable arm chair is upholstered in soft green armure. French flower prints in narrow green frames enliven the walls, and hooked rugs on the floor combine henna, peach and green in their design.

Chance Meeting in the Louvre.

I had gone from my home in India to Paris and was visiting the Louvre. Another American woman approached me and asked if I knew where a certain masterpiece was located. I had just come from an admiring visit at this shrine and offered to accompany her back to the room where it was.

On the way she told me where she lived and that a neighbor had explained this picture most thrillingly and had begged her to see it.

She lived in my husband's home city and the neighbor who had extolled the painting was my father-in-law.

Way to Whiten Skin 3 to 5 Shades Overnight

New Way Found to Remove Flaw

Here's the new scientific way to remove freckles, blackheads, ugly weather stains and tell-tale wrinkles and to make the skin smooth and whiter—three to five shades whiter over night. It is the safest and surest way known to have a beautiful pink and white skin and to keep it that way indefinitely.

Just get three ounces of Orchard White from any druggist and follow the easy directions. Pat a little into the skin at bedtime and by morning you can see a big improvement. Ugly flaws disappear. The skin gets whiter and soon it is satiny smooth, youthfully fresh and beautiful. What's more, it stays that way. For in Orchard White there's a remarkable ingredient not found in any other preparation. It preserves the beauty of the skin and protects it from the ravages of the wind, rain, sun and dirt. If you really want a smooth, soft, beautiful pink and white skin—try this successful way. You'll be happy that you did.

CHIN-CHIN

By Kathleen McLaughlin.

BRAWNY Chief Black Hawk of the Sacs and Foxes seems well enough known hereabouts. At least, he was recognized by a baker's dozen who scrammed in with the right answers in Monday's first mail. Those who recognized the street and the man in the most recent street name origin game included Mayor George C. Dixon of Dixon, Ill., and A. P. Wallace, Anita Maxine Elliott, Lorena Setterstein, M. R. Axford, Edward P. Brennan, Adelaide Kopp, Margaret Mary Heing, Mrs. Margaret Prendergast, R. Dudley Watson, George R. Dunne, Magdalen Hatfield, and Charles A. L. Tepper, all of Chicago.

This week we propose to let Mayor Dixon do the quizzing. He submits: "Which Chicago street is named for a man who served three enlistments in the United States army, first as captain and the last two as private, and later became President?"

For the last quarter of a century a bustling little Irishman named Eddie Galvin has had a corner on much of the de luxe luggage toting at the Union station. Celebrities of the stage, society, politics, and the screen wire ahead to demand his services. His technique with them and their possessions seems to delight the famous and the fair. Not to know Eddie or be known by him is not to be quite quite—don't you know.

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK.

Eddie himself candidly admits that his prime favorite of the renowned patrons is Mme. Schumann-Heink. The beloved diva has, on occasion, been known to stand firmly entrenched in her compartment on arrival here, refusing to stir a step until Eddie appears, and excitedly demanding to know why he isn't on hand to handle her bags.

Inner circles of the city's social life are being rippled just now by the true story of the prominent citizen who was married about a year ago by an old friend, an Episcopal bishop. Wishing to do the handsome thing, he placed two one-thousand-dollar bills in an envelope for the clergyman's fee, handing it to his best man. The ceremony duly took place. Just the other day the two old friends got to discussing marriage fees. Said the bishop: "Well, I've received some nice ones in my day, but that thousand dollars from you was the biggest in my experience."

Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin was heeling it down the runway at a Chicago station the other day, intent on catching a train, when a pursuing horde of photographers yelled after him, "O, governor, wait a minute. We want a picture."

GOV. LA FOLLETTE.

"All right, boys," agreed the executive, with a resigned sigh, "I've learned to obey."

They stood staring at two mammoth placards in the loop. One announced the return of the nickel sandwich from the limbo of almost forgotten dreams; the other, that nickel cigars can again be purchased. Then the fat fellow turned to the thin one and proclaimed, "Let 'em bring back that 5 cent stein, and I'll say the age of miracles isn't over."

Anti-aircraft target practice at Fort Sheridan a couple of nights a week provides its own thrills. Once, for instance, they peppered away all evening at the floating balloon attached by a cable to an airplane, on which roving searchlights were trained. Not a single hit registered. But they did miss the pilot plane.

Then one night last week the cable towline of the balloon target got fouled on a strategic electric light wire. The steel cable was melted nearly in two, and for four minutes a considerable section of northern Illinois was without electricity.

Even in jolly old England, it would appear, this colm's "jittery jingles" have their fans [or at least, fan]. Last week's mail contained a missive that broke all existing distance records for the contests. John L. Connors of Wakefield, West Riding, Yorkshire, England, writes: "I have had a great deal of pleasure over the last several weeks with the 'jittery jingles,' but have hesitated to forward my solutions because of the suspicion that I might be in cable communication with America with a view to learning the answers, which are usually published there four or five days before I receive my copy of CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Inasmuch as a certain phase of the interest is now directed toward the long distance record, I am registering the following:

His years are quite a SPAN, 'tis said.
Among the PANS he NAPS away,
His task is quite a SNAP, we'd say!'"

Righto, Mr. Connors, we all say, but walk right in and make yourself comfortable in this corner. Next performance is just about to begin. Before starting it off, though, this department takes occasion to express regret that the demands of press time sometimes exclude interesting letters from other cities which do not arrive quite promptly, and the ensuing week's mail then crowds them out altogether. There was Mable Johnson of Memphis, Tenn., last week, for instance, who got left out after an accurate solution of the verse. And others.

Last Sunday's jingle runs:

A skinny SKATE by the name of KEATS
Had no STAKE to buy his eats;
So he goes to KATE'S and
STEALS a STEAK.
He TAKES no chances with a tummy ache.

These hometowners got the best of it: Charles A. L. Tepper, Thomas H. Furlong, Magdalen Hatfield, Elizabeth Bauer, Wanda V. Kaminski, Mrs. E. K. Babcock, and Marie Krause; also these out-of-towners, Daisy Greer, Canton, Ill.; Jessie E. Fleming, Toulon, Ill.; Mrs. Rose Cooper, Oquawka, Ill.; Victoria Filer, Milwaukee, Wis.; Florence Fyne, Marquette, Mich.; Lois M. Jenkins, La Salle, Ill.; J. A. Strong, Oak Park; Mrs. G. E. Bingham, Clinton, Ind.; Mrs. W. Paul Jones, Crawfordsville, Ind.; Mary Calderone, Hammond, Ind.; Mrs. Dale Cruikshank, Mrs. C. M. Service, both of Springfield, Ill.; Rhetta Kassner, Wheaton; Mrs. H. C. Hinton, Lawrenceville, Ill., and Mrs. Horma D. Jones, West Chicago.

But that anagram called "The Perplexities of a Crymangle!" A couple of typographical errors didn't help matters, but only a few readers submitted complete and accurate reports, and one of those, J. A. Strong of Oak Park, missed out on one word. Magdalen Hatfield and Mrs. W. E. Hanson, Mrs. H. B. Richardson and one, anonymous, from 113 South College avenue, Geneso, Ill., merit the premier honors.

Mrs. Hanson added some intriguing information when she wrote: "This letter was said to have been a many days' puzzle at the court of Victoria, and the old queen herself to have retired one night somewhat 'peeved' because she had failed to translate the 'early bat' [betrayal]."

It should read like this, with the formerly scrambled phrases correctly arranged but in parentheses: "I am writing you a letter in [anagram], my dear [Catherine], knowing that the [authoress] of such learned books as yours, cannot fail to come to an [understanding] of my meaning. I can imagine the [consternation] of your father, the [clergyman], should this [betrayal] of my feelings fall into his hands, so I shall place it on the [fire escape] where you will find it when you creep down to your [picturesque] garden. Any of his [parishioners] would expect the heaviest [punishment] that words can inflict, in approaching the [clergyman] as the accepted [sweetheart] of his [daughter].

"Please advise me whether to employ a [plenipotentiary] or to come myself with what [diplomacy] I can command. Tonight I shall go to the [oratorio]. I wish you might be with me to hear the new [rhapsody] performed by the [orchestra]. When I return I shall look for the light of your [chandelier] as no [astronomer] ever looked for the light of a newly discovered planet.

"If it is burning, I will accept it as a [candidate] for [matrimony] to your respected [ancestor], so to call him. If you do not approve, send me word by [telegraph]. I have a ring of [amethyst] which is of somewhat [elegant] design. I want to send it to you and hope to see it worn by my own [precious] girl.

"Farewell.

"[Horace.]"

Several contributors have sent in additional jingles, which will be used as space presents itself. This week we offer one by Mrs. Thomas H. Mullen Jr.

"It's —— to go," the maiden said,
And bade her love good-by.
A —— perturbed she watched him, as
He did —— a sigh.
Then from her breast she took a rose,
And told him, with a kiss,
This little —— you may have.
Remember me by this."

The same four letters are used in various sequences to fill out the blanks.

And since quite a few correspondents have been pleading for another of the progressive letter puzzles, work on this a while. One letter in the first blank and one additional for each blank, using the same letters:

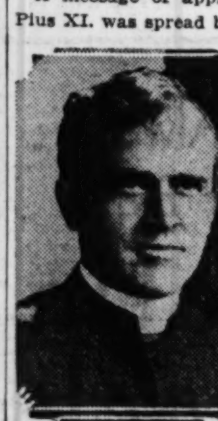
"—— think it —— improper, ——. The young man should —— to the occasion. I do not like his —— nor his ——, and unless that which shows no —— ——, or he shall —— a better verse, I shall remain —— to his claims."

Mrs. L. W. Kester sent this in without the solution. Let's see how good you are at it.

Pope Approves Catholic Total Abstainer Club

By the Rev. John Evans.

A message of approval from Pope Pius XI. was spread before the annual convention of the Illinois Catholic Total Abstinence union held recently at the Auditorium hotel. The message, originally given to the Vatican pilgrims representing the Catholic Total Abstainers of the League of the German Cross, commended the work of the international organization.



FATHER O'CALLAGHAN.
[Matzene Photo.]

Body and Soul Salvation.

"You have chosen a way which will enable you to save many souls and also many bodies," Pope Pius told the members of the union. "Your endeavor is not only a good one, it is an honorable and sacred combat for God and neighbor, for mankind and the church, for the family and the individual. Continue your work with increasing courage and greater determination."

The Illinois convention passed a resolution against drinking scenes in motion pictures. Other resolutions denied that the drinking of alcoholic beverages is "a natural right of man," and deplored the stand of citizens who are "making such persistent efforts to promote what they term 'true temperance' by endeavoring to have legalized the sale of light wines and beer."

Elect New President.

Francis Croarkin was elected president of the Illinois union for the next year. The Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan, D. D., president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, was present at the sessions of the Illinois convention. Plans for the national convention of the union to be held in mid-August at Torrington, Conn., were presented.

Paris Says: "More Style in 1932 Furs"

The first fur fashions with their long slender lines are stirring the fashion world. Elaborate sleeves have a two-fold purpose in contributing to shape the silhouette and to introduce the DRESSMAKER TONE in furs. Softness of line is the undisputed feature of the collars. Truly, "more style" is the decree.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

NOW is the time to check up on the plans, promises and dreams of theatrical producers for the approaching stage season. A census reveals that 44 firms or men constitute what might be called the "big league" of the drama, and that some 50 others are occasional contributors to Broadway activity. Their announcements for the early months of the new playgoing year contain 200 titles, including established successes that will be sent on tour.

This represents an improvement upon last year, when the stage's midsummer statistics did not include more than 150 titles of contemplated productions. It is, indeed, a long step up the ladder toward the abundance of the predepression years, when the managers' August schedules included from 250 to 300 titles.

All this, of course, refers to theatrical production for the Broadway market, out of which come the shows of proven popularity that finally go adventuring on "the road"—a vague region which to the Broadway mind includes all of America outside the borough of Manhattan. In this connection it may be noted that Broadway has at last become "road conscious," and is planning to win back the affections of its lost customers in other cities.

Theater Guild Opinion.

"Officials in the Erlanger office tell us that their bookings for the coming season are more plentiful than in recent years. In the Shubert theaters it would appear that the planned reorganization should prove beneficial in improving booking conditions both inside and outside of New York.

"One thing is almost certain—both offices are cognizant of the fact that a standard of quality must be maintained, and both offices have expressed their intention to look to this point. Despite the business depression, shows of merit have drawn excellent patronage during the last year, both in and out of New York. Mr. Ziegfeld's 'Follies' played to two capacity weeks in Pittsburgh late in June, with the thermometer ascending in a city that does not possess those sea breezes which sometimes disguise the temperature in New York, Boston and Chicago. And in New York many excellent plays are defying the heat with success.

"We cannot explain the conservative optimism which prevails throughout the theater at this moment, but it does exist, and most of it is founded on a sound basis. The best proof of it is to be found in the definitely announced plans of the leading producers. They seem not to be hedging."

Shubert Catalogue.

The Shuberts lead the "big league" with plans already matured for fourteen productions. They list their entries as follows:

"The Laugh Parade," a musical show with Ed Wynn as star.

A musical comedy in which George Jessel will be starred.

Maurice Schwartz and his Yiddish Art Theater company, giving their repertory in English.

"Kissable Girl," a musical comedy based upon "Up Pops the Devil," with Frances Williams, Nina Olivette, Evangeline Raleigh, and the Ritz brothers in the cast.

"La Chienne," a French drama, translated by Forrest Wilson.

"Hearts in Repair," an operetta adapted from the German, with Queenie Smith as star.

"Forbidden," a new play by Elmer Harris, author of "Young Sinners" and "A Modern Virgin."

"Cocktail," an intimate musical comedy adapted from the German; score by Ralph Benatsky.

"The Improper Duchess," a comedy by James Bernard Fagan, highly successful in London, with Irene Bordoni as heroine.

"Poor Men's Daughters," by Elmer Harris.

"Love's Out of Fashion," a comedy adapted from the German of Wilhelm Sterck, with Walter Woolf, Verree Teasdale, Walter Petrie, and Leslie Austen in the cast. To be staged early in August.

"Land of Smiles," an operetta with music by Franz Lehar, now popular in London.

"The Venetian," a play by Clifford Bax, successful in London; to be staged in association with Maurice Browne.

"The Good Companions," the dramatization of J. B. Priestley's novel; a notable success in London.

Erlanger Offerings.

The novelties on the Erlanger list at present are eight in number, as follows:

"The Social Register," a play by John Emerson and Anita Loos, with Lenore Ulric as star. The cast will include Elizabeth Taylor, Wilfred Clark, Betty Garde, Helen Tucker, Thomas Maxwell Conover, and Oswald Yorke.

"Faraway Horses," a drama by Gilbert Emery and Alan Birmingham, to be staged under the direction of Chester Erskin.

"Bad Penny," a comedy by William Anthony McGuire, to be offered in association with Charles Dillingham.

"Stella Brady," a comedy by James Montgomery, also in association with Mr. Dillingham.

A new play by Frederick Lonsdale.

Maurice Chevalier in an entertainment, in New York and on tour.

Up Pops Mr. Shaw.

The Theater Guild's schedule, in addition to the plays announced earlier in the year, will include George Bernard Shaw's latest work, called "Too Good to Be True." At least the Guild feels confident that it will be able to offer this play, as yet unfinished, during the coming season. Mr. Shaw

USHERING IN THE NEW MONTH

Rich pickings, Mitzi Green and Louise Fazenda seem to be finding in Jackie Searl's mouth, as well as in "Newly Rich," the current attraction at the Oriental. And Jackie is acquiescent, even though he's equiped with a dangerous looking weapon. He and Mitzi, sterling comedians, are the juvenile stars of the comedy.

Joel McCrea and Constance Bennett are expounding "The Common Law" at the State-Lake this week.

Is it "The Magnificent Lie"? Sam Hardy is asking that or a similar question; Ruth Chatterton is at the receiving end of the query, and the film of that title is at the Chicago for the present week.

"Ex-Bad Boy" is the name of the picture at the Palace, but, from the looks of things, Lola Lane might run away with the honors on that score. The others are Spencer Charters, Robert Armstrong and George Brent, and all of them have plenty to do.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK. — [Special.] — The theater, which is waiting for a new season to begin, has aroused itself from the usual summer time sleep long enough to bring to the George M. Cohan theater a revue born of good will and conceived by some of the best minds.

Entitled "Shoot the Works," it is the brain child of Heywood Broun, column conductor, radio monologist, defeated Socialist candidate for congress, and—which may be more important to use—a former dramatic critic. Mr. Broun, who espouses causes with polygamous frequency, has decided to enter the lists in defense of the unemployed actor. With Milton Raison, a press agent, and Johnny Boyle, a dance director, as his chief assistants, Broun has labored heroically toward the formation of a coöperative show.

Lyrics, Sketches Donated.

With $7,000 in cash to work upon—a good bit of which had to be posted with Equity to guarantee a fortnight's salaries to chorus people—Broun has got a long hot weather show together. Producers contributed scenery and electrical equipment; costumers have given everything from bathing suits to draperies, and a soap company provided a stack of soap boxes which

Long Awaited "Peter Ibbetson" Is Scheduled for Two Performances This Week at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

THAT undercurrent hum of activity proceeding from Ravinia, that set of preoccupied expressions on the faces of several of the company, is not altogether to be accounted for by a busy operatic season, though they have been having an uncommonly active one. Part of it was due to the fact that they were preparing "Peter Ibbetson."

It is now prepared and ready. There has already been an announcement that it would be given its first performance in this part of the country tomorrow night. Now comes a supplementary statement that, since tomorrow night looks like an overflowing house, there will be another performance with the same cast next Saturday night.

Difficult Scenes.

For "Peter Ibbetson," it appears, has taken a lot of doing to put into shape. It was more than just learning a new operatic score. That is something the Ravinia company takes in its stride. Lucrezia Bori and Edward Johnson, who are to sing the two leading parts, had sung them in in New York, and their new associates were promptly rehearsed in their own rôles. But the staging of the piece presented peculiar difficulties.

It has a dream scene, for one, where Peter sees again the garden of his boyhood. It has a final scene where the spirit of Peter takes leave of its wornout human habitation and goes away, young and glorious again, to meet the spirit of Mary, who had just preceded him into death. Once that scenery was built, it had to be tried out, and for this purpose daylight will not do. Also, the stage of Ravinia is in use every night with a performance.

So one night a short time ago—just after a performance of "L'Amore dei

JULY'S SIX BEST PHOTOPLAYS.

THE SMILING LIEUTENANT.
THE VIKING.
POLITICS.
THE MIRACLE WOMAN.
THE PUBLIC ENEMY.
YOUNG AS YOU FEEL.

Honorable mention: "Quick Millions," "Hell Bound," "The Man in Possession," "The Black Camel," "Der Weg zur Schande."

Best individual performances: Maurice Chevalier, Claudette Colbert, Miriam Hopkins in "The Smiling Lieutenant," Robert Montgomery, Irene Purcell in "The Man in Possession," Warner Oland, Sally Eilers in "The Black Camel," Spencer Tracy and Marguerite Churchill in "Quick Millions," Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Rose Hobart in "Chances," Leo Carrillo in "Hell Bound," Marie Dressler, Polly Moran and Roscoe Ates in "Politics," Barbara Stanwyck and Hardy in "The Miracle Woman," James Cagney in "The Public Enemy," Anna May Wong and Hugo Werner-Kabel in "Der Weg zur Schande," Adolphe Menjou in "The Great Lover," Will Rogers in "Young As You Feel," and Charles Ruggles in "The Girl Habit."

By Mae Tinee.

Th' first of August's here again!
Soon the summer will be gone;
But First Sundays of each month
And "Six Bests" keep on and on.

Good Morning!

Well, here we go, with a hop, skip and a jump, back along the trail we traveled last month.

"THE SMILING LIEUTENANT" was found to be "frothy, amusing, tuneful; a bit naughty and a lot nice . . . directed by Ernest Lubitsch—lush with the inspired touches, the unexpected and beguiling bits of 'business' that proclaim genius at the wheel . . . Maurice Chevalier was never more oo-la-la . . . a bang-up hot weather picture . . ."

"THE VIKING." During the making of this film the producer, Varick Frissell and twenty-five of his associates were killed by an explosion . . . "Records in sound the adventures of men who go a-sealing up around the Labrador ice fields and Newfoundland . . . the coldest looking movie you ever saw . . . authentic, episodic and not long . . ."

* *

"POLITICS." Marie Dressler and Polly Moran at their best. 'Nuff sed.

"THE MIRACLE WOMAN" proved "a thrilling melodrama that sports several staggeringly sensational situations, presented with a shrewd sense of dramatic effect . . . different and electrically exciting . . . excellently produced and played to the nines . . . Barbara Stanwyck gives a pulse-quickening performance . . ."

* *

"THE PUBLIC ENEMY" is "racketeering stripped of all romance and all glamour by the sharp knife of realism . . . the last word and, you feel, a true one, in gangland exposés . . . keen, unsparing study of criminal psychology . . . James Cagney as 'The Public Enemy' is tough, evil, deadly, unfunny and never for one minute lovable or pulse stirring. The complete gangster . . . 'The Public Enemy' is the greatest—because the most honest gangster cinema ever made."

* *

"YOUNG AS YOU FEEL" presents Will Rogers entertaining with competent help from Fifi Dorsay. One hundred per cent entertainment.

BitsaBOUTem.

DORIS KENYON, widow of Milton Sills, is in Europe with her small son, studying music and the arts with an ey to making a screen comeback when she returns to Hollywood. OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

FRIENDS of Walter Knoop, president of the North Avenue Business and Improvement association, were surprised at the levity of that sprightly gentleman at the association's picnic held on Friday at Riverview park. After viewing Mr. Knoops activities for the afternoon, the members dubbed him the "wingless wonder," inasmuch as he had spent most of the afternoon flying without wings.

To become an Eagle Scout is the highest honor a Boy Scout can achieve, and when three Scouts do it at the age of 14 years or less, it is indeed an accomplishment worthy of praise. Three Scouts who have accomplished this feat are Perry Crawford and Robert Davis of troop 18, Winnetka, and Robert Moulton, troop 22, Glencoe. All three of them have also been serving as life guards at summer camp.

Jack Gibson, 3 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. David B. Gibson, 3000 Sheridan road, was host at a beach party recently in compliment to Miss Patsy Schorts of Pittsburgh, who with her mother is visiting an aunt, Mrs. Jack Moulder, 3300 Sheridan road. The guest list included Miss Schortz, Jack and Mary Lou Worley, Boyd and Mary Lou Johnson, and young Mr. Gibson. Favors were sprinklers, pails and shovels, rubber fish, and beach hats.

EVER see a dog eat pretzels? Billy Reisbeck, 14 years old, who lives at 840 Montrose avenue, claims the championship for his Airedale puppy, Mickey, which is 3 months old. Mickey eats them without the customary stein of beer, which requires pretty strong teeth, according to Billy.

Patricia Joan Bohl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neubert J. Bohl, 5126 Kenmore avenue, was baptized recently at Unity church. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wareing were sponsors.

Peter Person, 2743 Giddings street, was inducted into the Stuck Up club in a peculiar manner last week-end, when he was held up by the driver of a cab in which he was riding, and robbed of $65 in currency and two watches valued at $63. The driver hit him on the head as he stepped out of the cab, and forced him to hand over the valuables.

Painful indeed was the accident which recently happened to Our Townswoman, Mrs. Anna Webb, 2236 Ainslie street. Mrs. Webb caught a finger in a washing machine, and the finger was badly crushed. Mrs. Webb was taken to the Swedish Covenant hospital for treatment, and we understand that the finger is getting better.

MRS. JOHN GILDEMEISTER, 2565 Argyle street, recently gave a dinner on the occasion of the 21st birthday of her son Robert. Congratulations, Robert! Mrs. Julius Lenz, 2541 Blaine place, assisted Mrs. Gildemeister as hostess. Guests included Miss Marian Spandau, Miss Elinor Spandau, Miss Esther Pflock, Miss Roberta Gilbert, Gordon Snyder, Albert Swatek, and Arthur Parker.

Miss Edna Lynne Schaefer, daughter of Mrs. Vivian Schaefer, 5303 Kenmore avenue, left last week for Asbury Park, N. J., for a few weeks to take part in George Wood's revue, "One Night in Pompeii." Our young townswoman is always on the go, having just returned from Cleveland, O., where she had danced in the Arabian Nights revue held there during the Shriners' convention. Always flitting hither and yon, these dancers!

Evanston's corporation counsel, William Lister, has been receiving the envious jibes of his associates during the last week, on account of a Bobby Jones shot which he pulled at the Skokie course a few days ago. He has witnesses to the shot, so his friends have dubbed him the King of Clubs. He was playing the Skokie course with a group of friends, and had reached the eighth hole with a fine score. The eighth hole has a water hazard about 125 yards long, which is the bane of many a duffer's existence. Corporation Counsel Lister took a healthy swat at the ball, which landed right in the middle of the water hazard. It skipped three times, landed on the bank, hit a rock, and bounced to within a few feet of the pin. On the next shot, he sank it, three shots under par, thereby scoring a dodo. A dodo is best defined as a rare old bird, darn near extinct.

23d Psalm Calm Rules Meadows of Albany Park

Civic Minded Residents Fond of Open Spaces.

By Roe Fowler.

"THE Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures . . ."—Psalm 23.

Albany Park is best expressed by those lines of the 23d Psalm. In the green pastures, beside the still waters, it takes its daily life, and all of its days are as Sundays. There is the calm of sunny afternoons, redolent of the green meadows from which the community has sprung within the span of many a present resident's lifetime. Nor are the green pastures all built up. Many places in Albany Park are more rural than urban in their flavor.

Perhaps this will explain why the 40th ward, which comprises a large part of Albany Park, has more small parks, community centers, and playgrounds than any other ward of the city. The residents are fond of their open spaces, and remember the pleasant scenes of their own childhood. That is why they try to preserve them for their children.

The preservation of the quiet and scenic beauty of Albany Park is not left to chance. Every three or four blocks has its own improvement or civic organization, and these have banded together to form the 40th Ward Civic council and similar interorganization groups to fight for the rights of the residents.

Apartment Bubble Bursts.

A few years ago Albany Park was in a period of transition. The community was ceasing to be residential, it seemed, and apartment buildings were rapidly being put up. Many residential sections were rezoned. That was during the unprecedented building boom, when rents were high and construction fever had seized the large real estate owners. Fortunately or unfortunately, according to your point of view, the bubble burst, and many of the apartment buildings were planned but never built, and still others were built but have never been successful enough to cause emulation of their example by further building.

The community, in spite of the realtors' dreams of an apartment district, has remained mainly residential, with the apartment buildings occupying a minor place in its general scheme. Several more years may bring about a renewal of the construction activities which have been halted, but there is indication of a change in sentiment among the property owners since the bursting of their first bubble. Street improvements, for instance, are being killed in the board of local improvements at the residents' request, as too ambitious for a residential areas.

That is not to say that there has been no progress in Albany Park. Along the business streets, despite the depression, there are evidences of forward movement. The stores are attractively dressed and kept scrupulously clean. Merchants' and business associations are operating in full force to regulate the commercial interests of the community.

Its Boundaries Indefinite.

The confines of Albany Park are not too confining. It is a neighborhood without definite boundaries, because many people living on the east side of the drainage canal consider themselves to be members of the community, while people living on the west side of the canal commonly speak of it as the east boundary of the district.

Inclusion of the canal in the community brings in also one of the most picturesque gatherings of humanity in the city, the houseboaters. The houseboat dwellers include a number of unusual persons, such as an artist, an old sailing captain, and a violinist, and a number of just home folks.

These people dwell tax free on their houseboats, which are fixed up much the same as any land home. Their children are born on the boats, grow up on the boats, get married on the boats, and either live with the parents on the parental barge or get a boat of their own. It reminds one of a river in China, where people live and die on the river. Of course, however, there is this difference—the houseboaters on the canal are a part of the city and transact most of their life's business ashore, whereas many of the Chinese, who live on houseboats die without having ever been ashore.

Fringes Into Other Areas.

If the eastern boundary of the Albany Park community is undecided, so, too, are the other three boundaries. Roughly described, they are Addison street, Hamlin, and Devon avenues. Many people living outside this territory are members of Albany Park churches and Albany Park community organizations, however.

The beautification of the shores of the canal and the neighborhood immediately surrounding it is undertaken by the North Shore Channel Improvement association, of which A. J. Gordon is president. A further beautification program is likewise carried on by the Albany Park board and the River Park board.

The Albany Park board administers Kiwanis park, Christiana and Carmen avenues; Samuel Gompers park, Tripp and Foster avenues; Eugene Field park, Foster and Avers avenues, and Matson park, Foster and Kostner avenues. The River Park district administers Green Briar park, Peterson and Washtenaw avenues; California park, along the canal between Irving Park boulevard and Grace street; River park, along the canal from Argyle street to Foster avenue, and Legion park, Virginia and Bryn Mawr avenues and the canal.

These parks afford for the community shady spots during the summertime, places of quiet contemplation. They also give material opportunity to the community to bring true the remainder of the biblical quotation, ". . . He leadeth me beside still waters."

VOICE of the NORTH SIDE

Optimism Emanating from Turner Hall of '70s Enriches Chicago of '31

While all the Chicago neighborhoods have their quota of old settlers interested in the 57th annual picnic to be held at Riverview Park tomorrow, North Side Turner hall on North Clark street is the headquarters of the committees in charge. It is about Turner hall that the memories of so many of Chicago's pioneers of German ancestry center, and the picnics have been held annually under the auspices of the Chicago Turngemeinde since 1874.

Reminiscences of a number of the elderly pioneers include anecdotes of a concert being held at Turner hall on the October Sunday night when the flare of the great Chicago fire of 1871 lighted the sky. Those were days of music and dancing. The old settlers may have grown feeble, but they still sing and dance at the annual picnics.

It is significant that interviews with many of these men and women more than four score years old reveal a philosophy of contentment.

They appear to be of one mind. Though life may have its woes, they continue optimistic. They are folk who insist that they wish to remain active until the end. Their concern is not so much with the acquiring of wealth as in keeping alive the friendships formed in the old days.

Each year at the picnics, bouquets are awarded to couples whose combined ages make the highest total of years. Youthful dancers may be familiar with the newer steps and move about in more graceful fashion, but the old timers prove that their hearts are still young. They insist that age has not robbed them of the desire to mingle with folk who are likewise on pleasure bent.

Chicago is richer because of the great group of immigrants who sought the young city as a place to establish homes and, by the proper mixture of work and play, get the most out of life. To the modern Chicago they contribute their worth while philosophy on how to meet depression and disappintments.

NILES CENTER INVITES HOME OWNERS.

A nonresident owner of Niles Center property has expressed his interest in a recent article in the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE, telling of the plans for annual Niles Center day to be held Sept. 2. Having invested in the neighborhood, he found a peculiar appeal in news of its affairs. At the coming celebration the Niles Center Chamber of Commerce will urge owners of lots in the suburb to "Come to Niles Center to live."

Many purchasers of property in new subdivisions have lost the high enthusiasm inspired by the salesman a few years ago. The depression has been particularly dampening on all forms of real estate. But the purchaser of vacant property whose purpose is to build a home of his own in the new neighborhood is in a quite different position from the speculator.

The absentee landlord will find that his interest in a community increases a hundred fold when he establishes his residence there. Niles Center had 22,000 guests at its celebration last year. This year the visitors will be taken on a sightseeing tour over its area of nine square miles. It is a territory in which the pioneer days are over so far as improvements are concerned. Many of the visitors will be influenced to look upon their holdings in a new light. Should the army of lot owners move there to live the 1932 celebration would be indeed a gala event.

CLARENDON BEACH PASSES.

Clarendon beach, for years one of the most popular of the city's playgrounds along the lake shore, learns that man has other desires concerning the territory. Surrendering to the evolutionary process which produces an outer drive and parkway, Clarendon bids goodbye to the lake and henceforth links its destiny with the land.

Clarendon beach is somewhat reluctant at the transformation. Sand filling operations have almost enclosed the old area and, as if resentful toward what seems lack of appreciation on the part of bathers once welcomed, the waters have become stagnant and dangerous for swimming. It is now toward the new beach to the north that the pleasure seekers turn; and sullenly Clarendon realizes that this is a world of change.

But let not old Clarendon beach despair. Adjustments are painful, but the new outer drive to be built between Montrose and Devon avenues is developing ahead of schedule. Clarendon's artificial land soon will support the wheels of speeding automobiles. Clarendon will continue to echo the voices of pleasure seekers. It will take a more active part in the progress of the great city than ever before.

There are shore lands doomed to remain untouched down through the centuries. Clarendon was so situated that it could not hope for any such uneventful existence. It was destined to have a career. As land, it can congratulate itself on its increased valuation.

BANK SERVICE THAT COUNTS.

In assuming the deposit liabilities of the suspended Illinois State bank, officials of the Phillip State bank explain that, in part, their institution is fulfilling its obligation to the community. Fortunate is the Howard street district in a form of public service composed of something more substantial than banquet table talk.

Further, though so large a proportion of the assets of the Illinois State bank were frozen that it was necessary to close it, the assets were in the vault. That fact was what made it possible for the stronger institution to announce full payment of Illinois State deposits.

The suspension of a neighborhood bank usually not only crushes the spirit of a group of the community's savers, but affects the prosperity and confidence of the entire surrounding area. Much may be lost besides money itself—faith, tendencies toward thrift, human qualities. Unnecessary delays and unnecessary expense in solving present problems constitute selfishness and short sightedness involving more than a neighborhood's material losses.

It is to be hoped that the constructive move of the Rogers Park bank will be an incentive for other strong community banks to follow the example.

CHETLAIN OFFERS TO SOLVE PARK BOARD MUDDLE

But He Fears Associates Won't Co-operate.

Intimations of a surprise motion to be introduced at the meeting of the north shore park board, to be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening in the park fieldhouse, 1111 Garwell avenue were given out by Commissioner Frederick R. Chetlain yesterday. Commissioner Chetlain, whom the board recently threatened to oust for nonattendance at meetings, declared that he will be at the board's next meeting, and that he will introduce a motion as a first step toward clarifying the election tangle in the park district.

"If the commissioners will support my motion, we will get the board out of its present muddle," Commissioner Chetlain promised. "I fear that they are not anxious to do that, however, and that they may vote against my motion. Nevertheless, we will give them the chance to show whether they want to do the legal and proper thing."

Information as to the nature of his motion, Commissioner Chetlain refused to disclose. He did reveal, however, that his motion will not be for the canvassing of the Evanston precinct of the district, where records show that no votes were cast but which the park board has refused to canvass according to the mandate of the law.

Doesn't Fear Threat.

As to the board's threat of an ouster, Commissioner Chetlain stated his belief that the ouster would constitute contempt of court, inasmuch as Judge Denis E. Sullivan has granted the board an injunction forbidding any person or persons from interfering with the business of the board.

"That injunction applies to the board as well as to the people off the board," the commissioner asserted. "The other members of the board, in ousting me, would be interfering with the business of the board as a whole, and would therefore be in contempt of court."

"The board would be acting within its legal rights in ousting any member who refuses to give his time to the affairs of the district, as Mr. Chetlain has refused," Attorney Weinshenk explained. "The law gives the board or any other such body the power of determining when a vacancy exists. We hope that Chetlain will attend the meetings, and do his duty as a commissioner."

Term Expired in April.

The park board refused to qualify Thomas F. Myers Jr. and the late Patrick C. Winn as successors to the commissioners whose terms have expired. Among those who voted against the motion to canvass the election were the two commissioners whose terms expired, and with the aid of their votes, the motion was beaten four to one.

Myers and Winn then filed mandamus proceedings, but dropped the mandamus suit on the advice of counsel that the suit was unnecessary and that they could be legally qualified by filing an oath of office with the county clerk. They took the oaths before a notary public, and filed it with the county clerk, but were restrained by an injunction from Judge Sullivan against interfering with the business of the park board, including the two commissioners whose terms had expired.

Mr. Myers, the surviving contestant for the two seats, has declared that all the board's actions, while the two commissioners continue to sit, will be illegal. It is this situation which Commissioner Chetlain proposes to clear up at the meeting on Wednesday evening.

Weinshenk Promises Action.

Attorney Weinshenk promised action by the board on the D'Esposito shore line survey and the plan for settlement of riparian rights, which will make practicable the D'Esposito plan for lake front development and the extension of the outer drive north of Devon avenue, provided Commissioner Howard P. Savage and Commissioner Chetlain attend the meeting.

"We have been waiting for Commissioners Savage and Chetlain," Attorney Weinshenk said, "because we want the whole board to pass on this important matter. The D'Esposito plan was adopted last winter, but depends on the shore line survey and the riparian settlements to carry it out according to the proposed specifications. Thus, the plan itself will not be fully adopted until these important phases are acted on."

According to the plans submitted by Joshua D'Esposito, consulting engineer for the board, the outer drive is to be placed much further in toward Sheridan road than it is on the Lincoln park extension. "This is in order that people won't have to walk a mile in order to get to the beaches and picnic grounds," explained Attorney Weinshenk. "Our plan is to make the park facilities easily accessible to the people of the district, and not just to get a lot of land because we can build it cheaply. The D'Esposito plan provides amply for all the park needs this district will ever have."

LIBERTYVILLE TO CONSTRUCT $40,000 MASONIC TEMPLE

Construction of a $40,000 Masonic temple in Libertyville is to begin soon, it was announced last week. Bids for the construction are to be opened on Aug. 8.

The building is to be two stories high and will measure 50 by 100 feet. It is to be erected on Brainard avenue, opposite the Methodist Episcopal church. Furnishings for the interior of the temple, it is estimated, will cost an additional $10,000.

Ben Miller is president of the Masonic Temple association, which is supervising the project. John Scribbings of Glencoe is the architect, and J. A. Trepow is secretary of the association. The trustees of the association include the officers and R. F. Rouse, F. J. Wright, George Sturm, F. H. Noble, and George Meyer.

TWO GROUPS OF TIRED BUSINESS MEN RELAX

Here are members of the Rogers Park-Clark Street Business Men's association and the Howard District Business association who took part in the interassociation golf tournament held recently at the Middle Brook Country club. Kneeling in the front row, to the left of the caddies, is Fred Keller of the Clark street group. Standing, left to right, are Amber Andrews, pro, who supervised the tournament; Dr. Patrick F. Machler, Dr. Delevan Foote, William Woertz, Kenneth Smith, Dan McNulty, James Finley, Joe Christoph, Mike Binsfield, Gregory Walker, Dr. Harry Bylan, Edward H. Percy, W. O. Williston, Dr. L. T. Black, Frank Schutz, Franklin Grosser, winner, low gross; Dr. Melville W. Smith, Howard Urr, Will Gnat, G. Burkland, D. N. Kelly, Phillip Krupnik, Tom Dwyer, Sam Salka, Harry Levin, Clark street chairman; Ray Gray, president of Howard association; Dr. George W. Regan, Howard association chairman, and Roy Epley. Another tourney is to be held on Aug. 26.

Chief Holmes Promises Drastic Action.

Erstwhile speeders through Niles Center had best beware! That is the warning issued by Chief Charles Holmes of the Niles Center police on Monday. Speeding and reckless driving are henceforth to be penalized as never before, Chief Holmes declared, in opening his war on traffic violations.

Wide arterial highways running through the town were blamed by the police chief for the speed problem, which has led to the department's decision to take drastic action.

"These wide roads with their smooth pavement tempt the motorist to step on it," Chief Holmes explained. "We all sympathize with the desire for speed, and, in the past, the police have been tolerant. That tolerance, however, is to be no more. Speed is a dangerous form of enjoyment, and recent accidents have made it plain that we must curb fast driving and recklessness in all forms."

Warning to Chicagoans.

The town's speed limits of 15 miles per hour on business streets and 25 miles per hour on the highways through town, will be rigidly enforced, Chief Holmes warned.

"Our own residents know of these laws and observe them," he said. "What we have to guard against is people from outside. Chicagoans, in a hurry to return to their homes after a week-end jaunt to the lake country, often forget that we have speed laws."

As a part of the program to restrict speed, and as an evidence that no traffic trap is intended, Chief Holmes has instructed all motorcycle police to keep in the open, apprising motorists that there is a highway police force in the village. Signs are also posted along the entrances to the town, on Lincoln avenue, Niles Center road, Dempster street, and other large automobile routes through the village. These signs warn of the speed limits and add that the law is to be enforced.

Hit and Run Drivers.

In two of the accidents that occurred last Sunday, drivers left the scene of the accident without stopping or without giving their names. Therefore, the chief has especially warned his officers to watch out for hit and run drivers.

"We will make an example of any hit and run driver we catch," he promised. "There is nothing more cowardly than to leave the scene of an accident. We'll see that such drivers get the maximum punishment. Cooperation has been promised the police by Percy Harms, who announced that he will fine traffic violators heavily.

The Niles Center chief of police pointed out the success of the Evanston accident prevention bureau as an example of the efficiency which he means to bring to Niles Center.

"Evanston has its accidents down to a minimum," he said, "and we can show similar results by bearing down. This is no idle threat, but a fair warning of action we mean to take. Let the speeder beware!"

DRAFT MODERN BUILDING CODE FOR WAUKEGAN

A new building code, to boom Waukegan and attract builders to the city, is being formulated by Fred H. Nemitz, building commissioner of the north shore suburb, it was announced last week. Commissioner Nemitz revealed that the preface and first explanatory chapters of the code have been drafted, and that the technical chapters are to be prepared as soon as possible. The chapters already written deal with general provisions and the administration of the law.

"The present code is archaic in many respects," explained Commissioner Nemitz. "It is too stringent in some cases, almost to the point of being confiscatory, and too weak in others, as for instance the sections concerning the protection of the new small home builder."

Commissioner Nemitz predicted an increase in building activities following the modernization of the code. Several large projects in the business district are said to be awaiting a favorable building law.

Logan Square Kiwanis Plans a Week-End Party

Members of the Logan Square Kiwanis club are making plans for their annual outing Aug. 15 and 16. It will be a week-end stag party with plenty of golf, but the place hasn't yet been revealed. James A. MacLagan, president, is in charge of the arrangements.

WHO'S WHO ON NORTH SIDE

JOSEPH A. LYNN.

Joseph A. Lynn, president of the River Park board, has lived in the Albany Park-West Ravenswood community for 20 years, and has been a commissioner of the park board for the last eight years. He is serving his second term as president of the board.

Always active in civic affairs, Mr. Lynn serves without pay, as do all commissioners of the has been largely responsible for building the boys' park district. He program of the district's small parks, and throughout last winter himself supervised basketball and other games carried on in River Park's new fieldhouse, 5100 Francisco avenue.

Mr. Lynn is a member of Luther Memorial church, and is likewise a member of all Masonic organizations, as well as of the Loyal Order of Moose. Asked to name his favorite hobby, he replied that his greatest pleasure is derived from organizing boys' athletics.

Neighborhood Theaters

The Buckingham, Devon, and North Center theaters are showing "Daddy Long Legs," with Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter. The North Center also has "I Take This Woman," with Carole Lombard and Gary Cooper, on a double feature bill.

"Daddy Long Legs," as you may already know, concerns a little orphan girl who is adopted by a man whom she never sees, except by his shadow. From the long legs of his shadow she nicknames him Daddy Long Legs. But Daddy isn't as old as you might suppose, and, though he has sent the little girl through college—well, we won't tell you.

Double Bill at Granada.

"Smart Money" and "The Night Angel" are at the Granada this week. In the latter Nancy Carroll crashes through in a big way as a Praguematic miss who uses a few drugs in the customers' drinks to relieve them of their currency. She is sentenced to the reformatory, but when she rolls her eyes at the prosecutor (Frederick March) he just hasn't the heart to send her.

In "Smart Money" Edward G. Robinson appears as a barber and proves that he can play other rôles than that of the gangster. His weakness for blonds in this picture causes the barber to get trimmed. Evelyn Knapp, whose injury we read about with sorrow, is the heavy sex appeal in this picture.

Two Films at Vogue.

The Vogue has "Lover Come Back" and "Gold Dust Gertie." The former features Constance Cummings, Jack Mulhall, and Betty Bronson in the story of a man who fails to marry his office sweetheart and then find out that the girl whom he did marry has become the sweetheart of the inner office.

"Gold Dust Gertie" brings Winnie Lightner onto the screen in one of her usual hard boiled rôles, with Olsen and Johnson, the vaudevillians, as a side dish.

Warrants Put on Sale in Stores.

More than half of Evanston's $400,000 worth of tax anticipation warrants have been sold, it was announced last week by Thomas F. Airth, chairman of the citizens' committee in charge of the warrant sales. At the meeting of the Evanston city council Monday evening, the personnel of the committee to be headed by Mr. Airth was named and approved. Ald. Herbert S. Simpson [6th], chairman of the council's committee on tax warrant sales, proposed the names of the citizens' committee on the council floor.

At the same time, substations for the sale of warrants, in $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000 denominations, were established in various areas throughout the city.

Warrants Offered in Stores.

These substations include: Central street area, Horace D. Bent, 1809 Central street; Main street area, the Royal department store, 718 Main street; Davis street downtown area, Lord's, Wieboldt's, the Hub, Chandler's, and Marshall Field's. Substations were also established at the North Shore, Evanston, and Georgian hotels.

Members of the citizens' committee are Mr. Airth, chairman; Edson Brock, H. Dyer Bent, F. S. Cunningham, C. M. Cartwright, Dr. J. E. Dolson, George Davis, A. H. Dagerman, L. M. Nilles, Clarence Mendelsohn, J. J. Monrath, Fred Kihm, Chauncey S. Patrick, Clyde Winter, E. Harper Payne, Robert Swift, C. D. Tripp, S. S. Porter, and Fred W. Sargent.

Evanston's model traffic code is to be made to conform as nearly as possible to the model code now under consideration by the city of Chicago, according to action taken on Monday night. The council's police committee and the city attorney were ordered to study Chicago's new code, for the purpose of coordinating traffic regulation within the two cities. Evanston's code will be changed in several respects for the sake of uniformity.

Seek Title to Coast Station.

The city council also voted to request the United States treasury department that the title to the old coast guard station be transferred to the city of Evanston.

The ordinance for Evanston's proposed 1,500,000 gallon water tank at Cleveland street and Hartray avenue is to be introduced in the council tomorrow evening, according to Ald. T. Samuel Parsons [1st], chairman of the water committee. Bids for the tank are to be taken soon after Sept. 1, and it was estimated by Arthur W. Handford, commissioner of public works, that the tank should be ready by Oct. 15. Ald. Parsons explained that it is important that the supports for the tank be sunk early in September, to avoid the possibility of frost.

39th Ward G.O.P. Club to Hold Annual Picnic

Members of the 39th Ward Republican club will hold their annual picnic next Sunday at the Wayside grove in Morton Grove. Frank M. Kalteaux, ward committeeman, will be a special guest. Thomas Catino, general chairman, will lead the automobile procession of floats and bands directly to the grove where a program of sports, games, and specialty acts has been arranged.

ORDERS BEACHES IN ROGERS PARK CLEAR AT 10 P. M.

The users of Rogers Park beaches must now patter homeward at 10 o'clock each evening or else—— That is the edict of Capt. Patrick J. Harding, Rogers Park police station. The curfew ruling was issued after residents near the beaches had protested that noisy parties in the early morning hours kept them awake. Attempts to patrol the beaches for the purpose of keeping order were declared ineffective, so the beaches will now be patrolled for the purpose of keeping others off entirely after the curfew hour.

OSCAR MAYER TO PICNIC WITH FRIENDS OF '74

Old Settlers to Frolic at Riverview Tomorrow.

Perhaps no north sider is more enthusiastic about attending the 57th annual Old Settlers' picnic, to be held tomorrow at Riverview park, than is Oscar F. Mayer, 5727 Sheridan road.

OSCAR F. MAYER. [Blank & Stoller Photo.]

As a lad of 15, Mr. Mayer arrived in Chicago from his native Germany in 1874, and was thus able to attend the first of the picnics held under the auspices of the Chicago Turngemeinde. Mr. Mayer, now past 70, never overlooks the annual events which give him an opportunity to renew the friendships of long ago.

Recalls August Lang.

Mr. Mayer recalls that one of his first enjoyable experiences in the city of his adoption resulted from joining the gymnasium classes of the Turngemeinde at North Side Turner hall. August Lang, pioneer gymnastic instructor, was his tutor, and Mr. Mayer has retained the health and vigor fostered in student days.

Old Settlers' picnic memories of Mr. Mayer include the events held in old Wright's Grove in Lake View at what was then Chicago's northern boundary.

Medals For Longtime Residents.

As in other years, the registration stand at tomorrow's picnic will open at 1 o'clock. Here, persons who have continuously resided in Chicago since 1903 and who are more than 40 years old may list their names. Gold medals will be awarded to old settlers whose records in length of residence are outstanding.

There will be community singing, the program including songs in both English and German. Dance music will be furnished by a band, and the dancing of elderly couples will be a feature.

Officers of the picnic committee are Louis O. Greiner, chairman; Louis H. Jaeschke, treasurer; Charles Eichen, secretary; and Frank Pfustler, assistant secretary.

MIDSUMMER SANTA WILL PRESENT FOOD AT HOMES OF BLIND

Laden with baskets of provisions, Santa Claus has come sailing into Chicago on a midsummer breeze, at the special request of the Streeterville Lions club, of which James A. Hart is president. Mr. Hart, who is managing director of the St. Clair hotel, is the Lion responsible for the Santa Claus drive which the club has inaugurated.

"Christmas baskets and Thanksgiving baskets are things that the poor people on the near north side have come to expect," Mr. Hart explained. "We sometimes forget, however, that hunger can be just as acute in the summer as in the winter. That's why the Lions have called on Santa Claus to make a summer visit."

On investigation, the Lions have found 30 near north side families of which one member or more is blind. Twenty-nine of the families, in desperate need, are to receive the Lions' baskets.

7 Irving Park Y. M. C. A. Boys Pass Swim Test

Seven boys of the Irving Park Y. M. C. A. turned out to be real swimmers last week when they made the length of the 60 foot pool for the first time in their young lives. Dale Carlson, swimming instructor, placed his official O. K. on each one of them. They include Edward Schdahl, Charles Goldstein, Raymond Miller, Billy Grimm, Chester Spath, Donald Weber, and Bill Vanderpool.

Phillip State Bank & Trust Company assumes deposit liability of suspended Illinois State Bank of Evanston

● For the first time since the recent financial disorders, protective measures have been taken that will definitely assure depositors of a suspended bank complete freedom from potential loss ● Inspired by the desire to be of paramount value and help to the community it is a privilege to serve, the Phillip State Bank & Trust Company has assumed the entire deposit liability of the suspended Illinois State Bank of Evanston. Depositors of that institution have been credited on the books of the Phillip State Bank & Trust Company with the full amount they had on deposit at the Illinois State Bank when it suspended business. The entire 100% balance of each depositor is to his credit, completely free of restrictions and restraining agreements. Each Illinois State Bank depositor will share the unhampered facilities of the Phillip State Bank & Trust Company equitably with its own depositors ● In this constructive manner the Phillip State Bank & Trust Company is again evidencing its inherent strength and strong affiliations. It reflects the bank's sole purpose and aim . . . to serve intelligently, protectively and helpfully.

TRIBUNE ISSUES CALL FOR FALL GARDEN ENTRIES

Honor Roll Competition Gets Under Way.

How does your garden handiwork compare with that of the thousands of others interested in flower gardening within a 40 mile radius of Tribune Tower? Hundreds of persons, by telephone and by mail, have indicated renewed interest in the next semi-annual Chicago Tribune garden honor roll, in which the first call for entries in the 1931 fall competition is being issued today.

Whether yours is a rock garden, old fashioned garden, formal or informal, or whether it includes a few vegetables mixed in among flowers and shrubs, if the garden creates an individual setting for your home, it is eligible for entry if it is your work and nonprofessional.

The judging will be the third semiannual project designed to list flower gardens worth of honor certificates and which others in the many communities which make up the metropolitan area may use as guides in patterning and developing yards and gardens best adapted to individual homes and to communities.

Ballot in This Section.

No tedious work is required of those who wish to enter the contest. An entry blank may be found elsewhere in this section. All it requires is the name and address of the garden and endorsement by signature of two neighbors or friends. Or neighbors may enter a garden of their own volition if the deserving gardener is too modest.

The ballot is to be mailed to the Farm and Garden department, The Chicago Tribune. Those received postmarked later than midnight Aug. 27 will not be considered, as judging must be held as near simultaneously as possible to be fair to entrants in various sections.

A special invitation to those in suburbs, in rural districts and somewhat thickly populated areas of Chicago proper is being issued for this fall contest. In the previous contests the competition has been centered largely in already beautiful city home or suburban areas.

Seek to Stimulate Plantings.

It is the intention of the contest to stimulate home plantings by pointing out those gardeners whose work has built not only community pride but has increased home values. Some of the most interesting situations discovered in the spring competition this year concerned gardeners whose neighbors had endorsed their nomination to the honor roll and yet these same neighbors were revealed as rivals.

"At times they'll hardly speak, when some of our flowers are doing well and theirs possibly are showing effects of insects or disease. And they don't ask for help, but keep on trying. Even though they do some things wrong this block has improved 30 per cent this season because of the stimulation of competition such as The Tribune is sponsoring."

This was the comment received from an entrant on the south side and is typical of similar remarks throughout the 40 mile radius.

To make the competition no less difficult in order to get on the honor roll, but to encourage those who think they would have more chance of recognition, those already given the certificates of merit last fall or this spring will be barred from reëntering this fall.

On Permanent Honor Roll.

Their names will remain, instead, on the permanent honor roll that has already given recognition to 73 gardens in the two previous contests. The list will be kept intact until it is apparent that individuals once honored have failed to continue their model gardening, and then a revised list will be compiled.

Many who enter desire advice rather than expect recognition. This is to be encouraged, as one of the purposes of the contest is to distribute as much information and as many constructive ideas as entrants desire. Answers will be given those who seek advice on the care of shrubs, trees, lawns and flowers. Judges will be instructed to give authoritative help or procure information if possible.

The date for judging will be announced as soon as weather conditions permit. The Tribune's flower garden score card on which the two previous entry lists have been judged will again be used as a basis of fair competition and permanent record of each entrant's garden ideas and progress.

NEW WILMETTE CHURCH PLANS GIVEN CHECKING

Receipt of plans for the proposed new $25,000 building of the First Presbyterian church of Wilmette was announced on Monday by B. H. Platt, village engineer. The plans have been received from Childs & Smith, Chicago architects, for checking as to zoning, plumbing, and other construction details, to see that they conform to the Wilmette building code. The new church is to be built at 9th and Greenleaf streets.

TEACH PUPILS TO PLAY WITH FIRE AT THIS SCHOOL

First Graders Learn to Make Movies.

Teaching children to play with fire is just one of the unorthodox, but scientifically correct, procedures of the De Paul university demonstration school, which is closing its fifth summer session. Visitors and observers at the school last week were interested to see a junior high school group conducting experiments with fire, to determine its causes, uses, and prevention. Other demonstration groups included one made up of first grade pupils who were intent on making a real motion picture in their class room.

These children, conducting their experiments, are themselves the material for a still larger experiment, according to Miss Marguerite McBride, director of the school and a member of the university faculty in education. The reactions of these children to teaching stimuli and various other factors in education are carefully noted by the 200 teachers from all over the country who attend the school.

More Teachers Than Pupils.

The demonstration school is one school in which there are more teachers than pupils, there being only 180 of the later. The teachers themselves, however, are likewise students. They study carefully the workings of the unit plan of education, which has been applied and emphasized in the presentation of fundamental ideas in the educational and social development of the children, explained Miss McBride.

De Paul's laboratory school is a pioneer in its field, having been established five years ago. There are other demonstration schools throughout the country, but there were few at the time of the establishment of the De Paul school, and none in the archdiocese of Chicago, according to Miss McBride.

200 Students to Return Home.

The 200 teacher students will embark this week for their homes in various parts of the country, and in the Philippines and Porto Rico. The course, which is given under the direction of selected teachers from the Chicago public schools supplemented by teachers of methods trained in the leading universities of the United States, ended this week.

The grade school boys and girls of the demonstration school will cease to be material for experimentation in education, and will continue to conduct their own experiments only at their own discretion. Miss McBride has pronounced the school's fifth year its most successful since its founding, and is busy compiling valuable data discovered this summer, for the future use of teachers.

Delzell Named Trustee of Rogers Park Kiwanis

Clarence Delzell was elected trustee of the Rogers Park Kiwanis club at a meeting held Thursday noon at the Rogers Park hotel. Four members were also elected to the board of directors. These include Dr. George Regan, Rudy Hammon, Robert Kuhlman and George Smith.

CHAIRMAN

MRS. LOUIS SUEKOFF.

Mrs. Louis Suekoff, 819 Chestnut street, Wilmette, is chairman of the ways and means committee for the card party to be given by the North Shore Temple Israel sisterhood, at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Aug. 11, at the Moraine hotel, Highland Park.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 3.

Prune the climbing roses. As blossoming ends, old canes that are dead or unproductive should be cut out and the new shoots on which next year's roses come may be trained into position and those which have borne flowers shortened. Trim little from the bushy tops, but thin the heavy growth at base considerably.

Tuesday, Aug. 4.

Lettuce started now should be tender hearted for fall. Plant shallow, not over a quarter inch, in good rich soil. If you are afraid the soil will dry out before plants come up, cover the row with boards, burlap or straw, watching for the first show of seedlings to remove this mulch. Mignonette or prizehead, reddish varieties, are good, or Grand Rapids may be grown for leaves.

Wednesday, Aug. 5.

A raid on the flowers' insect pests is in order. Leaf chewing insects like wireworms, grubs, cutworms, beetles or caterpillars succumb to stomach poisons like the arsenates in a dust or spray. The piercing, sucking insects like lice or aphids must have some such contract spray as nicotine sulphate. Get at all sides of the leaves and stems of plants.

Thursday, Aug. 6.

The lawn that has suffered from dry weather must be soaked thoroughly today, and again Saturday or Monday. Surface sprinkling or watering in the heat of the sun is harmful, as the water must get into the ground to draw grass roots deeper. A good fertilizer should be used now to give the plants food for fall growth. Reseed the thin or bare spots after raking the soil.

Friday, Aug. 7.

Thin out the young dephinium beds to give the larger, stronger plants a better show in the race for late fall blooming. They should also get plenty of water during the dry spells, and should have two or three feet of open space for circulation of air through these lusty feeders. By September they should be large enough to place in their permanent positions, according to color, of course.

Saturday, Aug. 8.

Weeding the flower beds, borders, and running a cutter around the edge of the sidewalks will tidy up the place for Sunday display. The dandelion and plantain should come out of the lawn and garden rows with a knife or the special pronged weeders on the market. To date no spray or killing liquid or dust has been proved successful for this job.

Greater Higgins Road Body Will Hold Picnic

Members of the Greater Higgins Road Improvement association will attend their annual picnic next Sunday at Shayne's grove. The association is working through Ald. James C. Moreland [41st] for the paving of Higgins road, and the installation of a feeder bus extension in this territory.

TONS OF PAPER PICKED UP DAILY IN LINCOLN PARK

Keep Your Playground Tidy, Public Asked.

From 15 to 24 tons of waste paper were picked up daily in Lincoln park throughout July, it was revealed Thursday by Oscar A. Knop, supervisor of small parks and recreation for the Lincoln park board. The greatest quantity of paper picked up in any one day was 50 tons, picked up as the aftermath of the July 4 crowds, statistics showed.

"We earnestly solicit the coöperation of the public in keeping the park clean," Mr. Knop declared. "If the public would only realize that it owns the park, and take a proprietary rather than a passing interest in the park property, we would not have half the litter and unsightliness about the park that we now have."

Opposes Force and Threats.

Mr. Knop denied that an increase in the park police force was practicable or proper as a means of combating the problem.

"The solution is in public education and the moulding of civic spiritedness," he said. "A police policy of coercion would only defeat its own ends. Besides, there aren't enough police in Chicago to keep the park clean by force and threats."

Mr. Knop asserted that ample containers for refuse are provided in the park grounds at convenient locations, and that garbage collections are made with sufficient frequency to forestall any complaints as to the adequacy of the park's facilities for handling the waste. Only rarely do the containers become filled to overflowing, he said, and that is usually on peak days when the park is crowded to capacity.

5,000 Milk Bottles Left Daily.

Lincoln park could easily go into the milk bottle business, Mr. Knop added, as more than 5,000 milk bottles in good condition are picked up in the park daily. Many other broken bottles are also picked up, and Mr. Knop warned picnickers against carelessly breaking the bottles. The broken glass, he pointed out, imperils thousands of barefoot children, as well as adults who sit or lie in the grass. On the beaches, he stressed, the danger is even greater.

From one to one and a half tons of rubbish, including peelings and pop bottles, are also picked up in the park daily. Mr. Knop particularly warned picnickers against bringing ice cream freezers into the park. The park police have orders to eject all ice cream freezers from the park lawns, because the salt water which is spilled onto the lawns kills the grass and shrubbery.

"We also try to see to it that no picnickers burn their rubbish on the lawns," Mr. Knop continued. "This thoughtless act destroys invaluable greenery that cannot be immediately replaced, and the park's beauty is thus marred for weeks and even months."

NAMES CHAIRMEN OF COMMITTEES FOR LIONS CLUB

Committee chairmen of the Rogers Park Lions club for the coming year were announced by the new president, Harry Klocke, last week.

The chairmen are: Activities, George Marsh; athletics, Ray Bairstow; attendance, Al Heda; entertainment, Charles Fadler; finance, Jack Schwartz; membership, Dr. C. M. Kanute; program and publicity, J. Walter Miner; laws and regulations, Reginald Osgoodby; safety, Capt. Patrick J. Harding; sick visitation, James Agnew and Ed Fleming; song leader, B. J. Willis; reception, Ed Brown, and good will and grievance, Fred Matti.

Delegates to the Cook county council of Lions club are Carl Gorr, Joseph Bohner, Mr. Miner, Clive Swanson, E. P. Anderson, Urban Janisch, and Mr. Klocke. The full membership of the committees is to be announced later.

HOT DAYS BRING THRONGS TO NEW LAWRENCE BEACH

Paris "Brassiere Suits" Are Noticed.

Hundreds of swimmers thronged the new Lawrence avenue beach during the hot days last week, following its opening Monday. The new playground for bathers was built in record time by filling in sand between the old Lawrence avenue crib and the shore line, and is to serve as a substitute for Clarendon beach, which has been closed and is being filled in.

Bathers now use the Clarendon bathhouse and lockers, but walk north for their swim. Playground facilities at Clarendon are likewise remaining in use, and the city bureau of parks and playgrounds intends to operate a community center at the old beach building, according to Walter Wright, director. The life guard captain's tower has been moved from the former beach out to the extension, where it commands a better view of the swimmers to the north.

Gala Opening Suggested.

No official opening ceremonies for the new beach have yet been planned, but John C. Bowers, president of the Central Uptown Chicago association, spoke favorably last week of a plan for the association to sponsor a gala opening day for the beach. Mr. Bowers said that he had been approached by several members of the association who considered the beach opening an important event which Uptown should not allow to go unmarked by some kind of demonstration of good feeling. What form the celebration should take, if it is held, would be determined by the directors of the association, Mr. Bowers added.

Scenes on the new beach last week were colorful and spectacular, with bathing suits of all hues and designs in evidence. Several women appeared on the Uptown beach wearing the latest Paris creation in bathing suits, consisting of a brassiere and skirted trunks. Although the Lincoln park police have orders to chase wearers of the new suits off of all Lincoln park beaches, the wearers were not molested by the city police at the new Lawrence beach.

Act to Scotch Noise.

Ald. John A. Massen [48th] reported that, in response to a petition from 15 Uptown and Edgewater residents, he has requested Capt. Patrick O'Malley of the Town Hall police station to patrol the Winona avenue beach after midnight, to prevent noise and other disorderly conduct.

Mrs. E. J. Ortenbach, 863 Glengyle avenue, one of the petitioners, said that disturbances on the beach often continue until 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning and begin again at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Ortenbach added that crap games on the beach, with as many as 30 players at a time, are regular affairs, and that bathers at the nearby beaches think nothing of usurping the lobbies and hallways of residences in the neighborhood as dressing rooms.

She declared that she came into the lobby of her apartment one day recently to find two nude women about to put on bathing suits, and that she has seen five men and a girl change clothes in an open car near her home. Children are dressed and undressed out on the sidewalk, she complained. Ald. Massen has instructed Capt. O'Malley to investigate all complaints.

FIVE NORTH SIDE STUDENTS TO GET LOYOLA DEGREES

Five north side students are among the fifty-four candidates who are to receive degrees at the Loyola university summer session commencement exercises at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, it is announced by the registrar's office.

Two of them, Lillian Mattocks Johnson, 914 Lafayette parkway, and Sister Mary Wendelin Sheehan, 650 Irving Park boulevard, are to receive the degree of master of arts. The other three, Miss Josephine Catherine Hartigan, 1341 Arthur avenue; Miss Juliet Mary Ryan, 2446 Estes avenue; and Miss Mary Barbara Walsh, 5540 Campbell avenue, are candidates for the degree of bachelor of philosophy.

The Rev. Robert M. Kelley, S. J., president of the university, will confer forty-eight bachelors' degrees and six masters' degrees at the annual exercises, which will be held in the Loyola gymnasium. The Rev. Timothy Bouscaren, S. J., professor of philosophy, will deliver the address.

WATCH DOLLAR DAY, CHALLENGE TO PESSIMISTS

Howard Street Boasts Business Is Alive.

Dollar day signs are to bloom again on Howard street on Aug. 14, according to an announcement made by Sol Martin, vice president of the Howard District Business association, in charge of sales promotion and publicity.

"We expect to make this Dollar day a demonstration of the fact that business is still alive and kicking on Howard street," Mr. Martin announced. "The kicking has been evident all along, but we want to give direct proof of the liveliness of business on the street. We have yet to fail in a Dollar day, and we don't expect to begin now."

Committee to Check Bargains.

All values offered by the merchants will be carefully checked by the committee, Mr. Martin promised. The committee in charge of the check up will include Gilbert Yellin, chairman, Sol Mongite, and Dr. C. C. Bourne.

Banners heralding the sales event will string across Howard street near the elevated station, and placards are also to be put into the shop windows of the merchants participating early this week. Mr. Martin predicted that there would be more than 50 merchants participating in Dollar day, and that the event would be more successful than the Dollar day held last year at this time.

Forbid Parking on Malvern.

An ordinance prohibiting parking on Malvern avenue from Howard street to Rogers avenue was recently passed by the city council at the request of Ald. George A. Williston [49th]. The Howard association had protested the blocking of the street by taxicabs and other vehicles. The association has also written to the Chicago Motor Coach company, requesting that the buses waiting on Paulina street be made to park close to the curb and in a single line, and that the company avoid having more than two busses on Paulina at a time. The association had received complaints from merchants and automobilists on Paulina street, that the busses were often parked at an angle, blocking the street, and that as many as six busses were sometimes waiting on the street.

Franklin Grosser of the Howard association won the recent golf tournament between the Howard district group and the Rogers Park-Clark Street Business Men's association, with a low gross score of 81. Team honors for the low six players went to the Clark street men.

COLORED CHORUS TO GIVE LOYOLA CONCERT TONIGHT

The fourth popular symphonic concert of the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra, under the auspices of Loyola university, will be given this evening in the university stadium, with the Mundy choristers singing vocal arrangements. The feature number will be Anton Dvorak's "New World Symphony," which will be played in its entirety by the Philharmonic orchestra, conducted by Adolphe Dumont, according to Robert L. Hollinshead, manager. James A. Mundy will conduct the famous colored chorus of 80 mixed voices in two groups of Negro spirituals, as well as the Hallelujah chorus from "The Messiah," by Handel. If the weather does not permit the concert to be given outdoors it will be held in the Loyola gymnasium.

Seventeenth street in North Chicago, from Sheridan road to the city limits, was opened to traffic on Monday. Although the construction of the roadway is not quite complete Robert Cudworth, street commissioner, deemed it capable of bearing traffic.

DEERFIELD HIGH BOYS WIN U. S. HONORS ON HOME

School Built House Is 1st Prize Winner.

The house built by the Deerfield-Shields High school boys has won first prize for the better homes committee of Highland Park in the national contest of the Better Homes in America campaign, according to an announcement last week following the receipt of letters from Secretary of the Interior Wilbur and James Ford, executive director of the Better Homes in America campaign. The letters were received by Mrs. Howard G. Kornblith, chairman of the Highland Park committee, with the first prize check of $75.

Built on a one year construction program by the Deerfield-Shields boys under the direction of W. E. Durbahn in the vocational training department of the school, the six room house was furnished by the girls of the school. Plans for its furnishing and decoration were made in the school's art appreciation classes, directed by Miss Margaret Kerfoot.

Wilbur Commends Students.

The Highland Park committee entered the house in the national contest in May, in connection with its campaign week program.

Secretary Wilbur, in his letter, wrote: "Your committee has performed a distinct service to your city through the high educational quality of its program and through the splendid coöperation manifested by the many individuals and civic and business groups which helped in one way or another in your campaign."

Assisted with Campaign.

Among those who assisted in the campaign were Mrs. Richard L. Thorsch, Mrs. Carlton Vail, Mrs. Richard Carr, Mrs. Claburn E. Jones, Mayor Emil Wetzel, J. W. Simons, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fletcher Seymour, Howard G. Kornblith, S. A. St. Peter, R. L. Erskine, C. P. Hunter, J. B. Deibler, William Brown, Lyle Gourley, Paul L. Udell, and Mrs. George Gaidzik.

Others were Mrs. J. M. Lebolt, Mrs. Alfred Stern, Mrs. Leonard Reisser, Mrs. Allan Wolff, Mrs. Robert Grinnel, Mrs. C. A. Harknes, Mrs. Eugene Klaber, Mrs. James Cady Ewell, Mrs. Frederick Hodgson, Richard L. Sandwich, Mr. Durbahn, Robert Schneider, Miss Kerfoot, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Crafts Watson, Mrs. Fred Clutton, Mrs. Jacob Weinberg, Mrs. Walter Lillienfeld, Mrs. Byron Hawes, John S. RADIO USED TO GIVE NEW KIND OF FARM RELIEF

Loudspeaker Proves Aid to Scarecrow.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio has joined the airplane in giving farm relief. While Iowa farmers are "raining" arsenic from a fleet of planes on myriads of grasshoppers to save their crops, orchard owners have discovered that a radio receiving set installed inside a scarecrow makes it much more effective in keeping the birds out of the cherry trees and berry bushes. An Oregon experimenter reports that not only do the birds flee the advertising announcements but they won't even listen to the best crooners.

The next step is obviously to do away with scarecrows altogether and equip each fruit tree with a loudspeaker to ward off our feathered enemies. As a matter of fact Paul Whiteman plays at a spot where the loudspeakers are hidden in the trees. And birds cause no trouble there.

What is a televisor? A lot of folks who viewed Columbia's visual station dedication program think they're the television whiskers that appeared on some of the celebrities' faces. According to observers Mayor Walker and Guy Lombardo looked like Trade and Mark Smith. By the time television becomes a general success possibly all our favorite announcers will look like European diplomats.

One of the best lines heard at the Columbia dedication was Edwin Cohan's "television of today is perhaps comparable to the phonograph of 1910 and the motion picture of 1905."

Another Vallee coming up. Rudy's brother Bill, 22 years old, made his debut recently in a program titled "Set With Stars." Predictions are promising.

A recent radio installation in a private home costs about $3,000. It included loud speakers in most of the rooms of the home and remote control devices to operate them from a master receiving set.

Archer Gibson, radio pipe organist recently praised by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, was for years private organist for Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who had a great organ built in his mansion on Riverside Drive after the fashion of his old chief Andrew Carnegie. With Gibson at the organ and great artists, such as Fritz Kreisler participating, the Schwab musicals became famous. "The Rosary" as played by Gibson was said to be Schwab's favorite selection.

Incidentally, the hardboiled announcers who never waver before the microphone have at last found out what "mike fright" is. Certain veterans wilted pitifully before the electric eye of television.

Dennis King, famed music comedian, and now a radio artist, tells this story on himself:

"When I was still a struggling thespian in New York, and sleeping in the parks because of lack of funds, Anne Nichols, who later wrote "Able's Irish Rose," gave me a job in a play she was putting on. It was my first singing part, and on the strength of the engagement, I took my friend and myself out to dinner with my last two dollars. The meal amounted to $1.50 so we indulged in two twenty-five cent cigars to make the event a complete splurge.

"And the next day I was fired. The manager said I was a rotten actor, and would never make out at all."

That was his first experience as king for a day. Later he made a lot of money playing that rôle.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has just been awarded the Columbia Broadcasting medal for distinguished contribution to the radio art. CBS announces that he is the first American so honored. Now it is up to some flying service to pick out a radio big shot and award him a medal engraved "for distinguished service to the art of aviation."

Fred Waring is scheduled to join the "Around the Town" program on Aug. 31 . . . The candy makers, according to a report, are getting together and will join the cigaret manufacturers in their battle of the air . . . One of the most popular English radio teams is known as Flotsam and Jetsam, one a tenor and the other a very deep basso . . . Here is an error credited to a Texas newspaper by Editor and Publisher: "Mark Coney, electrical wizard and discoverer of wireless telegraphy, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture."

Carveth Wells, world adventurer, who recounts his strange experiences over NBC, told about his wildest sight recently. It was a carload of sophomores in a collegiate flivver crossing an African desert singing a Vallee number.

START DIGGING FOR MAMMOTH N. Y. RADIO CITY

New York.—Excavations started last week for the mammoth Radio City, said to be the largest building project in the history of the world, which is to be erected in the heart of New York City. The digging is expected to be completed in the fall. Eight steam shovels, 100 trucks, and nearly 300 workmen started the excavation job. When the actual building work begins, at least 5,000 men will be employed. The $250,000 project is being financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Minnesota, No. Carolina Near Top and Bottom

Minnesota and North Carolina take places near the top and the bottom, respectively, of the list of states in which radio receivers have been tabulated by the census bureau.

Out of 608,398 families in Minnesota, 287,880, or 47.3 per cent, had sets in 1930. This was almost 50,000 more than the department of commerce and the radio industry estimated.

Only 72,329, or 11.2 per cent, of 645,245 families in North Carolina, however, possessed receivers when the count was taken. The radio industry made an estimate of 92,000.

BETTY, BOB HOSTS TO 250

Antonia Gillman and Richard De Wolfe, the Betty and Bob of W-G-N, with Cloudchaser, an air elf, between them. Betty and Bob were hosts to 250 Chicagoland children last Sunday.

Back to Earth

Two hundred and fifty children from all over Chicagoland had the time of their lives last Sunday when they met in the flesh a real air elf from Cloudland, and Betty and Bob, the two children who are visiting that magic sphere through W-G-N at 5:45 o'clock each afternoon.

The occasion was a picnic held at Brook Hill farms, west of Milwaukee. The air elf was Cloudchaser, who through his magic changed himself into a man in order that he might not be lost in the crowd. He called himself W. E. Johnstone. Betty, of course, is Antonia Gillman, and Bob is Richard De Wolfe.

With the air Cloud Chaser's magic airplane, the two children who are now visiting the Glumpers, the inhabitants of that pessimistic star, Glump, returned to earth for this picnic.

Visitors last Sunday not only made the acquaintance of these three radio personalities, but were introduced to other strange creatures of the land of clouds, in the form of wooden cutouts, scattered in unexpected places over the farm. There was the Terrigog, the Swisher, Twisten-Ding, Pat-Patter, the rain elf.. Sponge-Un, and Hurry Scurry, a snow gnome.

GUEST ARTIST

Aileen Stanley, vaudeville headliner and stage star, will appear as guest artist with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next broadcast, which will be heard through W-G-N Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. During this program Miss Stanley will introduce three new songs.

N. Y. PUBLISHERS WILL BAR TRADE NAMES IN RADIO

The publishers of newspapers in New York City have reached an agreement whereby they will exclude all trade names from radio programs. It was agreed to do this several years ago but the New York Telegram, owned by the Scripps-Howard papers, continued to print the names.

It is understood that the Scripps-Howard people are among those who have signed the agreement to cut out trade names altogether.

Hereafter simply the name of the artist will be mentioned if the New York newspaper plan is carried out. A musical group will be referred to simply as "band" or "orchestra," but in no case will the name of the sponsor or advertiser be mentioned.

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's Youngest Announcer, Wed

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's youngest radio announcer (he is 20), was married on July 11 to Miss Jane Neilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Neilson of Evanston. Martin came to W-G-N from station WSBT at South Bend, Ind. He reads THE TRIBUNE on the daily Digest of the News program. He is also heard with Leonard Salvo, organist, during Everybody's hour and on the Mail Box program.

THREE SINGERS, THREE SONGS

Tom, Dick and Harry, crooning trio, will sing "I Found a Million Dollar Baby," "One More Hour of Love," and "Bubbling Over With Love" on a new program over W-G-N at 9:45 tomorrow night.

RADIO WILL PLAY IMPORTANT ROLE AT MUSIC FEAST

Quin Ryan to Broadcast Festival Aug. 22.

Radio will play an important rôle in the success of the second Chicagoland Music Festival, which will be held Saturday, Aug. 22, in Soldiers' field, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, associated newspapers, and civic and commercial concerns of the middle west.

Quin Ryan will be at the microphone throughout the festival program. W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, will broadcast the entire program, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, while a National Broadcasting company network will broadcast from 9 to 9:30. Allan Grant, W-G-N staff pianist, will accompany the choruses that night.

A few headliners for the festival concert will be:

Hallelujah chorus of 6,000 voices.
Negro chorus of 2,000 voices.
One drum corps of 400 pieces.
A massed band of 2,200.

Grabel, Cain in Charge.

Last summer letters poured into the office of THE TRIBUNE and W-G-N from listeners in every state in the Union who heard the concert. Many testified that the program was the finest radio broadcast they ever had heard. It will be finer this summer. Victor J. Grabel again will be the bandmaster and Noble Cain the director of the chorus.

From the moment the bands and drum corps enter the huge arena at 7:30 o'clock until the final note is sounded Mr. Ryan will describe the cheering thousands, the huge searchlights as they play upon entertainers and spectators. It will be an evening filled with harmony and dynamic description. Pageantry, color, music, the applause of 150,000 will be brought to all who cannot attend in person.

Preliminary Broadcasts.

During the festival an hour will be devoted to presenting winners in the preliminary contests of Dixon and Waukegan, Ill., Racine, Wis., and Gary, Ind.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings preceding that Saturday the contests for male, woman, and mixed choruses will be held in the Drake hotel; bits of these contests also will be broadcast from W-G-N. A few minutes on the air will be given to the adult and juvenile band contests Saturday morning, also in the Drake hotel.

WMT, radio station in Waterloo, Ia., is sending the prize winning adult band of the first festival, the Cedar Falls (Ia.) Municipal band, to the festival. All the expenses will be paid by Harry Shaw, owner of the station and formerly business manager of the Waterloo Tribune, now merged with another Waterloo newspaper. The Tribune sponsored the neighboring city band last summer. James A. Melichar is the director of the 45 piece organization.

After the Festival.

Radio not only plays a big part in the festival week's program but also after the festival is over. Last summer three of the stars in the festival contest—Agatha Lewis, winner of first place in the soprano division for Chicago; David Pritchard, leader of the Pritchard Mixed quartet, first Chicagoland winners, from Racine, and Julius Sklute, also of Racine, second place Chicagoland baritone—all won enviable positions in the concert and radio field.

Miss Lewis is a member of the Herbert Witherspoon chorus, Mr. Pritchard is a W-G-N staff artist, and Mr. Sklute has appeared in radio and on the concert stage throughout the winter and spring. Many of the winnings groups of the first festival were heard this winter in radio recitals over W-G-N and other Chicago and Chicagoland stations.

DR. ARTHUR HOLT WILL SPEAK ON MIDDAY HOUR

Building religion into business is the theme of the midday services from W-G-N for this week. The speaker for 1 o'clock tomorrow will be Dr. Arthur E. Holt, professor of ethics at the University of Chicago and the Chicago Theological seminary. Dr. Holt has been prominent in the work of the Congregational church for many years. Following the theme of the week, Dr. Graham Fay, who has been in social and industrial betterment work for over forty years, will speak on Wednesday. Dr. Fay's subject is "Building Religion Into Business from the Bottom Up."

Another lay speaker, James L. Kraft, Chicago manufacturer, will speak for business men on Friday on "Building Religion into Business from the Top Down." The other services during the week will be conducted by the Rev. John L. Dickson, director of the midday services, who is assisted by Leonard Salvo, organist, and Gene Martin, baritone.

More Power Is Urged for Western Stations

While still in the midst of his western inspection tour, Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount has expressed the opinion that broadcasting stations in the west need more power because of the often large areas they are required to serve. The western radio commissioner reiterated his contention that cleared channel stations should be permitted to use the maximum power of 50,000 watts. He also noted that numerous technical improvements in broadcasting are apparent throughout the west.

China Expands Radio.

As part of the expansion and development of China's international radio communication, the Chinese ministry of communications recently decreed that all government radio stations in the country were to operate international services.

JANE FROMAN.
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Jane Froman, a contralto with a touch of indigo in her voice, brought to the radio spotlight by Paul Whiteman, made her local debut last Thursday in the first of a series of NBC programs with an orchestra under the direction of Matt Malnek, a protégé of the "dean of modern music." Hereafter their programs will be heard over an NBC net at 7 Wednesday evenings and at 10:30 Thursday evenings.

AKRON'S RADIO WILL TRANSMIT MAPS FROM AIR

Giant Navy Dirigible Has Fine Plant.

The world's largest dirigible, the Akron, which was christened in Akron, O., Saturday, is equipped with the finest radio system in the air.

Radio will play as important a part in the maneuvering of the Akron in peace as in war times and is almost of as much importance to the airship as the huge engines which keep it afloat. It will be equipped with a complete television system through which facsimiles of maps, sketches, photographs, and duplicates of other military information may be transmitted. While soaring over the water communication can be established with operators on board battleships or with ground bases while speeding over land through its six broadcasting and receiving channels. Two way conversations with pilots of airplanes flying over enemy fortifications can also be effected.

Four Radio Men.

The ship will be equipped with three receiving sets, a high frequency apparatus, an intermediate frequency set, and a direction finder. Through these sets the operators will be able to carry on a conversation through both the ordinary voice method and by the use of key system. By means of the direction finder officers of the ship will be able to plot out their courses.

The radio room itself is compact, being only nine feet and ten inches in width and less than eight feet along the port side. A crew of four radio men and an electrician's mate, all under the charge of a junior officer of the craft, will make up the radio force.

Three Antenna Planned.

Three antennae will be installed. Two of them of the trailing reel-up type, one 200 feet long and the other 150 feet, will be suspended from the radio room. The third will be a fixed antenna running along the longitudinal girder. This will be used when the trailing apparatus is found to be impractical.

Power for operating the transmitting set will be obtained from two gas driven auxiliary engines running generators. A high capacity storage battery will also be installed for cases of emergency.

HAROLD STOKES TO DIRECT NEW DANCE PROGRAM

Tom, Dick, and Harry on Novel Bill.

A new dance program, featuring novel musical combinations and effects, with Tom, Dick and Harry furnishing the vocal end of the bill, will be presented for the first time at 9:45 tomorrow evening under the direction of Harold Stokes.

Harold Stokes, well known to radio listeners as a former director of Jean Goldkette's orchestra, comes back to radio after two years with his own orchestra in Kansas City and Omaha. Stokes is well known for novel arrangements of popular dance numbers. Besides conducting his own orchestra, Stokes plays the piano, accordian, clarinet, drums, and xylophone.

On the First Program.

The initial program includes arrangements of hits from "The Wonder Bar," "The Band Wagon," Crazy Quilt," and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

The story of Sheridan's ride will be told at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. Miss Jean Conover has used the famous poem by James Buchanan Reed as the foundation of her story. An incident from the life of John Hancock, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, will be dramatized by Norman Macdonald for the sketch at 8:30 Friday, Aug. 7.

Boy to Make Evening Bow.

Earle Wilkie, 17 year old boy baritone, who has been singing on W-G-N Wednesday and Saturday mornings at 10:45, will make his bow to its evening audience at 7:45 Tuesday evening. Two of his numbers will be "Shipmates o' Mine," and "In the Silence of the Night." Young Wilkie is a protege of Barre Hill of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

The second of the summer garden concert heard from W-G-N at 8:10 Saturday nights, will be presented Aug. 8 and will have Vienna as its scene. Works of Lehar, Schubert, Suppe, and Straus will be heard on this Viennese program.

NBC WILL ERECT VISION STATION ON 84TH FLOOR

The National Broadcasting company has been authorized by the federal radio commission to erect a television and a sound broadcasting station on the eighty-fourth floor of the Empire State building, of New York, tallest structure in the world.

The stations will operate on ultra high frequencies, above 23,000 kilocycles, in an effort to ascertain whether or not they can be adapted to visual broadcasting. The stations will cost $75,000, with $10,000 additional for studios.

A television antenna will be placed on top of the Empire State building mooring mast, 1,250 feet above the street level. NBC engineers believe that many of the present obstacles to visual broadcasting will be removed through the operation of the station from this height.

Olive Hull Will Open Series on Child Welfare

Olive Hull, executive secretary of Gov. Emmerson's committee on Child Welfare, will give a series of talks on child welfare from W-G-N every Monday, starting tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. D. T. McNabb, of the Animal Protection committee of the Women's City club will speak Tuesday at this same time on the proper care for pets in summer.

Herbert and Nevin Works on W-G-N at 8 Tuesday

Two excerpts from Victor Herbert's only grand opera, "Natoma," and Nevin's "O that We Two Were Maying," sung as a soprano and alto duet, are to be heard in the household program with Adolphe Dumont and a symphony orchestra through W-G-N at 8 p. m. Tuesday evening. A vocal ensemble will offer "Cousin Jedediah."

Balks KTNT Removal.

Norman Baker, owner of station KTNT of Muscatine, Ia., is seeking a preliminary injunction against the individual members of the federal radio commission to nullify the action of the commission in removing KTNT from the air last month. The suit was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court.

LEGION FESTIVAL IN EVANSTON TO OPEN TOMORROW

Profits to Send Musicians to Conventions.

The drum and bugle corps of Evanston post, No. 42, American Legion, will stage a festival, starting tomorrow and continuing throughout the week at Dewey avenue and Dempster street, Evanston. A free feature each night will be a professional aerial act. There will be amusements to appeal to persons of all ages. Lloyd M. [illegible]pson, drum major of the drum and bugle corps, is chairman of the festival committee.

The purpose of the festival is to raise funds with which to send the corps of 40 members to the state and national conventions of the Legion. The corps won the state championship in 1929.

The Illinois state championship preliminary to the American Legion junior baseball world series will be played at Wrigley field next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Cook county champions will be pitted against downstate champions in three games. The games will start at 3 o'clock.

The Rogers Park, South Chicago, Berwyn and Marine post teams still are in the competition for the Cook county championship. The downstate title also remains to be won this week.

All children in Chicago, younger than 18 years, will be admitted to the grounds free at the championship games. They will be held under the direction of the state athletic committee of the Legion, of which Edwin H. [illegible] is chairman.

Medill-Tribune post, No. 348, will go on a moonlight excursion on the S. S. Theodore Roosevelt Aug. 10. The boat will leave the Michigan avenue dock at 8 o'clock and return at 11:45.

Assisted by veterans of the civil, Spanish-American and Indian wars, the 11th engineers, first American unit to engage in combat in the world war, today will celebrate the 14th anniversary of their landing on foreign soil by laying the cornerstone for the regiment's convalescent center at Camp Bogardus, in the forest preserve at [illegible] street and Maple lake.

A program of sports has been arranged. In the evening there will be dancing and the presentation of the 11th engineers' stage show, which was a hit with the A. E. F. The show will be produced under the direction of Congressman John C. Schaefer of Milwaukee, who was a private in this regiment.

Judge Marcus Kavanagh, Judge Joseph Burke, Judge Mathew D. Hartigan and Gen. P. J. H. O'Farrell are to speak. The event is being held under the direction of Edward J. Walsh, Patrick J. Cahill and Kieran P. O'Gallagher.

The annual meeting of the Cook county council will be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in the council chamber in the city hall. Officers will be nominated and elected for 1932, including commander, vice commander, finance officer, sergeant at arms, and one member of the county executive committee from each of the nine districts for a term of two years. District members of the executive committee will be elected from their respective districts in caucuses.

The sixth district has unanimously indorsed its commander, Joe De La Cour, for vice commander of the county council. Commander De La Cour has held offices in his post, his district, and has served on state committees.

Ravenswood post No. 149 will picnic today at Harms woods, Glen View forest preserve. The preserve lies at the end of the Evanston street car line. It may be reached by auto northwest on Harms road from Dempster street.

Chester L. Davis, assistant trust officer of the Chicago Title and Trust company, will talk on "The Real Estate Situation in Cook County" at the meeting tomorrow noon of Advertising Men's post No. 38.

PARADE TO OPEN ANNUAL CARNIVAL OF ST. ANDREW'S

Beginning with a parade of 60 automobiles between 8 and 10 o'clock Thursday evening, St. Andrew's rectory, [illegible]546 Paulina street, will hold its annual carnival, to continue until Aug. 17 at Ashland avenue and Addison street. Special feature nights are to be held thorughout the carnival, according to the Rt. Rev. V. J. Moran, who promises that many noted athletes and other celebrities will attend the fete on these special nights.

Among those to be invited are members of the Cubs and the White Sox. The Rt. Rev. Fr. Moran is in charge of the festival, assisted by John Reckert, chairman, and E. Joseph Bousser, secretary and treasurer.

The carnival is to include numerous booths for the sale of groceries, blankets, candy, meat, and other merchandise, as well as the holding of games. There will also be a merry go round.

W. E. WEBSTER NAMED TO HEAD BUSINESS BODY

William E. Webster was elected president of the Libertyville-Mundelein chamber of commerce at the annual meeting held recently. Other new officers include: Vice president, E. F. Rouse; treasurer, Roy A. Gar[illegible], and secretary, D. H. Holmes. New directors of the organization are [illegible], Roy Titus, A. C. Ree, J. M. McKitrick, Mr. Rouse, Mr. Webster, and Mark Neville. The organization voted to hold monthly meetings of the general membership. Special speakers are to be secured for each meeting.

BRINGS DISPLAY OF 10,000 BUGS FOR WORLD FAIR

Butterflies Foot Wide in Collection.

Albano Schmalz, 1415 Otto street, has just returned from Brazil, bringing with him ninety-three cases filled with 10,000 insect specimens. He brought the collection for exhibition at the 1933 World's Fair, he said.

The insect collection, which was started forty-two years ago by Mr. Schmalz's uncle, John Paul Schmalz, is an internationally famous one. Several years ago, Mr. Schmalz related, a party of European scientists visited his uncle for the purpose of viewing the collection, which contains not only Brazilian specimens that have rarely been preserved, but specimens from all over the world, which his uncle obtained by trading with other collectors.

"The collection now belongs to my aunt," Mr. Schmalz explained.

Butterflies a Foot Wide.

The collection, which Mr. Schmalz modestly admitted he had helped to supplement, contains butterflies almost a foot in width, and other butterflies of only one-eighth inch in width.

"My uncle not only collected and mounted these specimens, but compiled data about each specimen which is valuable scientifically," Mr. Albano said. "For instance, he tells about the food and feeding habits of each one. I remember there is one specimen of a wasp, with a little piece of cotton in its mouth. When I first saw that cotton I thought maybe it was some foreign material that had got mixed in with the specimens, but knowing how careful my uncle was, I looked the matter up in his book of data. In the book he told how he was sitting one night in his room when he saw the wasp fly past with the cotton in its mouth, and how he caught it and mounted it with the little piece of cotton still there."

Includes Lice from Wasp.

Mention of the wasp reminded Mr. Schmalz of his uncle's smallest specimens, the lice off of a Brazilian wasp. These parasites were too small to be mounted, so his uncle prepared a small transparent celluloid box, through which the specimens are viewed.

"There are tarantulas, and large beetles—many of the specimens were poisonous," Mr. Schmalz said. "My uncle was overseer and manager of a large sugar factory there in Brazil, and largely cut off from the civilized world, so he needed something to occupy his attention. The subject became so interesting that he bought many books and began collecting scientifically and corresponding with scientists."

DIVORCE SUITS FILED BY EIGHT NORTH SIDERS

Abandoning all hopes of patching up their marital differences, eight north side residents started divorce suits in the Circuit and Superior courts last week.

Two wives, Mrs. Helen Muto, 1230 Otto street, who accused her husband, Alfred Muto, of cruelty, and Mrs. Beatrice Stevenson, 911 Windsor avenue, who alleged that her mate, Donald W. Stevenson, deserted her, filed separate maintenance actions.

Complaints of cruelty were made in the divorce suits started by:

Mrs. Virginia F. Over, 1338 Hollywood avenue, against Harold A. Over, 7691 Rogers avenue.

Mrs. Elsa M. Michels, 2642 Lunt avenue, against Henry W. Michels Jr.

Mrs. Alice Meloy, 4540 Magnolia avenue, against James R. Meloy.

Mrs. Dorothy Gibbons, 1100 North La Salle street, against Frank Gibbons.

Mrs. Catherine Schwall, Wilmette, against Arthur L. Schwall.

Ben I. Payne, 2128 Cleveland avenue, who is asking a divorce from Mrs. Mona L. Payne, and Mrs. Ann Swanson, who is suing Carl G. Swanson, 4845 Winthrop avenue, charged their mates with desertion.

Habitual drunkenness was given as the grounds for divorce in the suit instituted by Mrs. Rose Hampe against William Hampe, 1969 Wilmot avenue.

Northwest Boy Scouts Ready for Camp Trip

Northwest side Boy Scouts will leave today for the last two week period this summer at Camp Og-Da-Ko-Ta. In case scouts cannot attend two weeks of camp, Northwest Suburban council officials announce it is possible for boys to register for only the last week.

DEVON-WESTERN GROUP ACTS TO END BURGLARIES

Due to the number of burglaries in West Rogers Park recently, the Devon-Western Business Men's Protective association has requested Capt. Patrick Harding of the Rogers Park police station to drive prowlers out of the district.

According to the association, many burglaries occur while women are out of their homes in the afternoon, or while families are away for their vacations, and prowlers are often sneak thieves on the lookout for likely places to break into.

Capt. Harding has instructed his flivver squads to patrol the territory and arrest any suspicious looking characters who seem to be loitering especially near apartments from which the tenants are away. All suspicious persons will be required to give an account of their activities.

MOODY STUDENTS EARN AN AVERAGE OF $6,689 A WEEK

Men and women students of the Moody Bible institute, La Salle street and Chicago avenue, averaged aggregate earnings of $6,689.71 per week for extra employment during the last fiscal year, while pursuing their religious educations, it was announced last week. The number of male students employed is 271, or 66 per cent of the male student body at the institution. More than half of the women, or 54 per cent of the feminine student body, also are employed, holding 319 jobs.

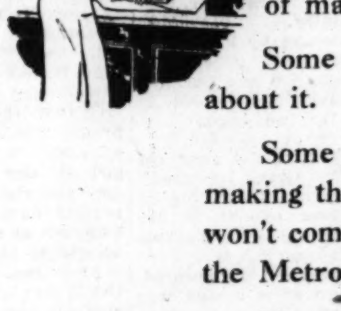
A SALES BUILDER

Keyed to Today's Needs!



HAVE you fewer customers this year than last? Have some of the old ones stopped trading with you? Have you found it difficult to find new customers?

Not a few merchants and retailers face the problem of maintaining sales volume under present-day conditions.

Some of them, however, have given up trying to do anything about it. They are sitting back, waiting for the return of good times.

Some merchants, on the other hand, refuse to wait. They are making their own good times by doubling their efforts. If business won't come to them, they go out after it—and the medium they use is the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune.

Here is a way to pep up your sales that is keyed to today's needs. Advertising in the Metropolitan Section is low-cost advertising. It is efficient advertising. It is productive advertising. It reaches the families who are spending the money. You direct your message only to actual prospects, for you buy only that portion of the Sunday Tribune's huge circulation that is read on your side of the city, among people who can trade with you.

Are you content to wait for good times, or do you want to make your own good times?

Think it over. Then decide to find out the complete facts about Metropolitan Section advertising and what it can do for your business. Call Superior 0100 tomorrow—Metropolitan.

Ready to Start Stage Season in Manhattan

Week of Aug. 24 Brings Eight Premieres.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Not a single new play, show or frolic will be staged on Broadway during the next seven days, although the week is traditionally regarded as marking the start of the new season. The first première in sight is "Ruddigore," to be revived at Erlanger's theater on Aug. 10. The week of Aug. 17 is barren of announcements. But during the week of Aug. 24, new shows will be in plentiful supply, so a faithful historian of the stage must announce that date as the marker of the season's opening.

"Love's Out of Fashion," a German comedy, with Walter Woolf as star, on Aug. 24. "Three Times the Hour," a melodrama which Brock Pemberton will bring to the Avon on Aug. 25; George White's "Scandals," coming to the Apollo, perhaps on the same night; "After Tomorrow," the Hugh Stange-John Golden play, listed for the Golden theater on Aug. 27; the "Vanities," announced to open Earl Carroll's new playhouse, also on the 27th; "Friendship," which George M. Cohan will bring to the Fulton, on Aug. 31; "Cloudy with Showers," the Floyd Dell-Thomas Mitchell comedy, scheduled for the Morosco on that evening; and "Free for All," the Schwab and Mandel musical show, which will set up shop at the Manhattan either the week of the 24th or 31st. Less definite are Miss Unger's play, "Ladies of Creation" and a Negro pastime called "Fast and Furious."

It seems that Jed Harris' projected cycle of Eugene O'Neill revivals will not be started until after the Theater Guild has staged the same dramatist's latest opus, "Mourning Becomes Electra." This may be professional courtesy on Mr. Harris' part; but on the other hand it may be a shrewd decision to ride along in the backwash of the publicity that O'Neill's three layer creation is certain to stir up.

"Desire Under the Elms" will be the first of the revivals, and Eugene Powers will probably have the rôle that Walter Huston originated. The second will be "Marco Millions," on the staging of which Mr. Harris is said to have some new ideas. Mr. Powers will probably be seen in this play also, in the rôle of the Great Khan, which was acted for the Guild by Baliol Holloway and Morris Carnovsky.

Judith Anderson will tour in Pirandello's "As You Desire Me" during the first months of the new season. She will spend a fortnight in the Canadian cities, beginning Sept. 21, and on Oct. 5 will open in Boston for a run. In January she will appear as the star of a new play, the title and authorship of which are a state secret in the Shubert office.

"The Venetian," by Clifford Bax, which the Shuberts will import from London, will begin its career in Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26, and will also have a week in New Haven, Conn., before entering New York. Five members of the London cast will be employed in this production.

Ethel Barrymore, now started on a western tour in "The School for Scandal," has dropped her plans for a repertory. She hopes to reach New York in the rôle of Lady Teazle around the Christmas holidays. Earlier in the summer she talked of a quartet of vehicles, with "Hedda Gabler," "Camille" and "Francesca da Rimini" as the other three.

Mae West intends to make another filibustering expedition into the drama. Her new play will be called "The Constant Sinner," and it will be a dramatization of her novel, which bore another title, and which very few people seem to have read. Atlantic City will be the scene of the tryout, during the week of Aug. 24. A Broadway première will follow, on or about Sept. 10.

◆

Among the hits of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" are a group of numbers salvaged from a revue called "Who's Who," promised last season by Arthur Klein, but never staged. They bear the titles of "Changing the Guard," "Doing the New York," "Clinching the Sale," and "Victim of the Talkies." Which would come under the heading of unimportant information but for the fact that Mr. Klein has another show by the same authors. "Vanity Fair" is its title, and early September will see its staging.

"Cloudy with Showers," by Floyd Dell and Thomas Mitchell, is being pointed for the Morosco theater on Aug. 31 by Manager Patterson McNutt. Its story deals with a professor who becomes involved in a scandal with one of his co-eds. Broadway has begun to refer to this play as "a feminine 'Young Woodley'."

Charles Coburn, who appeared in the Chicago company of "Lysistrata" last winter, wants to act "The Peacock," by Leonard Ide, a play that almost tempted George Arliss to take a vacation from the pictures. George C. Tyler also did some flirting with "The Peacock," as a possible vehicle for Otis Skinner.

Plans for Carnival.

Riverview Park is turning its attention toward its autumnal Mardi Gras carnival. Aug. 15 is the date of the carnival opening. It will continue until Sept. 20.

CONTINUED:

"High Hat," with Edna Hibbard, James Spottswood, and Richard Taber; Adelphi theater; seventh week.

"Stepping Sisters"; Blackstone; twentieth week.

COMING:

"A Modern Virgin," by Elmer Harris; Garrick, opening Aug. 17.

"Salt Water," comedy, by Frank Craven, with Taylor Holmes and Fiske O'Hara; Playhouse, opening Aug. 22.

WEEKLY CHANGE:

R.-K.-O. Palace theater: Continuous vaudeville and talking pictures; Bessie Love, headliner.

Academy theater: Burlesque and talking pictures; "French Frolics," with Miss Carmen.

NEW LADY TEAZLE

ETHEL BARRYMORE.
[Fink Photo.]

THE classic role of Lady Teazle in Sheridan's comedy, "The School for Scandal," is now being acted by Miss Barrymore. She is making a midsummer tour to the Pacific coast, and probably will reach Chicago, when eastward bound, about Thanksgiving day. She first appeared as the flirtatious lady of the famous screen scene eight years ago, with her uncle, the late John Drew, as Sir Peter.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

interrupted his frenzy of composition in order to go to Russia, where his blatherskite tendencies have been manifested in fulsome after luncheon oratory in praise of that economic and governmental insanity called communism.

The Guild says on this point:

"Recently we cabled Mr. Shaw concerning the play. Yes, he replied, it was entirely likely that it would be completed by fall, but that his optimism in this quarter was not to be construed as a promise. We are, however, familiar with his working habits, and with the concentration which he puts into a task until it is finished. In our own heart we feel that the play should be in our hands before the snow flies."

There is only one detail in the approaching theatrical situation, as thus outlined, that the dramatic editor of THE TRIBUNE faces with a sense of unutterable weariness. And that is this new play by Mr. Shaw. The Theater Guild may rejoice over it, but the mere thought of it gives me a sinking feeling. I have seen enough Shaw, and heard enough Shaw, for one lifetime. The famous tongue-in-cheek of the so-called British Aristophanes begins to strike me as a morbid growth, in need of surgery.

Playwright Vs. Censor.

The fear of a stage censorship has been hovering over Broadway for months, because of provisions in the Masker bill, which may be brought before the New York state legislature. This worry has caused the birth of an organization which bears the title of National Council on Freedom from Censorship, and of which a group of professional playwrights and novelists appears to be the founders.

The chairman of the council is Hatcher Hughes, author of "Hell Bent for Heaven." The vice chairmen are Elmer Rice, author of "Street Scene," "The Adding Machine," etc.; Fannie Hurst, and Barrett Clark. Its membership includes authors, lawyers, and educators.

The organization is planning a legislative campaign to attack the post-office censorship over books and publications in the mails. It will also undertake to effect the repeal of certain New York state motion picture laws, of the theater "padlock" law, known as the Wales act, and the laws giving special police powers to vice reform societies.

The council, apparently, has overlooked the greatest current menace to the freedom of the imaginative writer, which is the bawdiness, vulgarity, and vicious exploitation of depraved sex themes now widely practiced in the craft of letters. A playwright or a novelist deserves no more freedom of self-expression than he earns by his manifestation of good taste, artistic sincerity, and cleanness of purpose.

Jack and Jill Plays.

"The Haunted Castle" is the next children's performance to be given at Ravinia by the Jack and Jill Players under the auspices of the Ravinia Opera club, Aug. 6. The play will be directed by its author, Marie Agnes Foley.

The Jack and Jill Players' winter season of Saturday afternoon performances opens Oct. 3 at the Chicago Woman's club theater. There will be an extra performance every first Sunday afternoon of the month. The players will also take part in a pageant on Labor day in Soldiers' field under the auspices of the Federation of Labor.

Actress Stars Own Managers in Repertory

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Katharine Cornell will take over the Belasco theater under an arrangement expected to be completed soon. This indicates that Miss Cornell, with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as a nucleus, will install her long planned repertory company in the playhouse presided over so many years by the late Belasco.

This does not mean that Miss Cornell will take over the Belasco organization, as that machine disbanded after the death of its leader. She has not yet decided whether she will take "The Barretts" on tour before she produces a new play in New York.

In addition to Miss Cornell, three other woman stars will have their own theaters and repertory troupes this fall. Alice Brady will be given a theater by her father, William A. Brady, in which to produce a cycle of dramas in which she will be starred. The first will be "Manhattan Nocturne," already tried out in Atlantic City. It is being rewritten before being brought to town.

Pauline Lord, who quit the stage for a while after her marriage, is returning in the rôle of producer. She has one play in rehearsal now and is looking for a theater of her own.

Jane Cowl also will go "independent" this fall and manage her own plays. She will produce a repertory. Several of her appearances are likely to be in Shakespearean works.

The new operetta being written by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach is almost completed, and it has been titled "The Passionate Pilgrim." The two principal rôles will be played by George Metaxa and Dorothy Debenham, both well known on the London stage, but this will mark their first trials in this country.

Metaxa, a Rumanian by birth, is a matinee idol in England. After making a hit in "Wake Up and Dream" he played opposite Peggy Wood in "Bitter Sweet" for two years.

Frieda is a diminutive 4 year old who plays in "The Green Pastures." Her performance consists mainly in getting a fish bone caught in her throat in the scene where the Negroes have an old fashioned fish fry.

Two nights ago Frieda disappeared, and only after a frantic search was she discovered sitting out in the audience in a second row seat.

"I hadn't ever seen the show and I wanted to," she explained to the reproving stage manager.

'Modern Virgin' for Chicago

"A MODERN VIRGIN," a comedy by Elmer Harris, will be the first new play of the season in Chicago, opening Monday, Aug. 17, in the Garrick theater. It will be presented by the Messrs. Shubert, following its successful engagement on Broadway.

Mr. Harris, as in "Young Sinners," deals with the subject of the young moderns in "A Modern Virgin." The play tells the story of a mischievous girl of 17, who, writhing under the strict discipline of a maiden aunt, decides to discover the secrets of love and life.

The cast will be headed by Roger Pryor, recently seen here as the leading man of "Up Pops the Devil"; Margaret Sullavan, who was acclaimed as the ingénue "find" of last season, and Herbert Rawlinson, a celebrity of the screen.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

were converted into an amusing set for the first act finale.

Such well known songsmiths as Irving Berlin, Philip Charig, Dorothy Fields, Jimmie McHugh, the Lief brothers, and Vernon Duke have given lyrics and music, and such nationally approved wits as Nunnally Johnson, Dorothy Parker, Peter Arno, and Broun, himself, have supplied dialogue material.

Those who gave money may get all of it back—indeed, the $11 opening night paid back almost all of the production cost—but they'll get no dividends. Profits are to be shared coöperatively by the principals.

A coöperative show is no news to Broadway, and rarely is a charity. Shoestring producers make a habit of getting their casts to waive salaries even though Equity loudly objects. But "Shoot the Works" is a different sort of thing in that no shoestringer will profit by his cast's sacrifice. Loose, amiable, and informal, it is much like the old "Garrick Gaities" or "Grand Street Follies." At the opening Broun told the critics that he wanted constructive criticism. They should start, he said, by saying the show was swell and build up from there. Most of them did their best by Heywood by reporting that the revue had some swell numbers.

A Radio Skit.

There is, for instance, a rapid skit in which Jack Hazard, veteran among comedians, played the rôle of a radio announcer gone mad from having to say the same old things in the same old way every night. To bring him to sanity his daughter arranges a fake broadcast in which the old gentleman may work off all his suppressed language. The old gentleman curses roundly, warns the unseen audience that the next number will be terrible, and confides that Uncle Ned, who tells bedtime stories, is really a bit of a lecher. Hazard played the part magnificently the opening night, though he felt not at all well. Next morning his doctor told him he had chicken pox—caught it from the Hazard children—and the actor relapsed sadly into a state of quarantine.

Just as the fake microphone provided an outlet for an announcer gone mad, so, apparently, did "Shoot the Works" provide an uninhabited medium for lyric writers. "I'm back in circulation again," warbles a torch singer whose romance has busted; "I want to chisel in on your heart, I want to muscle in on your love," sings a gangster swain to his moll; "I'm just a doorstep baby" is the refrain of another piece, and a fourth gets melodic significance out of the phrase, "Pie in the sky."

Producers Attend.

Some of the sketches may have proved comforting to Florenz Ziegfeld and the other commercial revue producers who attended the première. In the show business for a living, they came to see what a philanthropic movement could turn up. Broun, Johnson, Dorothy Parker—all excellent writers—have been pretty much ignored by a commercial stage that sticks to the same old George Kaufmans and Howard Dietzes and Gene Bucks. Now, with a fellow writer and former dramatic critic as the big boss, they might show the old money grubbers a thing or two.

Broun chose for his own offering a sketch entitled "Death Says It Isn't So." He admitted to the audience that it was a bit serious—but he liked it, he said, and the audience had better not think it funny. A dying man is visited by Death, Death being a genial looking Irishman in brown coat and white trousers who fingers a pack of cards instead of a scythe. The dying man is amazed that he isn't afraid, and when Death leans over to whisper a funny story the invalid goes into a paroxysm of laughter. The nurse thinks it's the death rattle, but Death says it isn't so. We all go out laughing at that same gag.

Ineffectual on the Stage.

A comforting notion, without doubt; and, as Broun set it down on paper, a beautifully told one. But it wouldn't act.

So it was with a Dorothy Parker sketch—and she, like Broun, has often criticized the drama in the public prints. Her sketch, in which a young man with a hangover learns from a girl all the horrible things he has done the night before, must have been perfect light reading in the Parker vein, but as material for actors it was something less than perfect.

At a modest $3 top price "Shoot the Works" may find its place in the summer playgoer's schedule. And as long as it does it will provide a clearing house for actors. An eccentric dancer, one Al Norman, joined the cast at the last minute, too late to have his name on the program. In his first Broadway appearance he stopped the show. Earl Carroll was in a subsequent audience, and before the week was over Norman had been engaged to appear in Carroll's "Vanities."

Stock Companies Thrive.

Despite a depression which has cut the list of Broadway offerings to twelve, the summer stock companies have been thriving as well as or better than in former years. For a fraction of their New York wages actors and actresses of first standing are content to spend their vacations in rural spots from Skowhegan to Southampton. Not a few of the stock companies content themselves with offering tried and true hits, while others, more adventurous, try out new plays.

One of them, in Westport, Conn., has been organized with more than a hot weather existence in view. Called the Country Playhouse, the theater has deftly been made from an old barn in an apple orchard. Its sponsor is Lawrence Langner, member of the board of directors of the Theater guild, and its company includes Rollo Peters, Romney Brent, and Dorothy Gish.

Langner, a patent attorney, has found that the Theater guild does not provide enough of an outlet for his energies. An enthusiast on the topic of repertory, he has seen the guild's plans for a repertory season crumble year after year. The Lunts are supposed to act in "Elizabeth, the Queen" and "Much Ado About Nothing" on alternate weeks, but "Much Ado" flops as a production. So, in Westport, Langner has organized his own repertory company, and when the new season opens he will bring it to Broadway independent of the guild.

A Varied Repertoire.

Catholic indeed is his list of six plays. There is a revival in a better-than—"After Dark" manner of Dion Boucicault's "The Streets of New York"; there's "The Comic Artist," by the Pulitzer prize winning Susan Glaspell; there go Shakespeare's "As You Like It"; a comedy by Langner himself, and another comedy by William Cotton, magazine writer.

The "Streets of New York" revival is done with fine gravity, and to see Miss Gish go into a Victorian swoon or to see the personable Brent as a drunken young schemer is to become enthusiastic over the Langner plan. If the very old Shakespeare, the pretty old Boucicault, and the new Glaspell can all be done within the space of a week, this new repertory theater should hold the Broadway interest.

Late this month Earl Carroll will open his new home for extravaganza, a 3,000 seat hippodrome where, by charging a mere $3 or less a seat for ten performances a week, Carroll hopes to afford productions that will knock somebody's eye out. Not depending upon press releases, but having been taken on a tour of inspection by Maestro Carroll himself, I am able to report that the new theater has dazzling possibilities. Carroll has thought of a couple of stunts that the movie cathedrals have failed to discover.

Public Address System.

There are, for instance, loud speakers concealed in every corner of the theater—in the rest rooms, in the lobbies, and in the dressing rooms. When the stage manager wants Will Mahoney on stage he simply plugs in the Mahoney dressing room and barks through the loud speaker. When intermission comes and is about gone the public address system will be turned on, and the awed customers will hear this polite warning: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is the stage manager speaking. The performance is about to begin."

Just behind the orchestra pit and in view of the audience is a black panel from which a formally attired "light conductor"—head electrician to Mr. Carroll's competitors—will manipulate the buttons that light the show. Everything is at his fingertips. A red tipped button slides up or down a groove and red lights glow or grow dim. A green tipped button controls green lights, another amber, another white. Each groove has numbers alongside of it, so that the lighting of any one set will have a code number—6291 meaning 6 on the red, 2 on the blue, and so on.

Thoughtful of the Beauties.

Backstage Carroll has been most thoughtful of his beauties. Each girl will have her own modernistic dressing table. There will be a refrigerator in which they may keep their Johns' orchids. There will be telephones so that John may talk to his girl from the stage door. The elevator is extra high, so that girls may get aboard without crushing their headdresses. A Carroll beauty without a headdress doesn't exist.

Perhaps the most quixotic detail of the whole place is a card room for stage hands. Stage hands, says Carroll, are good fellows even if they do keep a poker game going all during a performance. So why not give them a clubroom? The room he has provided is large, with a real fireplace in one corner. Unhappily, it is below stage and has no real windows. So the thoughtful Carroll is building a false window. During matinees it will glow with artificial sunlight, and in the evening it will be illuminated with synthetic moonlight.

Actress Speaks Her Mind

KATHARINE CORNELL, now in her first year under her own management [and with the highly successful "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as the result], has answered a questionnaire about theatrical conditions on "the road" by stating that they are the fault of New York's theater overlords. She says:

"I believe that the reason theatrical conditions on the road are not what we would like them to be is due to the fact that the public has been cheated by managers for so long that it has become impatient and disinterested. By this I mean that the poorest and sketchiest presentations have been untruthfully advertised as original New York productions; even some stars have failed their public by allowing their performances to fall below the New York standard.

"Until we restore playgoers' faith by giving them good plays, well done, it is natural that their interest in the theater is lukewarm. I hope I have made it clear that, in my opinion, it is the managers themselves who are to blame for the present conditions outside of New York."

In Vaudeville

HERE are notations on the acts that comprise the vaudeville program at the Palace theater for the current week:

BESSIE LOVE—The cinema star "in person." Originally placed in the movies by John Emerson, she was developed into stardom by D. W. Griffith. Her personation of a Duncan sister in the first musical talking picture, "Broadway Melody," brought her into vogue. In Hollywood after working hours she shares honors with Lupe Velez as an informal entertainer. She sings, plays a "uke"—and owns half a dozen cups which declare her to be the champion Charleston stepper of Hollywood's ballrooms.

HON. M. WU AND HIS CHINESE COLLEGIANS — They combine the skill of the oriental as an entertainer with American jazz ideas in dance and song. A company of half a dozen young men and girls in a specially produced "unit." Incidentally most of the collegians come honorably by the title.

HOWARD, FINE AND HOWARD—They were originally "stooges" with Ted Healy and have graduated into an act of their own. With them are Jack Walsh and Ruthie Goodwin.

BILLY FARRELL AND DAD—Dancers and comedians who are really father and son.

THE FOUR KADEX—A European importation with an aerial apparatus on which they perform hazardous tricks.

Chicago Girl Ascribes Film Entry to Luck

But Personality Makes Frances Dee Favorite.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Three summers ago Frances Dee was a want-ad taker for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Two years ago she went from her home in Chicago to spend a vacation in Los Angeles.

And now this 21 year old girl, whose big blue-gray eyes sparkle with ambition and humor, daring, and willingness for hard work, suddenly has become one of the favored younger darlings of the movies, after a sequence of events which never would have happened if she had known in advance that the things she experienced can happen to only one movie aspirant in 10,000.

Miss Dee is one of the few young film favorites who never dyed her hair to get a part. She still wears it the natural chestnut brown of her college days at the University of Chicago. She did not change her own name to film name. She did not go in for "movie society," but lives comfortably at a home made for her in Hollywood by her mother, Mrs. F. M. Dee of Chicago, and an older married sister, Margaret. She did not pose in lingerie and kimono photographs to win herself publicity in cheaper magazines.

Rejects Starvation Diet.

She eats what and when she feels like it, figuring it better to remain a normal healthy American girl than to starve herself under 110 pounds, as most of the younger actresses do in furtherance of film aspirations. Miss Dee weighs 115. She has not had any "engagement" announced to this, that, or the other actor for the double reason that she does not believe in this overused and unintelligent Hollywood means of obtaining newspaper mention, and because she has so conducted herself that none of her Hollywood "friends" have felt it necessary to pass the word around that "Frances Dee" is secretly engaged to so and so.

After coming to Los Angeles for a visit in the summer of 1929, seeing the sights and taking the recommended trips about the countryside, Frances read some movie studio publicity to the effect that University of Southern California girls and Los Angeles high school girls were being recruited at $10 a day to act as part of the college atmosphere in "Words and Music," a Fox film, supposed to have a sorority girl sequence.

As a member of the Sigma club and sophomore class at the University of Chicago, Frances went over to the Fox movie lot "just for fun."

One Chance in 10,000.

"What happened, I know now, was pure luck—one chance in 10,000," says Frances. "I knew so little of what was going on that I stood in the wrong line at the casting office, and by mistake was handed one of the slips given to extra girls who had been summoned to work.

"Finally, I had to explain. Jack Phillips of the casting office scowlingly asked what I was doing there. I said: 'I'm a college girl and I want to get into your college girl picture.' It was so unusual and I suppose it sounded so fresh that he and another man laughed. They sent me to the assistant director in charge of details on the picture. The truth is there was not one college girl or high school girl there, and the chance that sent me in with extras caused me to be given a bit to do—chatting over the sorority house telephone.

"Then I was ruined for returning to school. I wanted to stay in pictures. I wrote to my father and received his permission to remain out here a year."

But films did not take as kindly to her as brown haired Frances had eagerly expected after the first opening.

"It was after a couple of bad tests and nine months of unimportant occasional extra work that I said to myself: 'Well, I got in at Fox's, perhaps I can get in somewhere else the same way.' So I boldly went over to Paramount."

* *

Cinema Progress.

Working without pay every night from 8 to 12 to improve herself in dramatics at the Pasadena Community playhouse helped Miss Dee chisel a bit as a bridesmaid in "Fu Manchu," a Paramount production. Next she was one of ten girls taken in three weeks' location with the "Follow Through" troupe.

She then played a rôle, again without any pay, at the Hollywood Writers' club, but in films continued to get nothing but bits. Then some higher up at Paramount, seeking a fresh face for Maurice Chevalier's "Playboy of Paris," decided to give Miss Dee a chance. The chance stamped her as a leading actress prospect. Her mother and sister came to Hollywood and made a home for her with them. Parts in "Along Came Youth," with Buddy Rogers; "June Moon," with Jack Oakie; "Caught" [not released], with Richard Arlen, and "The American Tragedy" [not released] elevated her to a five year contract and secure place among the younger actresses.

Miss Dee's father was an army captain in ordnance, later going to utility corporations in Chicago until called to Indianapolis with a power corporation. Father Dee is now reconciled to a movie actress in the family despite hearty original doubts about it.

More Plays by Abie's Creator; Theater Gossip

ANN NICHOLS of "Abie's Irish Rose" fame, who deserted New York for Hollywood two years ago, will return and open producing offices on Broadway early in September. She proposes to present three new plays, all by herself or written in association with other authors, during the forthcoming season.

◆

George White announces that the cast for the forthcoming edition of "Scandals," the eleventh of the series, has been completed with the addition of Joan Abbott, Fred Manatt and Ross MacLean. Others already chosen are Rudy Vallee, Willie and Eugene Howard, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, Barbara Blair, Mavine and Virginia Loomis, the Gale Quadruplets, and Dorothy and Harry Dixon. "Scandals" will open in Atlantic City on Aug. 10. Joseph Urban has designed the settings.

◆

"The Man Who Pays the Piper," a play written by G. B. Stern, English novelist and playwright, has been purchased for production in the fall by Horace Liveright. The author, who was represented on the American stage two seasons ago by "The Matriarch," will come to New York for the première. Mr. Liveright's first production of the season, a play by Edwin Justus Mayer, is now known as "Things as They Are." Its previous tentative titles were "The Last Mask" and "In Statu Quo."

Alexander McKaig has bought for production for next season "Achilles Had a Heel," by Martin Flavin. It will be directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Mr. Flavin is author of "The Criminal Code" and "Children of the Moon." Mr. Mamoulian has directed "Porgy," "R. U. R." and "A Farewell to Arms."

◆

Henry A. Rosendale has placed in rehearsal a farce called "The Widow Is a Virgin," which he wrote. The cast will be headed by Sam Ash and Enid Markey. Mr. Rosendale expects to open the production in New York in about three weeks. He was co-author of "Lady in Pawn," staged in Chicago last winter.

◆

"Manhattan Nocturne," which was tried out last week in Asbury Park, N. J., by William A. Brady, with his daughter, Alice Brady, as star, has been withdrawn for revision. Miss Brady is scheduled to begin a two weeks' stock engagement in Montreal on Aug. 3 in "A Most Immoral Lady," which she acted in New York in 1928.

◆

To date William A. Brady has not found a play suitable to serve as a vehicle for his wife, Grace George, who recently relinquished her option on John Halloran's "En Famille." If he does not get a new play for her by Oct. 1 Miss George will go on tour again in "The First Mrs. Fraser," visiting the south and west.

◆

Jane Seymour has been engaged for the rôle played by Helen Flint in the New York company of "The House Beautiful," which will begin a tour in Philadelphia in September. Mary Philips and James Bell will continue in the cast.

◆

"The Passionate Pilgrim" will be the title of the musical play by Otto Harbach and Jerome Kern which Max Gordon will produce in the fall. Dorothy Debenham, an English actress, has been engaged for the show, which will go in rehearsal early in September.

◆

Miss Billie Burke began an engagement at the Curran theater, San Francisco, last Monday night in "The Vinegar Tree." She is playing the rôle acted in New York by Mary Roland.

COMPLETE LIST of pictures directed by the "Ten Best" follows:

Lewis Milestone—"All Quiet on the Western Front," "Front Page."

Wesley Ruggles—"The Sea Bat" "Cimarron."

George Hill—"The Big House," "Min and Bill."

Josef von Sternberg—"The Blue Angel," "Morocco."

D. W. Griffith—"Abraham Lincoln."

Robert Z. Leonard—"The Divorcee," "In Gay Madrid," "Let Us Be Gay," "Bachelor Father," "It's A Wise Child."

John Cromwell—"The Big Pond," "For the Defense," "Tom Sawyer," "Scandal Sheet," "Unfaithful."

Charles Chaplin—"City Lights."

Howard Hawks — "The Criminal Code," "The Dawn Patrol."

Howard Hughes—"Hell's Angels."

COMMENTS Film Daily—Milestone's achievement is particularly notable in that the two productions he directed were vastly different in origin and design, in addition to being produced on different lots. "All Quiet," was adapted from the war novel by Erich Maria Remarque, while "The Front Page" came from the stage hit of the same name.

"For the first time in the six years that the Film Daily has been conducting the annual vote on directors, Ernst Lubitsch failed to be included among the Ten Best. This is ascribed to the fact that in the year covered by the present vote Lubitsch directed only one production, 'Monte Carlo.' On this picture he received enough mentions to make fourth place in the honor roll.

"Lubitsch, however, still leads as a Ten Best winner, since he is the only director with five citations. Herbert Brenon and King Vidor made the grade four times each, while Charles Chaplin and Clarence Brown have been among the topliners three times in the six years. Those who have won out twice include James Cruze, Cecil B. de Mille, D. W. Griffith, Rex Ingram, Frank Lloyd, the late F. W. Murnau, Malcolm St. Clair, Josef von Sternberg and Raoul Walsh." . . .

RICHARD CROMWELL, the young chap who made such a hit in "Tol'able David," has been signed for a leading male rôle in "Then Hell Broke Loose" . . . ANNA Q. NILSSON who has been off the screen for three years due to injuries received making a picture, is expected home from Sweden next week . . . JAMES CAGNEY, the tough gangster of "The Public Enemy," devotes six hours a day to practicing on the piano . . .

See you tomorrow!

LOOKING FOR PLAYS

ALICE BRADY.

SHE is the daughter of a veteran theatrical manager—William A. Brady—and the instinct to act is in her blood. Miss Brady doesn't come to Chicago often but her name is frequently seen in the electric lights along Broadway. Last spring she made a vivid impression in "Brass Ankle." Now she is hunting for new plays, with the idea of taking a New York theater for the season.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Favors Credit Division.

Dear Miss Tinée: Could you please tell me why Marie Dressler gets all the credit for every picture she is in with POLLY MORAN? In "Reducing," I thought POLLY MORAN was wonderful, but who got all the credit and praise? No one but Marie Dressler. The same thing happened in "Politics." Something should be done about this at once.

Thanking you,
GEORGE WISSING.

Editor's note: What would you suggest?

Capable of Self Defense.

Dear Miss Tinée. After reading Miss J. W.'s letter in reference to me in the "Voice of the Fan," I couldn't resist a retort in my own defense to her, and to all those so-called responsible people whose cause she is championing.

In the first place I believe you are conducting a movie column, not an "outdoor life" affair, for poets, he-men from the great wide spaces, etc., of which all these responsible people seem to be a part.

Bruce is, no doubt, all right in his way, but in your column he doesn't seem to be very heavy.

I can't understand what life and love have to do with a movie critic's reviews. So Bruce, take yourself out, write to a different outfit, such as "Advice to the Lovelorn," or "Who's Who Among the Cowboys and Indians." I feel sure you'll go over big.

F. WATTS.

Editor's note: Now that everybody's had their say we'll ring off on this controversy.

Lacks Publicity Manager.

Dear Mae Tinée: In the "Voice of the Fan" Jean Siek asks this question: "Why does the public sigh over Chevalier and his smile when Clark Gable and his dimples are on the horizon?" She says she really wants to know.

Well, I'll tell you why. Chevalier was praised and lauded to the heavens before he ever set foot on United States soil, let alone our "silver screen." He was lucky—he had a good publicity manager, I think.

Clark Gable got nary a word of publicity until he fought to win it. He deserves every kind word he gets. He's made himself LOVED in hard rôles. I'm sure you will agree that it is seldom a gangster-murderer-villian or what have you, is loved and admired as Clark Gable is. That's a trick.

A CLARK GABLE FAN.

Editor's note: Sure it's not a dimple?

Tribute to Leslie Howard.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am writing this in hopes that it may attract your many readers' attention to a rising young actor of unusual ability and poise. I refer to Leslie Howard. Only today I witnessed "Five and Ten," and not so long ago "Never the Twain Shall Meet." I was unfortunate enough to have missed your reviews of both these pictures, but feel certain that you, also, must have praised both excellent performances of the gentleman in question.

I read your section entitled "Voice of the Fan" and hope you will do me the favor of publishing this bit of tribute to the fascinating Leslie Howard. Sincerely, yours,

DOROTHY FOLEY.

Editor's note: With pleasure!

* *

"Perfect Lady of the Screen."

Dear Mae Tinée: I have just witnessed the most magnificent performance I have ever seen. It's quite remarkable, since I have seen many great pictures.

How you can say that Norma Shearer played a close second to Lionel Barrymore in "A Free Soul" is more than I can see. She never did and never will take a back seat. Her performance was perfect. She can register sadness and joy better than any other actress. She's the finest actress on the screen of the present or the past.

Let the fans have their Garbo, Crawford, and Bow and their many copies, but I'll stick to the "present ladies of the screen." Norma Shearer for me! Do you blame me?

W. A.

Editor's note: Blame you? Never. I just envy Norma!

* *

Inspired to Rhythm.

Dear Mae Tinée: [Re: that poem of several Sundays ago].

Floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by all truly élite cats.
It's simply amazing you didn't know!
But if you must see them, here's where to go!
Down darkest alleys on moonless nights,
Listening for sounds, and looking for sights,
Such as you've never, never seen
In dreams, or in life, or upon the screen.
Walk, O! so lightly! Beware of a sneeze!
Listen for solos in minor keys!
Follow the echo of padded feet
Under the fence and across the street
Into the arc lamps yellow glare.
O, you'll be astonished when you get there!
Feline aristocrats garbed in the mode
Sponsored by Paquin [and custom sewed].
Sombreros, tilted at dangerous angles,
Fashioned of mouse skin and dripping with spangles.
Well, if you're skeptical, just go and see;
Then you will have to agree with me
That floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by the truly élite cats.
In the name o' nonsense!

DOROTHY.

Editor's Note: Your verse though catty is very natty.

Question for Producers.

Dear Mae Tinée: I don't want to write a long letter for I know you have so many to look over, but I would like to ask you one question.

In a revived picture why don't they use the same star in the talkie that they did in the silent?

For instance, have Richard Dix star again in "The Vanishing American." Or Norma Talmadge in "Smiling Through." I know I would love to see them and there are probably a lot more people who would, too.

Thanks a lot for your valuable time. Yours truly,

CRESIE.

Editor's note: I like the idea! Why don't you write the producers about it?

* *

A Movie Fan's Views.

Dear Mae: I have seen two pictures of Edward G. Robinson, and I want to say that I think he is great. "Little Caesar" and "Smart Money" convinced me.

I wish some one would take Lon Chaney's place. Lon was a great actor. He would risk his life just to make a picture. Would any one else? No! That's why he was my favorite.

Such stars as Emil Jannings, John Barrymore, and others couldn't do such things as Mr. Chaney did in his pictures. Here's for a double for [Genius Man of a Thousand Faces] Chaney. Truly yours,

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's note: I wonder how many of us love our work well enough to risk our lives for it?

* *

Probable Explanation.

Dear Miss Tinée: It MAY have been the heat. Sincerely yours,

BILL FRY.

Editor's note: Well, do write again when you feel warm enough.

* *

Question Remains Unanswered.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you kindly publish the following letter:

Why do we insist upon discouraging real art in the movies, by registering preference for movie king and queen at the box office, and in our fan letters for such "acting" as is regularly being given us by merely a couple of good looking youngsters only portraying their own most natural inclinations, by making love to each other, and who are incapable of real acting, or of stepping out of their own individuality and into that of another character?

Instead, why do we not learn to recognize as the best actor or actress the artist who is best able to portray the greatest number of most contrasting characters, and not the mere performer who is only able to be himself, which we all can do.

Very truly yours,
C. A. CARLTON.

Editor's note: I don't know why.

* *

Surprise for Some One.

Dear Miss Tinee: For want of having nothing better to ocupy my time in the p. m. I find the picture houses restful and cool, and see all the stars. Then we are offered usually a very good variety of interesting subjects from all over the world, but I don't think the public appreciates this enough.

The low grade of books written today has a lot to do with the type of pictures produced. Producers should not film pictures where "Adults only" is advertised, but, as Mr. Arliss says, it is hard to satisfy the public when movies are turned out at the rate of ten pictures a week.

These are some of my ideas. I don't expect to have them published.

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's Note: To him who expecteth not, happeneth!

'Peter Ibbetson' Scheduled for Ravinia Monday

Bori, Johnson Will Sing Leading Roles.

By Edward Moore.

Tre Re," it was—they set up the "Peter Ibbetson" scenery on the stage and Miss Bori, Mr. Johnson, the other members of the cast, the conductor, and the stage force experimented with tricky, intricate lighting cues until 4 o'clock in the morning. This is just a detail in what it means to stage an opera.

The work has had quite a history. It was a novel of fantasy by George du Maurier in 1891. It was regarded with desire and apprehension by people of the stage for nearly a quarter century—desire for its plot, apprehension of the risks of the dream scenes. In 1915 it was dramatized by John Raphael. Then Constance Collier rewrote the dramatization and played the rôle of the Duchess of Towers with John and Lionel Barrymore. Incidentally, it was Maurice Barrymore, their father, who had been anxious to have it in play form years before.

Success of the Year.

Then Deems Taylor grew interested in the play as a subject for opera, and is credited on the fly-leaf with having been the co-author with Miss Collier in converting the play into a libretto. Having done that, he wrote the music.

The work was brought out at the New York Metropolitan on Saturday, Feb. 7, of this year, and it apparently became the leading popular success of the year as far as operas are concerned. It even caused a renewal of interest in the play. Miss Collier staged its revival, and Jessie Royce Landis of Evanston acted the Duchess of Towers rôle. There is talk even now of Miss Collier taking the play on tour this coming season.

Mr. Tayor is coming out to Ravinia to see the first performance given his work outside of New York. When his other opera, "The King's Henchman," was put on at the Metropolitan a few years ago, Mr. Johnson, who sang the leading rôle in it as well as in "Peter Ibbetson," received this among his other notes of congratulation: "Dear God, Thank You for thinking up Eddie Johnson when You were making tenors.

"DEEMS TAYLOR."

Doubling Necessary.

The opera takes a long cast. Mr. Johnson and Miss Bori lead the list, as just said. Alfredo Gandolfi will appear as Col. Ibbetson, Florence Macbeth as Mrs. Deane, Ina Bourskaya as Mrs. Glyn, and Louis D'Angelo as the prison chaplain. There are a dozen or more other rôles, necessitating quite a bit of doubling. Margery Maxwell and George Cehanovsky, for instance, have each of their names opposite three different characters, though luckily no two of them appear on the stage at the same time.

The conductor is to be Wilfrid Pelletier, a member of the Ravinia and Metropolitan conducting staffs for a number of seasons past. He was selected in this case at Mr. Taylor's personal request.

This opera, by the way, is Ravinia's gesture toward the English language.

In a World Apart.

While on the subject of Ravinia, this seems a fitting place to include some impressions written by a visitor. The visitor is R. L. Hickman, M.D., of Clinton, Okla.:

"There is an atmosphere of dignity and quiet beauty in this group of low, unpretentious buildings among tall trees. God made the trees but surely Ravinia park is the work of an artist. Perhaps one feels this more keenly coming from the city, where life swarms on the lake shore in pagan splendor of bathing suits and beach pajamas. That has a beauty too of its own—the picture of a great middle class city enjoying itself in summer, but here at Ravinia is something else. Here are people come to see and to listen, quietly and intently.

"The opera is 'Faust' and the first act begins before dark. It all seems far away and perhaps a little silly at first. One wonders if, after all, opera is not an anachronism in this modern age. Then complete darkness shuts off the outside world. We are suddenly taken into the world of Faust, Mephisto, and Marguerite. The magic has worked again—opera will never die.

"The beautiful garden scene is the high spot of the opera. It is then that we enter entirely the world of make-believe. The spell endures from then on, even through the long train ride back to the city.

"It seems a marvelous idea to me — Ravinia park — beautifully carried out and managed. I don't know how it happened. Whether it is run by subscription or for the purpose of making money. It doesn't matter—so long as it is there. One only hopes that there will be no reason to discontinue it."

In Russian Concert.

A fairly active week will mark the Ravinia activities in addition to "Peter Ibbetson." There will be a Russian concert this afternoon. Eric DeLamarter and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will present Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" Symphony, Stravinsky's "The Fire Bird," and Joseph Vito, harpist, will play solos by himself and Thomas. The evening performance will be "Fra Diavolo," though the Russian implications of that attractive operetta are not at present entirely clear. Still, it is a first performance of the season. Florence Macbeth, Ina Bourskaya, Mario Chamlee, Vittorio Trevisan, and Virgilio Lazzari will sing the leading parts, and Gennaro Papi will conduct.

There are other new performances on the week's list. "Il Trovatore" is up for Tuesday night with Elisabeth Rethberg, Julia Claussen, Giovanni Martinelli, and Giuseppe Danise in the cast. The next night "Romeo and Juliet" will be heard for the first time this season from the throats of Yvonne Gall and Edward Johnson in the name parts, and Margery Maxwell, Desiré Defrere, Alfredo Gandolfi, and Leon Rothier in others.

Choristers at Loyola.

The Mundy Choristers, an organization of eighty Negro mixed voices, will take the stand in Loyola university stadium this evening under the direction of James A. Mundy, to assist Adolphe Dumont and the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra in the weekly Sunday night concert. Two groups of spirituals will be sung as well as the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "The Messiah," all numbers in which the Mundy Choristers will participate in the Chicagoland Musical Festival Aug. 22 at Soldiers' field. There is also word of the presentation by chorus and orchestra of Loyola university's new anthem composed by Walter Dellers, and first heard in the June commencement exercises.

Mr. Dumont and the orchestra are presenting an attractive summer program which includes Dvorak's "New World" Symphony, the prelude to Act III. of "Lohengrin," Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" Overture, Coleridge-Taylor's "The Bamboula," Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slave."

Ukrainian National Dances.

The fine art of the dance, which has been increasing in popularity to a marked extent in recent years, is apparently due to go on bigger and better during the season to come. Even at this early date there are announcements of events to come.

One refers to Vasile Avramenko, Ukrainian ballet master, who is now in Chicago preparing 500 dancers for an evening of Ukrainian national dances. The place will be the Civic Opera house and the time the end of October, the exact date not yet announced. Mr. Avramenko has been living in New York, and they tell of a similar festival at the Metropolitan Opera house last April, with special emphasis upon the dashing ardor of the dances, the kaleidoscopic colors of the costumes, and the enthusiasm of the audience.

Another dancing newcomer will be Carola Goya, whose Chicago arrival is also the rather indefinite some time in October. She is Spanish, and dances in the four manners of classical, flamenca, gitana, and modern. Last season she gave eighteen recitals in New York. La Libertad of Madrid vouches for her in emphatic terms, saying that her dances are not only of extraordinary beauty, color, and rhythm, but in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance.

Indiana State Contest.

A state-wide contest of male quartets is to feature the Indiana state fair at Indianapolis, Sept. 5 to 12. Contestants are now organizing in the townships, with county elimination contests to follow and the finals at the fair. Each county will be permitted to send two quartets, one whose members are under 26 years old, the other over that age. The contest is being conducted by the Indiana farm bureau through the social and educational department, and the songs to be used have been selected by the bureau and the Indiana Federation of Music Clubs. All professional singers are barred, and only members of rural communities are eligible. The first prize winning quartet in each class will receive a cash award of $100, second place $80, and third place $70. Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of Otterbein will have charge of the contest.

Speaking of opera companies and the synonymous red ink figures, the Opéra-Comique of Paris adds an item to the sad, sweet story. George Ricou recently resigned as director in protest against the insufficient subsidy granted by the government. Figures that have been made public indicate that in France, too, they have their operatic troubles.

The Opéra-Comique receives an annual subsidy of 1,800,000 francs, and its total receipts run between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 francs. On the other side of the ledger it has to pay 2,000,000 francs, or more than its subsidy, about 9,300,000 francs in salaries, 2,250,000 to the orchestra, and 1,240,000 to the choristers. With regard to the quality of the last, there has been much publicly expressed dissatisfaction. In addition, the organization is obliged to stage twelve new works yearly, and much time and money go into these.

Scores Triumph at Bayreuth.

There is word from Bayreuth that Toscanini scored a reasonable success with his conducting of "Tannhaeuser," and an undebatable one with "Parsifal" immediately afterwards.

Slovak day will be celebrated at Riverview park today beginning at 10 o'clock this morning. The program will be under the auspices of the United Slovak societies and for the benefit of the Slovak-American Charitable association. National songs and national dances will be performed by costumed organizations. The dances have been arranged by the Slovak Artists' club, and the group will number eighty. A featured number will be the appearance of the Slovak Shepherds, who play on an instrument resembling a flute under the direction of Martin Pavella.

PETER IBBETSON

EDWARD JOHNSON.

The name at the bottom of the picture is his own, the one at the top is the character in the like named opera that he will sing at Ravinia tomorrw and Saturday nights. The opera, by Deems Taylor, was produced by the Metropolitan Opera company last February, and at once became the operatic hit of the season. This will be its first performance outside of the Metropolitan. It is in English. Mr. Johnson's associates will be Lucrezia Bori as Mary, Duchess of Towers, and Alfredo Gandolfi as Col. Ibbetson.

FOR "IMPROPER DUCHESS"

IRENE BORDONI.

The Dramatic League of Chicago has announced the engagement of Miss Bordoni for the leading role in "The Improper Duchess," a play that it will soon import from London. Its heroine is a flirtatious French girl, and Irene is a specialist in such characters. She is the favorite Anglo-French actress of the American stage.

Drama of Insect Life Listed in New Recordings

"Spider's Feast" Is Ably Interpreted.

By Edward Moore.

Columbia gives a view of some rather notable modern music this month. It is a four side recording of the ballet pantomime, "Le Festin de l'Araignée" [The Spider's Feast], by the French composer, Roussel. Rather curiously, in the light of so much talk from the best minds of music about the value of absolute music, some of the best compositions of the present era are coming from composers who have something as definite as the stage presentation in mind.

For the benefit of those who did not hear Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra present this work about five years ago, the piece works out as a drama of insect life quite in accordance with its title. The first section is the prelude and entrance of the ant; the second is the dance and death of the butterfly; the third deals with the birth and dance of the dayfly; and the last with the death and burial of the dayfly. Apparently the ant and the spider are the only ones who come out well in this particular tragedy.

Columbia's numbers are 67952-D and 67953-D. The work is played by the Orchestre des Concerts Straram of Paris and conducted by Walther Straram himself. The recording is rather good and performance excellent. It is rather hard to describe accurately a modern piece of music, or any other piece of music for that matter, but this one is brisk and bright, and apparently a bit affected by Stravinsky in the period when he wrote "Petrouchka."

There is a pair of Wagner songs that seem to be as inevitably linked together as the Italian operas, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." They are "Traeume" and "Schmerzen." Brunswick in the Hall of Fame-International, No. 90178, presents them from the throat of a noted German soprano, Elisabeth Ohms. Both have orchestral accompaniment, but Julius Pruewer conducts "Traeume" and Manfred Gurlitit "Sohmerzen." Excellent results both vocally and instrumentally should be set down for both.

An Amusing Experiment.

Brunswick in No. 20100 is stepping out from standardized music into an interesting and amusing experiment with popular music. The two sides record what are called paraphrases by Victor Young of "I Surrender, Dear," and "Star Dust." Even in the memory of what Paul Whiteman and Ferdie Grofé have occasionally done with popular music, they are rather eye opening.

Here are two tunes whose pretty, graceful turn of phrase and naive construction classify them plainly as belonging to the popular classification, but Mr. Young, who is likewise both conductor and soloist in their performance—the Boswell sisters lend other vocal aid—builds them up as earnestly as though he were writing a symphony. Everything is there, symphonic changes of key and mood, unexpected dissonances, skilled treatment of instrumental color, and if his earnestness occasionally sounds as though it were of the tongue in cheek variety, the work is none the worse for it. There are some of us who believe that American popular music is the best popular music in the world, and this record would seem to prove that it is good enough to be capable of considerably more elaborate treatment than it is in the habit of getting. The instrumental body is the Brunswick Concert orchestra, a first class organization.

A mild protest in this column the other day to the effect that only the second half of Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini" had been received from Victor brought prompt correction of the error by the receipt of the missing disk. Wherefore comment is cheerfully reopened for the statement that the first half is even better in performance and recording than the second indicated. The piece is on the Red Seal list, Nos. 11091 and 11092, played by the London Symphony orchestra under the direction of Albert Coates, and those who have followed Mr. Coates' performances will realize more completely than this column can say how expert he is in the perception and projection of dramatic values in music.

Guild Plans

The Theater Guild announces that "He" will open its New York season; that "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in its leading rôles, will probably be seen in several of the subscription cities before it appears in New York; and that the O'Neill trilogy, "Mourning Becomes Electra," should open about Oct. 26.

Theater Rents Reduced.

A Broadway theater, the Central, was recently rented for $1,000 a week. "The lowest known weekly rental for any Broadway house to date," says Variety, "has been $3,000 a week." Five years ago it was almost impossible to get any Broadway theater without a minimum guarantee of $4,500 on a basis of sharing the gross intake, so that the theater-owner's share might come to $6,000 or even more.—Theater Guild Magazine.

How to Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things

Fat Melts Away

Science has made important discoveries in fat reduction. The average fat person can now rip off fat a pound a day—four to seven pounds every week!—on a full stomach, with never a hungry moment. Thus it is foolish now to stay fat.

This is what you do: Take a teaspoonful ordinary Jad Salts in a glass of water a half hour before breakfast every morning. This reduces moisture-weight instantly. Also cleanses the system of the waste matter and excess toxins that most fat people have, and banishes puffiness and bloat.

Then do this about eating. FILL YOUR STOMACH—eat your fill—of lean meats, vegetables like spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, tomatoes, etc., and lots of salads. Eat a lot. Eat all you can hold. Don't go hungry a minute! Cut down on fats, sweets and desserts. Eat any fruit for dessert.

That's all you do. Fat seems to melt away. The coarse lines of overweight give way to the refined ones of slenderness. You lose as much as a pound a day. You feel better than for years. For in this treatment you achieve two important results. The Jad Salts clear your system of toxins. *The diet takes off fat with food that turns into energy instead of weight.

If you're tired of being embarrassed by fat, try this way. You'll be glad that you did. You can get Jad Salts at any drug store.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent—not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

Born and Bred in Chicago

ETHEL RANDOLPH has succeeded Grace Huff in the character of Rose La Marr in "Stepping Sisters," now at the Blackstone theater. Illness forced Miss Huff to relinquish her part. She has gone to a Canadian sanitarium for treatment and rest.

Miss Randolph is well known to Chicagoans who frequent the theater. She made her debut in Chicago when she was carried on the stage at the age of six months. Later her schooling continued when she became a member of the Bush Temple Stock company. She played with Lenore Ulric in "The Bird of Paradise"; with Richard Bennett in "Kick In," and with Zelda Sears in "The Nest Egg." Her most recent Chicago appearances in Chicago were in "The Noose" at the Selwyn theater in 1927 and in "If I Were Rich" at the Cort in 1928.

Stage Stars for Vaudeville

The RKO Palace vaudeville programs have been devoting themselves to "in person" headliners from Hollywood, but the stage isn't going to be neglected. Harriet Hoctor, as fine a dancer as the American stage knows today, will arrive Aug. 8. She will bring a dancing troupe, and will probably repeat the "hunt" ballet that was the highlight of Ed Wynn's "Simple Simon" last winter. Edward G. Robinson will follow on Aug. 15. He has been a dependable stage actor for years, suddenly skyrocketing to fame with his cinema gangster impersonations.

After that Basil Rathbone and Catherine Dale Owen will co-star in a brief version of "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." Louise Groody, star singing girl of musical comedy, will follow.

Loses 16 Pounds of Fat---Eats As Usual

Fat Folks—Here's More Proof—One Bottle of Kruschen Salts and Sixteen Pounds Gone—Eats As Usual—Sleeps Better—Costs 85 Cents

The Kruschen Figure of Health and Vivaciousness. How Will You Look On The Beach This Summer

Modern Science now makes it possible for you to easily and what's best, to SAFELY obtain a bewitchingly lithe, free-from-fat figure and actually enjoy exhilarated health and increase your attractiveness while doing so—

Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—you can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, fatty meats and pastries.

Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. I feel so good in many ways. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lose fat too. I have told 2 of my friends about Kruschen and they find it as I do."

Unlike other salts, Kruschen doesn't aim to reduce by rushing food through the system—rather it's a superbly blended combination of SIX separate mineral salts which help glands, nerves and body organs to function properly—it drives poisons and harmful acid from the body—Kruschen strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—that's why it's so amazingly successful in cases where everything else has failed!

And just stop to consider how inexpensive Kruschen is—an 85c bottle lasts 4 weeks and offers the same marvelous reducing and health-giving properties which hitherto wealthy people paid thousands of dollars to go to the famous mineral Spas of Europe to obtain. All druggists the world over sell Kruschen and will give your money back if you don't obtain the results you're after.

Revival of Last Season Cinema Hits Welcomed

Old Western Thrillers May Be Next.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The system of "bringing back the big ones," being tried out at the Rialto theater in Times square with considerable success at 25 cents a head, opens a grab box full of possibilities in the picture show world. Over at the Rialto the seats are filled from 11 a. m. until midnight and not all of the audience is composed of bargain hunters.

There are a lot of pictures these days and a lot of people do not get around to more than one feature a week. Consequently when the hits of last season show up at a theater with first run conveniences and third run prices the folks who missed the features when they were first shown are going to drop in.

Garbo, Dietrich, Bancroft, Gary Cooper, and a host of other stars are playing at the Rialto these hot summer days and nights. It is cool inside the theater and some of the old pictures are better than the new ones. The shows are not as long drawn out as at the theaters where the up-to-the-minute films are being shown and, anyhow, there is considerable difference between 25 cents and 65 cents.

Some of Better Westerns.

Now that the movie public has shown its love for last season hits, at least in this town, why not go back into the past and dig up some of the better westerns—epics of those days when men were men and women were chased by the Indians—and show them in a refrigerated playhouse.

The movies are getting softer and softer these days. Even the run of the blood and thunder underworld films are namby pamby tidbits. True, the occasional "Public Enemy" or "Little Caesar" comes along to provide the exception that proves the rule, but for the most part the heroes have lacked the red-blooded vitality of the horse and saddle era of romance.

I believe there are a good many thousand persons throughout our land who would like to forget there are such places as Chicago, New York, Paris, and London. In fact, a lot of those people who would like to forget live in those cities, and yet the talkie makers keep shoving life in the big cities down their throats. Let's have more horses and mustaches and movie heroes who take mustard on their breakfast food instead of sugar.

Roxy's theater went in for something resembling a western picture recently, and it was a big success. It was called "The Holy Terror," and its hero was an up-to-date hombre. He rode horses—at polo—and took to the air on occasions in an airplane. Of course, the hero did not stack up with the heroes of the Bill Hart era, even though he did leap a death-dealing gulch near the Great Divide. The point is the audience liked it and no doubt would like most of the older westerns whether they were made to talk or permitted to remain grim and silent.

Foreign Films Showing.

New York is filled with foreign films this week, but first we will look in on a Hollywood product at the Capitol. "Son of India" with Ramon Novarro is a pleasant enough romance. Taken from an old novel by F. Marion Crawford it tells the romance of an American girl and a young Indian prince. At the end the rich young Indian gives the girl up and harkens to the words of wisdom offered by a beggar prophet. It will do for the summer days.

"Sunny Side Up," with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, is the offering at Roxy's. "The Magnificent Lie," featuring Ruth Chatterton, is the feature at Paramount. "Sunny Side Up," of course, is a revival and a good one. To keep up the past history idea the stage presentation at Roxy's is called "Fifty Million Years Ago," and it is a spectacular affair, the headliner being a dinosaur.

"The Magnificent Lie" was well spoken of by the critics, but this observer has yet to see it. "Night Nurse" is still "telling all" at Warner's Strand.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

NOW is the time to check up on the plans, promises and dreams of theatrical producers for the approaching stage season. A census reveals that 44 firms or men constitute what might be called the "big league" of the drama, and that some [illegible] others are occasional contributors to Broadway activity. Their announcements for the early months of the new playgoing year contain 200 titles, including established successes that will be sent on tour.

This represents an improvement upon last year, when the stage's midsummer statistics did not include more than 100 titles of contemplated productions. It is, indeed, a long step up the ladder toward the abundance of the predepression years, when the managers' August schedules included from 250 to 300 titles.

All this, of course, refers to theatrical production for the Broadway market, out of which come the shows of proven popularity that finally go adventuring on "the road"—a vague region which to the Broadway mind includes all of America outside the borough of Manhattan. In this connection it may be noted that Broadway has at last become "road conscious," and is planning to win back the affections of its lost customers in other cities.

* *

Theater Guild Opinion.

The Theater Guild magazine comments editorially on the subject as follows:

"Officials in the Erlanger office tell us that their bookings for the coming season are more plentiful than in recent years. In the Shubert theaters it would appear that the planned reorganization should prove beneficial in improving booking conditions both in- and outside of New York.

"One thing is almost certain—both offices are cognizant of the fact that a standard of quality must be maintained, and both offices have expressed their intention to look to this point. Despite the business depression, plays of merit have drawn excellent patronage during the last year, both in and out of New York. Mr. Ziegfeld's 'Follies' played to two capacity weeks in Pittsburgh late in June, with the thermometer ascending in a city that does not possess those sea breezes which sometimes disguise the temperature in New York, Boston and Chicago. And in New York many excellent plays are defying the heat with success.

"We cannot explain the conservative optimism which prevails throughout the theater at this moment, but it does exist, and most of it is founded on a sound basis. The best proof of it is to be found in the definitely announced plans of the leading producers. They seem not to be hedging."

* *

Shubert Catalogue.

The Shuberts lead the "big league" with plans already matured for fourteen productions. They list their entries as follows:

"The Laugh Parade," a musical show with Ed Wynn as star.

A musical comedy in which George Jessel will be starred.

Maurice Schwartz and his Yiddish Art Theater company, giving their repertory in English.

"Kissable Girl," a musical comedy based upon "Up Pops the Devil," with Frances Williams, Nina Olivette, Evangeline Raleigh, and the Ritz brothers in the cast.

"La Chienne," a French drama, translated by Forrest Wilson.

"Hearts in Repair," an operetta adapted from the German, with Queenie Smith as star.

"Forbidden," a new play by Elmer Harris, author of "Young Sinners" and "A Modern Virgin."

"Cocktail," an intimate musical comedy adapted from the German; score by Ralph Benatsky.

"The Improper Duchess," a comedy by James Bernard Fagan, highly successful in London, with Irene Bordoni as heroine.

"Poor Men's Daughters," by Elmer Harris.

"Love's Out of Fashion," a comedy adapted from the German of Wilhelm Sterk, with Walter Woolf, Verree Teasdale, Walter Petrie, and Leslie Austen in the cast. To be staged early in August.

"Land of Smiles," an operetta with music by Franz Lehar, now popular in London.

"The Venetian," a play by Clifford Bax, successful in London; to be staged in association with Maurice Browne.

"The Good Companions," the dramatization of J. B. Priestley's novel; a notable success in London.

A season of revivals of famous operettas at the Jolson theater, New York, and on tour.

Erlanger Offerings.

The novelties on the Erlanger list at present are eight in number, as follows:

"The Social Register," a play by John Emerson and Anita Loos, with Lenore Ulric as star. The cast will include Elizabeth Taylor, Wilfred Clark, Betty Garde, Helen Tucker, Theresa Maxwell Conover, and Oswald Yorke.

"Runaway Horses," a drama by Gilbert Emery and Alan Birmingham, to be staged under the direction of Chester Erskin.

"Bad Penny," a comedy by William Anthony McGuire, to be offered in association with Charles Dillingham.

"Stella Brady," a comedy by James Montgomery, also in association with Mr. Dillingham.

A new play by Frederick Lonsdale.

Maurice Chevalier in an entertainment, in New York and on tour.

Up Pops Mr. Shaw.

The Theater Guild's schedule, in addition to the plays announced earlier in the year, will include George Bernard Shaw's latest work, called "Too Good to Be True." At least the Guild feels confident that it will be able to stage this play, as yet unfinished, during the coming season. Mr. Shaw

USHERING IN THE NEW MONTH

Rich pickings, Mitzi Green and Louise Fazenda seem to be finding in Jackie Searl's mouth, as well as in "Newly Rich," the current attraction at the Oriental. And Jackie is acquiescent, even though he's equipped with a dangerous looking weapon. He and Mitzi, sterling comedians, are the juvenile stars of the comedy.

Joel McCrea and Constance Bennett are expounding "The Common Law" at the State-Lake this week.

Is it "The Magnificent Lie"? Sam Hardy is asking that or a similar question; Ruth Chatterton is at the receiving end of the query, and the film of that title is at the Chicago for the present week.

"Ex-Bad Boy" is the name of the picture at the Palace, but, from the looks of things, Lola Lane might run away with the honors on that score. The others are Spencer Charters, Robert Armstrong and George Brent, and all of them have plenty to do.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The theater, which is waiting for a new season to begin, has aroused itself from the usual summer time sleep long enough to bring to the George M. Cohan theater a revue born of good will and conceived by some of the best minds.

Entitled "Shoot the Works," it is the brain child of Heywood Broun, column conductor, radio monologist, defeated Socialist candidate for congress, and—which may be more important to use—a former dramatic critic. Mr. Broun, who espouses causes with polygamous frequency, has decided to enter the lists in defense of the unemployed actor. With Milton Raison, a press agent, and Johnny Boyle, a dance director, as his chief assistants, Broun has labored heroically toward the formation of a coöperative show.

Lyrics Sketches Donated.

With $7,000 in cash to work upon—a good bit of which had to be posted with Equity to guarantee a fortnight's salaries to chorus people—Broun has got a long hot weather show together. Producers contributed scenery and electrical equipment; costumers have given everything from bathing suits to draperies, and a soap company provided a stack of soap boxes which

Long Awaited "Peter Ibbetson" Is Scheduled for Two Performances This Week at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

THAT undercurrent hum of activity proceeding from Ravinia, that set of preoccupied expressions on the faces of several of the company, is not altogether to be accounted for by a busy operatic season, though they have been having an uncommonly active one. Part of it was due to the fact that they were preparing "Peter Ibbetson."

It is now prepared and ready. There has already been an announcement that it would be given its first performance in this part of the country tomorrow night. Now comes a supplementary statement that, since tomorrow night looks like an overflowing house, there will be another performance with the same cast next Saturday night.

Difficult Scenes.

For "Peter Ibbetson," it appears, has taken a lot of doing to put into shape. It was more than just learning a new operatic score. That is something the Ravinia company takes in its stride. Lucrezia Bori and Edward Johnson, who are to sing the two leading parts, and sung them in New York, and their new associates were promptly rehearsed in their own rôles. But the staging of the piece presented peculiar difficulties.

It has a dream scene, for one, where Peter sees again the garden of his boyhood. It has a final scene where the spirit of Peter takes leave of its wornout human habitation and goes away, young and glorious again, to meet the spirit of Mary, who had just preceded him into death. Once that scenery was built, it had to be tried out, and for this purpose daylight will not do. Also, the stage of Ravinia [illegible]

So one night a short time ago—just after a performance of "L'Amore dei

Th' first of August's here again!
Soon the summer will be gone;
But First Sundays of each month
And "Six Bests" keep on and on.

Good Morning!

Well, here we go, with a hop, skip and a jump, back along the trail we traveled last month.

"THE SMILING LIEUTENANT" was found to be "frothy, amusing, tuneful; a bit naughty and a lot nice . . . directed by Ernest Lubitsch—lush with the inspired touches, the unexpected and beguiling bits of 'business' that proclaim genius at the wheel . . . Maurice Chevalier was never more oo-la-la . . . a bang-up hot weather picture . . ."

"THE MIRACLE WOMAN" proved "a thrilling melodrama that sports several staggeringly sensational situations, presented with a shrewd sense of dramatic effect . . . different and electrically exciting . . . excellently produced and played to the nines . . . Barbara Stanwyck gives a pulse-quickening performance . . ."

* *

"THE PUBLIC ENEMY" is "racketeering stripped of all romance and all glamour by the sharp knife of realism . . . the last word and, you feel, a true one, in gangland exposés . . . keen, unsparing study of criminal psychology . . . James Cagney as 'The Public Enemy' is tough, evil, deadly, unfunny and never for one minute lovable or pulse stirring. The complete gangster . . . 'The Public Enemy' is the greatest—because the most honest gangster cinema ever made."

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

MR. AND MRS. NATHAN G. MOORE celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Tuesday evening with a garden reception for more than 350 guests at their home, 329 Forest avenue, Oak Park. Married in Peoria, Mr. and Mrs. Moore came to Oak Park four years later and have resided at their present address for 45 years. It was through Mr. Moore's efforts that the first street was paved in the village and many of the accomplishments of the high school and library boards are also accredited to him. He is a senior partner of Cutting, Moore & Sidley, Chicago law firm.

"We be in trouble," said H. R. Chapin when he opened a solemn session of the board of directors of the Western Springs club last week. And it turned out to be bee trouble when President Chapin became more specific. A swarm of bees had lodged in the north wall of the clubhouse where a new set of stage lights is to be installed. Much consternation on the part of all present, and then S. W. "Bee" Bilski of La Grange, an expert apiarist, was summoned to rout the bees. Well, they're gone, and "Bee" Bilski boasts a big jar of honey.

23d Psalm Calm Rules Meadows of Albany Park

Civic Minded Residents Fond of Open Spaces.

By Roe Fowler.

"THE Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures . . ."—Psalm 23.

Albany Park is best expressed by those lines of the 23d Psalm. In the green pastures, beside the still waters, it takes its daily life, and all of its days are as Sundays. There is the calm of sunny afternoons, redolent of the green meadows from which the community has sprung within the span of many a present resident's lifetime. Nor are the green pastures all built up. Many places in Albany Park are more rural than urban in their flavor.

Perhaps this will explain why the 40th ward, which comprises a large part of Albany Park, has more small parks, community centers, and playgrounds than any other ward of the city. The residents are fond of their open spaces, and remember the pleasant scenes of their own childhood. That is why they try to preserve them for their children.

The preservation of the quiet and scenic beauty of Albany Park is not left to chance. Every three or four blocks has its own improvement or civic organizations, and these have banded together to form the 40th Ward Civic council and similar interorganization groups to fight for the rights of the residents.

Apartment Bubble Bursts.

A few years ago Albany Park was in a period of transition. The community was ceasing to be residential, it seemed, and apartment buildings were rapidly being put up. Many residential sections were rezoned. That was during the unprecedented building boom, when rents were high and construction fever had seized the large real estate owners. Fortunately or unfortunately, according to your point of view, the bubble burst, and many of the apartment buildings were planned but never built, and still others were built but have never been successful enough to cause emulation of their example by further building.

The community, in spite of the realtors' dreams of an apartment district, has remained mainly residential, with the apartment buildings occupying a minor place in its general scheme. Several more years may bring about a renewal of the construction activities which have been halted, but there is indication of a change in sentiment among the property owners since the bursting of their first bubble. Street improvements, for instance, are being killed in the board of local improvements at the residents' request, as too ambitious for a residential areas.

That is not to say that there has been no progress in Albany Park. Along the business streets, despite the depression, there are evidences of forward movement. The stores are attractively dressed and kept scrupulously clean. Merchants' and business associations are operating in full force to regulate the commercial interests of the community.

Its Boundaries Indefinite.

The confines of Albany Park are not too confining. It is a neighborhood without definite boundaries, because many people living on the east side of the drainage canal consider themselves to be members of the community, while people living on the west side of the canal commonly speak of it as the east boundary of the district.

Inclusion of the canal in the community brings in also one of the most picturesque gatherings of humanity in the city, the houseboaters. The houseboat dwellers include a number of unusual persons, such as an artist, an old sailing captain, and a violinist, and a number of just home folks.

These people dwell tax free on their houseboats, which are fixed up much the same as any land home. Their children are born on the boats, grow up on the boats, get married on the boats, and either live with the parents on the parental barge or get a boat of their own. It reminds one of a river in China, where people live and die on the river. Of course, however, there is this difference—the houseboaters on the canal are a part of the city and transact most of their life's business ashore, whereas many of the Chinese, who live on houseboats die without having ever been ashore.

Fringes Into Other Areas.

If the eastern boundary of the Albany Park community is undecided, so, too, are the other three boundaries. Roughly described, they are Addison street, Hamlin, and Devon avenues. Many people living outside this territory are members of Albany Park churches and Albany Park community organizations, however.

The beautification of the shores of the canal and the neighborhood immediately surrounding it is undertaken by the North Shore Channel Improvement association, of which A. J. Gordon is president. A further beautification program is likewise carried on by the Albany Park board and the River Park board.

The Albany Park board administers Kiwanis park, Christiana and Carmen avenues; Samuel Gompers park, Tripp and Foster avenues; Eugene Field park, Foster and Avers avenues, and Matson park, Foster and Kostner avenues. The River Park district administers Green Briar park, Peterson and Washtenaw avenues; California park, along the canal between Irving Park boulevard and Grace street; River park, along the canal from Argyle street to Foster avenue, and Legion park, Virginia and Bryn Mawr avenues and the canal.

These parks afford for the community shady spots during the summertime, places of quiet contemplation. They also give material opportunity to the community to bring true the remainder of the biblical quotation, ". . . He leadeth me beside still waters."

VOICE of the NORTHWEST SIDE

Forest Preserve Rules Intended for Swimmer's Protection

Summer bathing in the public pools has reached a stage where novelty has worn off, tan has been acquired, daring bathing suits have caused the usual number of comments from the usual group of shocked observers, and those who have not by this time learned to swim must blame something beside lack of opportunity.

Criticism has come from certain patrons at Cermak park due to the strict examination conducted there, but laxity in the matter of sanitary regulations would be perilous to thousands.

Warning has recently been issued against swimming in pools, streams, and rivers of the forest preserve, except in certain prescribed areas of that great playground. The ten prescribed swimming centers in the preserve are Deer Grove, in the northwestern section of the preserves; dam No. 1, Wheeling; dam No. 2, Des Plaines; Maple lake, south and east beaches, Palos Hills; Lake Tuma, Argonne forest, clay hole, 159th street and Florence avenue; Sauk Trail lake, Chicago Heights, and Cermak pool, Lyons.

Not only do the authorities advise that the water in these prescribed areas may be bathed in without danger to health, but that ample life guards have been provided there for the safety of bathers. The picnic season's chief lure is perhaps due to the fact that it offers an escape from the routine of existence. That the outing may bring only wholesome and pleasant results, the warning by forest preserve officials should be observed.

ADULT PLAY A PROBLEM.

Complications arising at various recreation centers indicate that many Chicagoans take their fun seriously, and that playtime is by no means limited to the children. Protest is made, for instance, that park No. 12, Wrightwood avenue and Drummond place, opened primarily as a recreation spot for children of the district, is being overrun with adults. For two years parents in the Riis park neighborhood have complained that the golf course there occupies space that should be available to children.

There was a time when dad came home tired from work and was content with his pipe and newspaper. Mother, too, was interested in outdoor games only to the extent that she tried to soothe bruises and settle disputes among youngsters. All this is changed.

There are several factors that are perhaps the cause of renewed interest on the part of adults in the neighborhood recreation centers. Directors explain that the business depression has caused the unemployed to seek the grounds during idle hours. Invention has relieved the housewife of many of the tasks which once kept her tied indoors.

One of the chief reasons for adult interest in the playgrounds is that the facilities have been designed with the older folk in mind. Most recreation directors consider that they have failed in their purpose if they do not create an appeal to all ages. Certainly the mere accumulation of years should not deter folk who are so inclined from finding relaxation in games and contests with their neighbors.

OPTIMISTIC OCTOGENARIANS.

"I like to mix with a crowd where things are lively." The speaker was Phillip Brand, 88 years old, 3605 North Luna avenue. He was thinking of the 57th annual Old Settlers' picnic which, with many other west siders, he plans to attend at Riverview park tomorrow. Despite his years, Mr. Brand still belongs to the ranks of the workers. He finds it much more satisfactory, he says, to continue active.

Mr. Brand belongs to that sturdy group of men and women more than four score years old who have lost none of the zest for living. Interviews with many of them reveal a philosophy of contentment. They are of one mind. Though life may have its woes, they continue optimistic. Their concern is not so much with the acquiring of wealth as in keeping alive the friendships formed in the old days.

Each year at the picnics, bouquets are awarded to couples whose combined ages make the greatest total of years. Youthful dancers may be familiar with newer steps and move about in more graceful fashion, but the old timers prove that their hearts are still young.

Chicago is richer because of the great group of immigrants who sought the city as a place to establish homes and, by the proper mixture of work and play, get the most out of life. To the modern Chicago they contribute their worthwhile philosophy on how to meet depression and disappointment.

NEW IDEAS IN CONTESTS.

Less colorful would be neighborhood life without its contests. They are the life of the community picnic. When things get dull there is always the possibility of casting about for the neighborhood's prettiest girl. The three legged race and the tug of war have survived through many generations at summer outings, and the beauty contest is with us always. But the neighborhoods are not without novel contest ideas.

The Mayfair Chamber of Commerce now comes forth with plans for a pajama contest, open to all women of the district between the ages of 1 and 100. Front porch sitters are by this time rather familiar with pajama designs, but some one at the Mayfair event will out-pajama all the rest.

Honors really go to La Grange this summer. Merchants of that suburb will award a prize to the baby arriving nearest the first of this month in any La Grange or La Grange Park home.

JEFFERSON PARK LIBRARY ADDS 1,000 VOLUMES

One thousand new volumes of fiction, travel, reference, and children's books have been added to the collection at the Jefferson Park branch library housed in the old Jefferson Park field house, Higgins road and Long avenue, Miss Jeanette Stoner, librarian, announced last week. Any books called for that are not on the shelves will now be obtained from the Hild Regional branch library, Wilson and Lincoln avenues. The Altrui club of Jefferson Park, through Mrs. Charles Schmock, library chairman, and Mrs. Adolph Borgmeier, assistant library chairman, was instrumental in effecting this improvement.

NORTHWEST BODY SEEKS TO UNIFY TAXING SURVEYS

Sets Forth Principles for Fourteen Groups.

Convinced there are too many public agencies working to bring a permanent solution of Chicago's knotty tax problems, the taxation committee of the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs made public yesterday a survey suggesting unification of and a complete understanding among all groups now making a study of the tax problems. This set of principles will be presented this week to each one of the 14 bodies now at work on the question, J. M. Fouchard, chairman of the taxation committee, announced.

"We are trying to find out why there are 14 separate agencies at work on this problem when, in our opinion, there should be only one," said Mr. Fouchard. "If all these groups would agree to work on a definite set of principles there would be an understanding between the groups which ought to make definite progress toward a solution and at the same time produce a program which would represent and receive the support of the great majority of taxpayers.

To Present Questionnaire.

"The set of principles we have drawn up will be presented to each one of these groups," he continued. "We have also written a questionnaire to find out where the separate public taxation committee, agree and why they disagree on certain factors of the tax problem. This will be presented to every member of the city council, the members of the governor's commission, the Chicago civic conference, the Better Government association, the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers, the Civic federation, and the Chicago Real Estate board as well as many another body. Presentation of these questionnaires will be followed up by personal calls by members of our taxation committee."

Heading the list of principles drawn up by the federation is the appeal for all taxpayers to work for an honest, sincere, businesslike, and equitable solution of the tax problem. There must be a scientific system for the assessment of real property and all property must be assessed uniformly, the principles set forth maintain. The committee also advocates lowering the cost of government and the complete separation of taxation bodies from politics by the establishment of one independent taxing body.

Questions to Be Asked.

Questions to be asked agencies now working for the solution of the tax question include the following:

1. Do you advocate an honest, sincere, businesslike and equitable solution to the present tax problem?
2. Do you believe that it is possible and practical to relieve the taxpayers of Cook county of their present tax burdens?
3. If you do believe that the taxpayers should be given relief, what measures do you advocate?
4. Do you believe that the board of assessors should use a scientific system for the assessment of real property in Cook county?
5. If you believe that a scientific system for the appraisal of real property should be used, what system do you advocate?
6. Do you believe that all real property in Cook county should be assessed uniformly?
7. If you do not believe in a uniform assessment of real property, what real property do you believe should be exempt or made an exception?
8. Do you believe that personal property should be assessed uniformly?
9. If you do not believe that personal property should be assessed uniformly, what kinds of personal property should be assessed?
10. What measures can you advocate to have personal property assessed uniformly?
11. Do you believe in any other form of taxation than that on personal and real property?
12. What other forms of taxation do you advocate?
13. Do you believe that real tax rates in Cook county can and should be lowered?
14. What measures can you advocate to lower tax rates in Cook county?
15. Do you believe that governmental agencies can function more efficiently and economically?
16. What measures can you advocate to lower the cost of government?
17. Are you willing to work for a program representative of the interests of all taxpayers?

Members of Mr. Fouchard's committee include E. D. Jackson, Robert P. Weil, George J. Trinkhaus, O. W. Holmes, John Klier, Richard J. Wuerst, Alex Koehn, and B. A. Rooney.

Northwest Side Youths Organize Varsity Club

High school and college lads from the northwest side have organized a new social organization to be known as the Varsity Club of Chicago. Plans are under way for the first dance to be held Oct. 2 at the Graemere hotel. The club will have a publication known as "The Chicago Nite Life" to be edited by Harold Dean Aubry, 943 North Lockwood avenue.

CHAMPION MERMAIDS

Here are seven of the mermaids who helped Blackhawk park to victory in team points last Sunday in the second annual 100 yard swimming races sponsored by The Tribune in the Lincoln park lagoon. With a total of thirteen points, Blackhawk will hold the team trophy for a year. Robert Brundage, a member of this team, scored the fastest time for the 100 yard swim. 1,000 BOYS, GIRLS TO MAKE APPEAL FOR PLAYGROUND

To Ask Council Action on Wicker Park Plea.

Wicker Park boys and girls, 1,000 or more strong, will demand that the city council act on their appeal for a playground when they gather for a massmeeting at 10 o'clock Tuesday at Paulina street and Bloomingdale avenue. The meeting, sponsored by the Wicker Park Chamber of Commerce and a dozen more civic groups representing the lower northwest side, is a protest against the award of a new playground and playground equipment to the south and southwest sides instead of to the Wicker Park community.

"We have a real kick coming this time," said Albert J. Flynn, president of the Wicker Park chamber, yesterday. "For several years this organization, with other community associations, has led a fight to obtain a playground for the 30,000 boys and girls in this congested area and so protect them from street traffic.

Not One Play Center.

"There is not a single play center in this whole territory. Last fall a $500,000 bond issue for new playgrounds was placed on the ballot as the result of the effort of these associations and our two former aldermen, G. M. Rozczynialski [33d] and Edward J. Kaindl [34th]. This was passed at the polls and it was then our understanding that Wicker Park would get the first playground. The site on which these children will gather Tuesday morning was even approved as a location for the play center.

"Now we learn that playground improvements are being granted to another section of the city with this money which we have fought for," continued Mr. Flynn.

"Diverted from Wicker Park."

"The city council has approved the establishment of a playground at 34th street and Mosspratt avenue on the south side with complete equipment on a site formerly purchased. It has also approved improvements to the amount of $150,000 on Rainbow park, which extends along the lake from 75th to 79th street. This shows clearly that the bond issue is being diverted from our needs."

Mr. Flynn went on to explain that there had been no public improvement in Wicker Park since 1906. Some of the organizations backing this project besides the chamber of commerce include the Greater Robey Street Property Owners' association, the 33d Ward Improvement club, the Fullerton and Damen Avenue Improvement club, the Division and Damen Avenue Improvement club, and the Milwaukee, North and Damen Business Men's association.

WHO'S WHO ON NORTHWEST SIDE

H. E. RUPP.

H. E. Rupp has been president of the Roberts Square Improvement association for the last three years, and prior to that was vice president for two years. He has been active in civic and improvement activities for the nine years he has lived in the district.

During his presidency the association was active in the movement to widen and pave Milwaukee avenue, and helped to obtain an addition to the Goudy school, 1101 Foster avenue. It also succeeded in having Roberts Square park, originally a city park, turned over to the Jefferson park district, under whose supervision the park has been kept up. As a city park it was neglected, but the Jefferson park district has improved and beautified the park area, Mr. Rupp said.

A delegate for several years from the Roberts Square association to the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs, and a member of the streets and alleys committee of the 41st ward civic council, Mr. Rupp is interested in all movements to improve the welfare of his community.

Mr. Rupp was born in Chicago and has lived on the northwest side for the last twenty-seven years. Game fishing is his favorite recreation. He is married and resides at 5151 Winona avenue.

SANITARY BOARD TO FILL HOLES IN PORTAGE LAWNS

Bowler Gives Promise of Action by Fall.

Holes in the lawns of residents of the old Portage Park area resulting from improper refilling after the laying of a sewer line by the sanitary district are to be filled by early fall. This promise was given by Thomas J. Bowler, president of the sanitary district trustees, last week to representatives of the Old Portage Park association.

Property owners led by Paul W. Boldt, 5657 Dakin street, appealed to the association to act in their behalf. The condition has existed since the sanitary district laid in 1927 a 14 inch sewer connecting the district's plants at Howard street and in Stickney, said J. A. Aronfeldt, president of the association.

Seek Closer Co-Operation.

At the same time Mr. Aronfeldt announced that the principal objective of the Old Portage Park association during the next year will be to bring about closer coöperation among the residents and civic organizations of the territory.

Mr. Aronfeldt added that the association will work for the repair of worn out streets in the community and for cleaner alleys.

"Transportation is a problem with which all northwest side organizations are concerned," said Mr. Aronfeldt. "We intend to join with other civic groups in this part of the city this fall to obtain more arterial highways and to obtain the installation of stop and go lights at important intersections.

Zoning Violations to Be Attacked.

"In a number of instances violations of the zoning ordinance by the opening of business houses in locations limited to residence purposes have been brought to our attention. These cases will be given our attention."

Other projects to be supported by the Old Portage Park association include safeguarding the community in matters involving special assessments and taxes and coöperating with the Portage Park commissioners to obtain the greatest value from the local parks.

Neighborhood Theaters

Northwest siders will see a double bill this week at the Harding theater with "The Man in Possession" and "Up for Murder" as the two attractions. The first film is taken from the stage play of the same name which ran here last winter.

Robert Montgomery, Irene Purcell, Charlotte Greenwood, and C. Aubrey Smith furnish plenty of reason for seeing the film version. The plot revolves around the family difficulties of a young ne'er-do-well who is forced on to his own resources. He comes, as a representative of the sheriff, into the household of his brother's fiancée [Miss Purcell] and then things happen. Charlotte Greenwood in the maid's part, lends further comedy to this farcical situation.

You won't have watched "Up for Murder" very long when you'll begin to wonder where you've seen it before. It's quite true that it's a story that's been filmed before, but we'll let you guess what the name used to be. The plot uses newspaper folk as characters and involves a killing of a publisher, a society editor, and a cub reporter. Genevieve Tobin and Lewis Ayres carry the leads. Members of the supporting cast include Purnell Pratt, Dorothy Peterson, Richard Tucker, and Frank McHugh.

Double Bills at Two Houses.

Two northwest side theaters, the Embassy and the Logan, have "The Last Parade" and "The Maltese Falcon" on their bills this week.

The first picture tells the story of a young man [Jack Holt] who goes over there to do or die for Uncle Sam and returns to find his job gone. Tom Moore, an ex-cop, is his buddy on the battlefields where they are both wounded and both cared for by Constance Cummings, a Red Cross nurse. When they get back Jack takes to rum running in lieu of tickling a typewriter while Tom becomes a police sergeant. See the picture for the rest of the story.

"The Maltese Falcon" is an exciting mystery film built around a former detective's story of what happens to a famous jewel. Bebe Daniels in blonde wig, plays the clever and courageous heroine. Ricardo Cortez is the cold blooded, lightning witted detective.

Two Films at Crawford.

"Up Pops the Devil" and "Always Good-by" oqer two interesting films at the Crawford theater. The first story concerns the efforts of a young writer to get along without merely becoming a "kept" man, that is, his wife [Carole Lombard] tries to support him while he [Stuart Erwin] writes the great American novel.

"Always Good-by" brings to us again that newest of foreign charmers, the lovely Elissa Landi. In this dramatic if somewhat improbable play she is posing as the wife of one man when she falls in love with another. Paul Cavanaugh plays convincingly the villain and Lewis Stone makes a chivalrous if somewhat elderly hero.

TRIBUNE ISSUES CALL FOR FALL GARDEN ENTRIES

Honor Roll Competition Gets Under Way.

How does your garden handiwork compare with that of the thousands of others interested in flower gardening within a 40 mile radius of Tribune Tower? Hundreds of persons, by telephone and by mail, have indicated renewed interest in the next semi-annual Chicago Tribune garden honor roll, for which the first call for entries in the 1931 fall competition is being issued today.

Whether yours is a rock garden, old fashioned garden, formal or informal, or whether it includes a few vegetables mixed in among flowers and plants, if the garden creates an individual setting for your home, it is eligible for entry if it is your work and nonprofessional.

The judging will be the third semi-annual project designed to list flower gardens worth of honor certificates and which others in the many communities which make up the metropolitan area may use as guides in patterning and developing yards and gardens best adapted to individual homes and to communities.

Ballot in This Section.

No tedious work is required of those who wish to enter the contest. An entry blank may be found elsewhere in this section. All it requires is the name and address of the garden and endorsement by signature of two neighbors or friends. Or neighbors may enter a garden of their own volition if the deserving gardener is too modest.

The ballot is to be mailed to the Farm and Garden department, The Chicago Tribune. Those received postmarked later than midnight Aug. 27 will not be considered, as judging must be held as near simultaneously as possible to be fair to entrants in various sections.

A special invitation to those in suburbs, in rural districts and somewhat thinly populated areas of Chicago proper is being issued for this fall contest.

Seek to Stimulate Plantings.

It is the intention of the contest to stimulate home plantings by pointing out those gardeners whose work has built not only community pride but has increased home values. Some of the most interesting situations discovered in the spring competition this year concerned gardeners whose neighbors had endorsed their nomination to the honor roll and yet these same neighbors were revealed as rivals.

"At times they'll hardly speak, when some of our flowers are doing well and theirs possibly are showing effects of insects or disease. And they don't ask for help, but keep on trying. Even though they do some things wrong this block has improved [illegible] per cent this season because of the stimulation of competition such as The Tribune is sponsoring."

This was the comment received from an entrant on the south side and is typical of similar remarks throughout the 40 mile radius.

To make the competition no less difficult in order to get on the honor roll, but to encourage those who think they would have more chance of recognition, those already given the certificate of merit last fall or this spring will be barred from reëntering this fall.

Their names will remain, instead, on the permanent honor roll that has already given recognition to 73 gardens in the two previous contests. The date for judging will be announced as soon as weather conditions permit. The Tribune's flower garden score card on which the two previous entry lists have been judged will again be used as a basis of fair competition and permanent record of each entrant's garden ideas and progress.

10,000 Swim Daily in Portage Pool

One of the most popular places in Portage park these days is the swimming pool. On the hottest days approximately 10,000 persons use the pool daily. It is the only park pool in the city boasting a resuscitating room. The pool is to be enlarged next year, according to Robert J. Boyd, athletic director of the Portage park district. OLD SETTLERS' GREETER LOOKS BACK 57 YEARS

Reminiscences Promised at Picnic.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

PHILIP BRAND.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Having attended the first of Chicago's Old Settlers' picnics 57 years ago and having missed only a few of the annual events since, it is natural that Philip Brand should be among the west siders planning to journey tomorrow to Riverview park where he will again meet his friends in reunion.

Mr. Brand, who makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Hattie Hogan, 3605 North Luna avenue, is a member of this year's reception committee. He says he will be standing at the gate where he will be enabled to catch a glimpse of the thousands who enter. Later on he expects to have more opportunity to reminisce of the old days.

Mr. Brand gives his age as "sweet sixteen," for does not 88 thus add up? It was at one of the picnics sponsored by the Chicago Turngemeinde that Mr. Brand was chosen by an enterprising photographer to pose for the symbolic figure "Father Time." His white beard perhaps inspired the idea. But Mr. Brand smiles tolerantly at such notions of younger people. Those who know him intimately are aware that he still belongs to the ranks of active workers, arises each morning to go to his daily task at a name plate company and return at nightfall to finish off the day in the garden or at odd jobs about the house.

Likes "Something Doing."

"Nothing suits me better than to go to work every day," he declared. "There's not a thing the matter with me, so why should I sit around the house? Besides, it is lively there at the shop. That's why I like the Old Settlers' picnic every year; they give you a chance to go where something's doing."

Born in Germany, Mr. Brand came to Chicago, the city of his dreams, as a young man. He landed in what he says was an "overgrown village" in the spring of 1871. The big fire was to occur that fall and Brand, who lived in a boarding house at Clark and Adams streets, viewed that spectacle at such close range that it left unforgettable impressions.

There was a concert at Turner hall on North Clark street on the memorable October Sunday night. Young Brand saw fire in the sky to the south as he left the building, and he and a friend investigated its location by walking over to DeKoven street. Later, he had his boarding house baggage moved to 22d and State streets.

On Present Job 14 Years.

Until 1885, Mr. Brand was a barber. He then entered the advertising sign business. For 14 years he has followed his present occupation with the firm by which he is still employed. His wife, who was a bride in 1872, died in 1912. Besides Mrs. Hogan, he has two other daughters living in Chicago, Mrs. Clara Daily and Mrs. Ida Bergman.

"It's the family and the friends who insist that I continue to dance at the picnics just as in the old days," says Mr. Brand. "But it's only making believe to say I enjoy that feature the same as when I was younger.

"I used to sing a god deal, but singing takes training and I gave it up on account of business and lack of time. But I want to make it clear that the 80's are a happy period if one is well and can keep busy."

Recalls Tramp Over Germany.

In 1913 Mr. Brand made a visit to Germany. He says that everything in his native land was peaceful and with no indication of a great war brewing. As a young man, before coming to America, Mr. Brand went on a 2,000 mile walking trip througn Germany, the journey requiring six months.

A varied program has been arranged for the Old Settlers' picnic tomorrow. It will be held in a grove in Riverview at Western and Belmont avenues. Adequate parking space has been provided for automobiles. Registration will begin at 1 o'clock, and the usual number of medals to old settlers with outstanding records under various classifications will be awarded. Dancing and community singing will be features.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 3.

Prune the climbing roses. As blossoming ends, old canes that are dead or unproductive should be cut out and the new shoots on which next year's roses come may be trained into position and those which have borne flowers shortened. Trim little from the bushy tops, but thin the heavy growth at base considerably.

Tuesday, Aug. 4.

Lettuce started now should be tender hearted for fall. Plant shallow, not over a quarter inch, in good rich soil. If you are afraid the soil will dry out before plants come up, cover the row with boards, burlap or straw, watching for the first show of seedlings to remove this mulch. Mignonette or prizehead, reddish varieties, are good.

Wednesday, Aug. 5.

A raid on the flowers' insect pests is in order. Leaf chewing insects such as wireworms, grubs, cutworms, beetles or caterpillars succumb to stomach poisons liwe the arsenates in a dust or spray. The piercing, sucking insects such as lice or aphids must have some such contract spray as nicotine sulfate.

Thursday, Aug. 6.

The lawn that has suffered from dry weather must be soaked thoroughly today, and again Saturday or Monday. Surface sprinkling or watering in the heat of the sun is harmful, as the water must get into the ground to draw grass roots deeper. A good fertilizer should be used now to give the plants food for fall growth.

Friday, Aug. 7.

Thin out the young dephinium beds to give the larger, stronger plants a better show in the race for late fall blooming. They should also get plenty of water during the dry spells, and should have two or three feet of open space for circulation of air through these lusty feeders. By September they should be large enough to place in their permanent positions, according to color, of course.

Saturday, Aug. 8.

Weeding the flower beds, borders, and running a cutter around the edge of the sidewalks will tidy up the place for Sunday display. The dandelion and plantain should come out of the lawn and garden rows with a knife or the special pronged weeders on the market.

[Prepared in coöperation with the Garfield Park conservatory].

Logan Square A. C. Women to Have Bridge Luncheon

The ladies' auxiliary of the Logan Square Athletic club will hold a luncheon at 1 o'clock Thursday at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Bridge will be played in the afternoon. Mrs. Marie Poggensee, social chairman; and Mrs. Maude Sullivan, president, are in charge of the arrangements.

300 BOYS, MEN IN UNDER WATER RACE WITH DUCKS

Unique Contest Held at Douglas Park.

Three hundred men and boys staged one of the most unusual contests in the history of the west parks yesterday afternoon when they competed with hell divers, a kind of ducks, in the natatorium at Douglas park. The event was one of the stunts in connection with the annual swimming meet sponsored by the west park commissioners.

The hell divers, known to be one of the strongest swimmers of the duck family not only on the surface, but for long distances under water had a hard race with the boys and men who endeavored to capture the birds under water, but more than one of the contestants came through successful.

A watermelon scramble was another unusual feature of the swimming meet arranged under the direction of William J. H. Schultz, superintendent of small parks and playgrounds.

James to Award Medals.

This meet was the final competition of the annual junior, intermediate, and senior championships staged each year by the west park board. The winners in the sectional meets at the 16 west side pools competed in 40 yard free style swimming, 20 yard breast stroke, 20 yard back stroke, and fancy diving. William R. James, president of the west park board, will award medals to the winners this week.

Representatives of Humboldt park flew away with the honors in the annual airplane contest held recently at Douglas park. The Humboldt park teams scored a total of 19 points with Lo Follette park the runner up with 15 points. Shedd, Franklin, Dvorak, and Holstein parks finished in third, fourth, fifth, and sixth places.

The individual winners of prizes in this competition for fuselage models included William Fuchs of Shedd park and John Matulis of Dvorak park. Young Fuchs also took the first prize for his twin pusher type of airplane.

Tennis Tourneys Saturday.

Heading the athletic schedule for this week in the west parks are the men's and women's tennis tournaments to be held next Saturday. In the competition for men there will be intermediate and senior divisions and the games will be played at 2 o'clock on the Columbus park courts. The finals will be run off at 1 o'clock next Sunday afternoon. There will also be two divisions for women and the preliminary matches will be played at 2 o'clock Saturday on the Garfield park courts with the finals at 10 o'clock Sunday morning on the same courts.

The annual peg tournament sponsored by the west parks is scheduled for 10 o'clock Friday morning at the Eckhart park playfield, Chicago avenue and Noble street. There will be one division for boys under 11 and another for boys between 11 and 13 years.

Move West Montrose Office.

The West Montrose Improvement association has moved its headquarters to 5038 Pensacola avenue.

WOMEN'S CLUBS HOLD OUTINGS, PLAN CALENDARS

7th District Groups Will Visit Lotus Beds.

Garden activities share attention with luncheons and board meetings for women of the west and northwest sides these midsummer days. Outings to various places of interest in the Chicago metropolitan area are enjoyed almost weekly by the garden groups while the member organizations of the Sixth and Seventh districts, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, are completing programs for the coming year. More than 200 members of the Seventh district will spend next Friday visiting the lotus beds at Grass lake. Starting early in private cars, the group will spend the day at the lake with luncheon at noon at the Fox Lake Country club. Plans for the affair are in charge of Mrs. Charles E. Caldwell, chairman of the garden committee, and Mrs. J. F. Eastman.

Austin Club Women Turn to Garden Work.

Many of the members of the Austin Woman's club are turning their attention this summer to garden activities as members of the Austin Garden club. Plans are now being made for an illustrated lecture to be given at 10 o'clock Aug. 14 at the home of Mrs. Fred W. Dauncey, 512 North Leamington avenue.

Austin Girls Ready to Outline Calendar.

The associate girls of the Austin Woman's club are ready to plan their calendar for the coming year following the announcement last week of the new slate of officers. Miss Margaret McHugh is the new presiding officer; Miss Anona R. Grandpre, first vice president; Miss Violet Donnelly, second vice president; Miss Jean Humiston, recording secretary; Miss Catherine McLaren, corresponding secretary, and Miss Gertrude Stohl, treasurer.

Austin North End Club Adopts Year's Calendar.

At a meeting last Wednesday of the Austin board of directors of the Austin North End Woman's club, the coming year's calendar was unanimously approved. Standing committees were also apopinted, according to Mrs. John Van Wakeman.

West Suburban Women Visit Stevens Estate.

Women of Oak Park and River Forest spent last Thursday visiting the Charles A. Stevens estate at Delavan Lake, Wis. Mrs. Anson Cameron was hostess to the members of the Oak Park and River Forest Garden club and Mrs. John Berriman, president of the Delavan Lake Garden club, entertained the villagers at luncheon at the Delavan Country club.

Irving Park Board to Meet Tomorrow.

Board members of the Irving Park Woman's club will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. C. Watson, 4036 Eddy street, first vice president. The coming year's calendar will be submitted for approval.

Mrs. Mabel Anderson Heads Hermosa Club.

Mrs. Mabel B. Anderson has been elected president of the Hermosa Woman's club. Mrs. Ina Reynolds is the new first vice president; Mrs. Esther Larkin, second vice president; Mrs. Edith Franson, recording secretary; Mrs. Viola Curtis, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Emma Papke, treasurer.

Belmont Club Plans Sessions for August.

Members of the Belmont Woman's club have so thoroughly enjoyed their semi-monthly meetings this summer they have voted to continue their sessions every other Wednesday afternoon this month. Mrs. Charles Summerfield is president of the organization.

BELMONT PICNIC SET FOR AUG. 30; COMMITTEE BUSY

Preliminary plans were made last week for the sixth annual free basket picnic of the Belmont and Central Improvement association to be held Aug. 30 at Northwestern park.

The picnic draws thousands of residents each year. Transportation will be provided for all those attending and prizes in competitive games and sports will be donated by the merchant members of the association.

John Wiebe, president of the association, has named a committee headed by Frank J. Reilly, secretary and past president, to direct the arrangements. It includes Otto Rudolph, Edward Cuthbert, Jus Johnson, Edmund Hinkel, Ted Hartman, Thomas Duffy, Frank Lewandowski, Dr. Hubert Eckwall, Charles Grauel, Tim Coakley, Sam Dwarkin, Thomas Fisher, Jimmy Roseman, A. Herman, and Henry Mueller.

Soloist Entertains Logan Square Kiwanians

The Aeppli family, old time residents of the northwest side, were well represented at the meeting of the Logan Square Kiwanis club Tuesday noon at the Chicago Norske club. Miss Virginia Aeppli, daughter of W. A. Aeppli, presented a program of songs, with Mr. Aeppli's sister, Mrs. H. G. Masten, accompanying. Left to right: Albert R. Fricke, Mrs. Masten, Ralph F. Kopperschmidt, John A. Scheck, Miss Aeppli, Edward M. Sieja, Rabbi B. H. Birnbaum, Mr. Aeppli, Robert Bremner, J. H. Stehman, James MacLagan, president, and L. J. Urdanger, secretary. James J. Cullen Day to Be Marked with Picnic

James J. Cullem day will be celebrated today with a picnic at National Grove Forest preserve, 26th street and Des Plaines avenue, Riverside. The event is sponsored annually by Beryl B. Collins, president of the 30th Ward National Republican club in compliment to Mr. Cullen, a member of the west park board. A carnival, baseball game, races, dancing, and a concert will all be included in the day's program. West and northwest side leaders in charge of the outing include William Buckley, Edward H. Luebeck, William G. Wheelhouse, Edward Boissey, Raymond G. Bruce, John Rauch, and John Maher.

RADIO USED TO GIVE NEW KIND OF FARM RELIEF

Loudspeaker Proves Aid to Scarecrow.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio has joined the airplane in giving farm relief. While Iowa farmers are "raining" arsenic from a fleet of planes on myriads of grasshoppers to save their crops, orchard owners have discovered that a radio receiving set installed inside a scarecrow makes it much more effective in keeping the birds out of the cherry trees and berry bushes. An Oregon experimenter reports that not only do the birds flee the advertising announcements but they won't even listen to the best crooners.

The next step is obviously to do away with scarecrows altogether and equip each fruit tree with a loudspeaker to ward off our feathered enemies. As a matter of fact Paul Whiteman plays at a spot where the loudspeakers are hidden in the trees. And birds cause no trouble there.

What is a televisor? A lot of folks who viewed Columbia's visual station dedication program think they're the television whiskers that appeared on some of the celebrities' faces. According to observers Mayor Walker and Guy Lombardo looked like Trade and Mark Smith. By the time television becomes a general success possibly all our favorite announcers will look like European diplomats.

One of the best lines heard at the Columbia dedication was Edwin Cohan's "television of today is perhaps comparable to the phonograph of 1910 and the motion picture of 1905."

Incidentally, the hardboiled announcers who never waver before the microphone have at last found out what "mike fright" is. Certain veterans wilted pitifully before the electric eye of television.

Another Vallee coming up. Rudy's brother Bill, 22 years old, made his debut recently in a program titled "Set With Stars." Predictions are promising.

A recent radio installation in a private home costs about $3,000. It included loud speakers in most of the rooms of the home and remote control devices to operate them from a master receiving set.

Archer Gibson, radio pipe organist recently praised by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, was for years private organist for Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who had a great organ built in his mansion on Riverside Drive after the fashion of his old chief Andrew Carnegie. With Gibson at the organ and great artists, such as Fritz Kreisler participating, the Schwab musicals became famous. "The Rosary" as played by Gibson was said to be Schwab's favorite selection.

Dennis King, famed music comedian, and now a radio artist, tells this story on himself:

"When I was still a struggling thespian in New York, and sleeping in the parks because of lack of funds, Anne Nichols, who later wrote "Abie's Irish Rose," gave me a job in a play she was putting on. It was my first singing part, and on the strength of the engagement, I took my friend and myself out to dinner with my last two dollars. The meal amounted to $1.50 so we indulged in two twenty-five cent cigars to make the event a complete splurge.

"And the next day I was fired. The manager said I was a rotten actor, and would never make out at all."

That was his first experience as king for a day. Later he made a lot of money playing that rôle.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has just been awarded the Columbia Broadcasting medal for distinguished contribution to the radio art. CBS announces that he is the first American so honored. Now it is up to some flying service to pick out a radio big shot and award him a medal engraved "for distinguished service to the art of aviation."

Fred Waring is scheduled to join the "Around the Town" program on Aug. 31 . . . The candy makers, according to a report, are getting together and will join the cigaret manufacturers in their battle of the air . . One of the most popular English radio teams is known as Flotsam and Jetsam, one a tenor and the other a very deep basso . . . Here is an error credited to a Texas newspaper by Editor and Publisher: "Mark Coney, electrical wizard and discoverer of wireless telegraphy, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture."

Carveth Wells, world adventurer, who recounts his strange experiences over NBC, told about his wildest sight recently. It was a carload of sophomores in a collegiate flivver crossing an African desert singing a Vallee number.

Minnesota, No. Carolina Near Top and Bottom

Minnesota and North Carolina take places near the top and the bottom, respectively, of the list of states in which radio receivers have been tabulated by the census bureau.

Out of 608,898 families in Minnesota, 287,880, or 47.3 per cent, had sets in 1930. This was almost 50,000 more than the department of commerce and the radio industry estimated.

Only 72,329, or 11.2 per cent, of 645,245 families in North Carolina, however, possessed receivers when the count was taken. The radio industry made an estimate of 92,000.

Herbert and Nevin Works on W-G-N at 8 Tuesday

Two excerpts from Victor Herbert's only grand opera, "Natoma," and Nevin's "O that We Two Were Maying," sung as a soprano and alto duet, are to be heard in the household program with Adolphe Dumont and a symphony orchestra through W-G-N at 8 p. m. Tuesday evening. A vocal ensemble will offer "Cousin Jedediah."

BETTY, BOB HOSTS TO 250

Antonia Gillman and Richard De Wolfe, the Betty and Bob of W-G-N, with Cloudchaser, an air elf, between them. Betty and Bob were hosts to 250 Chicagoland children last Sunday.

Back to Earth

Two hundred and fifty children from all over Chicagoland had the time of their lives last Sunday when they met in the flesh a real air elf from Cloudland, and Betty and Bob, the two children who are visiting that magic sphere through W-G-N at 5:45 o'clock each afternoon.

The occasion was a picnic held at Brook Hill farms, west of Milwaukee. The air elf was Cloudchaser, who through his magic changed himself into a man in order that he might not be lost in the crowd. He called himself W. E. Johnstone. Betty, of course, is Antonia Gillman, and Bob is Richard De Wolfe.

With the air Cloud Chaser's magic airplane, the two children who are now visiting the Glumpers, the inhabitants of that pessimistic star, Glump, returned to earth for this picnic.

Visitors last Sunday not only made the acquaintance of these three radio personalities, but were introduced to other strange creatures of the land of clouds, in the form of wooden cutouts, scattered in unexpected places over the farm. There was the Terrigog, the Swisher, Twisten-Ding, Pat-Patter, the rain elf., Sponge-Un, and Hurry Scurry, a snow gnome.

AKRON'S RADIO WILL TRANSMIT MAPS FROM AIR

Giant Navy Dirigible Has Fine Plant.

The world's largest dirigible, the Akron, which was christened in Akron, O., Saturday, is equipped with the finest radio system in the air.

Radio will play as important a part in the maneuvering of the Akron in peace as in war times and is almost of as much importance to the airship as the huge engines which keep it afloat. It will be equipped with a complete television system through which facsimiles of maps, sketches, photographs, and duplicates of other military information may be transmitted. While soaring over the water communication can be established with operators on board battleships or with ground bases while speeding over land through its six broadcasting and receiving channels. Two way conversations with pilots of airplanes flying over enemy fortifications can also be effected.

Four Radio Men.

The ship will be equipped with three receiving sets, a high frequency apparatus, an intermediate frequency set, and a direction finder. Through these sets the operators will be able to carry on a conversation through both the ordinary voice method and by the use of key system. By means of the direction finder officers of the ship will be able to plot out their courses.

The radio room itself is compact, being only nine feet and ten inches in width and less than eight feet along the port side. A crew of four radio men and an electrician's mate, all under the charge of a junior officer of the craft, will make up the radio force.

Three Antenna Planned.

Three antennae will be installed. Two of them of the trailing reel-up type, one 200 feet long and the other 150 feet, will be suspended from the radio room. The third will be a fixed antenna running along the longitudinal girder. This will be used when the trailing apparatus is found to be impractical.

MORNING SINGER

Helen Keith, contralto soloist, who is heard on the W-G-N morning musicales at 10:45 Thursdays.

GUEST ARTIST

Aileen Stanley, vaudeville headliner and stage star, will appear as guest artist with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next broadcast, which will be heard through W-G-N Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. During this program Miss Stanley will introduce three new songs.

CENSUS BUREAU RADIO COUNT TO NEAR 10,000,000

With tabulations by the census bureau of two-thirds of the states completed, indications are that the total number of radio receiving sets in the United States, as of April 1, 1930, will fall far short of the estimates of the radio industry and the department of commerce.

The average of families with radio sets so far has been about one-third. Tabulations of 34 states and the District of Columbia reveal a total of only 4,168,510 sets among 12,941,653 families.

While the count of the remaining third states is expected to boost the total considerably because the most populous states have not yet been tabulated, it is doubtful whether the final count will be over 10,000,000.

Estimates of the radio industry and the department of commerce ranged from approximately 13,000,000 to 15,500,000 in the summer and fall of 1930. Whatever the total of the census bureau count, however, the actual number of sets in operation in the country now will be greater because of the considerable sale of midget sets last year and during the first half of this year.

China Expands Radio.

As part of the expansion and development of China's international radio communication, the Chinese ministry of communications recently decreed that all government radio stations in the country were to operate international services.

RADIO WILL PLAY IMPORTANT ROLE AT MUSIC FEAST

Quin Ryan to Broadcast Festival Aug. 22.

Radio will play an important rôle in the success of the second Chicagoland Music Festival, which will be held Saturday, Aug. 22, in Soldiers' field, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, associated newspapers, and civic and commercial concerns of the middle west.

Quin Ryan will be at the microphone throughout the festival program. W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, will broadcast the entire program, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, while a National Broadcasting company network will broadcast from 9 to 9:30. Allan Grant, W-G-N staff pianist, will accompany the choruses that night.

A few headliners for the festival concert will be:

Hallelujah chorus of 6,000 voices.
Negro chorus of 2,000 voices.
One drum corps of 400 pieces.
A massed band of 2,200.

Grabel, Cain in Charge.

Last summer letters poured into the office of THE TRIBUNE and W-G-N from listeners in every state in the Union who heard the concert. Many testified that the program was the finest radio broadcast they ever had heard. It will be finer this summer. Victor J. Grabel again will be the bandmaster and Noble Cain the director of the chorus.

From the moment the bands and drum corps enter the huge arena at 7:30 o'clock until the final note is sounded Mr. Ryan will describe the cheering thousands, the huge searchlights as they play upon entertainers and spectators. It will be an evening filled with harmony and dynamic description. Pageantry, color, music, the applause of 150,000 will be brought to all who cannot attend in person.

During the festival an hour will be devoted to presenting winners in the preliminary contests of Dixon and Waukegan, Ill., Racine, Wis., and Gary, Ind.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings preceding that Saturday the contests for male, woman, and mixed choruses will be held in the Drake hotel; bits of these contests also will be broadcast from W-G-N. A few minutes on the air will be given to the adult and juvenile band contests Saturday morning, also in the Drake hotel.

After the Festival.

WMT, radio station in Waterloo, Ia., is sending the prize winning adult band of the first festival, the Cedar Falls (Ia.) Municipal band, to the festival. All the expenses will be paid by Harry Shaw, owner of the station and formerly business manager of the Waterloo Tribune, now merged with another Waterloo newspaper. The Tribune sponsored the neighboring city band last summer. James A. Melichar is the director of the 45 piece organization.

Radio not only plays a big part in the festival week's program but also after the festival is over. Last summer three of the stars in the festival contest—Agatha Lewis, winner of first place in the soprano division for Chicago; David Pritchard, leader of the Pritchard Mixed quartet, first Chicagoland winners, from Racine, and Julius Sklute, also of Racine, second place Chicagoland baritone—all won enviable positions in the concert and radio field.

Miss Lewis is a member of the Herbert Witherspoon chorus, Mr. Pritchard is a W-G-N staff artist, and Mr. Sklute has appeared in radio and on the concert stage throughout the winter and spring. Many of the winnings groups of the first festival were heard this winter in radio recitals over W-G-N.

Radio Serves as Eyes for Cavalry Service

Without information of the enemy, no general can properly conduct a battle, Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, now district commissioner of Washington, and formerly chief of cavalry, declared. "However," he continued, "while the cavalry could get this information many times, it could not get it back to the general in time to be of any use. Now, by assigning raidio sending sets to our advance cavalry units, we are able at once to send information obtained of the enemy, and add tremendously to the value of that historical branch of the service."

More Power Is Urged for Western Stations

While still in the midst of his western inspection tour, Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount has expressed the opinion that broadcasting stations in the west need more power because of the often large areas they are required to serve. The western radio commissioner reiterated his contention that cleared channel stations should be permitted to use the maximum power of 50,000 watts. He also noted that numerous technical improvements in broadcasting are apparent throughout the west.

Balks KTNT Removal.

Norman Baker, owner of station KTNT of Muscatine, Ia., is seeking a preliminary injunction against the individual members of the federal radio commission to nullify the action of the commission in removing KTNT from the air last month. The suit was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court.

JANE FROMAN.
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Jane Froman, a contralto with a touch of indigo in her voice, brought to the radio spotlight by Paul Whiteman, made her local debut last Thursday in the first of a series of NBC programs with an orchestra under the direction of Matt Malnek, a protégé of the "dean of modern music." Hereafter their programs will be heard over an NBC net at 7 Wednesday evenings and at 10:30 Thursday evenings.

DR. ARTHUR HOLT WILL SPEAK ON MIDDAY HOUR

Building religion into business is the theme of the midday services from W-G-N for this week. The speaker for 1 o'clock tomorrow will be Dr. Arthur E. Holt, professor of ethics at the University of Chicago and the Chicago Theological seminary. Dr. Holt has been prominent in the work of the Congregational church for many years. Following the theme of the week, Dr. Graham Fay, who has been in social and industrial betterment work for over forty years, will speak on Wednesday. Dr. Fay's subject is "Building Religion Into Business from the Bottom Up."

Another lay speaker, James L. Kraft, Chicago manufacturer, will speak for business men on Friday on "Building Religion into Business from the Top Down." The other services during the week will be conducted by the Rev. John L. Dickson, director of the midday services, who is assisted by Leonard Salvo, organist, and Gene Martin, baritone.

N. Y. PUBLISHERS WILL BAR TRADE NAMES IN RADIO

The publishers of newspapers in New York City have reached an agreement whereby they will exclude all trade names from radio programs. It was agreed to do this several years ago but the New York Telegram, owned by the Scripps-Howard papers, continued to print the names.

It is understood that the Scripps-Howard people are among those who have signed the agreement to cut out trade names altogether.

Hereafter simply the name of the artist will be mentioned if the New York newspaper plan is carried out. A musical group will be referred to simply as "band" or "orchestra," but in no case will the name of the sponsor or advertiser be mentioned.

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's Youngest Announcer, Wed

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's youngest radio announcer (he is 20), was married on July 11 to Miss Jane Neilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Neilson of Evanston. Martin came to W-G-N from station WSBT at South Bend, Ind. He reads THE TRIBUNE on the daily Digest of the News program. He is also heard with Leonard Salvo, organist, during Everybody's hour and on the Mail Box program.

HAROLD STOKES TO DIRECT NEW DANCE PROGRAM

Tom, Dick, and Harry on Novel Bill.

A new dance program, featuring novel musical combinations and effects, with Tom, Dick and Harry furnishing the vocal end of the bill, will be presented for the first time at 9:45 tomorrow evening under the direction of Harold Stokes.

Harold Stokes, well known to radio listeners as a former director of Jean Goldkette's orchestra, comes back to radio after two years with his own orchestra in Kansas City and Omaha. Stokes is well known for novel arrangements of popular dance numbers. Besides conducting his own orchestra, Stokes plays the piano, accordian, clarinet, drums, and xylophone.

On the First Program.

The initial program includes arrangements of hits from "The Wonder Bar," "The Band Wagon," Crazy Quilt," and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

The story of Sheridan's ride will be told at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. Miss Jean Conover has used the famous poem by James Buchanan Reed as the foundation of her story. An incident from the life of John Hancock, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, will be dramatized by Norman Macdonald for the sketch at 8:30 Friday, Aug. 7.

Boy to Make Evening Bow.

Earle Wilkie, 17 year old boy baritone, who has been singing on W-G-N Wednesday and Saturday mornings at 10:45, will make his bow to its evening audience at 7:45 Tuesday evening. Two of his numbers will be "Shipmates o' Mine," and "In the Silence of the Night." Young Wilkie is a protege of Barre Hill of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

The second of the summer garden concert heard from W-G-N at 8:10 Saturday nights, will be presented Aug. 8 and will have Vienna as its scene. Works of Lehar, Schubert, Suppe, and Straus will be heard on this Viennese program.

NBC WILL ERECT VISION STATION ON 84TH FLOOR

The National Broadcasting company has been authorized by the federal radio commission to erect a television and a sound broadcasting station on the eighty-fourth floor of the Empire State building, of New York, tallest structure in the world.

The stations will operate on ultra high frequencies, above 23,000 kilocycles, in an effort to ascertain whether or not they can be adapted to visual broadcasting. The stations will cost $75,000, with $10,000 additional for studios.

A television antenna will be placed on top of the Empire State building mooring mast, 1,250 feet above the street level. NBC engineers believe that many of the present obstacles to visual broadcasting will be removed through the operation of the station from this height.

START DIGGING FOR MAMMOTH N. Y. RADIO CITY

New York,—Excavations started last week for the mammoth Radio City, said to be the largest building project in the history of the world, which is to be erected in the heart of New York City. The digging is expected to be completed in the fall. Eight steam shovels, 100 trucks, and nearly 300 workmen started the excavation job. When the actual building work begins, at least 5,000 men will be employed. The $250,000 project is being financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Olive Hull Will Open Series on Child Welfare

Olive Hull, executive secretary of Gov. Emmerson's committee on Child Welfare, will give a series of talks on child welfare from W-G-N every Monday, starting tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. D. T. McNabb, of the Animal Protection committee of the Women's City club will speak Tuesday at this same time on the proper care for pets in summer.

NO CASH TO LOSE, DAD OF 15 SAILS THROUGH SLUMP

Avoids Expensive Foods and Doctor Bills.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Joseph Bedoe, father of Chicago's biggest family, turned toward his visitor more in the manner of a man concerned with providing a living for his 15 children than as a person with a desire to broadcast his views on the proper size of families or things in general.

JOSEPH BEDOE.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

It was with a serious countenance befitting a man possessing due appreciation of his responsibilities that Mr. Bedoe paused briefly while cutting a piece of sole leather. There were a customer and a bystander in the shop at 3936 Fullerton avenue, where Mr. Bedoe combines shoe making with shoe repairing, shoe shining and hat cleaning. The presence of other persons does not create the most satisfactory atmosphere for successful interviews. Expressing himself for print was obviously a new role for the cobbler, suddenly become conspicuous as a parent due to the recent birth of his 15th child.

A slight frown suggested that Mr. Bedoe would willingly leave advice on how to raise children to those who speak theoretically rather than from experience. Yet, here he was cornered and he challenged his interviewer to launch the questioning.

Weathers Depression Well.

Mr. Bedoe was asked concerning his particular problems as the father of the city's biggest family during the period of depression. This ordinarily gloomy subject caused him to show the first signs of a smile.

"Well," he commented, "we didn't have any money to lose."

Tony, the eldest boy, glanced up from where he was working with hammer and awl and winked. Tony appreciated his father's humorous sally. It was a hint of the spirit of the Bedoe family circle.

"But depression or no depression," explained Mr. Bedoe, "never in our household do we hear anyone say, 'Oh, I gotta have this, or, I gotta have that.' Sometimes one of the boys or girls will say they really ought to have this or that, and I agree to a conference on the matter. Of course, all my decisions have to end the same way, but there is never any [illegible].

Occupy Six Room Flat.

"And of course, in the biggest family there ain't much chance for any member of it to be pampered and spoiled. We all just make the best of the fact that there ain't no extra spending money provided in the budget. To get along in the six room flat we all just have to be congenial."

Not all the members of the family were born in Chicago. Mary, the [illegible], was born in Austria-Hungary. Tony, 18; Rose, 17; Joseph, 16, and Andrew, 14, were born here. Jack, [illegible] and Johnny, 10, were born in Bloomington, Ill. Lewis, 9; Katherine, [illegible] Vilma, 4, and Alice and Ella, 5, were born in Colfax, Ill. Theresa, 3, and Mike, 2, were born in Chicago, as was Anna, who arrived some 10 days ago.

Mr. Bedoe was asked if the smaller towns of Bloomington and Colfax had proved more satisfactory than Chicago in the rearing of a large family. It was Emerson who emphasized the law of compensation. The shoemaker, and philosopher, thoughtfully replied:

"Well, it's this way: In the small towns you may have more chance to have a garden and keep chickens that help out, but in the country there aren't as many people around to want their shoes fixed."

No Doctor Bills to Pay.

Mr. Bedoe said that his flock always has been healthy and he never has had any bills to pay.

"You see," he said, "the missus figures on the kind of food that goes farthest in every way. That is the old country idea of nourishing soups—carrots, peas, celery and [illegible]. Always spinach twice a week. For variety, the peas can be changed to beans. But no fried foods or pies or anything like that. We haven't a cranky disposition in the whole lot. I might add that we have twenty-six quarts of milk a day.

"Of course, it's a household with a good deal of self-denial on every one's part, but it is a home where there's a good deal of singing and where there's no one lonesome for a playmate. Like most boys and girls, they like to tease each other, but it never comes to a quarrel.

Choose Trades for Boys.

"Three of the boys are here with me learning the trade. That is something to which I have given much thought. I had a long talk with the superintendent when we lived in Colfax, and he told me that there were more educated people these days looking for jobs than there were any other kind. I figured that I'd rather have my boys able to do something and do it well than thinking of competing with others for the easy jobs.

"But I have no wish to talk on the subject. Every one is welcome to his own ideas, and I am not criticizing those with small families, although maybe some of them have only one or two children where there is a good income and have a hard time managing. I'm kept busy with my own affairs. I only know that all my boys and girls are good to their mother and to me and to each other, and they are always respectful and willing to take advice."

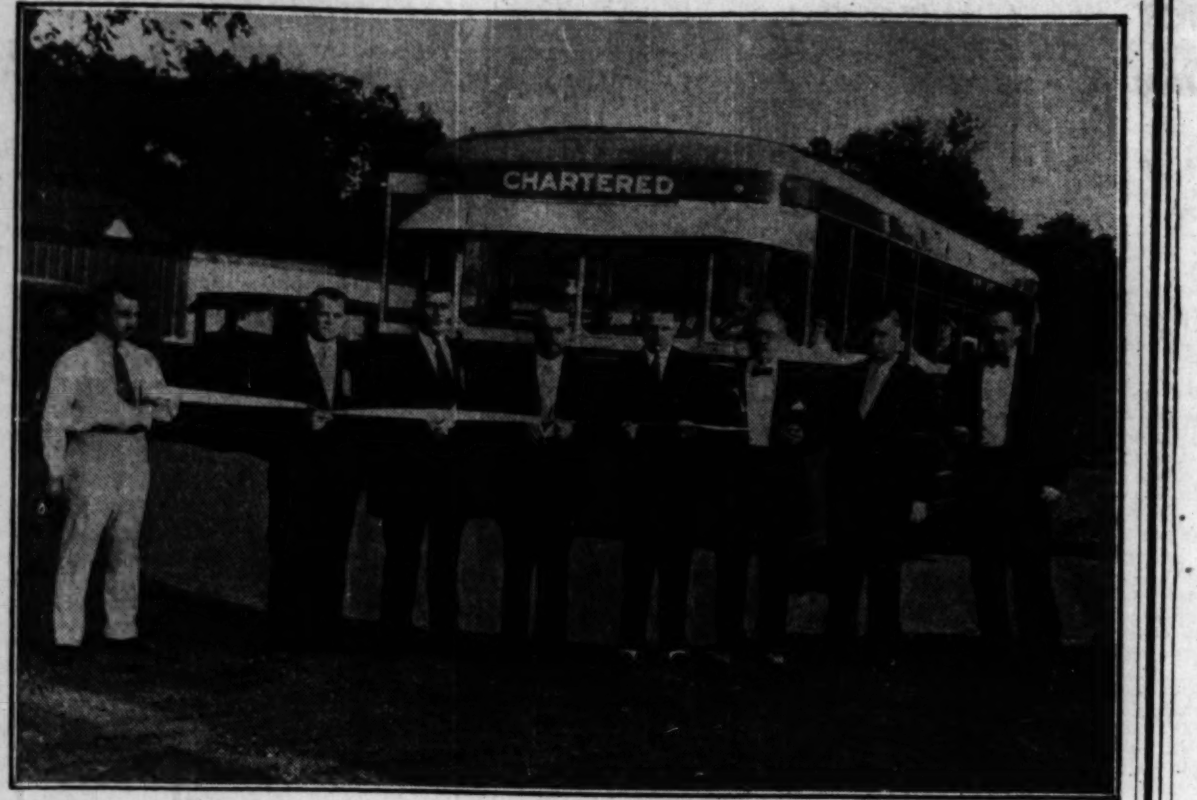
"And which one," Mr. Bedoe was asked, "is the favorite of the bunch?"

"Well," he smiled, "we don't have any, but, of course, it's the new baby, Anna, now, that's the chief center of [illegible]."

Wilson Avenue Group Prepares for Election

Members of the nominating committee to propose 1931-'32 officers for the Wilson Avenue Community association will be named at a meeting of the association Wednesday evening at Wilson park fieldhouse. The election will be held in September.

CUTTING THE RIBBON FOR NEW BUS SERVICE



Oliver W. Holmes, assistant corporation counsel, cut the ribbon last Sunday opening the new feeder bus service on Irving Park boulevard between Harlem and Pacific avenues. The six community leaders in the center are: James Wischer, president of the Grace-Oketo Improvement association; George S. Thompson, president of the Irvingwood Improvement association; Mr. Holmes, Senator Frank Huckin, H. O. Hammer, president of the Irving Highlands Improvement association, and E. D. Jackson, president of the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs.

COUNTY LEGION NAMES LEADERS ON WEDNESDAY

Districts to Elect Men to Executive Body.

The annual meeting of the Cook County council of the American Legion will be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at the council chambers in the city hall. Officers will be nominated and elected for 1932, including commander, vice commander, finance officer, sergeant-at-arms, and one member of the Cook county executive committee from each of the nine districts for a term of two years. District members of the executive committee will be elected from their respective districts in caucuses.

Belmont Park post, No. 597, has selected Frank R. Ringa as its delegate to the state Legion convention, to be held in Peoria Aug. 31. John J. McMullen, post commander, has been chosen as alternate.

Mr. Ringa has received a personal citation, issued by National Commander Ralph T. O'Neil, for his services in obtaining jobs for veterans. He has promised Belmont post that he will go to Peoria to work for the election of John F. Simpson as district adjutant.

The Illinois state championship games in the American Legion Junior baseball world series will be played at Wrigley field, next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Cook county champions will be pitted against downstate champions in three games. The games will start at 3 o'clock.

The Berwyn, South Chicago, Marine post, and Rogers Park will play for the Cook county championship early in the week. The downstate title also remains to be won. All children in Chicago younger than 16 years will be admitted free to the championship games. The games will be held under the direction of the state athletic committee of the Legion, Edwin H. Felt, chairman.

Medill—TRIBUNE post, No. 348 will go on a moonlight excursion on the S. S. Theodore Roosevelt Monday night, Aug. 10. The boat will leave the Michigan avenue dock at 9 o'clock and return at 11:45.

Chester L. Davis, assistant trust officer of the Chicago Title and Trust company, will talk on "The Real Estate Situation in Cook County" at the meeting tomorrow noon of Advertising Men's post, No. 38.

Members of the Norhwest Town post No. 1583, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will picnic next Sunday in Erhardt's grove, Park Ridge. George Doherty is chairman of the event.

ELGIN ACADEMY TO START NEW EDUCATION PLAN

The Elgin academy will open its seventy-sixth year in September with a program termed "a new departure in education." The program is aimed at making the task of gaining a college preparatory education absorbingly interesting for the student.

Dean Karl J. Stouffer, executive head of the pioneer Elgin institution, outlined the new project in saying, "The 'Elgin plan,' which has the indorsement of eminent educators, seeks to make the processes of mental training more interesting by providing for more efficient use of class and study time, by helping a student learn how to study, by developing student initiative and independence, and by encouraging and honoring high scholastic attainment."

DIVORCE SUITS FILED BY 15 ON NORTHWEST SIDE

6 Wives Charge Mates with Cruelty.

Fifteen northwest side couples sought to end their marital troubles last week by filing divorce suits in the Circuit and Superior courts. Grounds on which they are seeking decrees include charges of cruelty, desertion, and habitual drunkenness.

Separate maintenance suits were started by two wives. Mrs. Mary Porter, River Grove, who asked separate maintenance from Robert Porter, accused her husband of alleged cruelty and misconduct, while the double charge of cruelty and desertion was made in the bill filed by Mrs. Josephine Marmoll, 2814 North Sacramento street, against Joseph A. Marmoll.

Six Wives Charge Cruelty.

Charges of cruelty were made by wives in the following six cases:

Mrs. Elizabeth Trainor, 526 North Springfield avenue, against Francis M. Trainor.

Mrs. Alla Berg, 3567 Dickens street, against Milton Berg.

Mrs. Ruth M. Cummings, 4014 Eastwood avenue, against Chester A. Cummings, 6230 Holbrook street.

Mrs. Rose Phillip, 3215 Cullom avenue, against Irving Phillip, 1058 North Spaulding street.

Mrs. Anna Fitzpatrick, 2745 North 75th avenue, Elmwood Park, against Thomas E. Fitzpatrick.

Mrs. Anna Stoeckel, Palatine, against Herman O. Stoeckel.

Charge Husbands Desert.

Desertion was charged by seven wives:

Mrs. Jennie White, 2931 Division street, against William White.

Mrs. Wilma Schoonmaker, 1646 North Kildare avenue, against Willard J. Schoonmaker.

Mrs. Panagiotta Banos, 1856 West North avenue, against Apostolos Banos.

Mrs. Ann Swanson, 5637 North Moody avenue, against Carl G. Swanson, 4845 Winthrop avenue.

Mrs. Sophie Ginsberg, 1056 North Oakley boulevard, against David Ginsberg.

Mrs. Beulah E. Caley, 2645 Cortez street, against Stephan A. Caley.

Mrs. Zoa Moorhouse, Barrington, against James F. Moorhouse, Elgin.

In her bill Mrs. Anna Warp, 1545 North Lorel avenue, accused her husband, Edward Warp, of habitual drunkenness, while the double charge of habitual drunkenness and desertion was made in the divorce action started by Mrs. Louisa Toft, 3314 Pierce avenue, against Peter N. Toft, 1532 North Fairfield avenue.

JEFFERSON PARK TENNIS WINNERS ARE ANNOUNCED

Winners of the annual tennis singles tournament played on the Jefferson park district courts, Long and Higgins avenues, were announced last week by R. W. Maser, athletic director. At the same time Mr. Maser said he was now receiving entries for the district doubles championship to be played in the near future.

In the singles Al Krejci, Bob Slocum, and Al Tomanek took first, second and third places for senior men. In the division for junior men Henry Dunker, Walter Mertins, and Robert Werth were awarded first, second, and third prizes. Miss Jeanne Stopa, Miss Edna Eshelman, and Miss Claire Osterberger scored the first three places in the woman's division.

Lawrence Ave. Merchants Start Seven-Week Jubilee

The Lawrence avenue golden jubilee is in full swing along Lawrence avenue from Central Park avenue to Elston avenue. The event sponsored by the merchants in the district opened Wednesday evening with street attractions and special selling events to continue through the next seven weeks. M. Greenberg is directing manager of the jubilee.

Mayfair Pajama Contest Is Scheduled for Aug. 15

The beach pajama contest to be sponsored by the Mayfair Chamber of Commerce for all girls in this district from 6 to 100 will be held at 7 o'clock Aug. 15 at Elston and Lawrence avenues. Entry blanks may be had at the store of any member of the association, said Arvid Swanson, chairman. Prizes will be awarded in three age classifications.

A SALES BUILDER Keyed to Today's Needs!

HAVE you fewer customers this year than last? Have some of the old ones stopped trading with you? Have you found it difficult to find new customers?

Not a few merchants and retailers face the problem of maintaining sales volume under present-day conditions.

Some of them, however, have given up trying to do anything about it. They are sitting back, waiting for the return of good times.

Some merchants, on the other hand, refuse to wait. They are making their own good times by doubling their efforts. If business won't come to them, they go out after it—and the medium they use is the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune.

Here is a way to pep up your sales that is keyed to today's needs. Advertising in the Metropolitan Section is low-cost advertising. It is efficient advertising. It is productive advertising. It reaches the families who are spending the money. You direct your message only to actual prospects, for you buy only that portion of the Sunday Tribune's huge circulation that is read on your side of the city, among people who can trade with you.

Are you content to wait for good times, or do you want to make your own good times?

Think it over. Then decide to find out the complete facts about Metropolitan Section advertising and what it can do for your business. Call Superior 0100 tomorrow—Metropolitan.

Ready to Start Stage Season in Manhattan

Week of Aug. 24 Brings Eight Premieres.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Not a single new play, show or frolic will be staged on Broadway during the next seven days, although the week is traditionally regarded as marking the start of the new season. The first première in sight is "Ruddigore," to be revived at Erlanger's theater on Aug. 10. The week of Aug. 17 is barren of announcements. But during the week of Aug. 24, new shows will be in plentiful supply, so a faithful historian of the stage must announce that date as the marker of the season's opening.

Here is the way the premières of late August along Broadway are listed at present:

"Love's Out of Fashion," a German comedy, with Walter Woolf as star, on Aug. 24. "Three Times the Hour," a melodrama which Brock Pemberton will bring to the Avon on Aug. 25; George White's "Scandals," coming to the Apollo, perhaps on the same night; "After Tomorrow," the Hugh Stange-John Golden play, listed for the Golden theater on Aug. 27; the "Vanities," announced to open Earl Carroll's new playhouse, also on the 27th; "Friendship," which George M. Cohan will bring to the Fulton, on Aug. 31; "Cloudy with Showers," the Floyd Dell-Thomas Mitchell comedy, scheduled for the Morosco on that evening; and "Free for All," the Schwab and Mandel musical show, which will set up shop at the Manhattan either the week of the 24th or 31st. Less definite are Miss Unger's play, "Ladies of Creation" and a Negro pastime called "Fast and Furious."

It seems that Jed Harris' projected cycle of Eugene O'Neill revivals will not be started until after the Theater Guild has staged the same dramatist's latest opus, "Mourning Becomes Electra." This may be professional courtesy on Mr. Harris' part; but on the other hand it may be a shrewd decision to ride along in the backwash of the publicity that O'Neill's three layer creation is certain to stir up.

"Desire Under the Elms" will be the first of the revivals, and Eugene Powers will probably have the rôle that Walter Huston originated. The second will be "Marco Millions," on the staging of which Mr. Harris is said to have some new ideas. Mr. Powers will probably be seen in this play also, in the rôle of the Great Khan, which was acted for the Guild by Baliol Holloway and Morris Carnovsky.

Items from the Shuberts' news bureau are as follows:

Judith Anderson will tour in Pirandello's "As You Desire Me" during the first months of the new season. She will spend a fortnight in the Canadian cities, beginning Sept. 21, and on Oct. 5 will open in Boston for a run. In January she will appear as the star of a new play, the title and authorship of which are a state secret in the Shubert office.

"The Venetian," by Clifford Bax, which the Shuberts will import from London, will begin its career in Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26, and will also have a week in New Haven, Conn., before entering New York. Five members of the London cast will be employed in this production.

Ethel Barrymore, now started on a western tour in "The School for Scandal," has dropped her plans for a repertory. She hopes to reach New York in the rôle of Lady Teazle around the Christmas holidays. Earlier in the summer she talked of a quartet of vehicles, with "Hedda Gabler," "Camille" and "Francesca da Rimini" as the other three.

◆

Mae West intends to make another filibustering expedition into the drama. Her new play will be called "The Constant Sinner," and it will be a dramatization of her novel, which bore another title, and which very few people seem to have read. Atlantic City will be the scene of the tryout, during the week of Aug. 24. A Broadway première will follow, on or about Sept. 10.

◆

Among the hits of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" are a group of numbers salvaged from a revue called "Who's Who," promised last season by Arthur Klein, but never staged. They bear the titles of "Changing the Guard," "Doing the New York," "Clinching the Sale," and "Victim of the Talkies." Which would come under the heading of unimportant information but for the fact that Mr. Klein has another show by the same authors. "Vanity Fair" is its title, and early September will see its staging.

◆

"Cloudy with Showers," by Floyd Dell and Thomas Mitchell, is being pointed for the Morosco theater on Aug. 31 by Manager Patterson McNutt. Its story deals with a professor who becomes involved in a scandal with one of his co-eds. Broadway has begun to refer to this play as "a feminine 'Young Woodley'."

◆

Charles Coburn, who appeared in the Chicago company of "Lysistrata" last winter, wants to act "The Peacock," by Leonard Ide, a play that almost tempted George Arliss to take a vacation from the pictures. George C. Tyler also did some flirting with "The Peacock," as a possible vehicle for Otis Skinner.

Plans for Carnival.

Riverview Park is turning its attention toward its autumnal Mardi Gras carnival. Aug. 15 is the date of the carnival opening. It will continue until Sept. 20.

CONTINUED:

"High Hat," with Edna Hibbard, James Spottswood, and Richard Taber; Adelphi theater; seventh week.

"Stepping Sisters"; Blackstone; twentieth week.

COMING:

"A Modern Virgin," by Elmer Harris; Garrick, opening Aug. 17.

"Salt Water," comedy, by Frank Craven, with Taylor Holmes and Fiske O'Hara; Playhouse, opening Aug. 22.

WEEKLY CHANGE:

R.-K.-O. Palace theater: Continuous vaudeville and talking pictures; Bessie Love, headliner.

Academy theater: Burlesque and talking pictures; "French Frolics," with Miss Carmen.

NEW LADY TEAZLE

ETHEL BARRYMORE.

[Fink Photo.]

THE classic role of Lady Teazle in Sheridan's comedy, "The School for Scandal," is now being acted by Miss Barrymore. She is making a midsummer tour to the Pacific coast, and probably will reach Chicago, when eastward bound, about Thanksgiving day. She first appeared as the flirtatious lady of the famous screen scene eight years ago, with her uncle, the late John Drew, as Sir Peter.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

interrupted his frenzy of composition in order to go to Russia, where his blatherskite tendencies have been manifested in fulsome after luncheon oratory in praise of that economic and governmental insanity called communism.

The Guild says on this point:

"Recently we cabled Mr. Shaw concerning the play. Yes, he replied, it was entirely likely that it would be completed by fall, but that his optimism in this quarter was not to be construed as a promise. We are, however, familiar with his working habits, and with the concentration which he puts into a task until it is finished. In our own heart we feel that the play should be in our hands before the snow flies."

There is only one detail in the approaching theatrical situation, as thus outlined, that the dramatic editor of THE TRIBUNE faces with a sense of unutterable weariness. And that is this new play by Mr. Shaw. The Theater Guild may rejoice over it, but the mere thought of it gives me a sinking feeling. I have seen enough Shaw, and heard enough Shaw, for one lifetime. The famous tongue-in-cheek of the so-called British Aristophanes begins to strike me as a morbid growth, in need of surgery.

Playwright Vs. Censor.

The fear of a stage censorship has been hovering over Broadway for months, because of provisions in the Masker bill, which may be brought before the New York state legislature. This worry has caused the birth of an organization which bears the title of National Council on Freedom from Censorship, and of which a group of professional playwrights and novelists appears to be the founders.

The chairman of the council is Hatcher Hughes, author of "Hell Bent for Heaven." The vice chairmen are Elmer Rice, author of "Street Scene," "The Adding Machine," etc.; Fannie Hurst, and Barrett Clark. Its membership includes authors, lawyers, and educators.

The organization is planning a legislative campaign to attack the post-office censorship over books and publications in the mails. It will also undertake to effect the repeal of certain New York state motion picture laws, of the theater "padlock" law, known as the Wales act, and the laws giving special police powers to vice reform societies.

The council, apparently, has overlooked the greatest current menace to the freedom of the imaginative writer, which is the bawdiness, vulgarity, and vicious exploitation of depraved sex themes now widely practiced in the craft of letters. A playwright or a novelist deserves no more freedom of self-expression than he earns by his manifestation of good taste, artistic sincerity, and cleanness of purpose.

Jack and Jill Plays.

"The Haunted Castle" is the next children's performance to be given at Ravinia by the Jack and Jill Players under the auspices of the Ravinia Opera club, Aug. 6. The play will be directed by its author, Marie Agnes Foley.

The Jack and Jill Players' winter season of Saturday afternoon performances opens Oct. 3 at the Chicago Woman's club theater. There will be an extra performance every first Sunday afternoon of the month. The players will also take part in a pageant on Labor day in Soldiers' field under the auspices of the Federation of Labor.

Actress Stars Own Managers in Repertory

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Katharine Cornell will take over the Belasco theater under an arrangement expected to be completed soon. This indicates that Miss Cornell, with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as a nucleus, will install her long planned repertory company in the playhouse presided over so many years by the late Belasco.

This does not mean that Miss Cornell will take over the Belasco organization, as that machine disbanded after the death of its leader. She has not yet decided whether she will take "The Barretts" on tour before she produces a new play in New York.

◆

In addition to Miss Cornell, three other woman stars will have their own theaters and repertory troupes this fall. Alice Brady will be given a theater by her father, William A. Brady, in which to produce a cycle of dramas in which she will be starred. The first will be "Manhattan Nocturne," already tried out in Atlantic City. It is being rewritten before being brought to town.

Pauline Lord, who quit the stage for a while after her marriage, is returning in the rôle of producer. She has one play in rehearsal now and is looking for a theater of her own.

Jane Cowl also will go "independent" this fall and manage her own plays. She will produce a repertory. Several of her appearances are likely to be in Shakespearean works.

The new operetta being written by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach is almost completed, and it has been titled "The Passionate Pilgrim." The two principal rôles will be played by George Metaxa and Dorothy Debenham, both well known on the London stage, but this will mark their first trials in this country.

Metaxa, a Rumanian by birth, is a matinee idol in England. After making a hit in "Wake Up and Dream" he played opposite Peggy Wood in "Bitter Sweet" for two years.

Frieda is a diminutive 4 year old who plays in "The Green Pastures." Her performance consists mainly in getting a fish bone caught in her throat in the scene where the Negroes have an old fashioned fish fry.

Two nights ago Frieda disappeared, and only after a frantic search was she discovered sitting out in the audience in a second row seat.

"I hadn't ever seen the show and I wanted to," she explained to the reproving stage manager.

'Modern Virgin' for Chicago

"A MODERN VIRGIN," a comedy by Elmer Harris, will be the first new play of the season in Chicago, opening Monday, Aug. 17, in the Garrick theater. It will be presented by the Messrs. Shubert, following its successful engagement on Broadway.

Mr. Harris, as in "Young Sinners," deals with the subject of the young moderns in "A Modern Virgin." The play tells the story of a mischievous girl of 17, who, writhing under the strict discipline of a maiden aunt, decides to discover the secrets of love and life.

The cast will be headed by Roger Pryor, recently seen here as the leading man of "Up Pops the Devil"; Margaret Sullavan, who was acclaimed as the ingénue "find" of last season, and Herbert Rawlinson, a celebrity of the screen.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

were converted into an amusing set for the first act finale.

Such well known songsmiths as Irving Berlin, Philip Charig, Dorothy Fields, Jimmie McHugh, the Lief brothers, and Vernon Duke have given lyrics and music, and such nationally approved wits as Nunnally Johnson, Dorothy Parker, Peter Arno, and Broun, himself, have supplied dialogue material.

Those who gave money may get all of it back—indeed, the $11 opening night paid back almost all of the production cost—but they'll get no dividends. Profits are to be shared coöperatively by the principals.

A coöperative show is no news to Broadway, and rarely is a charity. Shoestring producers make a habit of getting their casts to waive salaries even though Equity loudly objects. But "Shoot the Works" is a different sort of thing in that no shoestringer will profit by his cast's sacrifice. Loose, amiable, and informal, it is much like the old "Garrick Gaities" or "Grand Street Follies." At the opening Broun told the critics that he wanted constructive criticism. They should start, he said, by saying the show was swell and build up from there. Most of them did their best by Heywood by reporting that the revue had some swell numbers.

A Radio Skit.

There is, for instance, a rapid skit in which Jack Hazard, veteran among comedians, played the rôle of a radio announcer gone mad from having to say the same old things in the same old way every night. To bring him to sanity his daughter arranges a fake broadcast in which the old gentleman may work off all his suppressed language. The old gentleman curses roundly, warns the unseen audience that the next number will be terrible, and confides that Uncle Ned, who tells bedtime stories, is really a bit of a lecher. Hazard played the part magnificently the opening night, though he felt not at all well. Next morning his doctor told him he had chicken pox—caught it from the Hazard children—and the actor relapsed sadly into a state of quarantine.

Just as the fake microphone provided an outlet for an announcer gone mad, so, apparently, did "Shoot the Works" provide an uninhabited medium for lyric writers. "I'm back in circulation again," warbles a torch singer whose romance has busted; "I want to chisel in on your heart. I want to muscle in on your love," sings a gangster swain to his moll; "I'm just a doorstep baby" is the refrain of another piece, and a fourth gets melodic significance out of the phrase, "Pie in the sky."

Producers Attend.

Some of the sketches may have proved comforting to Florenz Ziegfeld and the other commercial revue producers who attended the première. In the show business for a living, they came to see what a philanthropic movement could turn up. Broun, Johnson, Dorothy Parker—all excellent writers—have been pretty much ignored by a commercial stage that sticks to the same old George Kaufmans and Howard Dietzes and Gene Bucks. Now, with a fellow writer and former dramatic critic as the big boss, they might show the old money grubbers a thing or two.

Broun chose for his own offering a sketch entitled "Death Says It Isn't So." He admitted to the audience that it was a bit serious—but he liked it, he said, and the audience had better not think it funny. A dying man is visited by Death, Death being a genial looking Irishman in brown coat and white trousers who fingers a pack of cards instead of a scythe. The dying man is amazed that he isn't afraid, and when Death leans over to whisper a funny story the invalid goes into a paroxysm of laughter. The nurse thinks it's the death rattle, but Death says it isn't so. We all go out laughing at that same gag.

Ineffectual on the Stage.

A comforting notion, without doubt; and, as Broun set it down on paper, a beautifully told one. But it wouldn't act.

So it was with a Dorothy Parker sketch—and she, like Broun, has often criticized the drama in the public prints. Her sketch, in which a young man with a hangover learns from a girl all the horrible things he has done the night before, must have been perfect light reading in the Parker vein, but as material for actors it was something less than perfect.

At a modest $3 top price "Shoot the Works" may find its place in the summer playgoer's schedule. And as long as it does it will provide a clearing house for actors. An eccentric dancer, one Al Norman, joined the cast at the last minute, too late to have his name on the program. In his first Broadway appearance he stopped the show. Earl Carroll was in a subsequent audience, and before the week was over Norman had been engaged to appear in Carroll's "Vanities."

Stock Companies Thrive.

Despite a depression which has cut the list of Broadway offerings to twelve, the summer stock companies have been thriving as well as or better than in former years. For a fraction of their New York wages actors and actresses of first standing are content to spend their vacations in rural spots from Skowhegan to Southampton. Not a few of the stock companies content themselves with offering tried and true hits, while others, more adventurous, try out new plays.

One of them, in Westport, Conn., has been organized with more than a hot weather existence in view. Called the Country Playhouse, the theater has deftly been made from an old barn in an apple orchard. Its sponsor is Lawrence Langner, member of the board of directors of the Theater guild, and its company includes Rollo Peters, Romney Brent, and Dorothy Gish.

Langner, a patent attorney, has found that the Theater guild does not provide enough of an outlet for his energies. An enthusiast on the topic of repertory, he has seen the guild's plans for a repertory season crumble year after year. The Lunts are supposed to act in "Elizabeth, the Queen" and "Much Ado About Nothing" on alternate weeks, but "Much Ado" flops as a production. So, in Westport, Langner has organized his own repertory company, and when the new season opens he will bring it to Broadway independent of the guild.

A Varied Repertoire.

Catholic indeed is his list of six plays. There is a revival in a better-than—"After Dark" manner of Dion Boucicault's "The Streets of New York"; there's "The Comic Artist," by the Pulitzer prize winning Susan Glaspell; there go Shakespeare's "As You Like It"; a comedy by Langner himself, and another comedy by William Cotton, magazine writer.

The "Streets of New York" revival is done with fine gravity, and to see Miss Gish go into a Victorian swoon or to see the personable Brent as a drunken young schemer is to become enthusiastic over the Langner plan. If the very old Shakespeare, the pretty old Boucicault, and the new Glaspell can all be done within the space of a week, this new repertory theater should hold the Broadway interest.

Late this month Earl Carroll will open his new home for extravaganza, a 3,000 seat hippodrome where, by charging a mere $3 or less a seat for ten performances a week, Carroll hopes to afford productions that will knock somebody's eye out. Not depending upon press releases, but having been taken on a tour of inspection by Maestro Carroll himself, I am able to report that the new theater has dazzling possibilities. Carroll has thought of a couple of stunts that the movie cathedrals have failed to discover.

Public Address System.

There are, for instance, loud speakers concealed in every corner of the theater—in the rest rooms, in the lobbies, and in the dressing rooms. When the stage manager wants Will Mahoney on stage he simply plugs in the Mahoney dressing room and barks through the loud speaker. When intermission comes and is about gone the public address system will be turned on, and the awed customers will hear this polite warning: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is the stage manager speaking. The performance is about to begin."

Just behind the orchestra pit and in view of the audience is a black panel from which a formally attired "light conductor"—head electrician to Mr. Carroll's competitors—will manipulate the buttons that light the show. Everything is at his fingertips. A red tipped button slides up or down a groove and red lights glow or grow dim. A green tipped button controls green lights, another amber, another white. Each groove has numbers alongside of it, so that the lighting of any one set will have a code number—6291 meaning 6 on the red, 2 on the blue, and so on.

Thoughtful of the Beauties.

Backstage Carroll has been most thoughtful of his beauties. Each girl will have her own modernistic dressing table. There will be a refrigerator in which they may keep their Johns' orchids. There will be telephones so that John may talk to his girl from the stage door. The elevator is extra high, so that girls may get aboard without crushing their headdresses. A Carroll beauty without a headdress doesn't exist.

Perhaps the most quixotic detail of the whole place is a card room for stage hands. Stage hands, says Carroll, are good fellows even if they do keep a poker game going all during a performance. So why not give them a clubroom? The room he has provided is large, with a real fireplace in one corner. Unhappily, it is below stage and has no real windows. So the thoughtful Carroll is building a false window. During matinees it will glow with artificial sunlight, and in the evening it will be illuminated with synthetic moonlight.

BESSIE LOVE.

THE Palace theater is giving followers of the films a chance to see Miss Love "in person" this week. She appears in a one act sketch upon the vaudeville program which began performances last night.

Actress Speaks Her Mind

KATHARINE CORNELL, now in her first year under her own management [and with the highly successful "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as the result], has answered a questionnaire about theatrical conditions on "the road" by stating that they are the fault of New York's theater overlords. She says:

"I believe that the reason theatrical conditions on the road are not what we would like them to be is due to the fact that the public has been cheated by managers for so long that it has become impatient and disinterested. By this I mean that the poorest and sketchiest presentations have been untruthfully advertised as original New York productions; even some stars have failed their public by allowing their performances to fall below the New York standard.

"Until we restore playgoers' faith by giving them good plays, well done, it is natural that their interest in the theater is lukewarm. I hope I have made it clear that, in my opinion, it is the managers themselves who are to blame for the present conditions outside of New York."

In Vaudeville

HERE are notations on the acts that comprise the vaudeville program at the Palace theater for the current week:

BESSIE LOVE—The cinema star "in person." Originally placed in the movies by John Emerson, she was developed into stardom by D. W. Griffith. Her personation of a Duncan sister in the first musical talking picture, "Broadway Melody," brought her into vogue. In Hollywood after working hours she shares honors with Lupe Velez as an informal entertainer. She sings, plays a "uke"—and owns half a dozen cups which declare her to be the champion Charleston stepper of Hollywood's ballrooms.

HON. M. WU AND HIS CHINESE COLLEGIANS — They combine the skill of the oriental as an entertainer with American jazz ideas in dance and song. A company of half a dozen young men and girls in a specially produced "unit." Incidentally most of the collegians come honorably by the title.

HOWARD, FINE AND HOWARD—They were originally "stooges" with Ted Healy and have graduated into an act of their own. With them are Jack Walsh and Ruthie Goodwin.

BILLY FARRELL AND DAD—Dancers and comedians who are really father and son.

THE FOUR KADEX—A European importation with an aerial apparatus on which they perform hazardous tricks.

Chicago Girl Ascribes Film Entry to Luck

But Personality Makes Frances Dee Favorite.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Three summers ago Frances Dee was a want-ad taker for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Two years ago she went from her home in Chicago to spend a vacation in Los Angeles.

And now this 21 year old girl, whose big blue-gray eyes sparkle with ambition and humor, daring, and willingness for hard work, suddenly has become one of the favored younger darlings of the movies, after a sequence of events which never would have happened if she had known in advance that the things she experienced can happen to only one movie aspirant in 10,000.

Miss Dee is one of the few young film favorites who never dyed her hair to get a part. She still wears it the natural chestnut brown of her college days at the University of Chicago. She did not change her own name to a film name. She did not go in for "movie society," but lives comfortably at a home made for her in Hollywood by her mother, Mrs. F. M. Dee of Chicago, and an older married sister, Margaret. She did not pose in lingerie and kimono photographs to win herself publicity in cheaper magazines.

Rejects Starvation Diet.

She eats what and when she feels like it, figuring it better to remain a normal healthy American girl than to starve herself under 110 pounds, as most of the younger actresses do in furtherance of film aspirations. Miss Dee weighs 115. She has not had any "engagement" announced to this, that, or the other actor for the double reason that she does not believe in this overused and unintelligent Hollywood means of obtaining newspaper mention, and because she has so conducted herself that none of her Hollywood "friends" have felt it necessary to pass the word around that "Frances Dee" is secretly engaged to so and so.

After coming to Los Angeles for a visit in the summer of 1929, seeing the sights and taking the recommended trips about the countryside, Frances read some movie studio publicity to the effect that University of Southern California girls and Los Angeles high school girls were being recruited at $10 a day to act as part of the college atmosphere in "Words and Music," a Fox film, supposed to have a sorority girl sequence.

As a member of the Sigma club and sophomore class at the University of Chicago, Frances went over to the Fox movie lot "just for fun."

One Chance in 10,000.

"What happened, I know now, was pure luck—one chance in 10,000," says Frances. "I knew so little of what was going on that I stood in the wrong line at the casting office, and by mistake was handed one of the slips given to extra girls who had been summoned to work.

"Finally, I had to explain. Jack Phillips of the casting office scowlingly asked what I was doing there. I said: 'I'm a college girl and I want to get into your college girl picture.' It was so unusual and I suppose it sounded so fresh that he and another man laughed. They sent me to the assistant director in charge of details on the picture. The truth is there was not one college girl or high school girl there, and the chance that sent me in with extras caused me to be given a bit to do—chatting over the sorority house telephone.

"Then I was ruined for returning to school. I wanted to stay in pictures. I wrote to my father and received his permission to remain out here a year."

But films did not take as kindly to her as brown haired Frances had eagerly expected after the first opening.

"It was after a couple of bad tests and nine months of unimportant occasional extra work that I said to myself: 'Well, I got in at Fox's, perhaps I can get in somewhere else the same way.' So I boldly went over to Paramount."

* *

Cinema Progress.

Working without pay every night from 8 to 12 to improve herself in dramatics at the Pasadena Community playhouse helped Miss Dee chisel a bit as a bridesmaid in "Fu Manchu," a Paramount production. Next she was one of ten girls taken in three weeks' location with the "Follow Through" troupe.

She then played a rôle, again without any pay, at the Hollywood Writers' club, but in films continued to get nothing but bits. Then some higher up at Paramount, seeking a fresh face for Maurice Chevalier's "Playboy of Paris," decided to give Miss Dee a chance. The chance stamped her as a leading actress prospect. Her mother and sister came to Hollywood and made a home for her with them. Parts in "Along Came Youth," with Buddy Rogers; "June Moon," with Jack Oakie; "Caught" [not released], with Richard Arlen, and "The American Tragedy" [not released] elevated her to a five year contract and secure place among the younger actresses.

Miss Dee's father was an army captain in ordnance, later going to utility corporations in Chicago until called to Indianapolis with a power corporation. Father Dee is now reconciled to a movie actress in the family despite hearty original doubts about it.

More Plays by Abie's Creator; Theater Gossip

ANN NICHOLS of "Abie's Irish Rose" fame, who deserted New York for Hollywood two years ago, will return and open producing offices on Broadway early in September. She proposes to present three new plays, all by herself or written in association with other authors, during the forthcoming season.

◆

George White announces that the cast for the forthcoming edition of "Scandals," the eleventh of the series, has been completed with the addition of Joan Abbott, Fred Manatt and Ross MacLean. Others already chosen are Rudy Vallee, Willie and Eugene Howard, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, Barbara Blair, Mavine and Virginia Loomis, the Gale Quadruplets, and Dorothy and Harry Dixon. "Scandals" will open in Atlantic City on Aug. 10. Joseph Urban has designed the settings.

◆

"The Man Who Pays the Piper," a play written by G. B. Stern, English novelist and playwright, has been purchased for production in the fall by Horace Liveright. The author, who was represented on the American stage two seasons ago by "The Matriarch," will come to New York for the première. Mr. Liveright's first production of the season, a play by Edwin Justus Mayer, is now known as "Things as They Are." Its previous tentative titles were "The Last Mask" and "In Statu Quo."

◆

Alexander McKaig has bought for production for next season "Achilles Had a Heel," by Martin Flavin. It will be directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Mr. Flavin is author of "The Criminal Code" and "Children of the Moon." Mr. Mamoulian has directed "Porgy," "R. U. R." and "A Farewell to Arms."

◆

Henry A. Rosendale has placed in rehearsal a farce called "The Widow Is a Virgin," which he wrote. The cast will be headed by Sam Ash and Enid Markey. Mr. Rosendale expects to open the production in New York in about three weeks. He was co-author of "Lady in Pawn," staged in Chicago last winter.

◆

"Manhattan Nocturne," which was tried out last week in Asbury Park, N. J., by William A. Brady, with his daughter, Alice Brady, as star, has been withdrawn for revision. Miss Brady is scheduled to begin a two weeks' stock engagement in Montreal on Aug. 3 in "A Most Immoral Lady," which she acted in New York in 1928.

◆

To date William A. Brady has not found a play suitable to serve as a vehicle for his wife, Grace George, who recently relinquished her option on John Halloran's "En Famille." If he does not get a new play for her by Oct. 1 Miss George will go on tour again in "The First Mrs. Fraser," visiting the south and west.

◆

Jane Seymour has been engaged for the rôle played by Helen Flint in the New York company of "The House Beautiful," which will begin a tour in Philadelphia in September. Mary Philips and James Bell will continue in the cast.

◆

"The Passionate Pilgrim" will be the title of the musical play by Otto Harbach and Jerome Kern which Max Gordon will produce in the fall. Dorothy Debenham, an English actress, has been engaged for the show, which will go in rehearsal early in September.

◆

Miss Billie Burke began an engagement at the Curran theater, San Francisco, last Monday night in "The Vinegar Tree." She is playing the rôle acted in New York by Mary Boland.

Victor Fleming	30
Lionel Barrymore	29
Ernest B. Schoedsack	26
Tod Browning	25

COMPLETE LIST of pictures directed by the "Ten Best" follows:

Lewis Milestone—"All Quiet on the Western Front," "Front Page."

Wesley Ruggles—"The Sea Bat" "Cimarron."

George Hill—"The Big House," "Min and Bill."

Josef von Sternberg—"The Blue Angel," "Morocco."

D. W. Griffith—"Abraham Lincoln."

Robert Z. Leonard—"The Divorcee," "In Gay Madrid," "Let Us Be Gay," "Bachelor Father," "It's A Wise Child."

Charles Chaplin—"City Lights."

Howard Hawks—"The Criminal Code," "The Dawn Patrol."

Howard Hughes—"Hell's Angels."

COMMENTS Film Daily—Milestone's achievement is particularly notable in that the two productions he directed were vastly different in origin and design, in addition to being produced on different lots. "All Quiet," was adapted from the war novel by Erich Maria Remarque, while "The Front Page" came from the stage hit of the same name.

"For the first time in the six years that the Film Daily has been conducting the annual vote on directors, Ernst Lubitsch failed to be included among the Ten Best. This is ascribed to the fact that in the year covered by the present vote Lubitsch directed only one production, 'Monte Carlo.' On this picture he received enough mentions to make fourth place in the honor roll.

"Lubitsch, however, still leads as a Ten Best winner, since he is the only director with five citations. Herbert Brenon and King Vidor made the grade four times each, while Charles Chaplin and Clarence Brown have been among the topliners three times in the six years. Those who have won out twice include James Cruze, Cecil B. de Mille, D. W. Griffith, Rex Ingram, Frank Lloyd, the late F. W. Murnau, Malcolm St. Clair, Josef von Sternberg and Raoul Walsh." . . .

RICHARD CROMWELL, the young chap who made such a hit in "Tol'able David," has been signed for a leading male rôle in "Then Hell Broke Loose" . . . ANNA Q. NILSSON who has been off the screen for three years due to injuries received making a picture, is expected home from Sweden next week . . . JAMES CAGNEY, the tough gangster of "The Public Enemy," devotes six hours a day to practicing on the piano . . .

See you tomorrow!

LOOKING FOR PLAYS

ALICE BRADY.

SHE is the daughter of a veteran theatrical manager—William A. Brady—and the instinct to act is in her blood. Miss Brady doesn't come to Chicago often but her name is frequently seen in the electric lights along Broadway. Last spring she made a vivid impression in "Brass Ankle." Now she is hunting for new plays, with the idea of taking a New York theater for the season.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Favors Credit Division.

Dear Miss Tinée: Could you please tell me why Marie Dressler gets all the credit for every picture she is in with POLLY MORAN? In "Reducing," I thought POLLY MORAN was wonderful, but who got all the credit and praise? No one but Marie Dressler. The same thing happened in "Politics." Something should be done about this at once.

Thanking you,
GEORGE WISSING.

Editor's note: What would you suggest?

Capable of Self Defense.

Dear Miss Tinée. After reading Miss J. W.'s letter in reference to me in the "Voice of the Fan," I couldn't resist a retort in my own defense to her, and to all those so-called responsible people whose cause she is championing.

In the first place I believe you are conducting a movie column, not an "outdoor life" affair, for poets, he-men from the great wide spaces, etc., of which all these responsible people seem to be a part.

Bruce is, no doubt, all right in his way, but in your column he doesn't seem to be very heavy.

I can't understand what life and love have to do with a movie critic's reviews. So Bruce, take yourself out, write to a different outfit, such as "Advice to the Lovelorn," or "Who's Who Among the Cowboys and Indians." I feel sure you'll go over big.

F. WATTS.

Editor's note: Now that everybody's had their say we'll ring off on this controversy.

* *

Lacks Publicity Manager.

Dear Mae Tinée: In the "Voice of the Fan" Jean Siek asks this question: "Why does the public sigh over Chevalier and his smile when Clark Gable and his dimples are on the horizon?" She says she really wants to know.

Well, I'll tell you why. Chevalier was praised and lauded to the heavens before he ever set foot on United States soil, let alone our "silver screen." He was lucky—he had a good publicity manager, I think.

Clark Gable got nary a word of publicity until he fought to win it. He deserves every kind word he gets. He's made himself LOVED in hard rôles. I'm sure you will agree that it is seldom a gangster-murderer-villian or what have you, is loved and admired as Clark Gable is. That's a trick.

A CLARK GABLE FAN.

Editor's note: Sure it's not a dimple?

Tribute to Leslie Howard.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am writing this in hopes that it may attract your many readers' attention to a rising young actor of unusual ability and poise. I refer to Leslie Howard. Only today I witnessed "Five and Ten," and not so long ago "Never the Twain Shall Meet." I was unfortunate enough to have missed your reviews of both these pictures, but feel certain that you, also, must have praised both excellent performances of the gentleman in question.

I read your section entitled "Voice of the Fan" and hope you will do me the favor of publishing this bit of tribute to the fascinating Leslie Howard. Sincerely, yours.

DOROTHY FOLEY.

Editor's note: With pleasure!

* *

"Perfect Lady of the Screen."

Dear Mae Tinée: I have just witnessed the most magnificent performance I have ever seen. It's quite remarkable, since I have seen many great pictures.

How you can say that Norma Shearer played a close second to Lionel Barrymore in "A Free Soul" is more than I can see. She never did and never will take a back seat. Her performance was perfect. She can register sadness and joy better than any other actress. She's the finest actress on the screen of the present or the past.

Let the fans have their Garbo, Crawford, and Bow and their many copies, but I'll stick to the "present ladies of the screen," Norma Shearer for me! Do you blame me?

W. A.

Editor's note: Blame you? Never. I just envy Norma!

* *

Inspired to Rhythm.

Dear Mae Tinée: [Re: that poem of several Sundays ago].

Floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by all truly élite cats.
It's simply amazing you didn't know!
But if you must see them, here's where to go!
Down darkest alleys on moonless nights,
Listening for sounds, and looking for sights,
Such as you've never, never seen
In dreams, or in life, or upon the screen.
Walk, O! so lightly! Beware of a sneeze!
Listen for solos in minor keys!
Follow the echo of padded feet
Under the fence and across the street
Into the arc lamps yellow glare.
O, you'll be astonished when you get there!
Feline aristocrats garbed in the mode
Sponsored by Paquin [and custom sewed].
Sombreros, tilted at dangerous angles,
Fashioned of mouse skin and dripping with spangles.
Well, if you're skeptical, just go and see;
Then you will have to agree with me
That floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by the truly élite cats.
In the name o' nonsense!

DOROTHY.

Editor's Note: Your verse though catty is very natty.

Question for Producers.

Dear Mae Tinée: I don't want to write a long letter for I know you have so many to look over, but I would like to ask you one question.

In a revived picture why don't they use the same star in the talkie that they did in the silent?

For instance, have Richard Dix star again in "The Vanishing American." Or Norma Talmadge in "Smiling Through." I know I would love to see them and there are probably a lot more people who would, too.

Thanks a lot for your valuable time. Yours truly,

CRESIE.

Editor's note: I like the idea! Why don't you write the producers about it?

* *

A Movie Fan's Views.

Dear Mae: I have seen two pictures of Edward G. Robinson, and I want to say that I think he is great. "Little Caesar" and "Smart Money" convinced me.

I wish some one would take Lon Chaney's place. Lon was a great actor. He would risk his life just to make a picture. Would any one else? No! That's why he was my favorite.

Such stars as Emil Jannings, John Barrymore, and others couldn't do such things as Mr. Chaney did in his pictures. Here's for a double for [Genius Man of a Thousand Faces] Chaney. Truly yours,

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's note: I wonder how many of us love our work well enough to risk our lives for it?

* *

Probable Explanation.

Dear Miss Tinée: It MAY have been the heat. Sincerely yours,

BILL FRY.

Editor's note: Well, do write again when you feel warm enough.

* *

Question Remains Unanswered.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you kindly publish the following letter:

Why do we insist upon discouraging real art in the movies, by registering preference for movie king and queen at the box office, and in our fan letters for such "acting" as is regularly being given us by merely a couple of good looking youngsters only portraying their own most natural inclinations, by making love to each other, and who are incapable of real acting, or of stepping out of their own individuality and into that of another character?

Instead, why do we not learn to recognize as the best actor or actress the artist who is best able to portray the greatest number of most contrasting characters, and not the mere performer who is only able to be himself, which we all can do.

Very truly yours,
C. A. CARLTON.

Editor's note: I don't know why.

* *

Surprise for Some One.

Dear Miss Tinee: For want of having nothing better to ocupy my time in the p. m. I find the picture houses restful and cool, and see all the stars. Then we are offered usually a very good variety of interesting subjects from all over the world, but I don't think the public appreciates this enough.

The low grade of books written today has a lot to do with the type of pictures produced. Producers should not film pictures where "Adults only" is advertised, but, as Mr. Bliss says, it is hard to satisfy the public when movies are turned out at the rate of ten pictures a week.

These are some of my ideas. I don't expect to have them published.

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's Note: To him who expecteth not, happeneth!

BEST JOKES

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you want to see it in print send it to Best Jokes, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Described by Example.

'Peter Ibbetson' Scheduled for RaviniaMonday

Bori, Johnson Will Sing Leading Roles.

By Edward Moore.

Tre Re," it was—they set up the "Peter Ibbetson" scenery on the stage and Miss Bori, Mr. Johnson, the other members of the cast, the conductor, and the stage force experimented with tricky, intricate lighting cues until 4 o'clock in the morning. This is just a detail in what it means to stage an opera.

The work has had quite a history It was a novel of fantasy by George du Maurier in 1891. It was regarded with desire and apprehension by people of the stage for nearly a quarter century—desire for its plot, apprehension of the risks of the dream scenes. In 1915 it was dramatized by John Raphael. Then Constance Collier rewrote the dramatization and played the rôle of the Duchess of Towers with John and Lionel Barrymore. Incidentally, it was Maurice Barrymore, their father, who had been anxious to have it in play form years before.

Success of the Year.

Then Deems Taylor grew interested in the play as a subject for opera, and is credited on the fly-leaf with having been the co-author with Miss Collier in converting the play into a libretto. Having done that, he wrote the music.

The work was brought out at the New York Metropolitan on Saturday, Feb. 7, of this year, and it apparently became the leading popular success of the year as far as operas are concerned. It even caused a renewal of interest in the play. Miss Collier staged its revival, and Jessie Royce Landis of Evanston acted the Duchess of Towers rôle. There is talk even now of Miss Collier taking the play on tour this coming season.

Mr. Tayor is coming out to Ravinia to see the first performance given his work outside of New York. When his other opera, "The King's Henchman," was put on at the Metropolitan a few years ago, Mr. Johnson, who sang the leading rôle in it as well as in "Peter Ibbetson," received this among his other notes of congratulation: "Dear God, Thank You for thinking up Eddie Johnson when You were making tenors.

Doubling Necessary.

The opera takes a long cast. Mr. Johnson and Miss Bori lead the list, as just said. Alfredo Gandolfi will appear as Col. Ibbetson, Florence Macbeth as Mrs. Deane, Ina Bourskaya as Mrs. Glyn, and Louis D'Angelo as the prison chaplain. There are a dozen or more other rôles, necessitating quite a bit of doubling. Margery Maxwell and George Cehanovsky, for instance, have each of their names opposite three different characters, though luckily no two of them appear on the stage at the same time.

The conductor is to be Wilfrid Pelletier, a member of the Ravinia and Metropolitan conducting staffs for a number of seasons past. He was selected in this case at Mr. Taylor's personal request.

This opera, by the way, is Ravinia's gesture toward the English language.

In a World Apart.

While on the subject of Ravinia, this seems a fitting place to include some impressions written by a visitor. The visitor is R. L. Hickman, M.D., of Clinton, Okla.:

"There is an atmosphere of dignity and quiet beauty in this group of low, unpretentious buildings among tall trees. God made the trees but surely Ravinia park is the work of an artist. Perhaps one feels this more keenly coming from the city, where life swarms on the lake shore in pagan splendor of bathing suits and beach pajamas. That has a beauty too of its own—the picture of a great middle class city enjoying itself in summer, but here at Ravinia is something else. Here are people come to see and to listen, quietly and intently.

"The opera is 'Faust' and the first act begins before dark. It all seems far away and perhaps a little silly at first. One wonders if, after all, opera is not an anachronism in this modern age. Then complete darkness shuts off the outside world. We are suddenly taken into the world of Faust, Mephisto, and Marguerite. The magic has worked again—opera will never die.

"The beautiful garden scene is the high spot of the opera. It is then that we enter entirely the world of make-believe. The spell endures from then on, even through the long train ride back to the city.

"It seems a marvelous idea to me — Ravinia park — beautifully carried out and managed. I don't know how it happened. Whether it is run by subscription or for the purpose of making money. It doesn't matter—so long as it is there. One only hopes that there will be no reason to discontinue it."

In Russian Concert.

A fairly active week will mark the Ravinia activities in addition to "Peter Ibbetson." There will be a Russian concert this afternoon. Eric DeLamarter and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will present Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" Symphony, Stravinsky's "The Fire Bird," and Joseph Vito, harpist, will play solos by himself and Thomas. The evening performance will be "Fra Diavolo," though the Russian implications of that attractive operetta are not at present entirely clear. Still, it is a first performance of the season. Florence Macbeth, Ina Bourskaya, Mario Chamlee, Vittorio Trevisan, and Virgilio Lazzari will sing the leading parts, and Gennaro Papi will conduct.

There are other new performances on the week's list. "Il Trovatore" is up for Tuesday night with Elisabeth Rethberg, Julia Claussen, Giovanni Martinelli, and Giuseppe Danise in the cast. The next night "Romeo and Juliet" will be heard for the first time this season from the throats of Yvonne Gall and Edward Johnson in the name parts, and Margery Maxwell, Desiré Defrere, Alfredo Gandolfi, and Leon Rothier in others.

Choristers at Loyola.

The Mundy Choristers, an organization of eighty Negro mixed voices, will take the stand in Loyola university stadium this evening under the direction of James A. Mundy, to assist Adolphe Dumont and the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra in the weekly Sunday night concert. Two groups of spirituals will be sung as well as the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "The Messiah," all numbers in which the Mundy Choristers will participate in the Chicagoland Musical Festival Aug. 22 at Soldiers' field. There is also word of the presentation by chorus and orchestra of Loyola university's new anthem composed by Walter Dellers, and first heard in the June commencement exercises.

Mr. Dumont and the orchestra are presenting an attractive summer program which includes Dvorak's "New World" Symphony, the prelude to Act III. of "Lohengrin," Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" Overture, Coleridge-Taylor's "The Bamboula," Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slave."

Ukrainian National Dances.

The fine art of the dance, which has been increasing in popularity to a marked extent in recent years, is apparently due to go on bigger and better during the season to come. Even at this early date there are announcements of events to come.

One refers to Vasile Avramenko, Ukrainian ballet master, who is now in Chicago preparing 500 dancers for an evening of Ukrainian national dances. The place will be the Civic Opera house and the time the end of October, the exact date not yet announced. Mr. Avramenko has been living in New York, and they tell of a similar festival at the Metropolitan Opera house last April, with special emphasis upon the dashing ardor of the dances, the kaleidoscopic colors of the costumes, and the enthusiasm of the audience.

Another dancing newcomer will be Carola Goya, whose Chicago arrival is also the rather indefinite some time in October. She is Spanish, and dances in the four manners of classical, flamenca, gitana, and modern. Last season she gave eighteen recitals in New York. La Libertad of Madrid vouches for her in emphatic terms, saying that her dances are not only of extraordinary beauty, color, and rhythm, but in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance.

Indiana State Contest.

A state-wide contest of male quartets is to feature the Indiana state fair at Indianapolis, Sept. 5 to 12. Contestants are now organizing in the townships, with county elimination contests to follow and the finals at the fair. Each county will be permitted to send two quartets, one whose members are under 26 years old, the other over that age. The contest is being conducted by the Indiana farm bureau through the social and educational department, and the songs to be used have been selected by the bureau and the Indiana Federation of Music Clubs. All professional singers are barred, and only members of rural communities are eligible. The first prize winning quartet in each class will receive a cash award of $100, second place $80, and third place $70. Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of Otterbein will have charge of the contest.

Speaking of opera companies and the synonymous red ink figures, the Opéra-Comique of Paris adds an item to the sad, sweet story. George Ricou recently resigned as director in protest against the insufficient subsidy granted by the government. Figures that have been made public indicate that in France, too, they have their operatic troubles.

The Opéra-Comique receives an annual subsidy of 1,800,000 francs, and its total receipts run between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 francs. On the other side of the ledger it has to pay 2,000,000 francs, or more than its subsidy, about 9,300,000 francs in salaries, 2,250,000 to the orchestra, and 1,240,000 to the choristers. With regard to the quality of the last, there has been much publicly expressed dissatisfaction. In addition, the organization is obliged to stage twelve new works yearly, and much time and money go into these.

Scores Triumph at Bayreuth.

There is word from Bayreuth that Toscanini scored a reasonable success with his conducting of "Tannhaeuser," and an undebatable one with "Parsifal" immediately afterwards.

Slovak day will be celebrated at Riverview park today beginning at 10 o'clock this morning. The program will be under the auspices of the United Slovak societies and for the benefit of the Slovak-American Charitable association. National songs and national dances will be performed by costumed organizations. The dances have been arranged by the Slovak Artists' club, and the group will number eighty. A featured number will be the appearance of the Slovak Shepherds, who play on an instrument resembling a flute under the direction of Martin Pavella.

PETER IBBETSON

EDWARD JOHNSON.

THE name at the bottom of the picture is his own, the one at the top is the character in the like named opera that he will sing at Ravinia tomorrw and Saturday nights. The opera, by Deems Taylor, was produced by the Metropolitan Opera company last February, and at once became the operatic hit of the season. This will be its first performance outside of the Metropolitan. It is in English. Mr. Johnson's associates will be Lucrezia Bori as Mary, Duchess of Towers, and Alfredo Gandolfi as Col. Ibbetson.

FOR "IMPROPER DUCHESS"

IRENE BORDONI.

THE Dramatic League of Chicago has announced the engagement of Miss Bordoni for the leading role in "The Improper Duchess," a play that it will soon import from London. Its heroine is a flirtatious French girl, and Irene is a specialist in such characters. She is the favorite Anglo-French actress of the American stage.

Drama of Insect Life Listed in New Recordings

"Spider's Feast" Is Ably Interpreted.

By Edward Moore.

COLUMBIA gives a view of some rather notable modern music this month. It is a four side recording of the ballet pantomime, "Le Festin de l'Araignée" [The Spider's Feast], by the French composer, Roussel. Rather curiously, in the light of so much talk from the best minds of music about the value of absolute music, some of the best compositions of the present era are coming from composers who have something as definite as the stage presentation in mind.

For the benefit of those who did not hear Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra present this work about five years ago, the piece works out as a drama of insect life quite in accordance with its title. The first section is the prelude and entrance of the ant; the second is the dance and death of the butterfly; the third deals with the birth and dance of the dayfly; and the last with the death and burial of the dayfly. Apparently the ant and the spider are the only ones who come out well in this particular tragedy.

Columbia's numbers are 67952-D and 67953-D. The work is played by the Orchestre des Concerts Straram of Paris and conducted by Walther Straram himself. The recording is rather good and performance excellent. It is rather hard to describe accurately a modern piece of music, or any other piece of music for that matter, but this one is brisk and bright, and apparently a bit affected by Stravinsky in the period when he wrote "Petrouchka."

There is a pair of Wagner songs that seem to be as inevitably linked together as the Italian operas, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." They are "Traeume" and "Schmerzen." Brunswick in the Hall of Fame-International, No. 90178, presents them from the throat of a noted German soprano, Elisabeth Ohms. Both have orchestral accompaniment, but Julius Pruewer conducts "Traeume" and Manfred Gurlitit "Schmerzen." Excellent results both vocally and instrumentally should be set down for both.

* *

An Amusing Experiment.

Brunswick in No. 20100 is stepping out from standardized music into an interesting and amusing experiment with popular music. The two sides record what are called paraphrases by Victor Young of "I Surrender, Dear," and "Star Dust." Even in the memory of what Paul Whiteman and Ferdie Grofé have occasionally done with popular music, they are rather eye opening.

Here are two tunes whose pretty, graceful turn of phrase and naive construction classify them plainly as belonging to the popular classification, but Mr. Young, who is likewise both conductor and soloist in their performance—the Boswell sisters lend other vocal aid—builds them up as earnestly as though he were writing a symphony. Everything is there, symphonic changes of key and mood, unexpected dissonances, skilled treatment of instrumental color, and if his earnestness occasionally sounds as though it were of the tongue in cheek variety, the work is none the worse for it. There are some of us who believe that American popular music is the best popular music in the world, and this record would seem to prove that it is good enough to be capable of considerably more elaborate treatment than it is in the habit of getting. The instrumental body is the Brunswick Concert orchestra, a first class organization.

A mild protest in this column the other day to the effect that only the second half of Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini" had been received from Victor brought prompt correction of the error by the receipt of the missing disk. Wherefore comment is cheerfully reopened for the statement that the first half is even better in performance and recording than the second indicated. The piece is on the Red Seal list, Nos. 11091 and 11092, played by the London Symphony orchestra under the direction of Albert Coates, and those who have followed Mr. Coates' performances will realize more completely than this column can say how expert he is in the perception and projection of dramatic values in music.

Guild Plans

THE Theater Guild announces that "He" will open its New York season; that "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in its leading rôles, will probably be seen in several of the subscription cities before it appears in New York; and that the O'Neill trilogy, "Mourning Becomes Electra," should open about Oct. 26.

Theater Rents Reduced.

A Broadway theater, the Central, was recently rented for $1,000 a week. "The lowest known weekly rental for any Broadway house to date," says Variety, "has been $3,000 a week." Five years ago it was almost impossible to get any Broadway theater without a minimum guarantee of $4,500 on a basis of sharing the gross intake, so that the theater-owner's share might come to $6,000 or even more.—Theater Guild Magazine.

How to Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things

Fat Melts Away

Science has made important discoveries in fat reduction. The average fat person can now rip off fat a pound a day—four to seven pounds every week!—on a full stomach, with never a hungry moment. Thus it is foolish now to stay fat.

This is what you do: Take a teaspoonful ordinary Jad Salts in a glass of water a half hour before breakfast every morning. This reduces moisture-weight instantly. Also cleanses the system of the waste matter and excess toxins that most fat people have, and banishes puffiness and bloat.

Then do this about eating. FILL YOUR STOMACH—eat your fill—of lean meats, vegetables like spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, tomatoes, etc., and lots of salads. Eat a lot. Eat all you can hold. Don't go hungry a minute! Cut down on fats, sweets and desserts. Eat any fruit for dessert.

That's all you do. Fat seems to melt away. The coarse lines of overweight give way to the refined ones of slenderness. You lose as much as a pound a day. You feel better than for years. For in this treatment you achieve two important results. The Jad Salts clear your system of toxins. *The diet takes off fat with food that turns into energy instead of weight.

If you're tired of being embarrassed by fat, try this way. You'll be glad that you did. You can get Jad Salts at any drug store.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent — not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

Born and Bred in Chicago

[illegible] RANDOLPH has succeeded [illegible] Huff in the character of [illegible] La Marr in "Stepping Sisters" now at the Blackstone [illegible]. Illness forced Miss Huff to relinquish her part. She has gone to a [illegible] sanitarium for treatment and rest.

Miss Randolph is well known to Chicagoans who frequent the theater. She made her debut in Chicago when she was carried on the stage at the age of six months. Later her schooling [illegible] when she became a member of the Bush Temple Stock company. [illegible] with Lanore Ulric in "The Bird of Paradise"; with Richard Bennett in "Kick In," and with Zelda [illegible] in "The Nest Egg." Her most [illegible] Chicago appearances in Chicago were in "The Noose" at the Selwyn theater in 1927 and in "If I [illegible] Rich" at the Cort in 1928.

Stage Stars for Vaudeville

The RKO Palace vaudeville programs have been devoting themselves to "in person" headliners from Hollywood, but the stage isn't going to be neglected. Harriet Hoctor, as fine a dancer as the American stage knows today, will arrive Aug. 8. She will bring a dancing troupe, and will probably repeat the "hunt" ballet that was the highlight of Ed Wynn's "Simple Simon" last winter. Edward G. Robinson will follow on Aug. 15. He has been a dependable stage actor for years, suddenly skyrocketing to fame with his cinema gangster impersonations.

After that Basil Rathbone and Catherine Dale Owen will co-star in a brief version of "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." Louise Groody, star singing girl of musical comedy, will follow.

Loses 16 Pounds of Fat---Eats As Usual

Fat Folks—Here's More Proof—One Bottle of Kruschen Salts and Sixteen Pounds Gone—Eats As Usual—Sleeps Better—Costs 85 Cents

The Kruschen Figure of Health and Vivaciousness. How Will You Look On The Beach This Summer

Modern Science now makes it possible for you to easily and what's best, to SAFELY obtain a bewitchingly lithe, free-from-fat figure and gradually enjoy exhilarated health and increase your attractiveness while doing so—

Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—you can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, fatty meats and pastries.

Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. I feel so good in many ways. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and have fun, too. I have told 2 of my friends about Kruschen and they find it as I do."

Unlike other salts, Kruschen doesn't aim to reduce by rushing food through the system—rather it's a superbly blended combination of SIX separate mineral salts which help glands, nerves and body organs to function properly—it drives poisons and harmful acid from the body—Kruschen strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—that's why it's so amazingly successful in cases where everything else has failed!

And just stop to consider how inexpensive Kruschen is—an 85c bottle lasts 4 weeks and offers the same marvelous reducing and health-giving properties which hitherto wealthy people paid thousands of dollars to go to the famous mineral Spas of Europe to obtain. All druggists the world over sell Kruschen and will give your money back if you don't obtain the results you're after.

Revival of Last Season Cinema Hits Welcomed

Old Western Thrillers May Be Next.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The system of "bringing back the big ones," being tried out at the Rialto theater in Times square with considerable success at 25 cents a head, opens a grab box full of possibilities in the picture show world. Over at the Rialto the seats are filled from 11 a. m. until midnight and not all of the audience is composed of bargain hunters.

There are a lot of pictures these days and a lot of people do not get around to more than one feature a week. Consequently when the hits of last season show up at a theater with first run conveniences and third run prices the folks who missed the features when they were first shown are going to drop in.

Garbo, Dietrich, Bancroft, Gary Cooper, and a host of other stars are playing at the Rialto these hot summer days and nights. It is cool inside the theater and some of the old pictures are better than the new ones. The shows are not as long drawn out as at the theaters where the up-to-the-minute films are being shown and, anyhow, there is considerable difference between 25 cents and 65 cents.

Some of Better Westerns.

Now that the movie public has shown its love for last season hits, at least in this town, why not go back into the past and dig up some of the better westerns—epics of those days when men were men and women were chased by the Indians—and show them in a refrigerated playhouse.

The movies are getting softer and softer these days. Even the run of the blood and thunder underworld films are namby pamby tidbits. True, the occasional "Public Enemy" or "Little Caesar" comes along to provide the exception that proves the rule, but for the most part the heroes have lacked the red-blooded vitality of the horse and saddle era of romance.

I believe there are a good many thousand persons throughout our land who would like to forget there are such places as Chicago, New York, Paris, and London. In fact, a lot of those people who would like to forget live in those cities, and yet the talkie makers keep shoving life in the big cities down their throats. Let's have more horses and mustaches and movie heroes who take mustard on their breakfast food instead of sugar.

Roxy's theater went in for something resembling a western picture recently, and it was a big success. It was called "The Holy Terror," and its hero was an up-to-date hombre. He rode horses—at polo—and took to the air on occasions in an airplane. Of course, the hero did not stack up with the heroes of the Bill Hart era, even though he did leap a death-dealing gulch near the Great Divide. The point is the audience liked it and no doubt would like most of the older westerns whether they were made to talk or permitted to remain grim and silent.

Foreign Films Showing.

New York is filled with foreign films this week, but first we will look in on a Hollywood product at the Capitol. "Son of India" with Ramon Novarro is a pleasant enough romance. Taken from an old novel by F. Marion Crawford it tells the romance of an American girl and a young Indian prince. At the end the rich young Indian gives the girl up and harkens to the words of wisdom offered by a beggar prophet. It will do for the summer days.

"Sunny Side Up," with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, is the offering at Roxy's. "The Magnificent Lie," featuring Ruth Chatterton, is the feature at Paramount. "Sunny Side Up," of course, is a revival and a good one. To keep up the past history idea the stage presentation at Roxy's is called "Fifty Million Years Ago," and it is a spectacular affair, the headliner being a dinosaur.

"The Magnificent Lie" was well spoken of by the critics, but this observer has yet to see it. "Night Nurse" is still "telling all" at Warner's Strand.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

NOW is the time to check up on the plans, promises and dreams of theatrical producers for the approaching stage season. A census reveals that 44 firms or men constitute what might be called the "big league" of the drama, and that some others are occasional contributors to Broadway activity. Their announcements for the early months of the new playgoing year contain 200 titles, including established successes that will be sent on tour.

This represents an improvement over last year, when the stage's midsummer statistics did not include more than 150 titles of contemplated productions. It is, indeed, a long step up the ladder toward the abundance of the predepression years, when the [illegible] August schedules included from [illegible] to 300 titles.

All this, of course, refers to theatrical production for the Broadway market, out of which come the shows of proven popularity that finally go wandering on "the road"—a vague term which to the Broadway mind includes all of America outside the borough of Manhattan. In this connection it may be noted that Broadway has at last become "road conscious" and is planning to win back the affections of its lost customers in other cities.

* *

Theater Guild Opinion.

The Theater Guild magazine comments editorially on the subject as follows:

"Officials in the Erlanger office tell us that their bookings for the coming season are more plentiful than in recent years. In the Shubert theaters it would appear that the planned reorganization should prove beneficial in improving booking conditions both in and outside of New York.

"One thing is almost certain—both offices are cognizant of the fact that a standard of quality must be maintained, and both offices have expressed their intention to look to this point. Despite the business depression, plays of merit have drawn excellent patronage during the last year, both in and out of New York. Mr. Ziegfeld's 'Follies' played to two capacity weeks in Pittsburgh late in June, with the thermometer ascending in a city that does not possess those sea breezes which sometimes disguise the temperature in New York, Boston and Chicago, and in New York many excellent plays are defying the heat with success.

"We cannot explain the conservative optimism which prevails throughout the theater at this moment, but it is there, and most of it is founded on a solid basis. The best proof of this is to be found in the definitely announced plans of the leading producers. They seem not to be hedging."

* *

Shubert Catalogue.

The Shuberts lead the "big league" with plans already matured for fourteen productions. They list their entries as follows:

"The Laugh Parade," a musical revue with Ed Wynn as star.

A musical comedy in which George [illegible] will be starred.

Maurice Schwartz and his Yiddish Art Theater company, giving their repertory in English.

"[illegible] Girl," a musical comedy based upon "Up Pops the Devil," with Frances Williams, Nina Olivette, Evangeline Raleigh, and the Ritz brothers in the cast.

"La Chienne," a French drama, adapted by Forrest Wilson.

"Hearts in Repair," an operetta adapted from the German, with [illegible] Smith as star.

"Forbidden," a new play by Elmer Harris, author of "Young Sinners" and "A Modern Virgin."

"Cocktail," an intimate musical comedy adapted from the German; music by Ralph Benatsky.

"The Improper Duchess," a comedy by James Bernard Fagan, highly successful in London, with Irene Bordoni [illegible].

"[illegible] Man's Daughters," by Elmer [illegible].

"Love's Out of Fashion," a comedy adapted from the German of Wilhelm [illegible], with Walter Woolf, Verree Teasdale, Walter Petrie, and Leslie [illegible] in the cast. To be staged early in August.

"Land of Smiles," an operetta with music by Franz Lehar, now popular in London.

"The Venetian," a play by Clifford Bax, successful in London; to be staged in association with Maurice Browne.

"The Good Companions," the dramatization of J. B. Priestley's novel; a notable success in London.

A season of revivals of famous operettas at the Jolson theater, New York, and on tour.

Erlanger Offerings.

The novelties on the Erlanger list at present are eight in number, as follows:

"The Social Register," a play by John Emerson and Anita Loos, with Lenore Ulric as star. The cast will include Elizabeth Taylor, Wilfred [illegible], Betty Garde, Helen Tucker, [illegible] Maxwell Conover, and [illegible].

"[illegible] Horses," a drama by Gilbert [illegible] and Alan Birmingham, to be staged under the direction of [illegible].

"[illegible]," a comedy by William Anthony McGuire, to be offered in association with Charles Dillingham.

"[illegible] Brady," a comedy by James [illegible], also in association with Dillingham.

A new play by Frederick Lonsdale.

Maurice Chevalier in an entertainment in New York and on tour.

[illegible] Mr. Shaw.

The Theater Guild's schedule, in addition to the plays announced earlier in the year, will include George Bernard Shaw's latest work, called "Too True to Be True." At least the Guild is confident that it will be able to get this play, as yet unfinished, during the coming season. Mr. Shaw

USHERING IN THE NEW MONTH

Rich pickings, Mitzi Green and Louise Fazenda seem to be finding in Jackie Searl's mouth, as well as in "Newly Rich," the current attraction at the Oriental. And Jackie is acquiescent, even though he's equiped with a dangerous looking weapon. He and Mitzi, sterling comedians, are the juvenile stars of the comedy.

Joel McCrea and Constance Bennett are expounding "The Common Law" at the State-Lake this week.

Is it "The Magnificent Lie"? Sam Hardy is asking that or a similar question; Ruth Chatterton is at the receiving end of the query, and the film of that title is at the Chicago for the present week.

"Ex-Bad Boy" is the name of the picture at the Palace, but, from the looks of things, Lola Lane might run away with the honors on that score. The others are Spencer Charters, Robert Armstrong and George Brent, and all of them have plenty to do.

Honorable mention: "Quick Millions," "Hell Bound," "The Man in Possession," "The Black Camel," "Der Weg zur Schande."

Best individual performances: Maurice Chevalier, Claudette Colbert, Miriam Hopkins in "The Smiling Lieutenant," Robert Montgomery, Irene Purcell in "The Man in Possession," Warner Oland, Sally Eilers in "The Black Camel," Spencer Tracy and Marguerite Churchill in "Quick Millions," Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Rose Hobart in "Chances," Leo Carrillo in "Hell Bound," Marie Dressler, Polly Moran and Roscoe Ates in "Politics," Barbara Stanwyck and Hardy in "The Miracle Woman," James Cagney in "The Public Enemy," Anna May Wong and Hugo Werner-Kahel in "Der Weg zur Schande," Adolphe Menjou in "The Great Lover," Will Rogers in "Young As You Feel," and Charles Ruggles in "The Girl Habit."

By Mae Tinee.

Th' first of August's here again!
Soon the summer will be gone;
But First Sundays of each month
And "Six Bests" keep on and on.

Good Morning!

Well, here we go, with a hop, skip and a jump, back along the trail we traveled last month.

"THE SMILING LIEUTENANT" was found to be "frothy, amusing, tuneful; a bit naughty and a lot nice . . . directed by Ernest Lubitsch—lush with the inspired touches, the unexpected and beguiling bits of 'business' that proclaim genius at the wheel . . . Maurice Chevalier was never more oo-la-la . . . a bang-up hot weather picture . . ."

"THE VIKING." During the making of this film the producer, Varick Frissell and twenty-five of his associates were killed by an explosion . . . "Records in sound the adventures of men who go a-sealing up around the Labrador ice fields and Newfoundland . . . the coldest looking movie you ever saw . . . authentic, episodic and not long . . ."

* *

"POLITICS." Marie Dressler and Polly Moran at their best. 'Nuff sed.

"THE MIRACLE WOMAN" proved "a thrilling melodrama that sports several staggeringly sensational situations, presented with a shrewd sense of dramatic effect . . . different and electrically exciting . . . excellently produced and played to the nines . . . Barbara Stanwyck gives a pulse-quickening performance . . ."

* *

"THE PUBLIC ENEMY" is "racketeering stripped of all romance and all glamour by the sharp knife of realism . . . the last word and, you feel, a true one, in gangland exposés . . . keen, unsparing study of criminal psychology . . . James Cagney as 'The Public Enemy' is tough, evil, deadly, unfunny and never for one minute lovable or pulse stirring. The complete gangster . . . 'The Public Enemy' is the greatest—because the most honest gangster cinema ever made."

"YOUNG AS YOU FEEL" presents Will Rogers entertaining with competent help from Fifi Dorsay. One hundred per cent entertainment.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The theater, which is waiting for a new season to begin, has aroused itself from the usual summer time sleep long enough to bring to the George M. Cohan theater a revue born of good will and conceived by some of the best minds.

Entitled "Shoot the Works," it is the brain child of Heywood Broun, column conductor, radio monologist, defeated Socialist candidate for congress, and—which may be more important to use—a former dramatic critic. Mr. Broun, who espouses causes with polygamous frequency, has decided to enter the lists in defense of the unemployed actor. With Milton Raison, a press agent, and Johnny Boyle, a dance director, as his chief assistants, Broun has labored heroically toward the formation of a coöperative show.

Lyrics, Sketches Donated.

With $7,000 in cash to work upon—a good bit of which had to be posted with Equity to guarantee a fortnight's salaries to chorus people—Broun has got a long hot weather show together. Producers contributed scenery and electrical equipment; costumers have given everything from bathing suits to draperies, and a soap company provided a stack of soap boxes which

Long Awaited "Peter Ibbetson" Is Scheduled for Two Performances This Week at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

THAT undercurrent hum of activity proceeding from Ravinia, that set of preoccupied expressions on the faces of several of the company, is not altogether to be accounted for by a busy operatic season, though they have been having an uncommonly active one. Part of it was due to the fact that they were preparing "Peter Ibbetson."

It is now prepared and ready. There has already been an announcement that it would be given its first performance in this part of the country tomorrow night. Now comes a supplementary statement that, since tomorrow night looks like an overflowing house, there will be another performance with the same cast next Saturday night.

Difficult Scenes.

For "Peter Ibbetson," it appears, has taken a lot of doing to put into shape. It was more than just learning a new operatic score. That is something the Ravinia company takes in its stride. Lucrezia Bori and Edward Johnson, who are to sing the two leading parts, had sung them in in New York, and their new associates were promptly rehearsed in their own rôles. But the staging of the piece presented peculiar difficulties.

It has a dream scene, for one, where Peter sees again the garden of his boyhood. It has a final scene where the spirit of Peter takes leave of its wornout human habitation and goes away, young and glorious again, to meet the spirit of Mary, who had just preceded him into death. Once that scenery was built, it had to be tried out, and for this purpose daylight will not do. Also, the stage of Ravinia is in use every night with a performance.

So one night a short time ago—just after a performance of "L'Amore dei

"We be in trouble," said H. R. Chapin when he opened a solemn session of the board of directors of the Western Springs club last week. And it turned out to be bee trouble when President Chapin became more specific. A swarm of bees had lodged in the north wall of the clubhouse where a new set of stage lights is to be installed. Much consternation on the part of all present, and then S. W. "Bee" Bilski of La Grange, an expert apiarist, was summoned to rout the bees. Well, they're gone, and "Bee" Bilski boasts a big jar of honey.

Orville Stolnach, 4055 North Kolmar avenue, established some kind of record the other day when he waited on the doorstep of the Irving Park "Y" from 6:30 until 9 o'clock in the morning to obtain a ticket for a Cubs-Boston game. There were only 50 tickets available for the boys and Orville was bound to see that game. He did!

That enterprising young man, Alvin L. Lyons, superintendent of the River Forest parks and playgrounds, has been honored again. This time it's an appointment as chairman of exhibits at the annual Illinois conference on public welfare to be held in Rockford, Oct. 26, 27, and 28.

WE are pleased to note that Edwin Scharenberg of 5142 Strong street last week passed his 91st milestone, happy and healthy as ever. Mr. Scharenberg, a civil war veteran, is a pioneer resident of Jefferson Park. He was surprised on his birthday with a dinner party given by his daughter, Mrs. Edward Thomas.

It used to be just Fire Chief John Kronenbitter of Maywood, but now it's Grandpa Kronenbitter. Yes, the venerable head of the fire fighters is wearing a big, broad smile, to say nothing of that of his son, John Kronenbitter Jr., who is also a village fireman. The youngest Kronenbitter has been named Donald and weighs 6½ pounds.

Little Miss Widney Anne Watson, granddaughter of Gov. and Mrs. Emmerson, spent some time in Austin last week on her return from a visit with her little friend, Miss Edith James, at the Mercer, Wis., home of Miss James' father, William R. James, president of the west park board. Both the little girls had fishing yarns that rivaled those of parent and grandparent.

Our best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Karpen, who were married Sunday at the bride's home, 3408 Ogden avenue. Now Mr. and Mrs. Karpen are enjoying a honeymoon trip through the east and Canada. Mrs. Karpen is the former Miss Yetta Rubelle.

EVERY Wednesday afternoon holds plenty of adventure in store for the one hundred or more Portage Park youngsters who flock to the Portage Park branch library, 5148 Irving Park boulevard, for the summer story hour. You would never have recognized young Jerome Apper, Arthur Peterneck, and Christiana Tragni last week as they acted out that ever popular tale, "How Brother Rabbit Fooled the Elephant and the Whale."

Our popular northwest side resident, Dr. J. F. Gillmeister, has had plenty of fan mail since his recent talk over W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE radio station on the Drake hotel. His subject was "Your Dentist: How to Choose Him and How to Use Him."

It was a happy reunion last week when three cousins met last week at the home of Mrs. Frank Thompson of 159 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, after 50 years of separation. They were Mrs. Margaret Bucklou of New Brunswick, N. J.; Mrs. Ritie Jane Clark of Lee, Mass., and Mrs. Thompson.

The basket picnic held by the Elston-Cicero Community club out at Griswold lake recently was a great event, according to all the reports. Bill Horn, the popular president, kept busy running off games, races, swimming events, and baseball games, but he says he was well repaid with the enthusiastic good time had by all.

And speaking of outings, the Madison Rotinians had a never to be forgotten get-together Wednesday out at the Midwest Golf club. President Fetherstone and Secretary Daniels saw that the good time kept up, even to the departure of the last guest after dinner. There was a unanimous vote for a similar outing at least twice a year.

Miss Marion Jones, popular young Oak Parker, has returned to the village from her summer home in Rainy River, Ont., just long enough to pack her bags and be off for Europe. She will accompany Miss Nancy Jane Parmalee and her family on a tour of the continent. The two young women will then study in Vienna for at least a year.

Even railroad trains are subject to arrest in Maywood. When engine No. 319 of the Chicago Great Western railroad blocked the 19th avenue crossing for more than nine minutes last week, the village coppers arrested the engineer and booked him at the Maywood station.

Old Homes, New Homes—Berwyn Folk Love Both

Not a Factory in Suburb, Residents Boast.

By Oney Fred Sweet.

THE city of Berwyn does not lend itself to a single descriptive phrase so easily as do many communities in metropolitan Chicago. Terms which might neatly sum up an impression of one section of the "fastest growing town in the United States" are not so apt if applied to Berwyn as a whole.

A glance at the map of Chicagoland shows Berwyn just west of Chicago and bounded by Roosevelt road on the north; Pershing road on the south; Lombard [62nd avenue] on the east, and Harlem [72nd avenue] on the west.

It will also be noticed that wide 22d street passes through the northern portion of the rectangular area. Through the southern end of the city, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad crosses in a slant on its southwestern course. It is along these lines of traffic that two of Berwyn's thriving business centers are located and it is necessary to describe both of them in presenting a complete picture.

Old Berwyn on the "Q."

Let us begin with the Berwyn that was built along the "Q"—one of those beads in the long string of suburbs which sprang up beside the railroad in earlier days. Here are business houses and homes resembling many Riverside, Oak Park, and other nearby pioneer communities. Large frame houses with ample lawns and the shade of big trees. Churches and schools mellowed a bit by time and surrounded with memories. The development of business on each side of the railroad right of way—Windsor avenue on the south and Stanley avenue on the north. Structures that are landmarks, including the red front city hall, familiar to thousands of commuters.

This is the original Berwyn, altered by progress and a changing world after the fashion of other active communities. The new Berwyn State bank building, a $400,000 solid concrete structure of five stories, is among the modern touches. Official figures give $58,000,000 in value of new buildings erected in Berwyn during the six years ending in 1926. It is said that the record was not surpassed elsewhere in America.

New Berwyn at 22d Street.

Now, let us skip northward to 22nd street. Here is a development so modern that in the pre-war period it was only the prairie scene impressed one. It is here that all the theaters and banks and business houses are shining with newness. The surrounding territory is built solidly with brick flats and bungalows. The trees have not had much opportunity as yet. The lawns are limited in size, but it would be difficult to find a spot not landscaped and cared for by some owner possessing zealous home pride.

There are other business sections, among them Ogden avenue, 26th and Ridgeland, Roosevelt road, and Ridgeland and 15th. Roosevelt road merchants find it advantageous to link their interests with Oak Park business men across the street.

Throughout the three square miles of territory there is a population which the federal census lists as 47,027. City water meter records, however, indicate 60,000 inhabitants. Berwyn has four fine theaters with a seating capacity of 8,500. There are nine Protestant and two Catholic churches. Berwyn is a part of the district supporting the famous J. Sterling Morton High school and has 19 grammar schools and two parochial schools.

New Park in Heart of City.

Witnessing the fast disappearance of vacant prairie land, Berwyn some three years ago provided for a city park. Since then the centrally located tract of eight acres has been materially improved. Opposte the park, the school board owns a five acre tract, and the proposition of a new high school to be erected there will probably be voted upon again this fall.

From north to south, and from east to west, Berwyn is carefully zoned as a residential city. It has no factories, not even a laundry. It is made up of home owning and home loving people.

The Berwyn Chamber of Commerce has for its purpose the fostering of a better understanding and a spirit of coöperation among the business people as well as the residents of all sections. An indication of the harmony existing among business men is found in the fact that 250 merchants have signed up for participation in a prosperity sale, starting Wednesday and continuing through Saturday night of this week. It was the custom of the chamber for many years to hold an exposition, but this has been abandoned for the sale days program.

Legion to Hold Carnival.

Another active organization is Berwyn post, No. 422, of the American Legion. The post will hold its annual carnival Aug. 17 to 22 on Ogden avenue between Oak Park and Grove avenues.

Berwyn has two public libraries, 23 community clubs, an unusually fine Masonic temple, and two Bohemian sokol halls, one of which is a million dollar plant and occupies a square block.

It is in Berwyn that many employées of the Western Electric company make their homes, having been attracted by the suburban atmosphere and the excellent transportation facilities.

Having established a record as the fastest growing town in the United States, Berwyn's population is made up of many newcomers. Also it has its old timers and, according to Frank Hamm, one of the veterans, Berwynites are stickers who seldom listen to the lure of other communities.

VOICE of the WEST SIDE

Forest Preserve Rules Intended for Swimmer's Protection

Summer bathing in the public pools has reached a stage where novelty has worn off, tan has been acquired, daring bathing suits have caused the usual number of comments from the usual group of shocked observers, and those who have not by this time learned to swim must blame something beside lack of opportunity.

Criticism has come from certain patrons at Cermak park due to the strict examination conducted there, but laxity in the matter of sanitary regulations would be perilous to thousands.

Warning has recently been issued against swimming in pools, streams, and rivers of the forest preserve, except in certain prescribed areas of that great playground. The ten prescribed swimming centers in the preserve are Deer Grove, in the northwestern section of the preserves; dam No. 1, Wheeling; dam No. 2, Des Plaines; Maple lake, south and east beaches, Palos Hills; Lake Tuma, Argonne forest, clay hole, 159th street and Florence avenue; Sauk Trail lake, Chicago Heights, and Cermak pool, Lyons.

Not only do the authorities advise that the water in these prescribed areas may be bathed in without danger to health, but that ample life guards have been provided there for the safety of bathers. The picnic season's chief lure is perhaps due to the fact that it offers an escape from the routine of existence. That the outing may bring only wholesome and pleasant results, the warning by forest preserve officials should be observed.

ADULT PLAY A PROBLEM.

Complications arising at various recreation centers indicate that many Chicagoans take their fun seriously, and that playtime is by no means limited to the children. Protest is made, for instance, that park No. 12, Wrightwood avenue and Drummond place, opened primarily as a recreation spot for children of the district, is being overrun with adults. For two years parents in the Riis park neighborhood have complained that the golf course there occupies space that should be available to children.

There was a time when dad came home tired from work and was content with his pipe and newspaper. Mother, too, was interested in outdoor games only to the extent that she tried to soothe bruises and settle disputes among youngsters. All this is changed.

There are several factors that are perhaps the cause of renewed interest on the part of adults in the neighborhood recreation centers. Directors explain that the business depression has caused the unemployed to seek the grounds during idle hours. Invention has relieved the housewife of many of the tasks which once kept her tied indoors.

One of the chief reasons for adult interest in the playgrounds is that the facilities have been designed with the older folk in mind. Most recreation directors consider that they have failed in their purpose if they do not create an appeal to all ages. Certainly the mere accumulation of years should not deter folk who are so inclined from finding relaxation in games and contests with their neighbors. The ideal situation is one in which the play facilities are adequate for all.

OPTIMISTIC OCTOGENARIANS.

"I like to mix with a crowd where things are lively." The speaker was Phillip Brand, 88 years old, 3605 North Luna avenue. He was thinking of the 57th annual Old Settlers' picnic which, with many other west siders, he plans to attend at Riverview park tomorrow. Despite his years, Mr. Brand still belongs to the ranks of the workers. He finds it much more satisfactory, he says, to continue active.

Mr. Brand belongs to that sturdy group of men and women more than four score years old who have lost none of the zest for living. Interviews with many of them reveal a philosophy of contentment. They are of one mind. Though life may have its woes, they continue optimistic. Their concern is not so much with the acquiring of wealth as in keeping alive the friendships formed in the old days.

Each year at the picnics, bouquets are awarded to couples whose combined ages make the greatest total of years. Youthful dancers may be familiar with newer steps and move about in more graceful fashion, but the old timers prove that their hearts are still young. They insist that age has not robbed them of their desire to mingle with folk who are likewise on pleasure bent.

Chicago is richer because of the great group of immigrants who sought the city as a place to establish homes and, by the proper mixture of work and play, get the most out of life. To the modern Chicago they contribute their worthwhile philosophy on how to meet depression and disappointment.

NEW IDEAS IN CONTESTS.

Less colorful would be neighborhood life without its contests. They are the life of the community picnic. When things get dull there is always the possibility of casting about for the neighborhood's prettiest girl. The three legged race and the tug of war have survived through many generations at summer outings, and the beauty contest is with us always. But the neighborhoods are not without novel contest ideas.

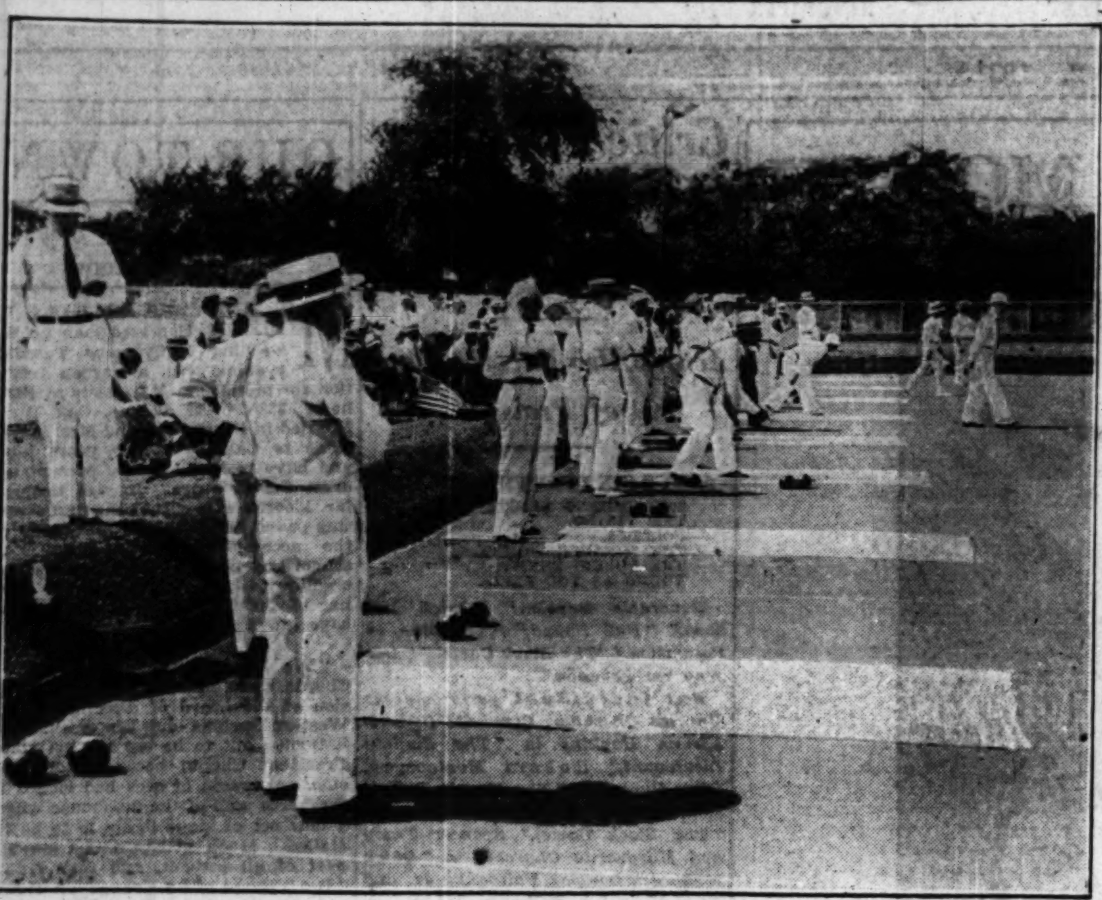
The Mayfair Chamber of Commerce now comes forth with plans for a pajama contest, open to all women of the district between the ages of 1 and 100. Front porch sitters are by this time rather familiar with pajama designs, but some one at the Mayfair event will out-pajama all the rest.

Honors really go to La Grange this summer. Merchants of that suburb will award a prize to the baby arriving nearest the first of this month in any La Grange or La Grange Park home.

Hy Reznick New Director of Halevy Choral Society

The Halevy Choral society of the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard, named Hy Reznick director last week to succeed Harry Coopersmith, who has gone to Europe to study. Sampson Wilson is the new president of the organization; Irving Isenberg, vice president; Miss Sarah Solomon, secretary; Miss Ruth Tabachnick, treasurer; Miss Sarah Novak, accompanist, and Miss Sarah Solomon and Miss Anne Wasserman, librarians.

BOWLING ON THE GREEN REVIVED



Bowling on the green, a sport centuries old, is now in full swing at Columbus park. The greens built by the west park board were formally opened July 25 with teams from Calumet, Milwaukee, and Rockford taking part. Mrs. David C. Lindsay, wife of the president of the West Side Lawn Bowling club, rolled the first ball.

300 BOYS, MEN IN UNDER WATER RACE WITH DUCKS

Unique Contest Held at Douglas Park.

Three hundred men and boys staged one of the most unusual contests in the history of the west parks yesterday afternoon when they competed with hell divers, a kind of ducks, in the natatorium at Douglas park. The event was one of the stunts in connection with the annual swimming meet sponsored by the west park commissioners.

The hell divers, known to be one of the strongest swimmers of the duck family not only on the surface, but for long distances under water had a hard race with the boys and men who endeavored to capture the birds under water, but more than one of the contestants came through successful.

A watermelon scramble was another unusual feature of the swimming meet arranged under the direction of William J. H. Schultz, superintendent of small parks and playgrounds.

James to Award Medals.

This meet was the final competition of the annual junior, intermediate, and senior championships staged each year by the west park board. The winners in the sectional meets at the 16 west side pools competed in 40 yard free style swimming, 20 yard breast stroke, 20 yard back stroke, and fancy diving. William R. James, president of the west park board, will award medals to the winners this week.

Representatives of Humboldt park flew away with the honors in the annual airplane contest held recently at Douglas park. The Humboldt park teams scored a total of 19 points with Lo Follette park the runner up with 15 points. Shedd, Franklin, Dvorak, and Holstein parks finished in third, fourth, fifth, and sixth places.

The individual winners of prizes in this competition for fuselage models included William Fuchs of Shedd park and John Matulis of Dvorak park. Young Fuchs also took the first prize for his twin pusher type of airplane.

Tennis Tourneys Saturday.

Heading the athletic schedule for this week in the west parks are the men's and women's tennis tournaments to be held next Saturday. In the competition for men there will be intermediate and senior divisions and the games will be played at 2 o'clock on the Columbus park courts. The finals will be run off at 1 o'clock next Sunday afternoon. There will also be two divisions for women and the preliminary matches will be played at 2 o'clock Saturday on the Garfield park courts with the finals at 10 o'clock Sunday morning on the same courts.

The annual peg tournament sponsored by the west parks is scheduled for 10 o'clock Friday morning at the Eckhart park playfield, Chicago avenue and Noble street. There will be one division for boys under 11 and another for boys between 11 and 13 years.

James Vlasnick Sought.

Mrs. James Vlasnick, 1684 Whitcome avenue, Des Plaines, appealed to the police and the press last week to assist in a search for her husband, James Vlasnick, who disappeared from his home the morning of July 18. Mr. and Mrs. Vlasnick have four children.

Brothers Mark Golden Day

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pfundheller, 2259 South California avenue (right), and Mr. and Mrs. Max Pfundheller of Tenefly, N. J. (left), celebrated their golden wedding anniversaries together Wednesday evening at the Lawndale Masonic temple, Millard avenue and 23d street. Albert Pfundheller was married on July 29, his brother on July 30. The couples held a reunion on their silver anniversary in 1906 also.

Neighborhood Theaters

"Free Soul," an Adela Rogers St. John story, is the attraction this week at the Paradise theater. Go to see it for Lionel Barrymore's splendid acting if nothing else.

The prime characters are a brilliant criminal lawyer, Stephen Ashe, and his daughter, Jan. The former insists on going to the dogs in his own way, that is, through drink, and at the same time he insists that Jan must live her own life and never, never run away from things. He believes her aristocratic background and good breeding will bring her through unscathed.

Jan becomes engaged to a socially correct young man, Dwight Winthrop, but she craves more excitement and this leads her to an affair with a notorious gambler whom her father once saved from the chair. Well, the most exciting moments are yet to come and we'll let you discover those for yourself. Anyway, Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, and Leslie Howard are able support for Mr. Barrymore.

"Seed" at Central Park.

At the Central Park the first three days of the week it's "Seed." This is the picture that tells of a clerk in a publishing company whose wife and five children keep him from an author's career.

Then along comes his boyhood sweetheart, now a publisher's representative in Paris, who pries him out of his rut, makes an author of him, but at the expense of his wife and children. How wife and children eventually triumph is convincingly set forth. The leads are played by John Boles, Lois Wilson, and Genevieve Tobin. The children are splendid in both juvenile and grown up editions.

Double Bill at Crawford.

There's a double bill the first part of the week at the Crawford with "Up Pops the Devil" and "Always Good-by" as the attractions. The first story concerns the efforts of a young writer to get along without merely becoming a "kept" man, that is, his wife [Carole Lombard] tries to support him while he [Stuart Erwin] writes the great American novel. Under these trying circumstances there is a "blowup" and the wily publisher, rival of the poor but honest writer, has the wife all ready for Reno. Figure it out yourself!

"Always Good-by" brings to us again that newest of foreign charmers, the lovely Elissa Landi. In this dramatic if somewhat improbable play she is posing as the wife of one man when she falls in love with another. Further complications are added when her supposed husband is revealed as a thief who plans to use her as an accomplice to rob the man she loves. Paul Cavanaugh plays convincingly the villain and Lewis Stone makes a chivalrous, if somewhat elderly, hero.

Double Bill at Lamar.

"Seed" shares the bill Monday and Tuesday of this week at the Lamar theater, Oak Park, with "Monsters of the Deep." This is an educational feature showing scenes aboard ship and has only a slight story. The plot it deals with is the efforts of the fishermen to capture and kill a devil fish. The picture does not star any one in particular, except, perhaps, Mr. Devilfish!

COUNTY LEGION NAMES LEADERS ON WEDNESDAY

Districts to Pick Men for Executive Committee.

The annual meeting of the Cook County council of the American Legion will be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night at the council chambers in the city hall. Officers will be nominated and elected for 1932, including commander, vice commander, finance officer, sergeant-at-arms, and one member of the Cook county executive committee from each of the nine districts for a term of two years. District members of the executive committee will be elected from their respective districts in caucuses.

Belmont Park post, No. 597, has selected Frank R. Ringa as its delegate to the state Legion convention, to be held in Peoria Aug. 31. John J. McMullen, post commander, has been chosen as alternate.

Mr. Ringa has received a personal citation, issued by National Commander Ralph T. O'Neil, for his services in obtaining jobs for veterans. He has promised Belmont post that he will go to Peoria to work for the election of John F. Simpson as district adjutant.

La Grange post, No. 41, will hold a special meeting in the library in La Grange at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

Assisted by veterans of the civil, Spanish-American, and Indian wars, the 13th engineers, first American unit to engage in combat in the world war, today will celebrate the 14th anniversary of their landing on foreign soil by laying the corner stone for the regiment's convalescent center at Camp Bogardus, in the forest preserve at 95th street and Maple lake.

A program of sports has been arranged. In the evening there will be dancing and the presentation of the 13th engineers' stage show, which was a hit with the A. E. F. The show will be produced under the direction of Congressman John C. Schaefer of Milwaukee, who was a private in this regiment.

Judge Marcus Kavanagh, Judge Joseph Burke, Judge Mathew D. Hartigan, and Gen. P. J. H. O'Farrell are to speak. The event is being held under the direction of Edward J. Walsh, Patrick J. Cahill, and Kieran P. O'Gallagher.

The Illinois state championship games in the American Legion Junior baseball world series will be played at Wrigley field, next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Cook county champions will be pitted against downstate champions in three games. The games will start at 3 o'clock.

The Berwyn, South Chicago, Marine post, and Rogers Park will play for the Cook county championship early in the week. The downstate title also remains to be won. All children in Chicago younger than 16 years will be admitted free to the championship games. The games will be held under the direction of the state athletic committee of the Legion, Edwin H. Felt, chairman.

Medill—TRIBUNE post, No. 348 will go on a moonlight excursion on the S. S. Theodore Roosevelt Monday night, Aug. 10. The boat will leave the Michigan avenue dock at 9 o'clock and return at 11:45.

Members of Van Buren post, No 401, their families and friends, will have an outing today at Justice Park grove, Archer and Keane avenues.

Chester L. Davis, assistant trust officer of the Chicago Title and Trust company, will talk on "The Real Estate Situation in Cook County" at the meeting tomorrow noon of Advertising Men's post, No. 38.

Members of the Norhwest Town post No. 1583, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will picnic next Sunday in Erhardt's grove, Park Ridge. George Doherty is chairman of the event.

St. Charles School Board Cuts Budget Second Time

The St. Charles board of education has reduced the annual school budget for the elementary schools approximately $5,000. This is the second reduction made this year by the board. Plans are now under way for the landscaping of the grounds at Evan Shelby school in St. Charles.

Rabbits and Turtles Compete in Pet Show

Dogs and cats, rabbits and turtles, geese and guinea pigs appeared to be on good terms the evening of July 24 when River Forest boys and girls assembled all their pets for the annual show sponsored by the River Forest recreation board. All the prize winners assembled for this picture with the exception of those entering dogs. Front, left to right: Nancy Cooper, Danny Kimball, Ted Hatch, David Kimball, Robert Dietriet, Betty Baker, Peggy Cross, Bobby Cross, Cathleen Cross, and Paul Tyrrell. Second row: Lorraine Chestney, Betty Green, Elizabeth Hinckley, Florence Hurley, Mary Jane Hendriksen, Elmer Johnson, Beverly Mons, Jessie McKerrow, Billy Baker, and Janey Rankin. Rear: Stanley Inglis, Joyce Baur, Jean Rankin, Bob Connell and Maura Carey.

River Forest Club to Have Day of Golf, Evening Party

Several west suburban country clubs are featuring special events and programs during the coming fortnight.

Outstanding among these is the "sportime day" to be held Saturday at the River Forest Country club. Golf, supper, cards, and dancing will all be included on the day's program, which E. G. Staley, general chairman, hopes to make the best of the year. The schedule calls for 36 holes of golf with one round in the morning and another in the afternoon. Prizes will be awarded for low net and low gross scores for each 18 holes and for the best net totals. Then there will be special awards for the greatest number of balls out of bounds, the lowest and highest number of putts, the most shots from sand traps, blind bogey, and the number of putts. The prizes will be presented to the winners during the dinner to be served at 8 o'clock.

"To cap the climax the sports and pastimes committee has voted to award a 'sportime' cup to the winner of the low net event," said Mr. Staley.

The day will wind up with a dance and card party for which special entertainment features are being planned. Assisting Mr. Staley with the arrangements are H. D. Heiby, Charles Reufer, E. C. Buren, J. J. Fitzgerald, W. L. Procunier, Charles Devine, O. Kretzer and S. I. Reed.

The woman's auxiliary of the River Forest club will hold its weekly golf tournament and bridge party Wednesday afternoon at the club. Mrs. H. H. Pearce is chairman of the auxiliary.

Guest day is to be observed Aug. 12 by the woman's auxiliary of the Maywood Country club. The first round of the club championship will be played with the losers playing off for a consolation prize. For the day's event prizes are to be awarded for low net in the first classification and for low gross in the second and third classes.

Last Tuesday women members of the Elmhurst Country club played off the third round of the July trophy. The same day there was a twilight tournament for two ball mixed foursomes at the Elmhurst club.

WHO'S WHO ON WEST SIDE

Philip L. Seman has given years of notable service to the west side and to the city as a whole as general director of the Jewish People's Institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard. A social worker all his life, Mr. Seman is rounding out his 18th year at this big community center.

P. L. SEMAN.

OLD SETTLERS' GREETER LOOKS BACK 57 YEARS

Reminiscences Promised at Picnic.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Having attended the first of Chicago's Old Settlers' picnics 57 years ago and having missed only a few of the annual events since, it is natural that Philip Brand should be among the west siders planning to journey tomorrow to Riverview park where he will again meet his friends in reunion.

PHILIP BRAND. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mr. Brand, who makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Hattie Hogan, 3605 North Luna avenue, is a member of this year's reception committee. He says he will be standing at the gate where he will be enabled to catch a glimpse of the thousands who enter. Later on he expects to have more opportunity to reminisce of the old days.

Mr. Brand gives his age as "sweet sixteen," for does not 88 thus add up? It was at one of the picnics sponsored by the Chicago Turngemeinde that Mr. Brand was chosen by an enterprising photographer to pose for the symbolic figure "Father Time." His white beard perhaps inspired the idea. But Mr. Brand smiles tolerantly at such notions of younger people. Those who know him intimately are aware that he still belongs to the ranks of active workers, arises each morning to go to his daily task at a name plate company and return at nightfall to finish off the day in the garden or at odd jobs about the house.

Likes "Something Doing."

"Nothing suits me better than to go to work every day," he declared. "There's not a thing the matter with me, so why should I sit around the house? Besides, it is lively there at the shop. That's why I like the Old Settlers' picnic every year; they give you a chance to go where something's doing."

Born in Germany, Mr. Brand came to Chicago, the city of his dreams, as a young man. He landed in what he says was an "overgrown village" in the spring of 1871. The big fire was to occur that fall and Brand, who lived in a boarding house at Clark and Adams streets, viewed that spectacle at such close range that it left unforgettable impressions.

There was a concert at Turner hall on North Clark street on the memorable October Sunday night. Young Brand saw fire in the sky to the south as he left the building, and he and a friend investigated its location by walking over to DeKoven street. Later, he had his boarding house baggage moved to 22d and State streets.

On Present Job 14 Years.

Until 1885, Mr. Brand was a barber. He then entered the advertising sign business. For 14 years he has followed his present occupation with the firm by which he is still employed. His wife, who was a bride in 1872, died in 1912. Besides Mrs. Hogan, he has two other daughters living in Chicago, Mrs. Clara Daily and Mrs. Ida Bergman.

"It's the family and the friends who insist that I continue to dance at the picnics just as in the old days," says Mr. Brand. "But it's only making believe to say I enjoy that feature the same as when I was younger.

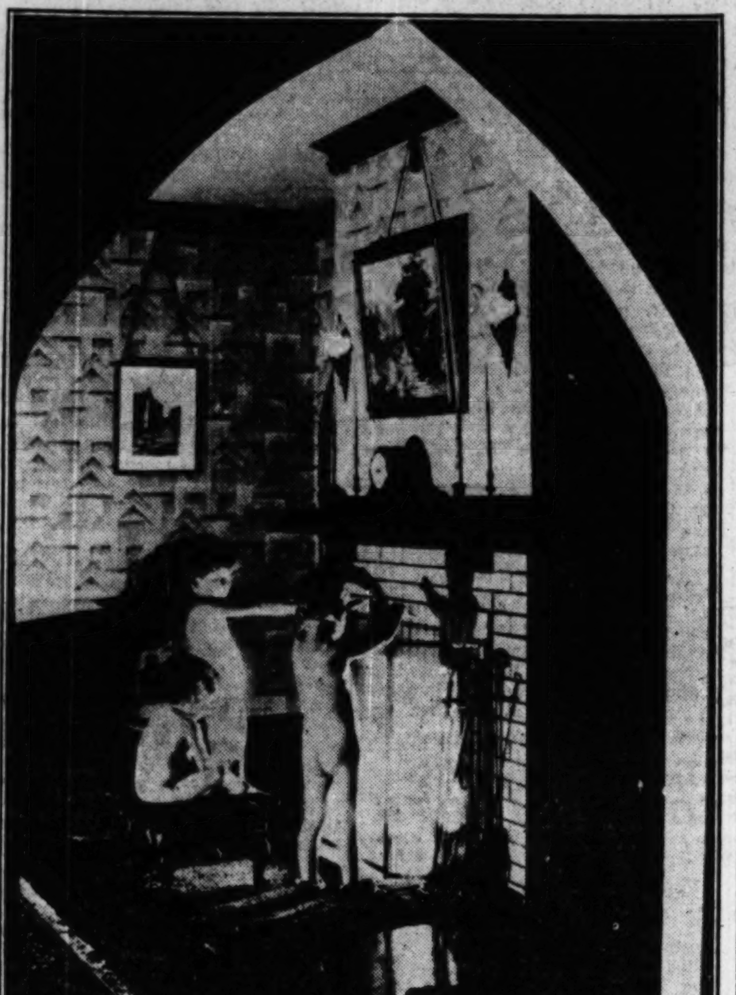
"I used to sing a god deal, but singing takes training and I gave it up on account of business and lack of time. But I want to make it clear that the 80's are a happy period if one is well and can keep busy."

Recalls Tramp Over Germany.

In 1913 Mr. Brand made a visit to Germany. He says that everything in his native land was peaceful and with no indication of a great war brewing. As a young man, before coming to America, Mr. Brand went on a 2,000 mile walking trip througn Germany, the journey requiring six months.

A varied program has been arranged for the Old Settlers' picnic tomorrow. It will be held in a grove in Riverview at Western and Belmont avenues. Adequate parking space has been provided for automobiles. Registration will begin at 1 o'clock, and the usual number of medals to old settlers with outstanding records under various classifications will be awarded. Dancing and community singing will be featured.

FIRST PRIZE PHOTO



This fireside scene, framed in a Gothic doorway, won the first prize of $100 in the Illinois preliminary child photograph contest of the Eastman Kodak company's international $100,000 competition. Walter R. Petrie of 618 South Euclid avenue, Villa Park, took the picture. Walter Ernest, Adelore Francis, and Paula Marie are the children.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 3.

Prune the climbing roses. As blossoming ends, old canes that are dead or unproductive should be cut out and the new shoots on which next year's roses come may be trained into position and those which have borne flowers shortened. Trim little from the bushy tops, but thin the heavy growth at base considerably.

Tuesday, Aug. 4.

Lettuce started now should be tender hearted for fall. Plant shallow, not over a quarter inch, in good rich soil. If you are afraid the soil will dry out before plants come up, cover the row with boards, burlap or straw, watching for the first show of seedlings to remove this mulch. Mignonette or prizehead, reddish varieties, are good.

Wednesday, Aug. 5.

A raid on the flowers' insect pests is in order. Leaf chewing insects such as wireworms, grubs, cutworms, beetles or caterpillars succumb to stomach poisons liwe the arsenates in a dust or spray. The piercing, sucking insects such as lice or aphids must have some such contract spray as nicotine sulfate.

Thursday, Aug. 6.

The lawn that has suffered from dry weather must be soaked thoroughly today, and again Saturday or Monday. Surface sprinkling or watering in the heat of the sun is harmful, as the water must get into the ground to draw grass roots deeper. A good fertilizer should be used now to give the plants food for fall growth.

Friday, Aug. 7.

Thin out the young dephinium beds to give the larger, stronger plants a better show in the race for late fall blooming. They should also get plenty of water during the dry spells, and should have two or three feet of open space for circulation of air through these lusty feeders. By September they should be large enough to place in their permanent positions, according to color, of course.

Saturday, Aug. 8.

Weeding the flower beds, borders, and running a cutter around the edge of the sidewalks will tidy up the place for Sunday display. The dandelion and plantain should come out of the lawn and garden rows with a knife or the special pronged weeders on the market.

TRIBUNE ISSUES CALL FOR FALL GARDEN ENTRIES

Honor Roll Competition Gets Under Way.

How does your garden handiwork compare with that of the thousands of others interested in flower gardening within a 40 mile radius of Tribune Tower? Hundreds of persons, by telephone and by mail, have indicated renewed interest in the next semi-annual CHICAGO TRIBUNE garden honor roll, in which the first call for entries in the 1931 fall competition is being issued today.

Whether yours is a rock garden, old fashioned garden, formal or informal, or whether it includes a few vegetables mixed in among flowers and shrubs, if the garden creates an individual setting for your home, it is eligible for entry if it is your work and nonprofessional.

The judging will be the third semiannual project designed to list flower gardens worth of honor certificates and which others in the many communities which make up the metropolitan area may use as guides in patterning and developing yards and gardens best adapted to individual homes and to communities.

Ballot in This Section.

No tedious work is required of those who wish to enter the contest. An entry blank may be found elsewhere in this section. All it requires is the name and address of the garden and endorsement by signature of two neighbors or friends. Or neighbors may enter a garden of their own volition if the deserving gardener is too modest.

The ballot is to be mailed to the Farm and Garden department, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Those received postmarked later than midnight Aug. 27 will not be considered, as judging must be held as near simultaneously as possible to be fair to entrants in various cections.

A special invitation to those in suburbs, in rural districts and somewhat thickly populated areas of Chicago proper is being issued for this fall contest.

Seek to Stimulate Plantings.

It is the intention of the contest to stimulate home plantings by pointing out those gardeners whose work has built not only community pride but has increased home values. Some of the most interesting situations discovered in the spring competition this year concerned gardeners whose neighbors had endorsed their nomination to the honor roll and yet these same neighbors were revealed as rivals.

"At times they'll hardly speak, when some of our flowers are doing well and theirs possibly are showing effects of insects or disease. And they don't ask for help, but keep on trying. Even though they do some things wrong this block has improved 100 per cent this season because of the stimulation of competition such as THE TRIBUNE is sponsoring."

This was the comment received from an entrant on the south side and is typical of similar remarks throughout the 40 mile radius.

To make the competition no less difficult in order to get on the honor roll, but to encourage those who think they would have more chance of recognition, those already given the certificates of merit last fall or this spring will be barred from reëntering this fall.

On Permanent Honor Roll.

Their names will remain, instead, on the permanent honor roll that has already given recognition to 73 gardens in the two previous contests. The list will be kept intact until it is apparent that individuals once honored have failed to continue their model gardening, and then a revised list will be compiled.

Many who enter desire advice rather than expect recognition. This is to be encouraged, as one of the purposes of the contest is to distribute as much information and as many constructive ideas as entrants desire. Answers will be given those who seek advice on the care of shrubs, trees, lawns and flowers. Judges will be instructed to give authoritative help or procure information if possible.

The date for judging will be announced as soon as weather conditions permit. THE TRIBUNE's flower garden score card on which the two previous entry lists have been judged will again be used as a basis of fair competition and permanent record of each entrant's garden ideas and progress.

REPORT PROVISO SCHOOL FINANCES IN GOOD SHAPE

School officials of Proviso township announced last week that the financial conditions of the high school and elementary school boards were such as to insure the opening of all the schools in September. Eugene La Rowe, superintendent of the grade schools in district 89, pointed out that the district had not issued tax anticipation warrants for the 1929 taxes up to the limit and that no warrants had been issued for the 1930 taxes. Will C. Robb, principal of Proviso Township High school, said that critical conditions in surrounding communities did not exist in his institution.

James J. Cullen Day to Be Marked with Picnic

James J. Cullem day will be celebrated today with a picnic at National Grove Forest preserve, 26th street and Des Plaines avenue, Riverside. The event is sponsored annually by Beryl B. Collins, president of the 30th Ward National Republican club in compliment to Mr. Cullen, a member of the west park board. A carnival, baseball game, races, dancing, and a concert will all be included in the day's program. West and northwest side leaders in charge of the outing include William Buckley, Edward H. Luebeck, William G. Wheelhouse, Edward Boissey, Raymond G. Bruce, John Rauch, and John Maher.

MR. AND MRS. W. J. PFIFFNER.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Pfiffner, 1437 South 11th avenue, Maywood, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary Tuesday at their home. They will receive friends from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Pfiffner were residents of Hyde Park until they moved to Maywood in 1924. Mr. Pfiffner was born in Guttenberg, Ia., 74 years ago and Mrs. Pfiffner was born in Chicago in 1864. Mrs. Bertha White of Maywood is their only daughter.

13 WEST SIDERS SEEK FREEDOM FROM MARRIAGE

Drunkenness, Cruelty, Desertion Charged.

The matrimonial ventures of 13 west side couples came to a climax last week with the filing of divorce bills in the Circuit and Superior courts. Complaints of habitual drunkenness, desertion, cruelty and misconduct were given as the grounds for the marital rifts.

Mrs. Rose C. Hecht, Austin, who accuses her husband, Harry G. Hecht, of cruelty, and Mrs. Cleda C. Millan, 2917 Jackson boulevard, who alleges that her husband, Grant J. Millan, deserted her, are asking the court for separate maintenance.

Because of extreme cruelty and habitual drunkenness Mrs. Hana Hartnett, 4948 Maypole avenue, is seeking a divorce from John R. Hartnett. In her bill she accuses her spouse of forcing their children to stay home from school in order to help him make home brew. She further alleges that his cruel treatment, which she said included throwing kitchen utensils and framed pictures at her head, threatening her with a revolver, and beating her with a club and clothes brush, finally put her in the hospital.

Cruelty Is Charged.

Other divorce cases which were based on cruelty charges were filed by:

Mrs. Margaret M. Jackson, Maywood, against Melvin Jackson.

Mrs. Emily Janda, 1911 South 15th avenue, Cicero, against Charles Janda, 2426 South Turner avenue.

Mrs. Rocchetta Lisco, Riverside, against Micheli Lisco.

Charges of desertion were made by:

Adam J. Fulton against Violet J. Fulton, 4024 West End avenue.

Mrs. Lulu E. Johndreau, Austin, against Frank E. Johndreau.

Joseph A. Stalley, 7207 West Adams street, against Mrs. Ida Stalley.

Mrs. Jennie White against William White, 2923 Grenshaw street.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Both Mrs. Margaret Emmons, Maywood, who is suing Edward Emmons, and Mrs. Ida M. Saule, who is seeking a divorce from August Saule, 400 South 15th avenue, Maywood, filed complaints of habitual drunkenness against their husbands. A triple charge of habitual drunkenness, misconduct, and cruelty makes up the grounds on which Mrs. Jessie E. Leitzell, Riverside, is asking a decree from Paul J. Leitzell.

In her bill Mrs. Janet Estes, 3908 West Congress street, accuses Sam Estes of both cruelty and desertion, while the double charge of cruelty and misconduct is made by Mrs. Annette Irving, Forest Park, in her suit against Henry B. Irving, Oak Park.

Widened Oak Park Ave. Is Opened to Traffic

Oak Park avenue between Lake street and Harlem avenue was formally opened to traffic early last week boasting a widened and improved pavement.

RADIO USED TO GIVE NEW KIND OF FARM RELIEF

Loudspeaker Proves Aid to Scarecrow.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio has joined the airplane in giving farm relief. While Iowa farmers are "raining" arsenic from a fleet of planes on myriads of grasshoppers to save their crops, orchard owners have discovered that a radio receiving set installed inside a scarecrow makes it much more effective in keeping the birds out of the cherry trees and berry bushes. An Oregon experimenter reports that not only do the birds flee the advertising announcements but they won't even listen to the best crooners.

The next step is obviously to do away with scarecrows altogether and equip each fruit tree with a loudspeaker to ward off our feathered enemies. As a matter of fact Paul Whiteman plays at a spot where the loudspeakers are hidden in the trees. And birds cause no trouble there.

What is a televisor? A lot of folks who viewed Columbia's visual station dedication program think they're the television whiskers that appeared on some of the celebrities' faces. According to observers Mayor Walker and Guy Lombardo looked like Trade and Mark Smith. By the time television becomes a general success possibly all our favorite announcers will look like European diplomats.

One of the best lines heard at the Columbia dedication was Edwin Cohan's "television of today is perhaps comparable to the phonograph of 1910 and the motion picture of 1905."

Incidentally, the hardboiled announcers who never waver before the microphone have at last found out what "mike fright" is. Certain veterans wilted pitifully before the electric eye of television.

Another Vallee coming up. Rudy's brother Bill, 22 years old, made his debut recently in a program titled "Set With Stars." Predictions are promising.

A recent radio installation in a private home costs about $3,000. It included loud speakers in most of the rooms of the home and remote control devices to operate them from a master receiving set.

Archer Gibson, radio pipe organist recently praised by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, was for years private organist for Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who had a great organ built in his mansion on Riverside Drive after the fashion of his old chief Andrew Carnegie. With Gibson at the organ and great artists, such as Fritz Kreisler participating, the Schwab musicals became famous. "The Rosary" as played by Gibson was said to be Schwab's favorite selection.

Dennis King, famed music comedian, and now a radio artist, tells this story on himself:

"When I was still a struggling thespian in New York, and sleeping in the parks because of lack of funds, Anne Nichols, who later wrote "Abie's Irish Rose," gave me a job in a play she was putting on. It was my first singing part, and on the strength of the engagement, I took my friend and myself out to dinner with my last two dollars. The meal amounted to $1.50 so we indulged in two twenty-five cent cigars to make the event a complete splurge.

"And the next day I was fired. The manager said I was a rotten actor, and would never make out at all."

That was his first experience as king for a day. Later he made a lot of money playing that rôle.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has just been awarded the Columbia Broadcasting medal for distinguished contribution to the radio art. CBS announces that he is the first American so honored. Now it is up to some flying service to pick out a radio big shot and award him a medal engraved "for distinguished service to the art of aviation."

Fred Waring is scheduled to join the "Around the Town" program on Aug. 31 . . . The candy makers, according to a report, are getting together and will join the cigaret manufacturers in their battle of the air . . One of the most popular English radio teams is known as Flotsam and Jetsam, one a tenor and the other a very deep basso . . . Here is an error credited to a Texas newspaper by Editor and Publisher: "Mark Coney, electrical wizard and discoverer of wireless telegraphy, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture."

Carveth Wells, world adventurer, who recounts his strange experiences over NBC, told about his wildest sight recently. It was a carload of sophomores in a collegiate flivver crossing an African desert singing a Vallee number.

Minnesota, No. Carolina Near Top and Bottom

Minnesota and North Carolina take places near the top and the bottom, respectively, of the list of states in which radio receivers have been tabulated by the census bureau.

Out of 608,398 families in Minnesota, 287,880, or 47.3 per cent, had sets in 1930. This was almost 50,000 more than the department of commerce and the radio industry estimated.

Only 72,329, or 11.2 per cent, of 645,245 families in North Carolina, however, possessed receivers when the count was taken. The radio industry made an estimate of 92,000.

Herbert and Nevin Works on W-G-N at 8 Tuesday

Two excerpts from Victor Herbert's only grand opera, "Natoma," and Nevin's "O that We Two Were Maying," sung as a soprano and alto duet, are to be heard in the household program with Adolphe Dumont and a symphony orchestra through W-G-N at 8 p. m. Tuesday evening. A vocal ensemble will offer "Cousin Jedediah."

BETTY, BOB HOSTS TO 250

Antonia Gillman and Richard De Wolfe, the Betty and Bob of W-G-N, with Cloudchaser, an air elf, between them. Betty and Bob were hosts to 250 Chicagoland children last Sunday.

Back to Earth

Two hundred and fifty children from all over Chicagoland had the time of their lives last Sunday when they met in the flesh a real air elf from Cloudland, and Betty and Bob, the two children who are visiting that magic sphere through W-G-N at 5:45 o'clock each afternoon.

The occasion was a picnic held at Brook Hill farms, west of Milwaukee. The air elf was Cloudchaser, who through his magic changed himself into a man in order that he might not be lost in the crowd. He called himself W. E. Johnstone. Betty, of course, is Antonia Gillman, and Bob is Richard De Wolfe.

With the air Cloud Chaser's magic airplane, the two children who are now visiting the Glumpers, the inhabitants of that pessimistic star, Glump, returned to earth for this picnic.

Visitors last Sunday not only made the acquaintance of these three radio personalities, but were introduced to other strange creatures of the land of clouds, in the form of wooden cutouts, scattered in unexpected places over the farm. There was the Terrigog, the Swisher, Twisten-Ding, Pat-Patter, the rain elf.. Sponge-Un, and Hurry Scurry, a snow gnome.

AKRON'S RADIO WILL TRANSMIT MAPS FROM AIR

Giant Navy Dirigible Has Fine Plant.

The world's largest dirigible, the Akron, which was christened in Akron, O., Saturday, is equipped with the finest radio system in the air.

Radio will play as important a part in the maneuvering of the Akron in peace as in war times and is almost of as much importance to the airship as the huge engines which keep it afloat. It will be equipped with a complete television system through which facsimiles of maps, sketches, photographs, and duplicates of other military information may be transmitted. While soaring over the water communication can be established with operators on board battleships or with ground bases while speeding over land through its six broadcasting and receiving channels. Two way conversations with pilots of airplanes flying over enemy fortifications can also be effected.

Four Radio Men.

The ship will be equipped with three receiving sets, a high frequency apparatus, an intermediate frequency set, and a direction finder. Through these sets the operators will be able to carry on a conversation through both the ordinary voice method and by the use of key system. By means of the direction finder officers of the ship will be able to plot out their courses.

The radio room itself is compact, being only nine feet and ten inches in width and less than eight feet along the port side. A crew of four radio men and an electrician's mate, all under the charge of a junior officer of the craft, will make up the radio force.

Three Antenna Planned.

Three antennae will be installed. Two of them of the trailing reel-up type, one 200 feet long and the other 150 feet, will be suspended from the radio room. The third will be a fixed antenna running along the longitudinal girder. This will be used when the trailing apparatus is found to be impractical.

MORNING SINGER

Helen Keith, contralto soloist, who is heard on the W-G-N morning musicales at 10:45 Thursdays.

GUEST ARTIST

Aileen Stanley, vaudeville headliner and stage star, will appear as guest artist with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next broadcast, which will be heard through W-G-N Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. During this program Miss Stanley will introduce three new songs.

CENSUS BUREAU RADIO COUNT TO NEAR 10,000,000

With tabulations by the census bureau of two-thirds of the states completed, indications are that the total number of radio receiving sets in the United States, as of April 1, 1930, will fall far short of the estimates of the radio industry and the department of commerce.

The average of families with radio sets so far has been about one-third. Tabulations of 34 states and the District of Columbia reveal a total of only 4,168,510 sets among 12,941,653 families.

While the count of the remaining third states is expected to boost the total considerably because the most populous states have not yet been tabulated, it is doubtful whether the final count will be over 10,000,000.

Estimates of the radio industry and the department of commerce ranged from approximately 13,000,000 to 15,500,000 in the summer and fall of 1930. Whatever the total of the census bureau count, however, the actual number of sets in operation in the country now will be greater because of the considerable sale of midget sets last year and during the first half of this year.

China Expands Radio.

As part of the expansion and development of China's international radio communication, the Chinese ministry of communications recently decreed that all government radio stations in the country were to operate international services.

RADIO WILL PLAY IMPORTANT ROLE AT MUSIC FEAST

Quin Ryan to Broadcast Festival Aug. 22.

Radio will play an important rôle in the success of the second Chicagoland Music Festival, which will be held Saturday, Aug. 22, in Soldiers' field, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, associated newspapers, and civic and commercial concerns of the middle west.

Quin Ryan will be at the microphone throughout the festival program. W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, will broadcast the entire program, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, while a National Broadcasting company network will broadcast from 9 to 9:30. Allan Grant, W-G-N staff pianist, will accompany the choruses that night.

A few headliners for the festival concert will be:

Hallelujah chorus of 6,000 voices.
Negro chorus of 2,000 voices.
One drum corps of 400 pieces.
A massed band of 2,200.

Grabel, Cain in Charge.

Last summer letters poured into the office of THE TRIBUNE and W-G-N from listeners in every state in the Union who heard the concert. Many testified that the program was the finest radio broadcast they ever had heard. It will be finer this summer. Victor J. Grabel again will be the bandmaster and Noble Cain the director of the chorus.

From the moment the bands and drum corps enter the huge arena at 7:30 o'clock until the final note is sounded Mr. Ryan will describe the cheering thousands, the huge searchlights as they play upon entertainers and spectators. It will be an evening filled with harmony and dynamic description. Pageantry, color, music, the applause of 150,000 will be brought to all who cannot attend in person.

During the festival an hour will be devoted to presenting winners in the preliminary contests of Dixon and Waukegan, Ill., Racine, Wis., and Gary, Ind.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings preceding that Saturday the contests for male, woman, and mixed choruses will be held in the Drake hotel; bits of these contests also will be broadcast from W-G-N. A few minutes on the air will be given to the adult and juvenile band contests Saturday morning, also in the Drake hotel.

After the Festival.

WMT, radio station in Waterloo, Ia., is sending the prize winning adult band of the first festival, the Cedar Falls (Ia.) Municipal band, to the festival. All the expenses will be paid by Harry Shaw, owner of the station and formerly business manager of the Waterloo Tribune, now merged with another Waterloo newspaper. The Tribune sponsored the neighboring city band last summer. James A. Melichar is the director of the 45 piece organization.

Radio not only plays a big part in the festival week's program but also after the festival is over. Last summer three of the stars in the festival contest—Agatha Lewis, winner of first place in the soprano division for Chicago; David Pritchard, leader of the Pritchard Mixed quartet, first Chicagoland winners, from Racine, and Julius Skiute, also of Racine, second place Chicagoland baritone—all won enviable positions in the concert and radio field.

Miss Lewis is a member of the Herbert Witherspoon chorus, Mr. Pritchard is a W-G-N staff artist, and Mr. Skiute has appeared in radio and on the concert stage throughout the winter and spring. Many of the winnings groups of the first festival were heard this winter in radio recitals over W-G-N.

RADIO CUTS INTO 3D CLASS MAIL, GLOVER REPORTS

Radio advertising has cut deeply into the revenue of the post office department from third class mail, according to Warren Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general.

While no figures were available, he said, railway mail clerks and division superintendents told on his recent Western trip that the reduction in third class mail corresponded closely to the development of broadcasting.

This reduction is particularly noticeable, he was informed, in distances of 200 miles and under. Firms that formerly solicited business by circulars through the mail now buy time on the local radio station.

Radio Serves as Eyes for Cavalry Service

Without information of the enemy, no general can properly conduct a battle, Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, now district commissioner of Washington, and formerly chief of cavalry, decleared. "However," he continued, "while the cavalry could get this information many times, it could not get it back to the general in time to be of any use. Now, by assigning raidio sending sets to our advance cavalry units, we are able at once to send information obtained of the enemy, and add tremendously to the value of that historical branch of the service."

Olive Hull Will Open Series on Child Welfare

Olive Hull, executive secretary of Gov. Emmerson's committee on Child Welfare, will give a series of talks on child welfare from W-G-N every Monday, starting tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. D. T. McNabb, of the Animal Protection committee of the Women's City club will speak Tuesday at this same time on the proper care for pets in summer.

JANE FROMAN.
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Jane Froman, a contralto with a touch of indigo in her voice, brought to the radio spotlight by Paul Whiteman, made her local debut last Thursday in the first of a series of NBC programs with an orchestra under the direction of Matt Malnek, a protégé of the "dean of modern music." Hereafter their programs will be heard over an NBC net at 7 Wednesday evenings and at 10:30 Thursday evenings.

DR. ARTHUR HOLT WILL SPEAK ON MIDDAY HOUR

Building religion into business is the theme of the midday services from W-G-N for this week. The speaker for 1 o'clock tomorrow will be Dr. Arthur E. Holt, professor of ethics at the University of Chicago and the Chicago Theological seminary. Dr. Holt has been prominent in the work of the Congregational church for many years. Following the theme of the week, Dr. Graham Fay, who has been in social and industrial betterment work for over forty years, will speak on Wednesday. Dr. Fay's subject is "Building Religion Into Business from the Bottom Up."

Another lay speaker, James L. Kraft, Chicago manufacturer, will speak for business men on Friday on "Building Religion into Business from the Top Down." The other services during the week will be conducted by the Rev. John L. Dickson, director of the midday services, who is assisted by Leonard Salvo, organist, and Gene Martin, baritone.

START DIGGING FOR MAMMOTH N. Y. RADIO CITY

New York,—Excavations started last week for the mammoth Radio City, said to be the largest building project in the history of the world, which is to be erected in the heart of New York City. The digging is expected to be completed in the fall. Eight steam shovels, 100 trucks, and nearly 300 workmen started the excavation job. When the actual building work begins, at least 5,000 men will be employed. The $250,000 project is being financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Balks KTNT Removal.

Norman Baker, owner of station KTNT of Muscatine, Ia., is seeking a preliminary injunction against the individual members of the federal radio commission to nullify the action of the commission in removing KTNT from the air last month. The suit was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court.

HAROLD STOKES TO DIRECT NEW DANCE PROGRAM

Tom, Dick, and Harry on Novel Bill.

A new dance program, featuring novel musical combinations and effects, with Tom, Dick and Harry furnishing the vocal end of the bill, will be presented for the first time at 9:45 tomorrow evening under the direction of Harold Stokes.

Harold Stokes, well known to radio listeners as a former director of Jean Goldkette's orchestra, comes back to radio after two years with his own orchestra in Kansas City and Omaha. Stokes is well known for novel arrangements of popular dance numbers. Besides conducting his own orchestra, Stokes plays the piano, accordian, clarinet, drums, and xylophone.

On the First Program.

The initial program includes arrangements of hits from "The Wonder Bar," "The Band Wagon," Crazy Quilt," and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

The story of Sheridan's ride will be told at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. Miss Jean Conover has used the famous poem by James Buchanan Reed as the foundation of her story. An incident from the life of John Hancock, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, will be dramatized by Norman Macdonald for the sketch at 8:30 Friday, Aug. 7.

Boy to Make Evening Bow.

Earle Wilkie, 17 year old boy baritone, who has been singing on W-G-N Wednesday and Saturday mornings at 10:45, will make his bow to its evening audience at 7:45 Tuesday evening. Two of his numbers will be "Shipmates o' Mine," and "In the Silence of the Night." Young Wilkie is a protege of Barre Hill of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

The second of the summer garden concert heard from W-G-N at 8:10 Saturday nights, will be presented Aug. 8 and will have Vienna as its scene. Works of Lehar, Schubert, Suppe, and Straus will be heard on this Viennese program.

NBC WILL ERECT VISION STATION ON 84TH FLOOR

The National Broadcasting company has been authorized by the federal radio commission to erect a television and a sound broadcasting station on the eighty-fourth floor of the Empire State building, of New York, tallest structure in the world.

The stations will operate on ultra high frequencies, above 23,000 kilocycles, in an effort to ascertain whether or not they can be adapted to visual broadcasting. The stations will cost $75,000, with $10,000 additional for studios.

A television antenna will be placed on top of the Empire State building mooring mast, 1,250 feet above the street level. NBC engineers believe that many of the present obstacles to visual broadcasting will be removed through the operation of the station from this height.

N. Y. PUBLISHERS WILL BAR TRADE NAMES IN RADIO

The publishers of newspapers in New York City have reached an agreement whereby they will exclude all trade names from radio programs. It was agreed to do this several years ago but the New York Telegram, owned by the Scripps-Howard papers, continued to print the names.

It is understood that the Scripps-Howard people are among those who have signed the agreement to cut out trade names altogether.

Hereafter simply the name of the artist will be mentioned if the New York newspaper plan is carried out. A musical group will be referred to simply as "band" or "orchestra," but in no case will the name of the sponsor or advertiser be mentioned.

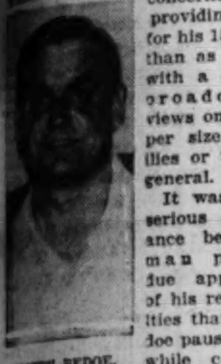
NO CASH TO LOSE, DAD OF 15 SAILS THROUGH SLUMP

Avoids Expensive Foods and Doctor Bills.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.



JOSEPH BEDOE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Joseph Bedoe, father of Chicago's [illegible] family, turned toward his visitor more in the manner of a man concerned with providing a living for his 15 children than as a person with a desire to broadcast his views on the proper size of families or things in general.

It was with a serious countenance befitting a man possessing due appreciation of his responsibilities that Mr. Bedoe paused briefly while cutting a piece of sole leather. There were a customer and a bystander in the shop at 3936 Fullerton avenue, where Mr. Bedoe combines shoe making with shoe repairing, shoe shining and hat cleaning. The presence of other persons does not create the most satisfactory atmosphere for successful interviews. Expressing himself for print was obviously a new role for the cobbler, suddenly become conspicuous as a parent due to the recent birth of his 15th child.

A slight frown suggested that Mr. Bedoe would willingly leave advice on how to raise children to those who speak theoretically rather than from experience. Yet, here he was cornered and he challenged his interviewer to launch the questioning.

Weathers Depression Well.

Mr. Bedoe was asked concerning his particular problems as the father of the city's biggest family during the period of depression. This ordinarily gloomy subject caused him to show the first signs of a smile.

"Well," he commented, "we didn't have any money to lose."

Tony, the eldest boy, glanced up from where he was working with hammer and awl and winked. Tony appreciated his father's humorous sally. It was a hint of the spirit of the Bedoe family circle.

"But depression or no depression," explained Mr. Bedoe, "never in our household do we hear anyone say, 'Dad, I gotta have this, or, I gotta have that.' Sometimes one of the boys or girls will say they really ought to have this or that, and I agree to go into conference on the matter. Of course, all my decisions have to end the same way, but there is never any complaint.

Occupy Six Room Flat.

"And of course, in the biggest family there ain't much chance for any one member of it to be pampered and spoiled. We all just make the best of the fact that there ain't no extra spending money provided in the budget. To get along in the six room flat we all just have to be congenial."

Not all the members of the family were born in Chicago. Mary, the eldest, 19, was born in Austria-Hungary; Tony, 18; Rose, 17; Joseph, 16, and Andrew, 14, were born here. Jack, 11, and Johnny, 10, were born in Bloomington, Ill. Lewis, 9; Katherine, [illegible] Vilma, 4, and Alice and Ella, 5, were born in Colfax, Ill. Theresa, 3, and Mike, 2, were born in Chicago, as was Anna, who arrived some 10 days ago.

Mr. Bedoe was asked if the smaller towns of Bloomington and Colfax had not proved more satisfactory than Chicago in the rearing of a large family. It was Emerson who emphasized the law of compensation. The shoemaker, turned philosopher, thoughtfully replied:

"Well, it's this way: In the small town you may have more chance to raise a garden and keep chickens that would help out, but in the country there aren't as many people around who want their shoes fixed."

No Doctor Bills to Pay.

Mr. Bedoe said that his flock always has been healthy and he never has had doctor bills to pay.

"You see," he said, "the missus only figures on the kind of food that goes furthest in every way. That means the old country idea of nourishing soups—carrots, peas, celery and potatoes. Always spinach twice a week. For variety, the peas can be changed to beans. But no fried foods or pies or anything like that. We haven't a cranky disposition in the whole lot. I might add that we have to buy six quarts of milk a day.

"Of course, it's a household with a good deal of self-denial on every one's part, but it is a home where there's a good deal of singing and where there's no one lonesome for a playmate. Like most boys and girls, they love to tease each other, but it never turns into a quarrel.

Favors Trades for Boys.

"Three of the boys are here with me learning the trade. That is something to which I have given much thought. I had a long talk with the school superintendent when we lived in Colfax, and he told me that there were more educated people these days looking for jobs than there were any other kind. I figured that I'd rather have my boys able to do something and do it well than thinking of competing with others for the easy jobs.

"But I have no wish to talk on the subject. Every one is welcome to their own ideas, and I am not criticizing those with small families, although I know some of them have only one or two children where there is a good income and have a hard time managing things. I'm kept busy with my own affairs. I only know that all my boys and girls are good to their mother and to me and to each other, and that they are always respectful and eager to take advice."

"And which one," Mr. Bedoe was asked, "is the favorite of the bunch?"

"Well," he smiled, "we don't have pets, but, of course, it's the new baby, right now, that's the chief center of attraction."

JACKSON BLVD. CHURCH GREETS PASTOR TODAY

Former New Yorker to Assume Pulpit.

Dr. Riley B. Montgomery of New York City will assume the pastorate today of the Jackson Boulevard Christian church, the oldest Disciples of Christ church in Chicago. He will preach his first sermon at 11 o'clock this morning and will speak again at 7:30 o'clock this evening.

THE REV. R. B. MONTGOMERY.

For two years Dr. Montgomery has been research associate of the Institute of Social and Religious Research of New York in a study of theological education in the United States and Canada. At the church he succeeds the Rev. Charles R. Oakley, who resigned last January after a ministry of nine years. With a membership of approximately 600, the church located at Jackson boulevard and Western avenue, has had a continuous history of more than 57 years.

Holds Yale Degree.

Dr. Montgomery has been recognized throughout the east for his work in organization in Disciples of Christ churches. Born in Boone Mill, Va., in 1895 of a family of pioneers in this denomination, he received his early education in the public schools of Franklin county, Va., and at Lynchburg college in Lynchburg, Va., where he was graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts. In 1922 he received his master's degree from Vanderbilt university at Nashville, Tenn., and the following year the degree of bachelor of divinity from the same institution. In 1929 he was graduated from Yale university with the degree of doctor of philosophy.

In 1919 and 1920 Dr. Montgomery served as pastor of the Christian church in Rocky Mount, Va., where he organized several young peoples' organizations. The following two years he was pastor of the Springfield Christian church, Springfield, Tenn., and from there went as associate pastor to the Vine Street Christian church, Nashville, Tenn.

Formerly on College Staff.

Dr. Montgomery has also served as promotional secretary of Lynchburg college, and associate pastor at the Centerbrook Congregational church, Centerbrook, Conn.

Officers of the west side church who will welcome Dr. Montgomery formally this morning are William C. Coggins, chairman of the board and president of the missionary organization; W. H. Haggard, chairman of the board of trustees; H. F. Bentley, treasurer; John Pickens, chairman of the finance committee, and Ogden Ashley, Sunday school superintendent.

FRED BORTERS IS REAPPOINTED AS K. OF C. DEPUTY

Fred Borter was reappointed deputy for the twenty-fourth district of the Knights of Columbus last week by James Donahue, state deputy. Keyed to Today's Needs!

HAVE you fewer customers this year than last? Have some of the old ones stopped trading with you? Have you found it difficult to find new customers?

Not a few merchants and retailers face the problem of maintaining sales volume under present-day conditions.

Some of them, however, have given up trying to do anything about it. They are sitting back, waiting for the return of good times.

Some merchants, on the other hand, refuse to wait. They are making their own good times by doubling their efforts. If business won't come to them, they go out after it—and the medium they use is the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune.

Here is a way to pep up your sales that is keyed to today's needs. Advertising in the Metropolitan Section is low-cost advertising. It is efficient advertising. It is productive advertising. It reaches the families who are spending the money. You direct your message only to actual prospects, for you buy only that portion of the Sunday Tribune's huge circulation that is read on your side of the city, among people who can trade with you.

Are you content to wait for good times, or do you want to make your own good times?

Think it over. Then decide to find out the complete facts about Metropolitan Section advertising and what it can do for your business. Call Superior 0100 tomorrow—Metropolitan.

Ready to Start Stage Season in Manhattan

Week of Aug. 24 Brings Eight Premieres.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Not a single new play, show or frolic will be staged on Broadway during the next seven days, although the week is traditionally regarded as marking the start of the new season. The first première in sight is "Ruddigore," to be revived at Erlanger's theater on Aug. 10. The week of Aug. 17 is barren of announcements. But during the week of Aug. 24, new shows will be in plentiful supply, so a faithful historian of the stage must announce that date as the marker of the season's opening.

Here is the way the premières of late August along Broadway are listed at present:

"Love's Out of Fashion," a German comedy, with Walter Woolf as star, on Aug. 24. "Three Times the Hour," a melodrama which Brock Pemberton will bring to the Avon on Aug. 25; George White's "Scandals," coming to the Apollo, perhaps on the same night; "After Tomorrow," the Hugh Stange-John Golden play, listed for the Golden theater on Aug. 27; the "Vanities," announced to open Earl Carroll's new playhouse, also on the 27th; "Friendship," which George M. Cohan will bring to the Fulton, on Aug. 31; "Cloudy with Showers," the Floyd Dell-Thomas Mitchell comedy, scheduled for the Morosco on that evening; and "Free for All," the Schwab and Mandel musical show, which will set up shop at the Manhattan either the week of the 24th or 31st. Less definite are Miss Unger's play, "Ladies of Creation" and a Negro pastime called "Fast and Furious."

It seems that Jed Harris' projected cycle of Eugene O'Neill revivals will not be started until after the Theater Guild has staged the same dramatist's latest opus, "Mourning Becomes Electra." This may be professional courtesy on Mr. Harris' part; but on the other hand it may be a shrewd decision to ride along in the backwash of the publicity that O'Neill's three layer creation is certain to stir up.

"Desire Under the Elms" will be the first of the revivals, and Eugene Powers will probably have the rôle that Walter Huston originated. The second will be "Marco Millions," on the staging of which Mr. Harris is said to have some new ideas. Mr. Powers will probably be seen in this play also, in the rôle of the Great Khan, which was acted for the Guild by Baliol Holloway and Morris Carnovsky.

Items from the Shuberts' news bureau are as follows:

Judith Anderson will tour in Pirandello's "As You Desire Me" during the first months of the new season. She will spend a fortnight in the Canadian cities, beginning Sept. 21, and on Oct. 5 will open in Boston for a run. In January she will appear as the star of a new play, the title and authorship of which are a state secret in the Shubert office.

"The Venetian," by Clifford Bax, which the Shuberts will import from London, will begin its career in Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26, and will also have a week in New Haven, Conn., before entering New York. Five members of the London cast will be employed in this production.

Ethel Barrymore, now started on a western tour in "The School for Scandal," has dropped her plans for a repertory. She hopes to reach New York in the rôle of Lady Teazle around the Christmas holidays. Earlier in the summer she talked of a quartet of vehicles, with "Hedda Gabler," "Camille" and "Françesca da Rimini" as the other three.

◆

Mae West intends to make another filibustering expedition into the drama. Her new play will be called "The Constant Sinner," and it will be a dramatization of her novel, which bore another title, and which very few people seem to have read. Atlantic City will be the scene of the tryout, during the week of Aug. 24. A Broadway première will follow, on or about Sept. 10.

◆

Among the hits of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" are a group of numbers salvaged from a revue called "Who's Who," promised last season by Arthur Klein, but never staged. They bear the titles of "Changing the Guard," "Doing the New York," "Clinching the Sale," and "Victim of the Talkies." Which would come under the heading of unimportant information but for the fact that Mr. Klein has another show by the same authors. "Vanity Fair" is its title, and early September will see its staging.

◆

"Cloudy with Showers," by Floyd Dell and Thomas Mitchell, is being pointed for the Morosco theater on Aug. 31 by Manager Patterson McNutt. Its story deals with a professor who becomes involved in a scandal with one of his co-eds. Broadway has begun to refer to this play as "a feminine 'Young Woodley'."

◆

Charles Coburn, who appeared in the Chicago company of "Lysistrata" last winter, wants to act "The Peacock," by Leonard Ide, a play that almost tempted George Arliss to take a vacation from the pictures. George C. Tyler also did some flirting with "The Peacock," as a possible vehicle for Otis Skinner.

Plans for Carnival.

Riverview Park is turning its attention toward its autumnal Mardi Gras carnival. Aug. 15 is the date of the carnival opening. It will continue until Sept. 20.

CONTINUED:

"High Hat," with Edna Hibbard, James Spottswood, and Richard Taber; Adelphi theater; seventh week.

"Stepping Sisters"; Blackstone; twentieth week.

COMING:

"A Modern Virgin," by Elmer Harris; Garrick, opening Aug. 17.

"Salt Water," comedy, by Frank Craven, with Taylor Holmes and Fiske O'Hara; Playhouse, opening Aug. 22.

WEEKLY CHANGE:

R.-K.-O. Palace theater: Continuous vaudeville and talking pictures; Bessie Love, headliner.

Academy theater: Burlesque and talking pictures; "French Frolics," with Miss Carmen.

NEW LADY TEAZLE

ETHEL BARRYMORE.

[Fink Photo.]

THE classic role of Lady Teazle in Sheridan's comedy, "The School for Scandal," is now being acted by Miss Barrymore. She is making a midsummer tour to the Pacific coast, and probably will reach Chicago, when eastward bound, about Thanksgiving day. She first appeared as the flirtatious lady of the famous screen scene eight years ago, with her uncle, the late John Drew, as Sir Peter.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

interrupted his frenzy of composition in order to go to Russia, where his blatherskite tendencies have been manifested in fulsome after luncheon oratory in praise of that economic and governmental insanity called communism.

The Guild says on this point:

"Recently we cabled Mr. Shaw concerning the play. Yes, he replied, it was entirely likely that it would be completed by fall, but that his optimism in this quarter was not to be construed as a promise. We are, however, familiar with his working habits, and with the concentration which he puts into a task until it is finished. In our own heart we feel that the play should be in our hands before the snow flies."

There is only one detail in the approaching theatrical situation, as thus outlined, that the dramatic editor of THE TRIBUNE faces with a sense of unutterable weariness. And that is this new play by Mr. Shaw. The Theater Guild may rejoice over it, but the mere thought of it gives me a sinking feeling. I have seen enough Shaw, and heard enough Shaw, for one lifetime. The famous tongue-in-cheek of the so-called British Aristophanes begins to strike me as a morbid growth, in need of surgery.

Playwright Vs. Censor.

The fear of a stage censorship has been hovering over Broadway for months, because of provisions in the Masker bill, which may be brought before the New York state legislature. This worry has caused the birth of an organization which bears the title of National Council on Freedom from Censorship, and of which a group of professional playwrights and novelists appears to be the founders.

The chairman of the council is Hatcher Hughes, author of "Hell Bent for Heaven." The vice chairmen are Elmer Rice, author of "Street Scene," "The Adding Machine," etc.; Fannie Hurst, and Barrett Clark. Its membership includes authors, lawyers, and educators.

The organization is planning a legislative campaign to attack the post-office censorship over books and publications in the mails. It will also undertake to effect the repeal of certain New York state motion picture laws, of the theater "padlock" law, known as the Wales act, and the laws giving special police powers to vice reform societies.

The council, apparently, has overlooked the greatest current menace to the freedom of the imaginative writer, which is the bawdiness, vulgarity, and vicious exploitation of depraved sex themes now widely practiced in the craft of letters. A playwright or a novelist deserves no more freedom of self-expression than he earns by his manifestation of good taste, artistic sincerity, and cleanness of purpose.

Jack and Jill Plays.

"The Haunted Castle" is the next children's performance to be given at Ravinia by the Jack and Jill Players under the auspices of the Ravinia Opera club, Aug. 6. The play will be directed by its author, Marie Agnes Foley.

The Jack and Jill Players' winter season of Saturday afternoon performances opens Oct. 3 at the Chicago Woman's club theater. There will be an extra performance every first Sunday afternoon of the month. The players will also take part in a pageant on Labor day in Soldiers' field under the auspices of the Federation of Labor.

Actress Stars Own Managers in Repertory

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Katharine Cornell will take over the Belasco theater under an arrangement expected to be completed soon. This indicates that Miss Cornell, with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as a nucleus, will install her long planned repertory company in the playhouse presided over so many years by the late Belasco.

This does not mean that Miss Cornell will take over the Belasco organization, as that machine disbanded after the death of its leader. She has not yet decided whether she will take "The Barretts" on tour before she produces a new play in New York.

◆

In addition to Miss Cornell, three other woman stars will have their own theaters and repertory troupes this fall. Alice Brady will be given a theater by her father, William A. Brady, in which to produce a cycle of dramas in which she will be starred. The first will be "Manhattan Nocturne," already tried out in Atlantic City. It is being rewritten before being brought to town.

Pauline Lord, who quit the stage for a while after her marriage, is returning in the rôle of producer. She has one play in rehearsal now and is looking for a theater of her own.

Jane Cowl also will go "independent" this fall and manage her own plays. She will produce a repertory. Several of her appearances are likely to be in Shakespearean works.

The new operetta being written by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach is almost completed, and it has been titled "The Passionate Pilgrim." The two principal rôles will be played by George Metaxa and Dorothy Debenham, both well known on the London stage, but this will mark their first trials in this country.

Metaxa, a Rumanian by birth, is a matinee idol in England. After making a hit in "Wake Up and Dream" he played opposite Peggy Wood in "Bitter Sweet" for two years.

Frieda is a diminutive 4 year old who plays in "The Green Pastures." Her performance consists mainly in getting a fish bone caught in her throat in the scene where the Negroes have an old fashioned fish fry.

Two nights ago Frieda disappeared, and only after a frantic search was she discovered sitting out in the audience in a second row seat.

"I hadn't ever seen the show and I wanted to," she explained to the reproving stage manager.

'Modern Virgin' for Chicago

"A MODERN VIRGIN," a comedy by Elmer Harris, will be the first new play of the season in Chicago, opening Monday, Aug. 17, in the Garrick theater. It will be presented by the Messrs. Shubert, following its successful engagement on Broadway.

Mr. Harris, as in "Young Sinners," deals with the subject of the young moderns in "A Modern Virgin." The play tells the story of a mischievous girl of 17, who, writhing under the strict discipline of a maiden aunt, decides to discover the secrets of love and life.

The cast will be headed by Roger Pryor, recently seen here as the leading man of "Up Pops the Devil"; Margaret Sullavan, who was acclaimed as the ingénue "find" of last season, and Herbert Rawlinson, a celebrity of the screen.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

were converted into an amusing set for the first act finale.

Such well known songsmiths as Irving Berlin, Philip Charig, Dorothy Fields, Jimmie McHugh, the Lief brothers, and Vernon Duke have given lyrics and music, and such nationally approved wits as Nunnally Johnson, Dorothy Parker, Peter Arno, and Broun, himself, have supplied dialogue material.

Those who gave money may get all of it back—indeed, the $11 opening night paid back almost all of the production cost—but they'll get no dividends. Profits are to be shared coöperatively by the principals.

A coöperative show is no news to Broadway, and rarely is a charity. Shoestring producers make a habit of getting their casts to waive salaries even though Equity loudly objects. But "Shoot the Works" is a different sort of thing in that no shoestringer will profit by his cast's sacrifice. Loose, amiable, and informal, it is much like the old "Garrick Gaities" or "Grand Street Follies." At the opening Broun told the critics that he wanted constructive criticism. They should start, he said, by saying the show was swell and build up from there. Most of them did their best by Heywood by reporting that the revue had some swell numbers.

A Radio Skit.

There is, for instance, a rapid skit in which Jack Hazard, veteran among comedians, played the rôle of a radio announcer gone mad from having to say the same old things in the same old way every night. To bring him to sanity his daughter arranges a fake broadcast in which the old gentleman may work off all his suppressed language. The old gentleman curses roundly, warns the unseen audience that the next number will be terrible, and confides that Uncle Ned, who tells bedtime stories, is really a bit of a lecher. Hazard played the part magnificently the opening night, though he felt not at all well. Next morning his doctor told him he had chicken pox—caught it from the Hazard children—and the actor relapsed sadly into a state of quarantine.

Just as the fake microphone provided an outlet for an announcer gone mad, so, apparently, did "Shoot the Works" provide an uninhabited medium for lyric writers. "I'm back in circulation again," warbles a torch singer whose romance has busted; "I want to chisel in on your heart, I want to muscle in on your love," sings a gangster swain to his moll; "I'm just a doorstep baby" is the refrain of another piece, and a fourth gets melodic significance out of the phrase, "Pie in the sky."

Producers Attend.

Some of the sketches may have proved comforting to Florenz Ziegfeld and the other commercial revue producers who attended the première. In the show business for a living, they came to see what a philanthropic movement could turn up. Broun, Johnson, Dorothy Parker—all excellent writers—have been pretty much ignored by a commercial stage that sticks to the same old George Kaufmans and Howard Dietzes and Gene Bucks. Now, with a fellow writer and former dramatic critic as the big boss, they might show the old money grubbers a thing or two.

Broun chose for his own offering a sketch entitled "Death Says It Isn't So." He admitted to the audience that it was a bit serious—but he liked it, he said, and the audience had better not think it funny. A dying man is visited by Death, Death being a genial looking Irishman in brown coat and white trousers who fingers a pack of cards instead of a scythe. The dying man is amazed that he isn't afraid, and when Death leans over to whisper a funny story the invalid goes into a paroxysm of laughter. The nurse thinks it's the death rattle, but Death says it isn't so. We all go out laughing at that same gag.

Ineffectual on the Stage.

A comforting notion, without doubt; and, as Broun set it down on paper, a beautifully told one. But it wouldn't act.

So it was with a Dorothy Parker sketch—and she, like Broun, has often criticized the drama in the public prints. Her sketch, in which a young man with a hangover learns from a girl all the horrible things he has done the night before, must have been perfect light reading in the Parker vein, but as material for actors it was something less than perfect.

At a modest $3 top price "Shoot the Works" may find its place in the summer playgoer's schedule. And as long as it does it will provide a clearing house for actors. An eccentric dancer, one Al Norman, joined the cast at the last minute, too late to have his name on the program. In his first Broadway appearance he stopped the show. Earl Carroll was in a subsequent audience, and before the week was over Norman had been engaged to appear in Carroll's "Vanities."

Stock Companies Thrive.

Despite a depression which has cut the list of Broadway offerings to twelve, the summer stock companies have been thriving as well as or better than in former years. For a fraction of their New York wages actors and actresses of first standing are content to spend their vacations in rural spots from Skowhegan to Southampton. Not a few of the stock companies content themselves with offering tried and true hits, while others, more adventurous, try out new plays.

One of them, in Westport, Conn., has been organized with more than a hot weather existence in view. Called the Country Playhouse, the theater has deftly been made from an old barn in an apple orchard. Its sponsor is Lawrence Langner, member of the board of directors of the Theater guild, and its company includes Rollo Peters, Romney Brent, and Dorothy Gish.

Langner, a patent attorney, has found that the Theater guild does not provide enough of an outlet for his energies. An enthusiast on the topic of repertory, he has seen the guild's plans for a repertory season crumble year after year. The Lunts are supposed to act in "Elizabeth, the Queen" and "Much Ado About Nothing" on alternate weeks, but "Much Ado" flops as a production. So, in Westport, Langner has organized his own repertory company, and when the new season opens he will bring it to Broadway independent of the guild.

A Varied Repertoire.

Catholic indeed is his list of six plays. There is a revival in a better-than—"After Dark" manner of Dion Boucicault's "The Streets of New York"; there's "The Comic Artist," by the Pulitzer prize winning Susan Glaspell; there go Shakespeare's "As You Like It"; a comedy by Langner himself, and another comedy by William Cotton, magazine writer.

The "Streets of New York" revival is done with fine gravity, and to see Miss Gish go into a Victorian swoon or to see the personable Brent as a drunken young schemer is to become enthusiastic over the Langner plan. If the very old Shakespeare, the pretty old Boucicault, and the new Glaspell can all be done within the space of a week, this new repertory theater should hold the Broadway interest.

Late this month Earl Carroll will open his new home for extravaganza, a 3,000 seat hippodrome where, by charging a mere $3 or less a seat for ten performances a week, Carroll hopes to afford productions that will knock somebody's eye out. Not depending upon press releases, but having been taken on a tour of inspection by Maestro Carroll himself, I am able to report that the new theater has dazzling possibilities. Carroll has thought of a couple of stunts that the movie cathedrals have failed to discover.

Public Address System.

There are, for instance, loud speakers concealed in every corner of the theater—in the rest rooms, in the lobbies, and in the dressing rooms. When the stage manager wants Will Mahoney on stage he simply plugs in the Mahoney dressing room and barks through the loud speaker. When intermission comes and is about gone the public address system will be turned on, and the awed customers will hear this polite warning: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is the stage manager speaking. The performance is about to begin."

Just behind the orchestra pit and in view of the audience is a black panel from which a formally attired "light conductor"—head electrician to Mr. Carroll's competitors—will manipulate the buttons that light the show. Everything is at his fingertips. A red tipped button slides up or down a groove and red lights glow or grow dim. A green tipped button controls green lights, another amber, another white. Each groove has numbers alongside of it, so that the lighting of any one set will have a code number—6291 meaning 6 on the red, 2 on the blue, and so on.

Thoughtful of the Beauties.

Backstage Carroll has been most thoughtful of his beauties. Each girl will have her own modernistic dressing table. There will be a refrigerator in which they may keep their Johns' orchids. There will be telephones so that John may talk to his girl from the stage door. The elevator is extra high, so that girls may get aboard without crushing their headdresses. A Carroll beauty without a headdress doesn't exist.

Perhaps the most quixotic detail of the whole place is a card room for stage hands. Stage hands, says Carroll, are good fellows even if they do keep a poker game going all during a performance. So why not give them a clubroom? The room he has provided is large, with a real fireplace in one corner. Unhappily, it is below stage and has no real windows. So the thoughtful Carroll is building a false window. During matinees it will glow with artificial sunlight, and in the evening it will be illuminated with synthetic moonlight.

Actress Speaks Her Mind

KATHARINE CORNELL, now in her first year under her own management [and with the highly successful "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as the result], has answered a questionnaire about theatrical conditions on "the road" by stating that they are the fault of New York's theater overlords. She says:

"I believe that the reason theatrical conditions on the road are not what we would like them to be is due to the fact that the public has been cheated by managers for so long that it has become impatient and disinterested. By this I mean that the poorest and sketchiest presentations have been untruthfully advertised as original New York productions; even some stars have failed their public by allowing their performances to fall below the New York standard.

"Until we restore playgoers' faith by giving them good plays, well done, it is natural that their interest in the theater is lukewarm. I hope I have made it clear that, in my opinion, it is the managers themselves who are to blame for the present conditions outside of New York."

In Vaudeville

HERE are notations on the acts that comprise the vaudeville program at the Palace theater for the current week:

BESSIE LOVE—The cinema star "in person." Originally placed in the movies by John Emerson, she was developed into stardom by D. W. Griffith. Her personation of a Duncan sister in the first musical talking picture, "Broadway Melody," brought her into vogue. In Hollywood, after working hours she shares honors with Lupe Velez as an informal entertainer. She sings, plays a "uke"—and owns half a dozen cups which declare her to be the champion Charleston stepper of Hollywood's ballrooms.

HON. M. WU AND HIS CHINESE COLLEGIANS — They combine the skill of the oriental as an entertainer with American jazz ideas in dance and song. A company of half a dozen young men and girls in a specially produced "unit." Incidentally most of the collegians come honorably by the title.

HOWARD, FINE AND HOWARD—They were originally "stooges" with Ted Healy and have graduated into an act of their own. With them are Jack Walsh and Ruthie Goodwin.

BILLY FARRELL AND DAD—Dancers and comedians who are really father and son.

THE FOUR KADEX—A European importation with an aerial apparatus on which they perform hazardous tricks.

Chicago Girl Ascribes Film Entry to Luck

But Personality Makes Frances Dee Favorite.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Three summers ago Frances Dee was a want-ad taker for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Two years ago she went from her home in Chicago to spend a vacation in Los Angeles.

And now this 21 year old girl, whose big blue-gray eyes sparkle with ambition and humor, daring, and willingness for hard work, suddenly has become one of the favored younger darlings of the movies, after a sequence of events which never would have happened if she had known in advance that the things she experienced can happen to only one movie aspirant in 10,000.

Miss Dee is one of the few young film favorites who never dyed her hair to get a part. She still wears it the natural chestnut brown of her college days at the University of Chicago. She did not change her own name to to film name. She did not go in for "movie society," but lives comfortably at a home made for her in Hollywood by her mother, Mrs. F. M. Dee of Chicago, and an older married sister, Margaret. She did not pose in lingerie and kimono photographs to win herself publicity in cheaper magazines.

Rejects Starvation Diet.

She eats what and when she feels like it, figuring it better to remain a normal healthy American girl than to starve herself under 110 pounds, as most of the younger actresses do in furtherance of film aspirations. Miss Dee weighs 115. She has not had any "engagement" announced to this, that, or the other actor for the double reason that she does not believe in this overused and unintelligent Hollywood means of obtaining newspaper mention, and because she has so conducted herself that none of her Hollywood "friends" have felt it necessary to pass the word around that "Frances Dee" is secretly engaged to so and so.

After coming to Los Angeles for a visit in the summer of 1929, seeing the sights and taking the recommended trips about the countryside, Frances read some movie studio publicity to the effect that University of Southern California girls and Los Angeles high school girls were being recruited at $10 a day to act as part of the college atmosphere in "Words and Music," a Fox film, supposed to have a sorority girl sequence.

As a member of the Sigma club and sophomore class at the University of Chicago, Frances went over to the Fox movie lot "just for fun."

One Chance in 10,000.

"What happened, I know now, was pure luck—one chance in 10,000," says Frances. "I knew so little of what was going on that I stood in the wrong line at the casting office, and by mistake was handed one of the slips given to extra girls who had been summoned to work.

"Finally, I had to explain. Jack Phillips of the casting office scowlingly asked what I was doing there. I said: 'I'm a college girl and I want to get into your college girl picture.' It was so unusual and I suppose it sounded so fresh that he and another man laughed. They sent me to the assistant director in charge of details on the picture. The truth is there was not one college girl or high school girl there, and the chance that sent me in with extras caused me to be given a bit to do—chatting over the sorority house telephone.

"Then I was ruined for returning to school. I wanted to stay in pictures. I wrote to my father and received his permission to remain out here a year."

But films did not take as kindly to her as brown haired Frances had eagerly expected after the first opening.

"It was after a couple of bad tests and nine months of unimportant occasional extra work that I said to myself: 'Well, I got in at Fox's, perhaps I can get in somewhere else the same way.' So I boldly went over to Paramount."

* *

Cinema Progress.

Working without pay every night from 8 to 12 to improve herself in dramatics at the Pasadena Community playhouse helped Miss Dee chisel a bit as a bridesmaid in "Fu Manchu," a Paramount production. Next she was one of ten girls taken in three weeks' location with the "Follow Through" troupe.

She then played a rôle, again without any pay, at the Hollywood Writers' club, but in films continued to get nothing but bits. Then some higher up at Paramount, seeking a fresh face for Maurice Chevalier's "Playboy of Paris," decided to give Miss Dee a chance. The chance stamped her as a leading actress prospect. Her mother and sister came to Hollywood and made a home for her with them. Parts in "Along Came Youth," with Buddy Rogers; "June Moon," with Jack Oakie; "Caught" [not released], with Richard Arlen, and "The American Tragedy" [not released] elevated her to a five year contract and secure place among the younger actresses.

Miss Dee's father was an army captain in ordnance, later going to utility corporations in Chicago until called to Indianapolis with a power corporation. Father Dee is now reconciled to a movie actress in the family despite hearty original doubts about it.

More Plays by Abie's Creator; Theater Gossip

ANN NICHOLS of "Abie's Irish Rose" fame, who deserted New York for Hollywood two years ago, will return and open producing offices on Broadway early in September. She proposes to present three new plays, all by herself or written in association with other authors, during the forthcoming season.

◆

George White announces that the cast for the forthcoming edition of "Scandals," the eleventh of the series, has been completed with the addition of Joan Abbott, Fred Manatt, and Ross MacLean. Others already chosen are Rudy Vallee, Willie and Eugene Howard, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, Barbara Blair, Mavine and Virginia Loomis, the Gale Quadruplets, and Dorothy and Harry Dixon. "Scandals" will open in Atlantic City on Aug. 10. Joseph Urban has designed the settings.

◆

"The Man Who Pays the Piper," a play written by G. B. Stern, English novelist and playwright, has been purchased for production in the fall by Horace Liveright. The author, who was represented on the American stage two seasons ago by "The Matriarch," will come to New York for the première. Mr. Liveright's first production of the season, a play by Edwin Justus Mayer, is now known as "Things as They Are." Its previous tentative titles were "The Last Mask" and "In Statu Quo."

◆

Alexander McKaig has bought for production for next season "Achilles Had a Heel," by Martin Flavin. It will be directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Mr. Flavin is author of "The Criminal Code" and "Children of the Moon." Mr. Mamoulian has directed "Porgy," "R. U. R." and "A Farewell to Arms."

◆

Henry A. Rosendale has placed in rehearsal a farce called "The Widow Is a Virgin," which he wrote. The cast will be headed by Sam Ash and Enid Markey. Mr. Rosendale expects to open the production in New York in about three weeks. He was coauthor of "Lady in Pawn," staged in Chicago last winter.

◆

"Manhattan Nocturne," which was tried out last week in Asbury Park, N. J., by William A. Brady, with his daughter, Alice Brady, as star, has been withdrawn for revision. Miss Brady is scheduled to begin a two weeks' stock engagement in Montreal on Aug. 3 in "A Most Immoral Lady," which she acted in New York in 1928.

◆

To date William A. Brady has not found a play suitable to serve as a vehicle for his wife, Grace George, who recently relinquished her option on John Halloran's "En Famille." If he does not get a new play for her by Oct. 1 Miss George will go on tour again in "The First Mrs. Fraser," visiting the south and west.

◆

Jane Seymour has been engaged for the rôle played by Helen Flint in the New York company of "The House Beautiful," which will begin a tour in Philadelphia in September. Mary Philips and James Bell will continue in the cast.

◆

"The Passionate Pilgrim" will be the title of the musical play by Otto Harbach and Jerome Kern which Max Gordon will produce in the fall. Dorothy Debenham, an English actress, has been engaged for the show, which will go in rehearsal early in September.

◆

Miss Billie Burke began an engagement at the Curran theater, San Francisco, last Monday night in "The Vinegar Tree." She is playing the rôle acted in New York by Mary Roland.

Critic Selects Six Best Films of Last Month

Actors Also Receive Word of Praise.

By Mae Tinee.

by Film Daily, the following were chosen as outstanding directors:

TEN BEST DIRECTORS OF 1930-1931.

	No. of votes
Lewis Milestone	252
Wesley Ruggles	179
George Hill	160
Josef von Sternberg	148
D. W. Griffith	139
Robert Z. Leonard	137
John Cromwell	111
Charles Chaplin	101
Howard Hawks	101
Howard Hughes	91
THE HONOR ROLL.
Alfred E. Green	80
Edward H. Griffith	75
Clarence Brown	74
Ernst Lubitsch	69
George Fitzmaurice	48
Robert Milton	47
Mervyn LeRoy	43
Raoul Walsh	42
Lloyd Bacon	36
Harry D'Arrast	36
John Robertson	35
Harry Beaumont	34
Edmund Goulding	34
Victor Fleming	30
Lionel Barrymore	29
Ernest B. Schoedsack	26
Tod Browning	25

COMPLETE LIST of pictures directed by the "Ten Best" follows:

Lewis Milestone—"All Quiet on the Western Front," "Front Page."

Wesley Ruggles—"The Sea Bat" "Cimarron."

George Hill—"The Big House," "Min and Bill."

Josef von Sternberg—"The Blue Angel" "Morocco."

D. W. Griffith—"Abraham Lincoln."

Robert Z. Leonard—"The Divorcee," "In Gay Madrid," "Let Us Be Gay," "Bachelor Father," "It's A Wise Child."

John Cromwell—"The Big Pond," "For the Defense," "Tom Sawyer," "Scandal Sheet," "Unfaithful."

Charles Chaplin—"City Lights."

Howard Hawks—"The Criminal Code," "The Dawn Patrol."

Howard Hughes—"Hell's Angels."

COMMENTS Film Daily—Milestone's achievement is particularly notable in that the two productions he directed were vastly different in origin and design, in addition to being produced on different lots. "All Quiet," was adapted from the war novel by Erich Maria Remarque, while "The Front Page" came from the stage hit of the same name.

"For the first time in the six years that the Film Daily has been conducting its annual vote on directors, Ernst Lubitsch failed to be included among the Ten Best. This is ascribed to the fact that in the year covered by the present vote Lubitsch directed only one production, 'Monte Carlo.' On this picture he received enough mentions to make fourth place in the honor roll.

"Lubitsch, however, still leads as a Ten Best winner, since he is the only director with five citations. Herbert Brenon and King Vidor made the grade four times each, while Charles Chaplin and Clarence Brown have been among the topliners three times in the six years. Those who have won out twice include James Cruze, Cecil B. de Mille, D. W. Griffith, Rex Ingram, Frank Lloyd, the late F. W. Murnau, Malcolm St. Clair, Josef von Sternberg and Raoul Walsh." . . .

RICHARD CROMWELL, the young chap who made such a hit in "Tol'able David," has been signed for a leading male rôle in "Then Hell Broke Loose" . . . ANNA Q. NILSSON who has been off the screen for three years due to injuries received making a picture, is expected home from Sweden next week. . . JAMES CAGNEY, the tough gangster of "The Public Enemy," devotes six hours a day to practicing on the piano . . .

See you tomorrow!

LOOKING FOR PLAYS

ALICE BRADY.

SHE is the daughter of a veteran theatrical manager—William A. Brady—and the instinct to act is in her blood. Miss Brady doesn't come to Chicago often but her name is frequently seen in the electric lights along Broadway. Last spring she made a vivid impression in "Brass Ankle." Now she is hunting for new plays, with the idea of taking a New York theater for the season.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Favors Credit Division.

Dear Miss Tinée: Could you please tell me why Marie Dressler gets all the credit for every picture she is in with POLLY MORAN? In "Reducing," I thought POLLY MORAN was wonderful, but who got all the credit and praise? No one but Marie Dressler. The same thing happened in "Politics." Something should be done about this at once.

Thanking you,
GEORGE WISSING.

Editor's note: What would you suggest?

Capable of Self Defense.

Dear Miss Tinée, After reading Miss J. W.'s letter in reference to me in the "Voice of the Fan," I couldn't resist a retort in my own defense to her, and to all those so-called responsible people whose cause she is championing.

In the first place I believe you are conducting a movie column, not an "outdoor life" affair, for poets, he-men from the great wide spaces, etc., of which all these responsible people seem to be a part.

Bruce is, no doubt, all right in his way, but in your column he doesn't seem to be very heavy.

I can't understand what life and love have to do with a movie critic's reviews. So Bruce, take yourself out, write to a different outfit, such as "Advice to the Lovelorn," or "Who's Who Among the Cowboys and Indians." I feel sure you'll go over big.

F. WATTS.

Editor's note: Now that everybody's had their say we'll ring off on this controversy.

* *

Lacks Publicity Manager.

Dear Mae Tinée: In the "Voice of the Fan" Jean Siek asks this question: "Why does the public sigh over Chevalier and his smile when Clark Gable and his dimples are on the horizon?" She says she really wants to know.

Well, I'll tell you why. Chevalier was praised and lauded to the heavens before he ever set foot on United States soil, let alone our "silver screen." He was lucky—he had a good publicity manager, I think.

Clark Gable got nary a word of publicity until he fought to win it. He deserves every kind word he gets. He's made himself LOVED in hard rôles. I'm sure you will agree that it is seldom a gangster-murderer-villian or what have you, is loved and admired as Clark Gable is. That's a trick.

A CLARK GABLE FAN.

Editor's note: Sure it's not a dimple?

Tribute to Leslie Howard.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am writing this in hopes that it may attract your many readers' attention to a rising young actor of unusual ability and poise. I refer to Leslie Howard. Only today I witnessed "Five and Ten," and not so long ago "Never the Twain Shall Meet." I was unfortunate enough to have missed your reviews of both these pictures, but feel certain that you, also, must have praised both excellent performances of the gentleman in question.

I read your section entitled "Voice of the Fan" and hope you will do me the favor of publishing this bit of tribute to the fascinating Leslie Howard. Sincerely, yours,

DOROTHY FOLEY.

Editor's note: With pleasure!

* *

"Perfect Lady of the Screen."

Dear Mae Tinée: I have just witnessed the most magnificent performance I have ever seen. It's quite remarkable, since I have seen many great pictures.

How you can say that Norma Shearer played a close second to Lionel Barrymore in "A Free Soul" is more than I can see. She never did and never will take a back seat. Her performance was perfect. She can register sadness and joy better than any other actress. She's the finest actress on the screen of the present or the past.

Let the fans have their Garbo, Crawford, and Bow and their many copies, but I'll stick to the "present ladies of the screen," Norma Shearer for me! Do you blame me?

W. A.

Editor's note: Blame you? Never. I just envy Norma!

* *

Inspired to Rhythm.

Dear Mae Tinée: [Re: that poem of several Sundays ago].

Floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by all truly élite cats.
It's simply amazing you didn't know!
But if you must see them, here's where to go!
Down darkest alleys on moonless nights,
Listening for sounds, and looking for sights,
Such as you've never, never seen
In dreams, or in life, or upon the screen.
Walk, O! so lightly! Beware of a sneeze!
Listen for solos in minor keys!
Follow the echo of padded feet
Under the fence and across the street
Into the arc lamps yellow glare.
O, you'll be astonished when you get there!
Feline aristocrats garbed in the mode
Sponsored by Paquin [and custom sewed].
Sombreros, tilted at dangerous angles,
Fashioned of mouse skin and dripping with spangles.
Well, if you're skeptical, just go and see;
Then you will have to agree with me
That floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by the truly élite cats.
In the name o' nonsense!

DOROTHY.

Editor's Note: Your verse though catty is very natty.

* *

Question for Producers.

Dear Mae Tinée: I don't want to write a long letter for I know you have so many to look over, but I would like to ask you one question.

In a revived picture why don't they use the same star in the talkie that they did in the silent?

For instance, have Richard Dix star again in "The Vanishing American." Or Norma Talmadge in "Smiling Through." I know I would love to see them and there are probably a lot more people who would, too.

Thanks a lot for your valuable time. Yours truly,

CRESIE.

Editor's note: I like the idea! Why don't you write the producers about it?

* *

A Movie Fan's Views.

Dear Mae: I have seen two pictures of Edward G. Robinson, and I want to say that I think he is great. "Little Caesar" and "Smart Money" convinced me.

I wish some one would take Lon Chaney's place. Lon was a great actor. He would risk his life just to make a picture. Would any one else? No! That's why he was my favorite.

Such stars as Emil Jannings, John Barrymore, and others couldn't do such things as Mr. Chaney did in his pictures. Here's for a double for [Genius Man of a Thousand Faces] Chaney. Truly yours,

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's note: I wonder how many of us love our work well enough to risk our lives for it?

* *

Probable Explanation.

Dear Miss Tinée: It MAY have been the heat. Sincerely yours,

BILL FRY.

Editor's note: Well, do write again when you feel warm enough.

* *

Question Remains Unanswered.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you kindly publish the following letter:

Why do we insist upon discouraging real art in the movies, by registering preference for movie king and queen at the box office, and in our fan letters for such "acting" as is regularly being given us by merely a couple of good looking youngsters only portraying their own most natural inclinations, by making love to each other, and who are incapable of real acting, or of stepping out of their own individuality and into that of another character?

Instead, why do we not learn to recognize as the best actor or actress the artist who is best able to portray the greatest number of most contrasting characters, and not the mere performer who is only able to be himself, which we all can do.

Very truly yours,
C. A. CARLTON.

Editor's note: I don't know why.

* *

Surprise for Some One.

Dear Miss Tinee: For want of having nothing better to ocupy my time in the p. m. I find the picture houses restful and cool, and see all the stars. Then we are offered usually a very good variety of interesting subjects from all over the world, but I don't think the public appreciates this enough.

The low grade of books written today has a lot to do with the type of pictures produced. Producers should not film pictures where "Adults only" is advertised, but, as Mr. Arliss says, it is hard to satisfy the public when movies are turned out at the rate of ten pictures a week.

These are some of my ideas. I don't expect to have them published.

A MOVIE FAN.

BEST JOKES

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you want to see it in print send it to Best Jokes, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Described by Example.

"What kind of a guy is he?"

"Well, for example, if he barked his shin, he'd say: 'Oh, the perversity of inanimate objects.'

'Peter Ibbetson' Scheduled for RaviniaMonday

Bori, Johnson Will Sing Leading Roles.

By Edward Moore.

Tre Re," it was—they set up the "Peter Ibbetson" scenery on the stage and Miss Bori, Mr. Johnson, the other members of the cast, the conductor, and the stage force experimented with tricky, intricate lighting cues until 4 o'clock in the morning. This is just a detail in what it means to stage an opera.

The work has had quite a history. It was a novel of fantasy by George du Maurier in 1891. It was regarded with desire and apprehension by people of the stage for nearly a quarter century—desire for its plot, apprehension of the risks of the dream scenes. In 1915 it was dramatized by John Raphael. Then Constance Collier rewrote the dramatization and played the rôle of the Duchess of Towers with John and Lionel Barrymore. Incidentally, it was Maurice Barrymore, their father, who had been anxious to have it in play form years before.

Success of the Year.

Then Deems Taylor grew interested in the play as a subject for opera, and is credited on the fly-leaf with having been the co-author with Miss Collier in converting the play into a libretto. Having done that, he wrote the music.

The work was brought out at the New York Metropolitan on Saturday, Feb. 7, of this year, and it apparently became the leading popular success of the year as far as operas are concerned. It even caused a renewal of interest in the play. Miss Collier staged its revival, and Jessie Royce Landis of Evanston acted the Duchess of Towers rôle. There is talk even now of Miss Collier taking the play on tour this coming season.

Mr. Tayor is coming out to Ravinia to see the first performance given his work outside of New York. When his other opera, "The King's Henchman," was put on at the Metropolitan a few years ago, Mr. Johnson, who sang the leading rôle in it as well as in "Peter Ibbetson," received this among his other notes of congratulation: "Dear God, Thank You for thinking up Eddie Johnson when You were making tenors.

Doubling Necessary.

The opera takes a long cast. Mr. Johnson and Miss Bori lead the list, as just said. Alfredo Gandolfi will appear as Col. Ibbetson, Florence Macbeth as Mrs. Deane, Ina Bourskaya as Mrs. Glyn, and Louis D'Angelo as the prison chaplain. There are a dozen or more other rôles, necessitating quite a bit of doubling. Margery Maxwell and George Cehanovsky, for instance, have each of their names opposite three different characters, though luckily no two of them appear on the stage at the same time.

The conductor is to be Wilfrid Pelletier, a member of the Ravinia and Metropolitan conducting staffs for a number of seasons past. He was selected in this case at Mr. Taylor's personal request.

This opera, by the way, is Ravinia's gesture toward the English language.

In a World Apart.

While on the subject of Ravinia, this seems a fitting place to include some impressions written by a visitor. The visitor is R. L. Hickman, M.D., of Clinton, Okla.:

"There is an atmosphere of dignity and quiet beauty in this group of low, unpretentious buildings among tall trees. God made the trees but surely Ravinia park is the work of an artist. Perhaps one feels this more keenly coming from the city, where life swarms on the lake shore in pagan splendor of bathing suits and beach pajamas. That has a beauty too of its own—the picture of a great middle class city enjoying itself in summer, but here at Ravinia is something else. Here are people come to see and to listen, quietly and intently.

"The opera is 'Faust' and the first act begins before dark. It all seems far away and perhaps a little silly at first. One wonders if, after all, opera is not an anachronism in this modern age. Then complete darkness shuts off the outside world. We are suddenly taken into the world of Faust, Mephisto, and Marguerite. The magic has worked again—opera will never die.

"The beautiful garden scene is the high spot of the opera. It is then that we enter entirely the world of make-believe. The spell endures from then on, even through the long train ride back to the city.

"It seems a marvelous idea to me — Ravinia park — beautifully carried out and managed. I don't know how it happened. Whether it is run by subscription or for the purpose of making money. It doesn't matter—so long as it is there. One only hopes that there will be no reason to discontinue it."

In Russian Concert.

A fairly active week will mark the Ravinia activities in addition to "Peter Ibbetson." There will be a Russian concert this afternoon. Eric DeLamarter and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will present Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" Symphony, Stravinsky's "The Fire Bird," and Joseph Vito, harpist, will play solos by himself and Thomas. The evening performance will be "Fra Diavolo," though the Russian implications of that attractive operetta are not at present entirely clear. Still, it is a first performance of the season. Florence Macbeth, Ina Bourskaya, Mario Chamlee, Vittorio Trevisan, and Virgilio Lazzari will sing the leading parts, and Gennaro Papi will conduct.

There are other new performances on the week's list. "Il Trovatore" is up for Tuesday night with Elisabeth Rethberg, Julia Claussen, Giovanni Martinelli, and Giuseppe Danise in the cast. The next night "Romeo and Juliet" will be heard for the first time this season from the throats of Yvonne Gall and Edward Johnson in the name parts, and Margery Maxwell, Desiré Defrere, Alfredo Gandolfi, and Leon Rothier in others.

Choristers at Loyola.

The Mundy Choristers, an organization of eighty Negro mixed voices, will take the stand in Loyola university stadium this evening under the direction of James A. Mundy, to assist Adolphe Dumont and the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra in the weekly Sunday night concert. Two groups of spirituals will be sung as well as the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "The Messiah," all numbers in which the Mundy Choristers will participate in the Chicagoland Musical Festival Aug. 22 at Soldiers' field. There is also word of the presentation by chorus and orchestra of Loyola university's new anthem composed by Walter Dellers, and first heard in the June commencement exercises.

Mr. Dumont and the orchestra are presenting an attractive summer program which includes Dvorak's "New World" Symphony, the prelude to Act III. of "Lohengrin," Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" Overture, Coleridge-Taylor's "The Bamboula," Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slave."

Ukrainian National Dances.

The fine art of the dance, which has been increasing in popularity to a marked extent in recent years, is apparently due to go on bigger and better during the season to come. Even at this early date there are announcements of events to come.

One refers to Vasile Avramenko, Ukrainian ballet master, who is now in Chicago preparing 500 dancers for an evening of Ukrainian national dances. The place will be the Civic Opera house and the time the end of October, the exact date not yet announced. Mr. Avramenko has been living in New York, and they tell of a similar festival at the Metropolitan Opera house last April, with special emphasis upon the dashing ardor of the dances, the kaleidoscopic colors of the costumes, and the enthusiasm of the audience.

Another dancing newcomer will be Carola Goya, whose Chicago arrival is also the rather indefinite some time in October. She is Spanish, and dances in the four manners of classical, flamenca, gitana, and modern. Last season she gave eighteen recitals in New York. La Libertad of Madrid vouches for her in emphatic terms, saying that her dances are not only of extraordinary beauty, color, and rhythm, but in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance.

Indiana State Contest.

A state-wide contest of male quartets is to feature the Indiana state fair at Indianapolis, Sept. 5 to 12. Contestants are now organizing in the townships, with county elimination contests to follow and the finals at the fair. Each county will be permitted to send two quartets, one whose members are under 26 years old, the other over that age. The contest is being conducted by the Indiana farm bureau through the social and educational department, and the songs to be used have been selected by the bureau and the Indiana Federation of Music Clubs. All professional singers are barred, and only members of rural communities are eligible. The first prize winning quartet in each class will receive a cash award of $100, second place $80, and third place $70. Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of Otterbein will have charge of the contest.

Speaking of opera companies and the synonymous red ink figures, the Opéra-Comique of Paris adds an item to the sad, sweet story. George Ricou recently resigned as director in protest against the insufficient subsidy granted by the government. Figures that have been made public indicate that in France, too, they have their operatic troubles.

The Opéra-Comique receives an annual subsidy of 1,800,000 francs, and its total receipts run between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 francs. On the other side of the ledger it has to pay 2,000,000 francs, or more than its subsidy, about 9,300,000 francs in salaries, 2,250,000 to the orchestra, and 1,240,000 to the choristers. With regard to the quality of the last, there has been much publicly expressed dissatisfaction. In addition, the organization is obliged to stage twelve new works yearly, and much time and money go into these.

Scores Triumph at Bayreuth.

There is word from Bayreuth that Toscanini scored a reasonable success with his conducting of "Tannhaeuser," and an undebatable one with "Parsifal" immediately afterwards.

Slovak day will be celebrated at Riverview park today beginning at 10 o'clock this morning. The program will be under the auspices of the United Slovak societies and for the benefit of the Slovak-American Charitable association. National songs and national dances will be performed by costumed organizations. The dances have been arranged by the Slovak Artists' club, and the group will number eighty. A featured number will be the appearance of the Slovak Shepherds, who play on an instrument resembling a flute under the direction of Martin Pavella.

PETER IBBETSON

EDWARD JOHNSON.

THE name at the bottom of the picture is his own, the one at the top is the character in the like named opera that he will sing at Ravinia tomorrw and Saturday nights. The opera, by Deems Taylor, was produced by the Metropolitan Opera company last February, and at once became the operatic hit of the season. This will be its first performance outside of the Metropolitan. It is in English. Mr. Johnson's associates will be Lucrezia Bori as Mary, Duchess of Towers, and Alfredo Gandolfi as Col. Ibbetson.

FOR "IMPROPER DUCHESS"

IRENE BORDONI.

THE Dramatic League of Chicago has announced the engagement of Miss Bordoni for the leading role in "The Improper Duchess," a play that it will soon import from London. Its heroine is a flirtatious French girl, and Irene is a specialist in such characters. She is the favorite Anglo-French actress of the American stage.

Drama of Insect Life Listed in New Recordings

"Spider's Feast" Is Ably Interpreted.

By Edward Moore.

COLUMBIA gives a view of some rather notable modern music this month. It is a four side recording of the ballet pantomime, "Le Festin de l'Araignée" [The Spider's Feast], by the French composer, Roussel. Rather curiously, in the light of so much talk from the best minds of music about the value of absolute music, some of the best compositions of the present era are coming from composers who have something as definite as the stage presentation in mind.

For the benefit of those who did not hear Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra present this work about five years ago, the piece works out as a drama of insect life quite in accordance with its title. The first section is the prelude and entrance of the ant; the second is the dance and death of the butterfly; the third deals with the birth and dance of the dayfly; and the last with the death and burial of the dayfly. Apparently the ant and the spider are the only ones who come out well in this particular tragedy.

Columbia's numbers are 67952-D and 67953-D. The work is played by the Orchestre des Concerts Straram of Paris and conducted by Walther Straram himself. The recording is rather good and performance excellent. It is rather hard to describe accurately a modern piece of music, or any other piece of music for that matter, but this one is brisk and bright, and apparently a bit affected by Stravinsky in the period when he wrote "Petrouchka."

There is a pair of Wagner songs that seem to be as inevitably linked together as the Italian operas, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." They are "Traeume" and "Schmerzen." Brunswick in the Hall of Fame-International, No. 90178, presents them from the throat of a noted German soprano, Elisabeth Ohms. Both have orchestral accompaniment, but Julius Pruewer conducts "Traeume" and Manfred Gurlitit "Schmerzen." Excellent results both vocally and instrumentally should be set down for both.

* *

An Amusing Experiment.

Brunswick in No. 20100 is stepping out from standardized music into an interesting and amusing experiment with popular music. The two sides record what are called paraphrases by Victor Young of "I Surrender, Dear," and "Star Dust." Even in the memory of what Paul Whiteman and Ferdie Grofé have occasionally done with popular music, they are rather eye opening.

Here are two tunes whose pretty, graceful turn of phrase and naive construction classify them plainly as belonging to the popular classification, but Mr. Young, who is likewise both conductor and soloist in their performance—the Boswell sisters lend other vocal aid—builds them up as earnestly as though he were writing a symphony. Everything is there, symphonic changes of key and mood, unexpected dissonances, skilled treatment of instrumental color, and if his earnestness occasionally sounds as though it were of the tongue in cheek variety, the work is none the worse for it. There are some of us who believe that American popular music is the best popular music in the world, and this record would seem to prove that it is good enough to be capable of considerably more elaborate treatment than it is in the habit of getting. The instrumental body is the Brunswick Concert orchestra, a first class organization.

A mild protest in this column the other day to the effect that only the second half of Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini" had been received from Victor brought prompt correction of the error by the receipt of the missing disk. Wherefore comment is cheerfully reopened for the statement that the first half is even better in performance and recording than the second indicated. The piece is on the Red Seal list, Nos. 11091 and 11092, played by the London Symphony orchestra under the direction of Albert Coates, and those who have followed Mr. Coates' performances will realize more completely than this column can say how expert he is in the perception and projection of dramatic values in music.

Guild Plans

THE Theater Guild announces that "He" will open its New York season; that "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in its leading rôles, will probably be seen in several of the subscription cities before it appears in New York; and that the O'Neill trilogy, "Mourning Becomes Electra," should open about Oct. 26.

Theater Rents Reduced.

A Broadway theater, the Central, was recently rented for $1,000 a week. "The lowest known weekly rental for any Broadway house to date," says Variety, "has been $3,000 a week." Five years ago it was almost impossible to get any Broadway theater without a minimum guarantee of $4,500 on a basis of sharing the gross intake, so that the theater-owner's share might come to $6,000 or even more.—Theater Guild Magazine.

How to Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things

Fat Melts Away

Science has made important discoveries in fat reduction. The average fat person can now rip off fat a pound a day—four to seven pounds every week!—on a full stomach, with never a hungry moment. Thus it is foolish now to stay fat.

This is what you do: Take a teaspoonful ordinary Jad Salts in a glass of water a half hour before breakfast every morning. This reduces moisture-weight instantly. Also cleanses the system of the waste matter and excess toxins that most fat people have, and banishes puffiness and bloat.

Then do this about eating. FILL YOUR STOMACH—eat your fill—of lean meats, vegetables like spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, tomatoes, etc., and lots of salads. Eat a lot. Eat all you can hold. Don't go hungry a minute! Cut down on fats, sweets and desserts. Eat any fruit for dessert.

That's all you do. Fat seems to melt away. The coarse lines of overweight give way to the refined ones of slenderness. You lose as much as a pound a day. You feel better than for years. For in this treatment you achieve two important results. The Jad Salts clear your system of toxins. *The diet takes off fat with food that turns into energy instead of weight.

If you're tired of being embarrassed by fat, try this way. You'll be glad that you did. You can get Jad Salts at any drug store.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent—not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

Born and Bred in Chicago

ISABEL RANDOLPH has succeeded Grace Huff in the character of Rose La Marr in "Stepping Sisters," now at the Blackstone theater. Illness forced Miss Huff to relinquish her part. She has gone to a Canadian sanitarium for treatment and rest.

Miss Randolph is well known to Chicagoans who frequent the theater. She made her debut in Chicago when she was carried on the stage at the age of six months. Later her schooling continued when she became a member of the Bush Temple Stock company. She played with Lenore Ulric in "The Bird of Paradise"; with Richard Bennett in "Kick In," and with Zelda Sears in "The Nest Egg." Her most recent Chicago appearances in Chicago were in "The Noose" at the Selwyn theater in 1927 and in "If I Were Rich" at the Cort in 1928.

Stage Stars for Vaudeville

The RKO Palace vaudeville programs have been devoting themselves to "in person" headliners from Hollywood, but the stage isn't going to be neglected. Harriet Hoctor, as fine a dancer as the American stage knows today, will arrive Aug. 8. She will bring a dancing troupe, and will probably repeat the "hunt" ballet that was the highlight of Ed Wynn's "Simple Simon" last winter. Edward G. Robinson will follow on Aug. 15. He has been a dependable stage actor for years, suddenly skyrocketing to fame with his cinema gangster impersonations.

After that Basil Rathbone and Catherine Dale Owen will co-star in a brief version of "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." Louise Groody, star singing girl of musical comedy, will follow.

Loses 16 Pounds of Fat---Eats As Usual

Fat Folks—Here's More Proof—One Bottle of Kruschen Salts and Sixteen Pounds Gone—Eats As Usual—Sleeps Better—Costs 85 Cents

The Kruschen Figure of Health and Vivaciousness. How Will You Look On The Beach This Summer

Modern Science now makes it possible for you to easily and what's best, to SAFELY obtain a bewitchingly lithe, free-from-fat figure and actually enjoy exhilarated health and increase your attractiveness while doing so—

Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—you can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, fatty meats and pastries.

Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. I feel so good in many ways. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lose fat, too. I have told 2 of my friends about Kruschen and they find it as I do."

Unlike other salts, Kruschen doesn't aim to reduce by rushing food through the system—rather it's a superbly blended combination of SIX separate mineral salts which help glands, nerves and body organs to function properly—it drives poisons and harmful acid from the body—Kruschen strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—that's why it's so amazingly successful in cases where everything else has failed!

And just stop to consider how inexpensive Kruschen is—an 85c bottle lasts 4 weeks and offers the same marvelous reducing and health-giving properties which hitherto wealthy people paid thousands of dollars to go to the famous mineral Spas of Europe to obtain. All druggists the world over sell Kruschen and will give your money back if you don't obtain the results you're after.

Revival of Last Season Cinema Hits Welcomed

Old Western Thrillers May Be Next.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The system of "bringing back the big ones," being tried out at the Rialto theater in Times square with considerable success at 25 cents a head, opens a grab box full of possibilities in the picture show world. Over at the Rialto the seats are filled from 11 a. m. until midnight and not all of the audience is composed of bargain hunters.

There are a lot of pictures these days and a lot of people do not get around to more than one feature a week. Consequently when the hits of last season show up at a theater with first run conveniences and third run prices the folks who missed the features when they were first shown are going to drop in.

Garbo, Dietrich, Bancroft, Gary Cooper, and a host of other stars are playing at the Rialto these hot summer days and nights. It is cool inside the theater and some of the old pictures are better than the new ones. The shows are not as long drawn out as at the theaters where the up-to-the-minute films are being shown and, anyhow, there is considerable difference between 25 cents and 65 cents.

Some of Better Westerns.

Now that the movie public has shown its love for last season hits, at least in this town, why not go back into the past and dig up some of the better westerns—epics of those days when men were men and women were chased by the Indians—and show them in a refrigerated playhouse.

The movies are getting softer and softer these days. Even the run of the blood and thunder underworld films are namby pamby tidbits. True, the occasional "Public Enemy" or "Little Caesar" comes along to provide the exception that proves the rule, but for the most part the heroes have lacked the red-blooded vitality of the horse and saddle era of romance.

I believe there are a good many thousand persons throughout our land who would like to forget there are such places as Chicago, New York, Paris, and London. In fact, a lot of those people who would like to forget live in those cities, and yet the talkie makers keep shoving life in the big cities down their throats. Let's have more horses and mustaches and movie heroes who take mustard on their breakfast food instead of sugar.

Roxy's theater went in for something resembling a western picture recently, and it was a big success. It was called "The Holy Terror," and its hero was an up-to-date hombre. He rode horses—at polo—and took to the air on occasions in an airplane. Of course, the hero did not stack up with the heroes of the Bill Hart era, even though he did leap a death-dealing gulch near the Great Divide. The point is the audience liked it and no doubt would like most of the older westerns whether they were made to talk or permitted to remain grim and silent.

Foreign Films Showing.

New York is filled with foreign films this week, but first we will look in on a Hollywood product at the Capitol. "Son of India" with Ramon Novarro is a pleasant enough romance. Taken from an old novel by F. Marion Crawford it tells the romance of an American girl and a young Indian prince. At the end the rich young Indian gives the girl up and harkens to the words of wisdom offered by a beggar prophet. It will do for the summer days.

"Sunny Side Up," with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, is the offering at Roxy's. "The Magnificent Lie," featuring Ruth Chatterton, is the feature at Paramount. "Sunny Side Up," of course, is a revival and a good one. To keep up the past history idea the stage presentation at Roxy's is called "Fifty Million Years Ago," and it is a spectacular affair, the headliner being a dinosaur.

"The Magnificent Lie" was well spoken of by the critics, but this observer has yet to see it. "Night Nurse" is still "telling all" at Warner's Strand.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

NOW is the time to check up on the plans, promises and dreams of theatrical producers for the approaching stage season. A census reveals that 44 firms or men constitute what might be called the "big league" of the drama, and that some 10 others are occasional contributors to Broadway activity. Their announcements for the early months of the new playgoing year contain 200 titles, excluding established successes that will be sent on tour.

This represents an improvement upon last year, when the stage's midsummer statistics did not include more than 150 titles of contemplated productions. It is, indeed, a long step up the ladder toward the abundance of the predepression years, when the managers' August schedules included from 250 to 300 titles.

All this, of course, refers to theatrical production for the Broadway market, out of which come the shows of proven popularity that finally go adventuring on "the road"—a vague region which to the Broadway mind includes all of America outside the borough of Manhattan. In this connection it may be noted that Broadway has at last become "road conscious," and is planning to win back the affections of its lost customers in other cities.

* *

Theater Guild Opinion.

The Theater Guild magazine comments editorially on the subject as follows:

"Officials in the Erlanger office tell us that their bookings for the coming season are more plentiful than in recent years. In the Shubert theaters it would appear that the planned reorganization should prove beneficial in improving booking conditions both inside and outside of New York.

"One thing is almost certain—both offices are cognizant of the fact that a standard of quality must be maintained, and both offices have expressed their intention to look to this point. Despite the business depression, shows of merit have drawn excellent patronage during the last year, both in and out of New York. Mr. Ziegfeld's 'Follies' played to two capacity weeks in Pittsburgh late in June, with the thermometer ascending in a city that does not possess those sea breezes which sometimes disguise the temperature in New York, Boston and Chicago. And in New York many excellent plays are defying the heat with ease.

"We cannot explain the conservative optimism which prevails throughout the theater at this moment, but it does exist, and most of it is founded on a sound basis. The best proof of it is to be found in the definitely announced plans of the leading producers. They seem not to be hedging."

* *

Shubert Catalogue.

The Shuberts lead the "big league" with plans already matured for fourteen productions. They list their entries as follows:

"The Laugh Parade," a musical show with Ed Wynn as star.

A musical comedy in which George Jessel will be starred.

Maurice Schwartz and his Yiddish Art Theater company, giving their repertory in English.

"Kissable Girl," a musical comedy based upon "Up Pops the Devil," with Frances Williams, Nina Olivette, Evangeline Raleigh, and the Ritz brothers in the cast.

"Le Chienne," a French drama, translated by Forrest Wilson.

"Hearts in Repair," an operetta adapted from the German, with Queenie Smith as star.

"Forbidden," a new play by Elmer Harris, author of "Young Sinners" and "A Modern Virgin."

"Cocktail," an intimate musical comedy adapted from the German; score by Ralph Benatsky.

"The Improper Duchess," a comedy by James Bernard Fagan, highly successful in London, with Irene Bordoni as heroine.

"Poor Men's Daughters," by Elmer Harris.

"Love's Out of Fashion," a comedy adapted from the German of Wilhelm Sterck, with Walter Woolf, Verree Teasdale, Walter Petrie, and Leslie Austen in the cast. To be staged early in August.

"Land of Smiles," an operetta with music by Franz Lehar, now popular in London.

"The Venetian," a play by Clifford Bax, successful in London; to be staged in association with Maurice Browne.

"The Good Companions," the dramatization of J. B. Priestley's novel; a notable success in London.

A season of revivals of famous operettas at the Jolson theater, New York, and on tour.

Erlanger Offerings.

The novelties on the Erlanger list at present are eight in number, as follows:

"The Social Register," a play by John Emerson and Anita Loos, with Lenore Ulric as star. The cast will include Elizabeth Taylor, Wilfred Clarke, Betty Garde, Helen Tucker, Thomas Maxwell Conover, and Gerald Yorke.

"Faraway Horses," a drama by Gilbert Emery and Alan Birmingham, to be staged under the direction of Chester Erskin.

"Bad Penny," a comedy by William Anthony McGuire, to be offered in association with Charles Dillingham.

"Stella Brady," a comedy by James Montgomery, also in association with Mr. Dillingham.

A new play by Frederick Lonsdale.

Maurice Chevalier in an entertainment, in New York and on tour.

Up Pops Mr. Shaw.

The Theater Guild's schedule, in addition to the plays announced earlier in the year, will include George Bernard Shaw's latest work, called "Too Good to Be True." At least the Guild feels confident that it will be able to stage this play, as yet unfinished, during the coming season. Mr. Shaw

USHERING IN THE NEW MONTH

Rich pickings, Mitzi Green and Louise Fazenda seem to be finding in Jackie Searl's mouth, as well as in "Newly Rich," the current attraction at the Oriental. And Jackie is acquiescent, even though he's equiped with a dangerous looking weapon. He and Mitzi, sterling comedians, are the juvenile stars of the comedy.

Is it "The Magnificent Lie"? Sam Hardy is asking that or a similar question; Ruth Chatterton is at the receiving end of the query, and the film of that title is at the Chicago for the present week.

Joel McCrea and Constance Bennett are expounding "The Common Law" at the State-Lake this week.

"Ex-Bad Boy" is the name of the picture at the Palace, but, from the looks of things, Lola Lane might run away with the honors on that score. The others are Spencer Charters, Robert Armstrong and George Brent, and all of them have plenty to do.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The theater, which is waiting for a new season to begin, has aroused itself from the usual summer time sleep long enough to bring to the George M. Cohan theater a revue born of good will and conceived by some of the best minds.

Entitled "Shoot the Works," it is the brain child of Heywood Broun, column conductor, radio monologist, defeated Socialist candidate for congress, and—which may be more important to use—a former dramatic critic. Mr. Broun, who espouses causes with polygamous frequency, has decided to enter the lists in defense of the unemployed actor. With Milton Raison, a press agent, and Johnny Boyle, a dance director, as his chief assistants, Broun has labored heroically toward the formation of a coöperative show.

Lyrics, Sketches Donated.

With $7,000 in cash to work upon—a good bit of which had to be posted with Equity to guarantee a fortnight's salaries to chorus people—Broun has got a long hot weather show together. Producers contributed scenery and electrical equipment; costumers have given everything from bathing suits to draperies, and a soap company provided a stack of soap boxes which

Long Awaited "Peter Ibbetson" Is Scheduled for Two Performances This Week at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

THAT undercurrent hum of activity proceeding from Ravinia, that set of preoccupied expressions on the faces of several of the company, is not altogether to be accounted for by a busy operatic season, though they have been having an uncommonly active one. Part of it was due to the fact that they were preparing "Peter Ibbetson."

It is now prepared and ready. There has already been an announcement that it would be given its first performance in this part of the country tomorrow night. Now comes a supplementary statement that, since tomorrow night looks like an overflowing house, there will be another performance with the same cast next Saturday night.

Difficult Scenes.

For "Peter Ibbetson," it appears, it has taken a lot of doing to put into shape. It was more than just learning a new operatic score. That is something the Ravinia company takes in its stride. Lucrezia Bori and Edward Johnson, who are to sing the two leading parts, had sung them in New York, and their new associates were promptly rehearsed in their own rôles. But the staging of the piece presented peculiar difficulties.

It has a dream scene, for one, where Peter sees again the garden of his boyhood. It has a final scene where the spirit of Peter takes leave of its wornout human habitation and goes away, young and glorious again, to meet the spirit of Mary, who had just preceded him into death. Once that scenery was built, it had to be tried out, and for this purpose daylight will not do. Also, the stage of Ravinia is in use every night with a performance.

So one night a short time ago—just after a performance of "L'Amore dei

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

ANIMAL lovers, take heed! A burial ground for pets, proclaimed the only one in Illinois, has been opened southwest of Hinsdale. Caskets are used for interment, and tombstones or lifesize statues of the pets mark the graves. John P. Stankowicz, 6000 South Honore street, trustee of the park, offered a lot to Admiral Byrd for his Igloo. Byrd replied personally, thanking Mr. Stankowicz for his offer and praising the idea, but saying that the grave of Igloo must be near the Byrd home.

Anther home town girl has broken into big time. Two years ago Miss Marjorie May Meehan was a student at Englewood High school, and now, lo and behold, after two years in vaudeville in New York, she makes her Chicago debut this week at a loop theater.

We've tidings that Clarence Bayne Jr., son of Our Town's enterprising realtor, has received a one year scholarship to the Y. M. C. A. college. Young Bayne while at Fenger High school was vice president of the national honor society, a captain of the Fenger R. O. T. C. unit and a brevet second lieutenant of the Illinois National Guard. Well, we've always heard "like father, like son."

AMONG the famous personages who dropped in on Our Town for a visit last week was "Baby Illinois." She is Irene Marie Bittner, 3 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Bitner, who used to live here. Irene is staying with her grandmother, Mrs. John McMillen, 828 West Garfield boulevard. She received her title at the Elks' baby show in Peoria, if you must know, and has three other silver trophies to her credit. 'Tis said she will represent Illinois in a national baby show during the 1933 World's Fair.

All sorts of odd things come a physician's way, none perhaps odder than to Dr. Holger N. Hoegh, 2376 East 71st street, the other day. Dangerous business to pack a gun, lady!

160,000 Colored Folk Have Own South Side City

Community 2d Largest in the World.

By Herbert Vedder.

IF YOU would like to look over the second largest Negro city in the world, just take yourself for a jaunt along Indiana or Prairie avenue or South Park way. Only New York's 327,000, two-thirds of whom are congregated in the Manhattan area known as Harlem, exceeds it in size. More than 160,000 of Chicago's 234,000 colored residents live on the south side—a number surpassing the combined colored populations of Atlanta and either Birmingham or Memphis.

No blanket terms—except a designation of race—covers this section of Chicago. It is more than a community or neighborhood; it is like a city, composed of innumerable communities and neighborhoods.

It has its slums, to be sure, as outsiders are well aware, but it has its better districts, too. Investigation reveals neat residential sections, a goodly proportion of professional men, and forces working for the betterment of the race.

Arms of Urban League.

One of the strongest of the latter is the Chicago branch of the Urban league, with its directorate of both white and colored men and women. Its aims are described as two-fold: Encouragement of independence and fostering a civic spirit and civic pride; promotion of interracial coöperation. Negro leaders acknowledge the necessity of white capital in the fruition of their plans.

All sorts of work is undertaken by the Urban league. It has a department of public relations and sponsors industrial training classes. Forums, a lecture series, a free speakers' bureau are among its other branches. Then, there is a department of research and records, which works in conjunction with the University of Chicago. Its work has borne out the general findings as to distribution of types of population in cities. Least desirable sections are those nearest the center of the city and railroad tracks and manufacturing areas. These lie, in general, west of State street and north of 35th street.

Extends Far to South.

The Negro city, generally speaking, extends south to 60th street between Wentworth and Cottage Grove avenues, to 63d street between Wentworth and South Park, and on in West Woodlawn between Cottage Grove and South Park. Beautiful Washington park is its spacious play ground by day, its lovers' lane by night.

Business life centers along 47th street, acknowledged to be the most profitable trade thoroughfare between 63rd street and the loop from Cottage Grove avenue to State street. It boasts neat, bright, up-to-date shops of high rank and one of the finest of the outlying department stores. You can buy practically everything there that is to be bought anywhere.

With the coming of evening the 47th and South Park corner becomes the hub of night life—not a wild, roisterous night life, but one of general carefree gayety, looking for a good time dancing, or seeing one of the several movies showing within a block or so of the corner.

The Colors They Like.

Here one receives a picture of well dressed Negroes in colors they love best—robins' egg blue, pastel green, pink, maroon. The young swains present a study in black and white—flannels or ducks, with panama or sailor or straw top piece.

On Sundays and warm summer evenings snatches of well blended harmonies float out to fascinate the passerby. Beside the many church groups there are a myriad of independent choruses—many of them neighborhood affairs.

The Negro population is classed as largely church-going, and often it is difficult to find a seat at Sunday morning services. Olivet Baptist church is one of the largest colored Protestant groups in the city.

In this big area are to be found all strata of the colored race; large groups of the more ambitious folk have moved southward to escape contacts with undesirables and have formed their own neighborhoods. One of the earliest cases of this sort is in that little notch west of State street and south of Garfield boulevard where the bakeries waft their pleasant scent. Composed largely of somewhat humble frame homes, the district boasts one of the oldest of Negro improvement and protective associations in Chicago.

Air of Solidarity.

Fronting on South Park Way and the north edge of Washington park is one of the district's proudest residential sections. Vincennes and Forrestville avenue south of 47th street are flanked with large homes and trim apartment buildings. There is an air of solidarity and cleanliness to the streets through here.

West Woodlawn, that area lying between Cottage Grove and South Park avenues south of 63d street, is one of the oldest and most highly respected neighborhoods in the Negro city. New bungalows and brick and stone apartment houses grace tree lined streets in this community. Thirty per cent of the residents are home owners and about 7 per cent are in the professions.

There is an impression of security and respectability about the old stone and brick homes and apartments along Michigan avenue and in the section between 55th and 63d streets from State street over to South Park avenue.

Indiana avenue is a picturesque, [illegible] bustling street, with Prairie avenue as a sort of dim satellite, more quiet and residential. State street sort of depresses. Its nightly effort at gayety is a trifle sad.

VOICE of the SOUTHWEST SIDE

South Side Resident Discovers Pleasant Summer Resort

A south sider makes the Our Town column, not because he has chosen some distant spot to spend his vacation but for the reason that he has boldly announced his intention of spending the two weeks period at home. Of vacation trips there is no end, and a list of those who have packed up and left for romantic places beyond the Chicago horizon is too long for any attempt at enumeration. The stay at home gets the break in print. No doubt he has plenty of company, but others lack the courage, perhaps, to announce their choice to neighbors and office friends.

The stay at home, however, need not be at a loss for new and interesting experiences during the idle days. With slight expenditure he can explore other sections of the city and find relaxation at strange beaches or shaded woodland pools. A few moments' journey will put him in surroundings he has never seen before.

Change, of course, is one of the benefits of any vacation. Unless a person is completely worn out, spending a vacation in the same environment to which one is accustomed fails to produce the maximum freshening spirit. Vacations have been found worth while by employers because the vacationist returns with renewed zest. Respite from routine has its values, but added advantage results in complete escape from the daily program. Yet, who can doubt that home may provide the best atmosphere for the anticipated period of rest and recreation?

SAFETY TIPS FOR SWIMMERS.

The director of south park beaches and pools, Herbert G. Reynolds, turns from the seasonal discussion of new bathing suits to warn bathers with a penchant for jumping into the lake elsewhere than at the organized beaches. The bathing costume problem will probably be with us always, but Mr. Reynolds is not so sure about the daring persons who choose their bathing places at random.

It is pointed out that those who leap into the water at any point which may suit their fancy are in danger of death or severe injury from hidden rocks and logs which have been removed from the beaches. Furthermore, such individualists usually are beyond assistance of lifeguards. Already this year, more than one broken neck casualty has been reported.

Inlanders have cause for concern at this stage of the bathing season as to the condition of streams and pools. Analysis of water taken from the lake front shows it to be in good condition from a health standpoint. The courts have decreed that persons should be off the beaches at 11 p. m., hot weather or cool.

The warnings and rules are a part of the bathing beach season. No doubt much of the attraction of the beach is that the recreation offers a complete escape from the routine of existence. It is the hope of authorities that the sport will produce only pleasant and wholesome results. It may be more crowded at the organized beaches, but it is also much safer there.

SMILING AT 88.

"I always tried to be where there was fun, and if I didn't find it I made it. I don't believe in long faces." L. W. Schlau, 88 years old, 6823 South Sangamon street, was speaking. His thoughts were of the 57th annual Old Settlers' picnic, which, with many other south siders, he plans to attend at Riverview park tomorrow. Mr. Schlau contends that keeping busy prolongs life, and he still belongs to the ranks of workers.

"It's best always to have something on the mind," adds Mr. Schlau, "but not to such an extent that is causes worry. It's foolish to try to live two days in one."

Mr. Schlau belongs to that sturdy group of men and women more than four score years old who have lost none of the enthusiasm for life. Interviews with many of them reveal a philosophy of contentment. They appear to be of one mind that, though life may have it woes, they continue optimistic. Their concern is not so much with the acquiring of worldly goods as in keeping alive the friendships formed in the old days.

Each year at the picnics bouquets are awarded to couples whose combined ages make the greatest total of years. Youthful dancers may be familiar with newer steps and move about in more graceful fashion, but the old-timers prove their hearts are still young. They insist that age has not robbed them of the desire to mingle with folk who are likewise on pleasure bent.

Chicago is richer because of the great group of immigrants who sought the city as a place to establish homes and, by the proper mixture of work and play, get the most out of life. To the modern Chicago they contribute their worthwhile philosophy on how to meet depression and disappointment.

HOMEWOOD CELEBRATES.

It is the hard four lane highway that, these days, influences an outlying community's destiny, and Homewood finds itself directly in the path of the Dixie highway widening development. Homewood has watched progress of the highway construction and, now that it has been completed, plans to celebrate in fitting fashion this week.

Homewood is one of those Cook county communities fortunate in having an American Legion post eager and able to assume the responsibility of such civic events. Practically all of those in the locality eligible to membership are active in the Homewood post. They possess the assets of youth, organization, and enthusiasm. A moment's conversation with these leaders reveals an intense community patriotism.

Homewood makes no secret of the fact that one of the purposes of its celebration is to display its wares to those who may not be familiar with what it has to offer the homeseeker.

Temple Junior Aid to Give Lawn Party, Dance

The junior auxiliary of Beth Hamedrosh Hagodal congregation will give another of its lawn parties and dances at 8:30 o'clock this evening at 5345 Greenwood avenue. I. Buchman, president of the auxiliary, is in charge of arrangements. Refreshments will be served and lawn games played.

FIRST U. S. UNIT IN WORLD WAR TO CELEBRATE

13th Engineers to Revive A. E. F. Show Tonight.

Men who formerly served in the 13th engineers, the first American unit to engage in combat in the world war, today will celebrate the 14th anniversary of their landing on foreign soil by laying the cornerstone for the regiment's convalescent center at Camp Bogardus, in the forest preserve at 95th street and Maple Lake. Veterans of earlier American wars will take part in the ceremony.

Presentation this evening of the regiment's stage show, which made a hit with the A. E. F. in 1917, will help to take the minds of the men back to their days in France. The show will be given under the direction of Congressman John C. Schaefer of Milwaukee, who was a private in the regiment. There also will be dancing this evening. For today a program of sports has been arranged.

Judge Marcus Kavanagh, Judge Joseph Burke, Judge Mathew D. Hartigan, and Gen. P. J. H. O'Farrell are to speak. The event is being held under the direction of Edward J. Walsh, Patrick J. Cahill, and Kieran P. O'Gallagher.

The Illinois state championship games in the American Legion Junior baseball world series will be played at Wrigley field next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Cook county champions will be pitted against downstate champions in three games. The games will start at 3 o'clock.

The South Chicago, Marine post, Berwyn, and Rogers Park teams will play for the Cook county title early in the week The downstate championship also lies among four teams.

All children in Chicago younger than 16 years will be admitted free to the championship games. The games will be played under the direction of the state athletic committee of the American Legion, Edwin H. Felt, chairman.

Medill-Tribune post, No. 348, will go on a moonlight excursion on the S. S. Theodore Roosevelt Monday night, Aug. 10. The boat will leave the Michigan avenue dock at 9 o'clock and return at 11:45.

The annual meeting of the Cook county council will be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in the council chamber in the city hall. Officers will be nominated and elected for 1932, including commander, vice commander, finance officer, sergeant at arms, and one member of the Cook county executive committee from each of the nine districts for a term of two years. District members of the executive committee will be elected from their respective districts in caucuses.

The hot weather parties given by Eaton-Priddy post, No. 111, have proved such a success that a grand finale party has been planned for Wednesday night at the club rooms, 7439 Cottage Grove avenue.

Lloyd W. Miles announced that the grand finale party will afford an opportunity to revive all the old war songs. Members of neighborhood posts and their friends are invited to attend.

Its second picnic of the year will be held by Three Links post today. The event will take place in the forest preserve at 91st street and Hermitage avenue. The program will include a ball game, cards, barnyard golf, and the usual picnic sports. Arthur Moldenhauer announced that coffee will be served free.

There will be prizes for dubs, goofers, and golfers at the golf tournament and dinner to be held Friday by Chicago Stockyards post, No. 333. The event will be held at Cog-Hill Golf club, Archer avenue and 119th street. James B. Neary is chairman of the committee.

William M. Devine has been elected commander of South Shore post, No. 388; John F. O'Brien, senior vice commander; Al Marks, junior vice commander; Edward A. Kamp, finance officer; the Rev. R. R. Weissmueller, chaplain; Fred Haughten, historian, and Roy Hull, sergeant-at-arms.

Yankee post, No. 490, will hold its annual picnic next Sunday afternoon and evening at White City park, 63d street and South Park avenue. The park will be at the free disposal of post members, their families and friends. A place has been provided at the south end of the park for picnic gatherings at lunch time.

Square post will elect nine delegates and nine alternates to the state convention at its meeting tomorrow night at the post headquarters, 6115 Cottage Grove avenue. The state convention will be held at Peoria, Aug. 31.

Members of Van Buren post, No. 401, their families and friends, will have an air outing today at Justice park grove, Archer and Keane avenues.

S. SIDE HEBREW CONGREGATION TO PICNIC TODAY

The South Side Hebrew Congregation will hold its annual picnic today at Gruener's grove, just off Sheffield avenue, Hammond, Ind.

A baseball game between teams representing the Men's club and the junior assembly is to be played as a feature of the afternoon's program of games, swimming, various athletic events, and entertainment. The proceeds will be turned over to the Talmud Torah.

Lawrence Klein is chairman of the entertainment committee in charge. Others on the committee include I. H. Braun, Nathan Freeman, Siegfried Kohn, and Joseph A. Rhein.

84 FOOT DRIVE FOR WORLD FAIR READY FOR USE

Work on New Buildings Is Started.

The new 84 foot World's Fair roadway along the Illinois Central tracks between 23d and 39th streets, which is to take the place of Leif Ericsson drive during the exposition, is to be opened to day time traffic tomorrow. This announcement was made Thursday by Fair officials.

Originally the drive was designed to have a parkway in the center with a 35 foot roadway on each side. It was opened that way several months ago and proved unsatisfactory, so the last few weeks have seen workmen paving the center strip of 14 feet.

Building Blocks Drive.

With construction well under way on the steel framework of the Hall of Science, Leif Ericsson drive has been closed between 23d street and the south end of Soldiers' field. The building will extend across the drive, which means that the latter will not reopen until after the exposition is over, officials said.

Traffic from the south side to the loop will be forced to continue using the east drive auxiliary World's Fair road and the cutback at 16th street over to the east side of Soldiers' field and by the administration building. It is felt that opening the road along the west side of Soldiers' field to both north and south traffic is unwise at the present time, though such will be the case during the exposition, when the entire Ericsson drive will be closed south to 39th street.

200 Work on New Hall.

More than 200 men are being employed on the Hall of Science while 25 are at work driving piles and leveling ground for the electrical group, started last week on the south end of Northerly island. Within six weeks about 150 men are to be employed on the electrical group. This will not be completed until next year, although the science building is to be done about Dec. 1.

Basic and medical science exhibits are to be housed in the science building, which will be U-shaped, approximately 700x400 feet. It will be two stories and a mezzanine in height. The opening of the U will face east and surround a rostrum with a capacity of several thousand persons. The north façade, centered in Leif Ericsson drive, will be distinguished by a semi-circular grouping of twelve pylons. It is to rise from colored concrete terraces and is to be painted in white and gray, with trimming of red and gold. It is to be lighted at night by indirect and fluctuating colored flooding.

The electrical group is to be two stories high, 1,200 feet long, and 300 feet wide. The power electricity unit will be a three-quarter circular structure at the south end of the building, rising from a series of terraces and surrounding a landscaped court. White, red, yellow, blue, and black are colors to be employed.

CROWN BUILDING BODY RE-ELECTS A. H. HANSEN CHIEF

President Andrew H. Hansen and the other officers of the Crown Building and Loan association of South Chicago were reëlected at the recent meeting of stockholders and directors. Gus Steinweg and C. A. Hansen were named directors to fill vacancies caused by the deaths of Neil Lykke and John J. Poulton. Mr. Lykke founded the association 36 years ago. $208,000 was reported as paid out to stockholders and directors last year.

Other officers reëlected were vice president, Dr. Edward Luehr; treasurer, Arthur H. Hansen; secretary, Mrs. Essie P. Zern. Directors other than the officers and new directors already named: Walter Tredup, C. A. Carlson, John Bonnicksen, Joseph Mohr, Michael Bloch, Vincent Knaus, and Raphael Jackson. Alvin Hansen was renamed attorney for the association.

Colony Bachelors to Play Benedicks at Picnic Today

Colony Improvement association will picnic today at Maple Grove, 87th and 100th avenue. Games, races, ball games, horseshoe pitching, and dancing are among the diversions on the program. The married men will compete against the single men in a baseball game. George Boland is chairman and Victor Johnson is in charge of games and contests.

UNITED SWEDISH CHURCHES PLAN TENT MEETINGS

Sessions to Continue for Month.

Union tent meetings begin today in a tent at the intersection of 71st street, Perry and Vincennes avenues, and will continue throughout August under the auspices of the South Side United Swedish churches. This is the twelfth summer that the meetings have been held.

Services will be held today and on successive Sundays at 3:30 and 7:30 o'clock, and on weekdays at 7:45 o'clock, except Mondays. The English language will be used on Sunday evenings and Wednesday and Friday evenings. All other services will be conducted in Swedish.

Rev. Hamlin to Open Meeting.

The Rev. F. C. Hamlin, pastor of the Englewood Swedish Baptist church, 59th street and Emerald avenue, will open the services of meetings this afternoon. He is chairman of the South Side United Swedish churches. The Rev. Herbert Palmquist, vice chairman of the federation and pastor of the Englewood Swedish Mission church, 59th and Carpenter streets, will speak this evening.

Services during the entire month will be conducted by the pastors of the churches jointly sponsoring the meetings. A large choir composed of singers from all the churches, will sing at many of the meetings, with various choir leaders alternating as directors. An orchestra, selected from the various churches, and special quartets also will be organized to furnish music.

The tent has a capacity of 1,700 and the meetings will replace Sunday evening services, midweek services and young people's gatherings in the individual churches all this month. Only Sunday morning services and Sunday school will continue to be held at each church in the federation.

Churches Sponsoring Services.

Churches which are sponsoring the meetings include Englewood Swedish Mission church, Englewood Swedish Baptist church, Bethany Swedish Mission church, 55th and Wells streets; Ogden Park Swedish Mission church, 66th street and Hermitage avenue; Swedish Baptist church, 71st street and Greenwood avenue, and Second Swedish Baptist church, 78th street and Normal avenue.

Tabernacle Swedish Mission church, 62d street and Langley avenue; Grand Crossing Swedish Mission church, 74th street and Cottage Grove avenue; Union Avenue Swedish Methodist church, 62d street and Union Avenue; Auburn Park Swedish Methodist church, 78th and Loomis streets; Hyde Park Swedish Methodist church, 64th street and Kimbark avenue, and Elim Free Mission church, 78th street and Indiana avenue, also are sponsoring the services.

Pastors of these churches who will speak at the meetings include, in addition to the Rev. Mr. Hamlin and the Rev. Mr. Palmquist, the Rev. Walfred Westling, the Rev. Eric Carlson, the Rev. Ellis G. Eklof, the Rev. Carl J. Erickson, the Rev. Andrew Reese, the Rev. S. A. Sackerson, the Rev. D. K. Englund.

REV. W. A. BRIGGS GIVES FAREWELL AS PASTOR TODAY

Auburn Park Union to Be Dissolved.

The Rev. Walter A. Briggs will close his 37 years in the ministry when he holds services this morning at the Auburn Park Federated church, 77th street and Normal avenue. This will be the last service conducted at the Federated church by its own pastor. Mr. Briggs laves on his vacation this week, to be gone all this month, and in September the Federated church as a union of Baptist and Congregational churches will be dissolved, and only the Congregational church will continue.

Marking Mr. Briggs' farewell service there will be a homecoming celebration. Former members of the Federated church and parishioners of other churches of which Mr. Briggs has been pastor will attend the services. Afterward a reception and picnic dinner will be held in the church social rooms.

"Faith of Fathers" Is Theme.

As the theme for his final sermon Mr. Briggs chose "Faith of Our Fathers." He will relate how the principles of the Christian faith have developed in meaning for him and how he has seen them affect others during his 37 years as a minister.

Mr. Briggs has been pastor of the Federated church for two years. He is the church's fourth pastor since it was federated in 1919. Both churches in the federation are pioneer Auburn Park institutions. The Auburn Park Baptist church, which is being dissolved, was organized in 1891 and the Union Congregational church of Auburn Park was founded a year earlier.

Mr. Briggs gave as a reason for the Federated church's dissolution the fact that there are several other Baptist churches in the district and that the Baptist executive council saw no reason to continue its contributions to the support of the Federated church.

Field Well Covered.

"This territory is well covered by Baptist churches and the council decided it was too extravagant to help another church in this field," Mr. Briggs said. "The two churches during the period of their union have always kept their organizations separate, so that there will be no difficulty in the Congregational church keeping on."

The church which will replace the Federated church will probably be a community church with Congregational affiliations, Mr. Briggs declared. He said he expected that many of the Baptist members would remain on.

Mr. Briggs' plans for the future are uncertain, but they include a long rest. He has been only 30 days without a pastorate since he was ordained. He and Mrs. Briggs will visit relatives in Michigan, returning in time for the meeting early in September, when the affairs of the Federated church will be liquidated. Then they expect to visit their son in Sioux City, Ia.

Mr. Briggs has served as pastor in Chicago for fourteen years, first at the Fourth Congregational church, an amalgamation of three churches, then at the Villa Park Community Congregational church and at the Pacific Congregational church, before coming to Auburn Park. He was born near Mount Clemens, Mich., studied at Olivet college, then at Chicago seminary, and was pastor at various Michigan and Iowa churches before coming to Chicago.

The committee in charge of today's homecoming is headed by Mrs. Janetta Woodward and includes Mrs. Margaret Harris, Mrs. William Zuehlke, S. F. Greene, and C. P. Richardson.

Given Farewell After 42 Years as Postman

Paul Henehan, 4528 Oakenwald avenue, retired recently after serving as a postman for 42 years. He is 66 years old and was given a farewell party by the employés of his station at 4235 Cottage Grove avenue. He has served the territory along Drexel avenue for about 40 years.

EIGHT CONTESTS TO REACH CLIMAX IN SOUTH PARKS

Girls' Swimming Meets Saturday Feature.

Eight sets of events will be run off this week as the south park playground program reaches the high point of the season. In addition to these, the final playground ball games will be played in the series of tournaments which started in June, and boys between the ages of 10 and 15 will be taking athletic tests at the various parks.

Entries close tomorrow noon for the annual junior tennis tourney for girls under 14. Elimination rounds will be played Tuesday afternoon in two divisions, the north section competing at Hardin square and the south division at Ogden park. The two survivors in each section will meet later in the week for the title.

Two horseshoe eliminations are to be held this week, the junior tourney for boys under 15 being at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon and the intermediate competition for those under 18 at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. These both will be played in two divisions. North section play will be at Fuller park in both tournaments. The south division of juniors will meet at Ogden park and the south group of intermediates at Bessemer park. The two survivors in each sectional elimination will meet those of the other section in the finals.

Girls in Big Swimming Meet.

Several hundred girls are expected to compete in the three swimming meets which will be rolled into one big affair Saturday afternoon in the Sherman park pool. The junior meet will consist of an 80 foot free style race and diving competition. A 50 yard free style, 80 foot backstroke, and the diving will make up intermediate events. The senior program includes 50 and 100 yard free style events, 80 foot backstroke, 50 yard breast stroke, and the diving.

The annual sandcraft competition will open Thursday and Friday with four sectional preliminaries. There are two distinct competitions: One for girls under 11 and the other for girls under 14.

Teams in both classes at Mark White, Armour, McKinley, Sherman, and Gage will vie at Harding square at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. Those from Fuller, Cornell, Hardin, Davis, and Marquette will be at Ogden park at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Eliminations for Russell, Calumet, Grand Crossing, and Trumbull will be at Bessemer park at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Ogden, Hamilton, Bessemer, Palmer, and Tuley teams will meet at Grand Crossing park at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Finals Set for Aug. 11.

The winners in each class in each section will meet in the finals on Aug. 11. Six girls compose each team, 45 minutes will be allowed to build the story in sand, and 10 minutes will be allowed to tell it.

Four of the six senior girls records fell July 25 as Tuley captured the annual track meet with a total of 34 points. Cornell was second with 24. Other totals—Sherman, 10; Bessemer, 9; Fuller, 7; Armour, 4; Hardin, 3; Hamilton, 3; Mark White, 1.

THE THRILL OF THEIR LIVES

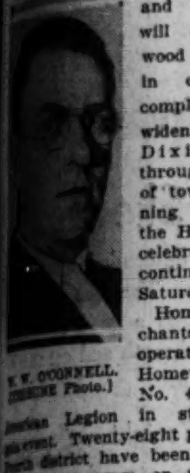
DIXIE WIDENING PROMPTS 4 DAY HOMEWOOD FETE

Merchants, Legion Unite for Celebration.

ONEY FRED SWEET.



W. W. O'CONNELL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

of bands and drum corps, a procession, and special street lighting and decorations will aid Homewood this week in celebrating completion of the widening of the Dixie highway through the heart of town. Beginning Wednesday, the Hi-wide civic celebration will continue until Saturday night.

Homewood merchants are cooperating with Homewood post, No. 483, of the American Legion in staging the gala event. Twenty-eight posts of the Fourth district have been invited to attend the program on the closing night, which has been set aside for paying tribute to W. W. O'Connell, district commander, who is a resident of Homewood.

Dixie highway, "the long highway" from Chicago to Florida, has been widened into a four lane thoroughfare from Blue Island to Chicago Heights. Previously the paving was only 18 feet wide through Homewood. Now it is 40 feet wide. Construction work has been carried on during the last two years.

Subway for Children.

Final touches on the project include a subway for school children at Hickory road. George Trembly, president of the Homewood board of education, having been instrumental in bringing about the safety feature.

Widening of Dixie highway means a great improvement to the suburb located 23 miles from the loop along the main line of the Illinois Central railroad. The 95 year old town began showing renewed vigor in 1925 when the Illinois Central was electrified. Since then its growth has been rapid until it now has a population of [illegible].

The junction of Dixie highway and Ridge road is now built up with modern business blocks on three of its corners, and there is little left to hint of the old trading center on what was once Vincennes road.

This summer, 50 more families have located in Homewood, most of them commuters and many of them attracted by the school facilities. Homewood is particularly proud of the landscaping of the grounds at its graded school.

Homewood's Legion post, active in planning this week's celebration, has the reputation of being one of the liveliest organizations of its kind in southern Cook county. The post has 15 members, nearly 100 per cent of those eligible, and has been a decided force in civic affairs. During the winter, the post cared for 28 needy families.

Object Is Twofold.

Randall Brown, chairman of the celebration committee, sets forth the object of this week's gala occasion as being twofold. First, to stimulate trade in Homewood and make the virtues of the community known to outsiders. Second, to create funds for Legion welfare work and provide permanent headquarters for the local post and auxiliary.

Assisting Mr. Brown as subchairmen are James Kentish, Wilbert Neukinch, Ira Thomas, and H. Persing. E. C. Vanderkoot is commander of the Homewood post; Lloyd Ives, vice commander; Randall Brown, finance officer; Wilbert Neukinch, adjutant; C. C. Collier, chaplain, and J. C. Philips, sergeant-at-arms. Mayor Joseph [illegible], a member of the post, is among those active in arranging for the celebration.

Surrounded by Country Clubs.

Homewood will acquaint outsiders with the fact that it is the golf course center of the south side, being in the midst of Calumet, Ravisloe, Flossmoor, Idlewild, Olympia Fields, Cherry Hill, and Indian Wood Country clubs. Its water supply is drawn from artesian wells. Despite the complaint of many communities of vacant homes and apartments, Homewood boasts that the demand for places to rent exceeds the supply.

The coming celebration will be a community event from the start to the finish, and booths will display the wares of local merchants exclusively.

Bethany Reformed Church to Give Picnic on Thursday

Members of Bethany Reformed church, 111th place and Perry avenue, will picnic Thursday at West Pullman park, 123d street and Stewart avenue. The committee on arrangements is headed by Leonard C. Ericks and includes J. C. Bovenkerk, A. C. Woodruff, Dr. William Vandenberg, F. J. [illegible], Isaac Mugg and Nathan [illegible].

ST. RITA K. OF C. PICNICS TODAY AT DELLWOOD PARK

J. J. McGowan, Chairman of Affair.

Escorted by motorcycle policemen, members of St. Rita council, Knights of Columbus, and their families will leave the 63d street and Kedzie avenue intersection at 9:30 o'clock this morning on a 28 mile trek to Dellwood park, on Archer road. There they will hold the 11th annual picnic of the council.

Some of the events on the program date from the first picnics given by the council. Among these is the baseball game between the Irish and the Germans. Another longstanding contest is the baseball game with the single men opposed to the married men, who so far have always been champions.

Miniature golf and open air dancing will be among the diversions offered. A horse shoe contest and races for all ages will be held with prizes in each event.

John J. McGowan Is Chairman.

Chris P. Mathes, grand knight of the council, has appointed John J. McGowan general chairman of the picnic. Thomas F. Byrne, trustee of the sanitary district, is chairman of the reception committe, which includes Brendan M. O'Connell, John Egan, John H. Walsh, Thomas F. O'Connell, Frank Small, and John McNiell.

Dr. M. J. Hoffman is chairman of the games committee, which includes Charles Stiefel, Charles Shilt, Gus Pflum, Joseph Goyer, John Schniede, William Bauer, William Sharf, John Bracken, L. A. Delahanly, Charles Heniff, William Hamill, John Novicki, Charles Byrnes, Leonard Mahoney, Theodore Tanicke, Fred Bauer, and Frank Healy.

Bedner Heads Committee.

H. Bedner heads the parking committee, which includes Edward Cichy, William Cipek, Theodore Kucharsky, Frank Kolgraff, Fred Peters, John Bayerle Jr., Robert Huber, Ed Ryan, H. Kurent, Frank Brenner and George Mayer. The identification and grounds committee includes Ed Shindler, Mat Bauer, Herbert Wielatz, Victor Trauscht, Fred Braun, Charles Lynch, C. F. O'Sullivan, Harold Hilbert, Vere Harris, M. Broderick, A. P. Curtin, Elmer Cramer, R. Koverick, Ray McCahill and Charles Zofkie, chairman. The safety committee includes George Creed, Frank Wolfe, Mike O'Brien, John Dillon, George Hallman, Harry Brannigan, John Wolfschmidt, Dan P. O'Malley, J. P. McCury, W. J. Conlon, George Miller, Frank Barnum and William Balswich, chairman. J. Meyer heads the golf committee, which includes Ernest Hartman, Victor Fiala, Thomas Fitzgerald, Leo Gaal and Peter Borsch.

On Transportation Committee.

The transportation committee: John Rollenger, John Lehner, Dr. M. J. Hoffman, Joseph Culligan, Charles Belasick, James Dolan, Dan Burke, Frank Burge, James J. Whittey, Thomas Gaynor, Harry O'Connor, Michael Wunder and Frank Boyd. Chris Orsinger heads the horseshoe committee, composed of Elmer Kratoska, George Foley, William Devlin, John Berner, Peter Junker and Frank Bartella.

Frank Shimkus heads the dance committee, including Charles Nash, David Lanson, Charles Huck, George Osborne and Frank McNamara. John Vonch is chairman of the prizes, assisted by John Dorner, H. Perry, Joseph Brock, Hugh Reilly, Frank Karbowski and Chris Orsinger. Harry P. Sullivan is chairman of publicity assisted by Charles B. Clarke, Ted K. Lee, C. P. Leddy Leo Blazek, G. Walker, William Bauer, William Giesenger, Joseph Sapit and William Slavin Jr. Dr. Sylvester Kehl, Dr. James Foley, Dr. W O'Connell and A. Porzel form the first aid committee.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 3.

Prune the climbing roses. As blossoming ends, old canes that are dead or unproductive should be cut out and the new shoots on which next year's roses come may be trained into position and those which have borne flowers shortened. Trim little from the bushy tops, but thin the heavy growth at base considerably.

Tuesday, Aug. 4.

Lettuce started now should be tender hearted for fall. Plant shallow, not over a quarter inch, in good rich soil. If you are afraid the soil will dry out before plants come up, cover the row with boards, burlap or straw, watching for the first show of seedlings to remove this mulch. Mignonette or prizehead, reddish varieties, are good, or Grand Rapids may be grown for leaves.

Wednesday, Aug. 5.

A raid on the flowers' insect pests is in order. Leaf chewing insects like wireworms, grubs, cutworms, beetles or caterpillars succumb to stomach poisons liwe the arsenates in a dust or spray. The piercing, sucking insects like lice or aphids must have some such contract spray as nicotine sulphate. Get at all sides of the leaves and stems of plants.

Thursday, Aug. 6.

The lawn that has suffered from dry weather must be soaked thoroughly today, and again Saturday or Monday. Surface sprinkling or watering in the heat of the sun is harmful, as the water must get into the ground to draw grass roots deeper. A good fertilizer should be used now to give the plants food for fall growth. Reseed the thin or bare spots after raking the soil.

Friday, Aug. 7.

Thin out the young dephinium beds to give the larger, stronger plants a better show in the race for late fall blooming. They should also get plenty of water during the dry spells, and should have two or three feet of open space for circulation of air through these lusty feeders. By September they should be large enough to place in their permanent positions, according to color, of course.

Saturday, Aug. 8.

Weeding the flower beds, borders, and running a cutter around the edge of the sidewalks will tidy up the place for Sunday display. The dandelion and plantain should come out of the lawn and garden rows with a knife or the special pronged weeders on the market. To date no spray or killing liquid or dust has been proved successful for this job.

TRIBUNE ISSUES CALL FOR FALL GARDEN ENTRIES

Honor Roll Competition Gets Under Way.

How does your garden handiwork compare with that of the thousands of others interested in flower gardening within a 40 mile radius of Tribune Tower? Hundreds of persons, by telephone and by mail, have indicated renewed interest in the next semi-annual CHICAGO TRIBUNE garden honor roll, in which the first call for entries in the 1931 fall competition is being issued today.

Whether yours is a rock garden, old fashioned garden, formal or informal, or whether it includes a few vegetables mixed in among flowers and shrubs, if the garden creates an individual setting for your home, it is eligible for entry if it is your work and nonprofessional.

The judging will be the third semiannual project designed to list flower gardens worth of honor certificates and which others in the many communities which make up the metropolitan area may use as guides in patterning and developing yards and gardens best adapted to individual homes and to communities.

Ballot in This Section.

No tedious work is required of those who wish to enter the contest. An entry blank may be found elsewhere in this section. All it requires is the name and address of the garden and endorsement by signature of two neighbors or friends. Or neighbors may enter a garden of their own volition if the deserving gardener is too modest.

The ballot is to be mailed to the Farm and Garden department, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Those received postmarked later than midnight Aug. 27 will not be considered, as judging must be held as near simultaneously as possible to be fair to entrants in various sections.

A special invitation to those in suburbs, in rural districts and somewhat thickly populated areas of Chicago proper is being issued for this fall contest.

Seek to Stimulate Plantings.

It is the intention of the contest to stimulate home plantings by pointing out those gardeners whose work has built not only community pride but has increased home values. Some of the most interesting situations discovered in the spring competition this year concerned gardeners whose neighbors had endorsed their nomination to the honor roll and yet these same neighbors were revealed as rivals.

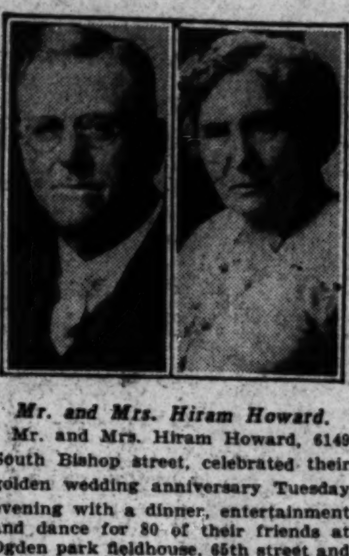
To make the competition no less difficult in order to get on the honor roll, but to encourage those who think they would have more chance of recognition, those already given the certificates of merit last fall or this spring will be barred from reëntering this fall.

On Permanent Honor Roll.

Their names will remain, instead, on the permanent honor roll that has already given recognition to 73 gardens in the two previous contests. The list will be kept intact until it is apparent that individuals once honored have failed to continue their model gardening, and then a revised list will be compiled.

The date for judging will be announced as soon as weather conditions permit. THE TRIBUNE's flower garden score card on which the two previous entry lists have been judged will again be used as a basis of fair competition and permanent record of each entrant's garden ideas and progress.

Observe Golden Day



Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Howard.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Howard, 6149 South Bishop street, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Tuesday evening with a dinner, entertainment and dance for 80 of their friends at Ogden park fieldhouse, 65th street and Racine avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Howard were born in Canada, but have lived in Chicago 24 years. They have three children, a son, Wilfred, who lives at 9117 South Paulina street; another son, Kenneth of Los Angeles, Cal.; and a daughter, Mrs. Etta Heysal of Niagara Falls, Canada. They are both 73 years old.

HENRY W. VORHOLT REUNITED WITH 90 KIN AFTER 67 YEARS

Henry William Vorholt was reunited with his family the other day after a separation lasting 67 years. He found sisters and brothers, nieces and nephews, but not one of his newly recovered relatives had he ever seen before.

Back in 1864 Mr. Vorholt, a boy of 18, left his father's farm near Cortland, Ind., to make his fortune in the wide world. He roamed all over the middle west, selling cigars and playing a violin, but somehow his wanderings never brought him back home. Then he settled in Chicago, and family and business held him there for years.

Finally Mr. Vorholt, an octogenarian, retired from the grocery business, which he had run at 7444 Cottage Grove avenue for 37 years, and went to live with a son-in-law, August Dejmek, 4743 South Wood street. As often happens to men in their eighties, his thoughts turned to the days of his boyhood.

Correspondence ensued, and a reunion was arranged. Mr. Vorholt drove down to Cortland with his son-in-law. A surprise was in store for him. Not only did he find three sisters and four brothers whom he had never seen before, but some ninety nieces and nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews.

St. Leo's Altar and Rosary Holds Midsummer Party

St. Leo's Altar and Rosary society held its midsummer bridge party Wednesday evening at St. Leo High school hall, 79th and Peoria streets. Mrs. Hugh D. Murnighan was chairman, assisted by Mrs. John W. Collins, Mrs. Daniel J. Ward, Mrs. Bart Lucy, Mrs. John J. Hastings, Mrs. William 2L. Noack, Mrs. Robert E. Kirk, and Mrs. Harry J. Clancy. Mrs. Robert J. Sterling is president of the organization.

HUSBANDCALLING ENLIVENS PICNIC OFMASONSTODAY

Two Lodges to Compete in Tug of War.

Masons from three far southwest side lodges will combine forces today and stage their third annual joint picnic at Frankfort grove, on Keane avenue half a mile north of the Lincoln highway.

More than 2,500 members of Fernwood Park lodge, Tracy lodge, Morgan Park lodge, America chapter of the Royal Arch Masons, and of Tracy and Morgan Park chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star are expected to turn out for the event.

The program of activities planned for the merrymakers is described as the most colorful in the history of the observance by Byron H. Jillson, chairman of sports and games. A husband calling contest for married women is among the most novel. Married women also will have an opportunity to prove their skill in a ball throwing contest.

Obstacle Race Planned.

An obstacle race similar to a steeplechase will be open to every one. A course has been laid out for this event with all sorts of hazards, including barrels to climb through and fences to jump. An ice cream eating contest likewise will be open to all desiring entrance, as will the sack race.

A tug o' war between members of America chapter and Fernwood lodge will be a new event. Chester Saunders has donated a cup to be awarded to the winners. The third annual baseball game between Morgan Park and Tracy lodges also will be held. The cup awarded in this event has been held once by each lodge, so that this match decides the championship.

Balloon Blowing Contest.

A contest to see who can burst a balloon quickest will be held. Among the races planned are the 25 yard dash for boys and girls under nine, the fifty yard dash for boys and girls 9 to 12 and 13 to 15, and the 100 yard dash for boys and girls 16 to 20. Men and women over 21 will run 50 yard races and men over 50 will compete in a 25 yard dash.

First and second prizes will be awarded in all events. Ice cream and coffee will be served to every one.

Trucks will leave for the grove four times from each temple. The schedule is as follows: Fernwood Park temple, 10253 South Wallace street, 9, 10:30, 1:30 and 3 o'clock; Tracy temple, 1830 West 103d street, 9:15, 10:45, 1:45 and 3:05 o'clock; Morgan Park temple, 11156 Hoyne avenue, 9:30, 11, 2, 3:30 o'clock. Return trucks leave at 7 and 9 o'clock.

Harry Deimal is general chairman of the picnic, Mr. Jillson is secretary, and Bert Lathrop is treasurer. Albert G. Dodd and J. G. Daley are on the transportation committee, Ed Conrad on the police committee, Mr. Saunders on the prize committee, Tom Vanek and Mr. Lathrop on the ground committee, and William Edwards on the music committee.

Glenn Adams has directed sports in coöperation with the sports committee, which is headed by Mr. Jillson and includes Charles McClure, Oliver Goldsmith, Ernest Huehner, M. M. Coffeen, and Ed Peterson. Peter Stoel is chairman of the refreshment committee, which includes Emmett Reiner, Harold Altermat, Mrs. Elsie Lyman, and Mrs. Mildred McClellan.

WHO'S WHO ON SOUTH WEST SIDE

William L. Kleinz, president of the Beverly Improvement association, has lived in Beverly Hills 10 years and has been a member of the association all that time, serving as treasurer and director prior to his election to the presidency.

Mr. Kleinz is manager of the wool and felt department of Armour & Co., and is western manager for Winslow & Co. He is president of the Wool Trade association. He has lived in Chicago 20 years, but was born and brought up in Morristown, N. J. He attended Haverford college, and is a leader in the Chicago Haverford club.

Every sport from football, baseball, cricket and tennis to sailing, motoring, and golf has drawn Mr. Kleinz at one time or another. As a skipper he ranks as an amateur captain, and his prowess as a skipper has netted him several silver cups. He keeps up his tennis game and plays golf at Euclid Hills Country club, but he's not such a baseball fan since the Sox are not so successful, he said.

Mr. Kleinz lives at 9346 Longwood drive. He is married and has three children, William, 17 years old, a student at Lake Forest college; Jack, 12, and Susan, 5. He is 43 years old.

RADIO USED TO GIVE NEW KIND OF FARM RELIEF

Loudspeaker Proves Aid to Scarecrow.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio has joined the airplane in giving farm relief. While Iowa farmers are "raining" arsenic from a fleet of planes on myriads of grasshoppers to save their crops, orchard owners have discovered that a radio receiving set installed inside a scarecrow makes it much more effective in keeping the birds out of the cherry trees and berry bushes. An Oregon experimenter reports that not only do the birds flee the advertising announcements but they won't even listen to the best crooners.

The next step is obviously to do away with scarecrows altogether and equip each fruit tree with a loudspeaker to ward off our feathered enemies. As a matter of fact Paul Whiteman plays at a spot where the loudspeakers are hidden in the trees. And birds cause no trouble there.

What is a televisor? A lot of folks who viewed Columbia's visual station dedication program think they're the television whiskers that appeared on some of the celebrities' faces. According to observers Mayor Walker and Guy Lombardo looked like Trade and Mark Smith. By the time television becomes a general success possibly all our favorite announcers will look like European diplomats.

One of the best lines heard at the Columbia dedication was Edwin Cohan's "television of today is perhaps comparable to the phonograph of 1910 and the motion picture of 1906."

Incidentally, the hardboiled announcers who never waver before the microphone have at last found out what "mike fright" is. Certain veterans wilted pitifully before the electric eye of television.

Another Vallee coming up. Rudy's brother Bill, 22 years old, made his debut recently in a program titled "Set With Stars." Predictions are promising.

A recent radio installation in a private home costs about $8,000. It included loud speakers in most of the rooms of the home and remote control devices to operate them from a master receiving set.

Archer Gibson, radio pipe organist recently praised by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, was for years private organist for Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who had a great organ built in his mansion on Riverside Drive after the fashion of his old chief Andrew Carnegie. With Gibson at the organ and great artists, such as Fritz Kreisler participating, the Schwab musicals became famous. "The Rosary" as played by Gibson was said to be Schwab's favorite selection.

Dennis King, famed music comedian, and now a radio artist, tells this story on himself:

"When I was still a struggling thespian in New York, and sleeping in the parks because of lack of funds, Anne Nichols, who later wrote "Abie's Irish Rose," gave me a job in a play she was putting on. It was my first singing part, and on the strength of the engagement, I took my friend and myself out to dinner with my last two dollars. The meal amounted to $1.50 so we indulged in two twenty-five cent cigars to make the event a complete splurge.

"And the next day I was fired. The manager said I was a rotten actor, and would never make out at all."

That was his first experience as king for a day. Later he made a lot of money playing that rôle.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has just been awarded the Columbia Broadcasting medal for distinguished contribution to the radio art. CBS announces that he is the first American so honored. Now it is up to some flying service to pick out a radio big shot and award him a medal engraved "for distinguished service to the art of aviation."

Fred Waring is scheduled to join the "Around the Town" program on Aug. 31 . . . The candy makers, according to a report, are getting together and will join the cigaret manufacturers in their battle of the air . . . One of the most popular English radio teams is known as Flotsam and Jetsam, one a tenor and the other a very deep basso . . . Here is an error credited to a Texas newspaper by Editor and Publisher: "Mark Coney, electrical wizard and discoverer of wireless telegraphy, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture."

Carveth Wells, world adventurer, who recounts his strange experiences over NBC, told about his wildest sight recently. It was a carload of sophomores in a collegiate flivver crossing an African desert singing a Vallee number.

Minnesota, No. Carolina Near Top and Bottom

Minnesota and North Carolina take places near the top and the bottom, respectively, of the list of states in which radio receivers have been tabulated by the census bureau.

Out of 608,398 families in Minnesota, 287,880, or 47.3 per cent, had sets in 1930. This was almost 50,000 more than the department of commerce and the radio industry estimated.

Only 72,329, or 11.2 per cent, of 645,245 families in North Carolina, however, possessed receivers when the count was taken. The radio industry made an estimate of 92,000.

Herbert and Nevin Works on W-G-N at 8 Tuesday

Two excerpts from Victor Herbert's only grand opera, "Natoma," and Nevin's "O that We Two Were Maying," sung as a soprano and alto duet, are to be heard in the household program with Adolphe Dumont and a symphony orchestra through W-G-N at 8 p. m. Tuesday evening. A vocal ensemble will offer "Cousin Jedediah."

BETTY, BOB HOSTS TO 250

Antonia Gillman and Richard De Wolfe, the Betty and Bob of W-G-N, with Cloudchaser, an air elf, between them. Betty and Bob were hosts to 250 Chicagoland children last Sunday.

Back to Earth

Two hundred and fifty children from all over Chicagoland had the time of their lives last Sunday when they met in the flesh a real air elf from Cloudland, and Betty and Bob, the two children who are visiting that magic sphere through W-G-N at 5:45 o'clock each afternoon.

The occasion was a picnic held at Brook Hill farms, west of Milwaukee. The air elf was Cloudchaser, who through his magic changed himself into a man in order that he might not be lost in the crowd. He called himself W. E. Johnstone. Betty, of course, is Antonia Gillman, and Bob is Richard De Wolfe.

With the air Cloud Chaser's magic airplane, the two children who are now visiting the Glumpers, the inhabitants of that pessimistic star, Glump, returned to earth for this picnic.

Visitors last Sunday not only made the acquaintance of these three radio personalities, but were introduced to other strange creatures of the land of clouds, in the form of wooden cutouts, scattered in unexpected places over the farm. There was the Terrigog, the Swisher, Twisten-Ding, Pat-Patter, the rain elf.. Sponge-Un, and Hurry Scurry, a snow gnome.

CENSUS BUREAU RADIO COUNT TO NEAR 10,000,000

With tabulations by the census bureau of two-thirds of the states completed, indications are that the total number of radio receiving sets in the United States, as of April 1, 1930, will fall far short of the estimates of the radio industry and the department of commerce.

The average of families with radio sets so far has been about one-third. Tabulations of 34 states and the District of Columbia reveal a total of only 4,168,510 sets among 12,941,653 families.

While the count of the remaining third states is expected to boost the total considerably because the most populous states have not yet been tabulated, it is doubtful whether the final count will be over 10,000,000.

Estimates of the radio industry and the department of commerce ranged from approximately 13,000,000 to 15,500,000 in the summer and fall of 1930. Whatever the total of the census bureau count, however, the actual number of sets in operation in the country now will be greater because of the considerable sale of midget sets last year and during the first half of this year.

Radio Serves as Eyes for Cavalry Service

Without information of the enemy, no general can properly conduct a battle, Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, now district commissioner of Washington, and formerly chief of cavalry, declared. "However," he continued, "while the cavalry could get this information many times, it could not get it back to the general in time to be of any use. Now, by assigning raidio sending sets to our advance cavalry units, we are able at once to send information obtained of the enemy, and add tremendously to the value of that historical branch of the service."

RADIO CUTS INTO 3D CLASS MAIL, GLOVER REPORTS

Radio advertising has cut deeply into the revenue of the post office department from third class mail, according to Warren Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general.

While no figures were available, he said, railway mail clerks and division superintendents told on his recent Western trip that the reduction in third class mail corresponded closely to the development of broadcasting.

This reduction is particularly noticeable, he was informed, in distances of 200 miles and under. Firms that formerly solicited business by circulars through the mail now buy time on the local radio station.

China Expands Radio.

As part of the expansion and development of China's international radio communication, the Chinese ministry of communications recently decreed that all government radio stations in the country were to operate international services.

RADIO WILL PLAY IMPORTANT ROLE AT MUSIC FEAST

Quin Ryan to Broadcast Festival Aug. 22.

Radio will play an important rôle in the success of the second Chicagoland Music Festival, which will be held Saturday, Aug. 22, in Soldiers' field, sponsored by The Chicago Tribune, associated newspapers, and civic and commercial concerns of the middle west.

Quin Ryan will be at the microphone throughout the festival program. W-G-N, The Tribune station on the Drake hotel, will broadcast the entire program, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, while a National Broadcasting company network will broadcast from 9 to 9:30. Allan Grant, W-G-N staff pianist, will accompany the choruses that night.

A few headliners for the festival concert will be:

Hallelujah chorus of 6,000 voices.
Negro chorus of 2,000 voices.
One drum corps of 400 pieces.
A massed band of 2,200.

Grabel, Cain in Charge.

Last summer letters poured into the office of The Tribune and W-G-N from listeners in every state in the Union who heard the concert. Many testified that the program was the finest radio broadcast they ever had heard. It will be finer this summer. Victor J. Grabel again will be the bandmaster and Noble Cain the director of the chorus.

From the moment the bands and drum corps enter the huge arena at 7:30 o'clock until the final note is sounded Mr. Ryan will describe the cheering thousands, the huge searchlights as they play upon entertainers and spectators. It will be an evening filled with harmony and dynamic description. Pageantry, color, music, the applause of 150,000 will be brought to all who cannot attend in person.

During the festival an hour will be devoted to presenting winners in the preliminary contests of Dixon and Waukegan, Ill., Racine, Wis., and Gary, Ind.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings preceding that Saturday the contests for male, woman, and mixed choruses will be held in the Drake hotel; bits of these contests also will be broadcast from W-G-N. A few minutes on the air will be given to the adult and juvenile band contests Saturday morning, also in the Drake hotel.

After the Festival.

WMT, radio station in Waterloo, Ia., is sending the prize winning adult band of the first festival, the Cedar Falls (Ia.) Municipal band, to the festival. All the expenses will be paid by Harry Shaw, owner of the station and formerly business manager of the Waterloo Tribune, now merged with another Waterloo newspaper. The Tribune sponsored the neighboring city band last summer. James A. Melichar is the director of the 45 piece organization.

Radio not only plays a big part in the festival week's program but also after the festival is over. Last summer three of the stars in the festival contest—Agatha Lewis, winner of first place in the soprano division for Chicago; David Pritchard, leader of the Pritchard Mixed quartet, first Chicagoland winners, from Racine, and Julius Sklute, also of Racine, second place Chicagoland baritone—all won enviable positions in the concert and radio field.

Miss Lewis is a member of the Herbert Witherspoon chorus, Mr. Pritchard is a W-G-N staff artist, and Mr. Sklute has appeared in radio and on the concert stage throughout the winter and spring. Many of the winnings groups of the first festival were heard this winter in radio recitals over W-G-N.

More Power Is Urged for Western Stations

While still in the midst of his western inspection tour, Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount has expressed the opinion that broadcasting stations in the west need more power because of the often large areas they are required to serve. The western radio commissioner reiterated his contention that cleared channel stations should be permitted to use the maximum power of 50,000 watts. He also noted that numerous technical improvements in broadcasting are apparent throughout the west.

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's Youngest Announcer, Wed

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's youngest radio announcer (he is 20), was married on July 11 to Miss Jane Neilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Neilson of Evanston. Martin came to W-G-N from station WSBT at South Bend, Ind. He reads The Tribune on the daily Digest of the News program. He is also heard with Leonard Salvo, organist, during Everybody's hour and on the Mail Box program.

Olive Hull Will Open Series on Child Welfare

Olive Hull, executive secretary of Gov. Emmerson's committee on Child Welfare, will give a series of talks on child welfare from W-G-N every Monday, starting tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. D. T. McNabb, of the Animal Protection committee of the Women's City club will speak Tuesday at this same time on the proper care for pets in summer.

JANE FROMAN.
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Jane Froman, a contralto with a touch of indigo in her voice, brought to the radio spotlight by Paul Whiteman, made her local debut last Thursday in the first of a series of NBC programs with an orchestra under the direction of Matt Malnek, a protégé of the "dean of modern music." Hereafter their programs will be heard over an NBC net at 7 Wednesday evenings and at 10:30 Thursday evenings.

DR. ARTHUR HOLT WILL SPEAK ON MIDDAY HOUR

Building religion into business is the theme of the midday services from W-G-N for this week. The speaker for 1 o'clock tomorrow will be Dr. Arthur E. Holt, professor of ethics at the University of Chicago and the Chicago Theological seminary. Dr. Holt has been prominent in the work of the Congregational church for many years. Following the theme of the week, Dr. Graham Fay, who has been in social and industrial betterment work for over forty years, will speak on Wednesday. Dr. Fay's subject is "Building Religion Into Business from the Bottom Up."

Another lay speaker, James L. Kraft, Chicago manufacturer, will speak for business men on Friday on "Building Religion into Business from the Top Down." The other services during the week will be conducted by the Rev. John L. Dickson, director of the midday services, who is assisted by Leonard Salvo, organist, and Gene Martin, baritone.

START DIGGING FOR MAMMOTH N. Y. RADIO CITY

New York.—Excavations started last week for the mammoth Radio City, said to be the largest building project in the history of the world, which is to be erected in the heart of New York City. The digging is expected to be completed in the fall. Eight steam shovels, 100 trucks, and nearly 300 workmen started the excavation job. When the actual building work begins, at least 5,000 men will be employed. The $250,000 project is being financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Balks KTNT Removal.

Norman Baker, owner of station KTNT of Muscatine, Ia., is seeking a preliminary injunction against the individual members of the federal radio commission to nullify the action of the commission in removing KTNT from the air last month. The suit was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court.

HAROLD STOKES TO DIRECT NEW DANCE PROGRAM

Tom, Dick, and Harry on Novel Bill.

A new dance program, featuring novel musical combinations and effects, with Tom, Dick and Harry furnishing the vocal end of the bill, will be presented for the first time at 9:45 tomorrow evening under the direction of Harold Stokes.

Harold Stokes, well known to radio listeners as a former director of Jean Goldkette's orchestra, comes back to radio after two years with his own orchestra in Kansas City and Omaha. Stokes is well known for novel arrangements of popular dance numbers. Besides conducting his own orchestra, Stokes plays the piano, accordian, clarinet, drums, and xylophone.

On the First Program.

The initial program includes arrangements of hits from "The Wonder Bar," "The Band Wagon," Crazy Quilt," and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

The story of Sheridan's ride will be told at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. Miss Jean Conover has used the famous poem by James Buchanan Reed as the foundation of her story. An incident from the life of John Hancock, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, will be dramatized by Norman Macdonald for the sketch at 8:30 Friday, Aug. 7.

Boy to Make Evening Bow.

Earle Wilkie, 17 year old boy baritone, who has been singing on W-G-N Wednesday and Saturday mornings at 10:45, will make his bow to its evening audience at 7:45 Tuesday evening. Two of his numbers will be "Shipmates o' Mine," and "In the Silence of the Night." Young Wilkie is a protege of Barre Hill of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

The second of the summer garden concert heard from W-G-N at 8:10 Saturday nights, will be presented Aug. 8 and will have Vienna as its scene. Works of Lehar, Schubert, Suppe, and Straus will be heard on this Viennese program.

NBC WILL ERECT VISION STATION ON 84TH FLOOR

The National Broadcasting company has been authorized by the federal radio commission to erect a television and a sound broadcasting station on the eighty-fourth floor of the Empire State building, of New York, tallest structure in the world.

The stations will operate on ultra high frequencies, above 23,000 kilocycles, in an effort to ascertain whether or not they can be adapted to visual broadcasting. The stations will cost $75,000, with $10,000 additional for studios.

A television antenna will be placed on top of the Empire State building mooring mast, 1,250 feet above the street level. NBC engineers believe that many of the present obstacles to visual broadcasting will be removed through the operation of the station from this height.

N. Y. PUBLISHERS WILL BAR TRADE NAMES IN RADIO

The publishers of newspapers in New York City have reached an agreement whereby they will exclude all trade names from radio programs. It was agreed to do this several years ago but the New York Telegram, owned by the Scripps-Howard papers, continued to print the names.

It is understood that the Scripps-Howard people are among those who have signed the agreement to cut out trade names altogether.

Hereafter simply the name of the artist will be mentioned if the New York newspaper plan is carried out. A musical group will be referred to simply as "band" or "orchestra," but in no case will the name of the sponsor or advertiser be mentioned.

OLD SETTLER, 88, STICKS 52 YEARS AT THE SAME JOB

L. W. Schlau to See Cronies at Picnic Tomorrow.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Among the south siders planning to attend the 75th annual Old Settlers' picnic, to be held under the auspices of the Chicago Turngemeinde tomorrow at Riverview park, is L. W. Schlau, 88 years old, who makes his home with Gustaf Goetz, 6823 South Sangamon street.

L. W. SCHLAU. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

At the picnic a year ago Mr. Schlau won a medal awarded to "the old settler who has been longest in the employed." Mr. Schlau wroks for A. Ball Brothers, 25 North Wacker drive, where he is now rounding out his 52d year.

Mr. Schlau was an artist in his native Germany. He left that country as a young man in 1864 and has made his home in Chicago ever since. He confesses that Chicago at that time was the edge of civilization and it was necessary for him to compromise in shaping his career. Painting of landscapes gave way to interior decorating.

Misses Fire of 1871.

In 1871, Mr. Schlau had gone to Toledo, O., to decorate the interior of a theater. It was while there he heard of the Chicago fire. The Ohio city, he recalls, was so concerned by the dryness of the season and word of the Chicago catastrophe that smoking was prohibited on the streets. On his return home, Mr. Schlau admits that the scene of devastation was appalling but, so far as he was concerned, not discouraging.

Perhaps it is the good humor characteristic of Mr. Schlau under all circumstances that has much to do with the fact that, at 88, his face is still unlined with wrinkles and he enjoys not only good health, but what each day may have to offer.

"It's a mistake to try to live two days in one," he philosophized as he puffed his pipe. "Give me something to do every day and I am contented. Perhaps the quickest way to shorten one's life is going to the extreme in trying to make money.

Sees Lesson in Depression.

"In these days of depression many persons who have centered all their time and effort to accumulate find that when they have lost their money, they have lost everything. Such people are heartbroken the rest of their lives. There are so many other things in existence that can't be bought, nor can they ever be taken from you.

"Good humor means so much. Perhaps it is difficult when there is so much greed abroad. Selfishness has made a rather bad mess of the world just now, but we'll get back to something more satisfactory—an era in which we shall better appreciate the worth of contented minds.

"We early settlers of Chicago have many pleasant memories, but the past periods were not entirely rosy. During the rebuilding of Chicago, there was such an influx of labor that wages were low.

Recalls Optimistic Uncle.

"Why, when I left Germany I came on the advice of an uncle who wrote of what a big business he had. When I arrived, it was necessary for me to help support his family.

"Of course, many of the happy memories of our settlers are centered about the north side Turner hall, where we gathered for concerts and socials. Our first picnics were held in Ogden grove, at Clybourn avenue and the river. It was the setting of prairie cow pastures. In late years I do not see so many familiar faces at the picnics. I take the Western avenue street car to the grove and try to get home before dark, but the event refreshes me rather than tires me out."

Mr. Goetz admiringly brought out one of the paintings on which Mr. Schlau works during his leisure time. During all the years Mr. Schlau has not wholly relinquished his boyhood ambition. He waved away, however, any compliment of his work.

Work Essential for Happiness.

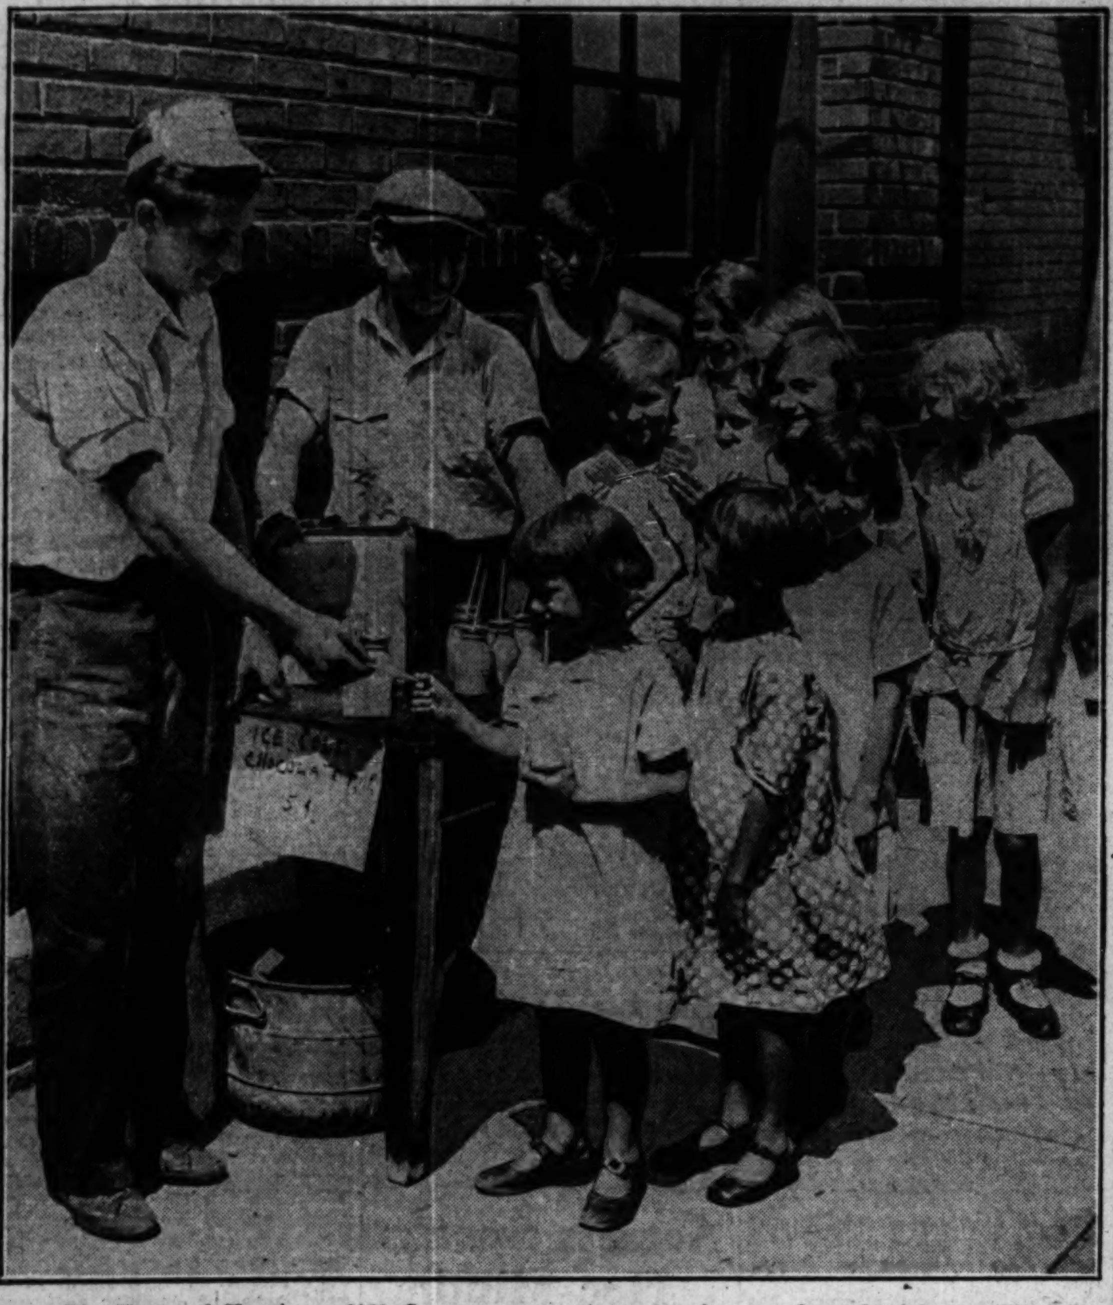
"You see, I couldn't live without being busy," he explained. "It's the monotony of having nothing to do that kills. I've always liked to be where there was fun and if I didn't find it I tried to make it. No, I never danced at the picnics, but years ago I did play a guitar and sing. I believe in anything that helps to do away with long faces."

A varied program has been arranged for the Old Settlers' picnic tomorrow. It will be held in a large grove in Riverview park, Western and Belmont avenues. Adequate parking space has been provided for automobiles. Registration will begin at 1 o'clock, and the usual number of medals to old settlers with outstanding records under various classifications will be awarded. There will be dancing and community singing.

FORM MILK LINE FOR CHILDREN OF YARDS AREA

A daily milk line for children of the stockyards district has been started by the House of Happiness, 3052 Gratten avenue. For a nickel the children receive a pint of milk and a cracker. The line has been instituted especially for the children of unemployed parents who otherwise might have nothing to eat, according to Miss Bertha L. Moore, head resident. The settlement is at present launching a drive for funds to send these children to camp for ten days or two weeks. Five dollars will finance the outing for one child. Because of unemployment the savings bank organized to provide the children with the [illegible] is also empty, Miss Moore

NICKEL BUYS A MEAL AT THIS RESTAURANT



The House of Happiness, 3052 Gratten avenue, lives up to its name by maintaining a milk station where youngsters of the community may exchange a nickel for a bottle of milk and a cracker. Left to right: Tom Webster, Tony Locha, and Bernard Krause distribute the "eats" to Eleanor Bresida, Josephine Journik, Helen Bresida, Angeline Wilczak, Celia Wilczak, Charlotte Walowski, Jeanette Journik, Rose Journik, and Eleanor Lewandowski. 20,000 ATTEND TRACK CARNIVAL, PICNIC AT LAKE

Set 5 New Records at Athletic Meet.

Twenty thousand persons witnessed the two big outings of the far south side last Sunday—the 5th annual track carnival and road race of the East Side Chamber of Commerce at Calumet park and the picnic of the Hegewisch Young Men's club at Wolf lake. The latter was featured by sailboat races which were won by the Sea Hawk. The craft was manned by John Kania, Frank Kania, Ted Popielak, and Thomas Powers.

The track meet was marked by the establishing of five new meet records. Two others were tied during the afternoon.

Funk Wins Race Again.

The biggest event, of course, was the 5 mile road race, which was won for the third time in five years by Herman Funk of Ogden park. Funk broke his record of last year by running the distance through the east side streets in 29:13 3-5. The old mark was 29:30.4. Running second was Bruno Beccini, also of Ogden.

Don Anderson set a new record of :07 in the 50 yard dash for east side boys. Ed Cook was second and Nick Savia was third. The open 50 yard dash was won by John Hunn of Chase park, who tied the old record of :06.4. Al Rochinski of Bessemer was second and Ascenio of Bessemer third.

Representatives of the Wabash Y. M. C. A. were prominent in record making, Lionel Morgan setting a new senior high jump mark of 6 feet 2½ inches. He was followed by Joseph Sharpe and N. Breford, teammates. John Brooks of the "Y" set a senior broad jump mark of 24 feet and ¾ inch.

Ralph Metcalfe, colored speedster formerly of Tilden Tech, tied his time of :09.8 in the century and won the 220 yard dash in :23. Andrew Porzel of Ogden was second in the 100 and Robert Fritsche of Chase was third.

The other record performance was that of Louise Closek of Orr playground in setting a new mark of :06.6 in the junior girls' 50 yard dash. Helen Sliva, a Roseland girl, was second.

Eligibility to Be Investigated.

Larant of Chase won the intermediate broad jump and 100 yard dash, but his medals are being held up pending an investigation of eligibility. He leaped 22 feet to a new broad jump record, but this is not expected to be allowed. Louis King of Wabash Y. M. C. A. was second in the jump, Adolph Casper of Tuley was third and Tom Annerino of Hardin was fourth. Wallinger of Chase was second in the century.

Frank Brejcha, James Jurick, and Joseph Karjawa of Ogden, finished one, two, three in the senior 440 yard dash. The time was :52.4. The senior 880 was won by Ewert of Douglas in 2:04.8.

The senior girls' 50 went to Jeanette Buck of Orr playground, with Edna Canter of Franklin second. Freda Orndt of Bessemer was third.

Chase park won the 880 yard relay with Ogden second and Wabash "Y" third.

Roger Powers was general chairman of the games, C. J. Bohlin was vice chairman, and F. G. Roach was referee.

Rev. C. C. Cox Preaches at Home Church in Missouri

The Rev. Clinton C. Cox, pastor of Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue, today is preaching the annual homecoming service in his home church at Nelson, Mo. In his absence the Rev. E. G. Black, pastor of the Bethlehem Presbyterian church of Flint, Mich., will conduct the services at 11 o'clock and 7:45 o'clock. The Rev. Mr. Black is a former member of the Drexel Park church.

Neighborhood Theaters

Robert Montgomery again proves himself worthy of his new stardom in "The Man in Possession," the gay piece diverting audiences at the Capitol theater this week. As the family black sheep who is thrown on his own and who becomes a man in possession, that is, a sheriff's man placed in a debtor's house, women will find him charming and most men, amusing.

That the debtor on whose premises the law thrusts Mr. Montgomery turns out to be a pretty widow and his brother's fiancée detracts not a whit from the entertainment. Irene Purcell is the widow, Charlotte Greenwood her maid, and Beryl Mercer and C. Aubrey Smith Mr. Montgomery's disapproving parents.

Our banjo playing Buddy Rogers puts away childish things and becomes Charles with a vengeance in "The Lawyer's Secret." As a quaking fugitive of the law he has an entirely new sort of rôle, which gives him a chance to show how he can really act. A man is killed in a crap game and an innocent sailor is imprisoned for the crime. Charles Rogers is implicated and comes to his sister's fiancée, a noted lawyer, confessing everything.

The question is, shall the lawyer respect his client's confidence or shall he let an innocent man suffer? Clive Brook plays the lawyer, and Fay Wray the sister. The picture will be shown today, tomorrow and Tuesday at the Marquette and Highway theaters, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Harvard with "Common Clay;" today and tomorrow at the Cosmo theater with "Monsters of the Deep."

NINE SOUTHWEST SIDERS LAND IN DIVORCE COURT

The majority of the nine southwest siders who filed divorce cases in Circuit and Superior courts last week gave desertion and habitual drunkenness as the grounds for their actions. Complaints of cruelty and misconduct make up the remaining charges.

The two separate maintenance cases in which residents of the southwest side figured were based on allegations of cruelty. The actions were filed by Mrs. Grace Lackey, 8628 South Morgan street, against Laurence Lackey and Mrs. Mildred C. Waterman, 7836 South Wentworth street, against Layton Waterman, 7849 Eggleston avenue.

Desertion was charged in the divorce bills filed by:

Mrs. Emma Stevens against Christ Stevens, 7535 South Winchester avenue.

Mrs. Dorothy E. Johnson, Blue Island, against Elwin Johnson, also known as Charles E. Johnson.

E. C. Wezel, 111347 Stewart avenue, against Mrs. Ruth Wenzel, 333 West 99th place.

The lone charge of habitual drunkenness was made in the two cases started by Mrs. Ida M. Saule, 352 West 117th street, against August Saule, and by Mrs. Emma Diprima against Joe Diprima, 5520 Drexel boulevard. Anton Visnauskas, 4426 South Campbell avenue, lists the double complaint of habitual drunkenness and misconduct in his bill against Mrs. Mary Visnauskas, while both cruelty and habitual drunkenness are linked in the case filed by Mrs. Marie Pishaw, 5621 South Union avenue, against Frank G. Pishaw.

Because of alleged misconduct, Mrs. [illegible] Knappel, 4219 South Wentworth avenue, is seeking a divorce from George Knappel, 720 West 64th street. Mrs. Helen Wills, 724 West 64th street, bases her action against Clifford Wills, 720 West 64th street, on charges of cruelty.

ASK MORE LIGHT ON STONY ISLAND SOUTH OF 79TH

New 87th Street Lamps Are Turned On.

The Calumet Gateway Improvement association last week asked the commissioner of gas and electricity for additional lighting along Stony Island avenue from 79th street to 95th street, comparable to that north of 79th street.

A request also was addressed to H. C. Kelly, superintendent of track and roadway for the surface lines, asking that steel poles along the sides replace the present wooden poles in the center of the parkway.

These moves are in line with the association's plank for the improvement and beautification of Stony Island avenue, explained J. I. Molitor, president of the Calumet Gateway body, who voiced his gratitude to Ald. David L. Sutton [8th] and Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] for having the weeds in the parkway mowed.

Double Benefit from Weed Mowing.

"This is not only extremely worth while from a health standpoint in view of the hay fever season's being upon us," he said, "but also from the safety standpoint. The high weeds obstructed the view of autoists and made crossing at the intersections dangerous."

Announcement was made last week by Mr. Molitor of the association's approval of a plan put forward by the surface lines for a loop at the end of the street car line between 94th street and the Belt railroad. The loop would be made by crossing the southbound drive of Stony Island avenue into property on the west side of the street which is owned by the surface lines.

87th Street Lights On.

Installation of the long sought street lights on 87th street beween Stony Island and Jeffery avenues was completed last week, by the department of gas and electricity and the lamps have been turned on. The lights, placed at street intersections and in the middle of each block, are suspended from the surface lines poles.

Filling is being done in Avalon park by the south park board, preparatory to the erection of the proposed field house, which is to be similar to those for Foster and Marquette parks.

NEW 13TH WARD REPUBLICANS ORGANIZE CLUB

A Republican club has been organized in the newly formed 13th ward with headquarters at 5107 Archer avenue. Relief work among residents of the community will be the first activity of the organization, according to Stanley Jankowski, president. Officers of the group, in addition to Mr. Jankowski, are Carl Librizzi, chairman; John J. Santo, recording secretary; Joseph C. Mercury, corresponding secretary; Philip L. Sanphilip, treasurer; Harry Jarsombeck, first vice president; William Metbelder, second vice president; John Adams, third vice president, and E. J. Krug, fourth vice president and ways and means chairman.

Ready to Start Stage Season in Manhattan

Week of Aug. 24 Brings Eight Premieres.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Not a single new play, show or frolic will be staged on Broadway during the next seven days, although the week is traditionally regarded as marking the start of the new season. The first première in sight is "Ruddigore," to be revived at Erlanger's theater on Aug. 10. The week of Aug. 17 is barren of announcements. But during the week of Aug. 24, new shows will be in plentiful supply, so a faithful historian of the stage must announce that date as the marker of the season's opening.

Here is the way the premières of late August along Broadway are listed at present:

"Love's Out of Fashion," a German comedy, with Walter Woolf as star, on Aug. 24. "Three Times the Hour," a melodrama which Brock Pemberton will bring to the Avon on Aug. 25; George White's "Scandals," coming to the Apollo, perhaps on the same night; "After Tomorrow," the Hugh Stange-John Golden play, listed for the Golden theater on Aug. 27; the "Vanities," announced to open Earl Carroll's new playhouse, also on the 27th; "Friendship," which George M. Cohan will bring to the Fulton, on Aug. 31; "Cloudy with Showers," the Floyd Dell-Thomas Mitchell comedy, scheduled for the Morosco on that evening; and "Free for All," the Schwab and Mandel musical show, which will set up shop at the Manhattan either the week of the 24th or 31st. Less definite are Miss Unger's play, "Ladies of Creation" and a Negro pastime called "Fast and Furious."

It seems that Jed Harris' projected cycle of Eugene O'Neill revivals will not be started until after the Theater Guild has staged the same dramatist's latest opus, "Mourning Becomes Electra." This may be professional courtesy on Mr. Harris' part; but on the other hand it may be a shrewd decision to ride along in the backwash of the publicity that O'Neill's three layer creation is certain to stir up.

"Desire Under the Elms" will be the first of the revivals, and Eugene Powers will probably have the rôle that Walter Huston originated. The second will be "Marco Millions," on the staging of which Mr. Harris is said to have some new ideas. Mr. Powers will probably be seen in this play also, in the rôle of the Great Khan, which was acted for the Guild by Baliol Holloway and Morris Carnovsky.

Items from the Shuberts' news bureau are as follows:

Judith Anderson will tour in Pirandello's "As You Desire Me" during the first months of the new season. She will spend a fortnight in the Canadian cities, beginning Sept. 21, and on Oct. 5 will open in Boston for a run. In January she will appear as the star of a new play, the title and authorship of which are a state secret in the Shubert office.

"The Venetian," by Clifford Bax, which the Shuberts will import from London, will begin its career in Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26, and will also have a week in New Haven, Conn., before entering New York. Five members of the London cast will be employed in this production.

Ethel Barrymore, now started on a western tour in "The School for Scandal," has dropped her plans for a repertory. She hopes to reach New York in the rôle of Lady Teazle around the Christmas holidays. Earlier in the summer she talked of a quartet of vehicles, with "Hedda Gabler," "Camille" and "Francesca da Rimini" as the other three.

◆

Mae West intends to make another filibustering expedition into the drama. Her new play will be called "The Constant Sinner," and it will be a dramatization of her novel, which bore another title, and which very few people seem to have read. Atlantic City will be the scene of the tryout, during the week of Aug. 24. A Broadway première will follow, on or about Sept. 10.

◆

Among the hits of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" are a group of numbers salvaged from a revue called "Who's Who," promised last season by Arthur Klein, but never staged. They bear the titles of "Changing the Guard," "Doing the New York," "Clinching the Sale," and "Victim of the Talkies." Which would come under the heading of unimportant information but for the fact that Mr. Klein has another show by the same authors. "Vanity Fair" is its title, and early September will see its staging.

◆

"Cloudy with Showers," by Floyd Dell and Thomas Mitchell, is being pointed for the Morosco theater on Aug. 31 by Manager Patterson McNutt. Its story deals with a professor who becomes involved in a scandal with one of his co-eds. Broadway has begun to refer to this play as "a feminine 'Young Woodley'."

◆

Charles Coburn, who appeared in the Chicago company of "Lysistrata" last winter, wants to act "The Peacock," by Leonard Ide, a play that almost tempted George Arliss to take a vacation from the pictures. George C. Tyler also did some flirting with "The Peacock," as a possible vehicle for Otis Skinner.

Plans for Carnival.

Riverview Park is turning its attention toward its autumnal Mardi Gras carnival. Aug. 15 is the date of the carnival opening. It will continue until Sept. 20.

CONTINUED:

"High Hat," with Edna Hibbard, James Spottswood, and Richard Taber; Adelphi theater; seventh week.

"Stepping Sisters"; Blackstone; twentieth week.

COMING:

"A Modern Virgin," by Elmer Harris; Garrick, opening Aug. 17.

"Salt Water," comedy, by Frank Craven, with Taylor Holmes and Fiske O'Hara; Playhouse, opening Aug. 22.

WEEKLY CHANGE:

R.-K.-O. Palace theater: Continuous vaudeville and talking pictures; Bessie Love, headliner.

Academy theater: Burlesque and talking pictures; "French Frolics," with Miss Carmen.

NEW LADY TEAZLE

ETHEL BARRYMORE.

[Fink Photo.]

THE classic role of Lady Teazle in Sheridan's comedy, "The School for Scandal," is now being acted by Miss Barrymore. She is making a midsummer tour to the Pacific coast, and probably will reach Chicago, when eastward bound, about Thanksgiving day. She first appeared as the flirtatious lady of the famous screen scene eight years ago, with her uncle, the late John Drew, as Sir Peter.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

interrupted his frenzy of composition in order to go to Russia, where his blatherskite tendencies have been manifested in fulsome after luncheon oratory in praise of that economic and governmental insanity called communism.

The Guild says on this point:

"Recently we cabled Mr. Shaw concerning the play. Yes, he replied, it was entirely likely that it would be completed by fall, but that his optimism in this quarter was not to be construed as a promise. We are, however, familiar with his working habits, and with the concentration which he puts into a task until it is finished. In our own heart we feel that the play should be in our hands before the snow flies."

There is only one detail in the approaching theatrical situation, as thus outlined, that the dramatic editor of THE TRIBUNE faces with a sense of unutterable weariness. And that is this new play by Mr. Shaw. The Theater Guild may rejoice over it, but the mere thought of it gives me a sinking feeling. I have seen enough Shaw, and heard enough Shaw, for one lifetime. The famous tongue-in-cheek of the so-called British Aristophanes begins to strike me as a morbid growth, in need of surgery.

Playwright Vs. Censor.

The fear of a stage censorship has been hovering over Broadway for months, because of provisions in the Masker bill, which may be brought before the New York state legislature. This worry has caused the birth of an organization which bears the title of National Council on Freedom from Censorship, and of which a group of professional playwrights and novelists appears to be the founders.

The chairman of the council is Hatcher Hughes, author of "Hell Bent for Heaven." The vice chairmen are Elmer Rice, author of "Street Scene," "The Adding Machine," etc.; Fannie Hurst, and Barrett Clark. Its membership includes authors, lawyers, and educators.

The organization is planning a legislative campaign to attack the post-office censorship over books and publications in the mails. It will also undertake to effect the repeal of certain New York state motion picture laws, of the theater "padlock" law, known as the Wales act, and the laws giving special police powers to vice reform societies.

The council, apparently, has overlooked the greatest current menace to the freedom of the imaginative writer, which is the bawdiness, vulgarity, and vicious exploitation of depraved sex themes now widely practiced in the craft of letters. A playwright or a novelist deserves no more freedom of self-expression than he earns by his manifestation of good taste, artistic sincerity, and cleanness of purpose.

Jack and Jill Plays.

"The Haunted Castle" is the next children's performance to be given at Ravinia by the Jack and Jill Players under the auspices of the Ravinia Opera club, Aug. 6. The play will be directed by its author, Marie Agnes Foley.

The Jack and Jill Players' winter season of Saturday afternoon performances opens Oct. 3 at the Chicago Woman's club theater. There will be an extra performance every first Sunday afternoon of the month. The players will also take part in a pageant on Labor day in Soldiers' field under the auspices of the Federation of Labor.

Actress Stars Own Managers in Repertory

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Katharine Cornell will take over the Belasco theater under an arrangement expected to be completed soon. This indicates that Miss Cornell, with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as a nucleus, will install her long planned repertory company in the playhouse presided over so many years by the late Belasco.

This does not mean that Miss Cornell will take over the Belasco organization, as that machine disbanded after the death of its leader. She has not yet decided whether she will take "The Barretts" on tour before she produces a new play in New York.

◆

In addition to Miss Cornell, three other woman stars will have their own theaters and repertory troupes this fall. Alice Brady will be given a theater by her father, William A. Brady, in which to produce a cycle of dramas in which she will be starred. The first will be "Manhattan Nocturne," already tried out in Atlantic City. It is being rewritten before being brought to town.

Pauline Lord, who quit the stage for a while after her marriage, is returning in the rôle of producer. She has one play in rehearsal now and is looking for a theater of her own.

Jane Cowl also will go "independent" this fall and manage her own plays. She will produce a repertory. Several of her appearances are likely to be in Shakespearean works.

The new operetta being written by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach is almost completed, and it has been titled "The Passionate Pilgrim." The two principal rôles will be played by George Metaxa and Dorothy Debenham, both well known on the London stage, but this will mark their first trials in this country.

Metaxa, a Rumanian by birth, is a matinee idol in England. After making a hit in "Wake Up and Dream" he played opposite Peggy Wood in "Bitter Sweet" for two years.

Frieda is a diminutive 4 year old who plays in "The Green Pastures." Her performance consists mainly in getting a fish bone caught in her throat in the scene where the Negroes have an old fashioned fish fry.

Two nights ago Frieda disappeared, and only after a frantic search was she discovered sitting out in the audience in a second row seat.

"I hadn't ever seen the show and I wanted to," she explained to the reproving stage manager.

'Modern Virgin' for Chicago

"A MODERN VIRGIN," a comedy by Elmer Harris, will be the first new play of the season in Chicago, opening Monday, Aug. 17, in the Garrick theater. It will be presented by the Messrs. Shubert, following its successful engagement on Broadway.

Mr. Harris, as in "Young Sinners," deals with the subject of the young moderns in "A Modern Virgin." The play tells the story of a mischievous girl of 17, who, writhing under the strict discipline of a maiden aunt, decides to discover the secrets of love and life.

The cast will be headed by Roger Pryor, recently seen here as the leading man of "Up Pops the Devil"; Margaret Sullavan, who was acclaimed as the ingénue "find" of last season, and Herbert Rawlinson, a celebrity of the screen.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

were converted into an amusing set for the first act finale.

Such well known songsmiths as Irving Berlin, Philip Charig, Dorothy Fields, Jimmie McHugh, the Lief brothers, and Vernon Duke have given lyrics and music, and such nationally approved wits as Nunnally Johnson, Dorothy Parker, Peter Arno, and Broun, himself, have supplied dialogue material.

Those who gave money may get all of it back—indeed, the $11 opening night paid back almost all of the production cost—but they'll get no dividends. Profits are to be shared coöperatively by the principals.

A coöperative show is no news to Broadway, and rarely is a charity. Shoestring producers make a habit of getting their casts to waive salaries even though Equity loudly objects. But "Shoot the Works" is a different sort of thing in that no shoestringer will profit by his cast's sacrifice. Loose, amiable, and informal, it is much like the old "Garrick Gaities" or "Grand Street Follies." At the opening Broun told the critics that he wanted constructive criticism. They should start, he said, by saying the show was swell and build up from there. Most of them did their best by Heywood by reporting that the revue had some swell numbers.

A Radio Skit.

There is, for instance, a rapid skit in which Jack Hazard, veteran among comedians, played the rôle of a radio announcer gone mad from having to say the same old things in the same old way every night. To bring him to sanity his daughter arranges a fake broadcast in which the old gentleman may work off all his suppressed language. The old gentleman curses roundly, warns the unseen audience that the next number will be terrible, and confides that Uncle Ned, who tells bedtime stories, is really a bit of a lecher. Hazard played the part magnificently the opening night, though he felt not at all well. Next morning his doctor told him he had chicken pox—caught it from the Hazard children—and the actor relapsed sadly into a state of quarantine.

Just as the fake microphone provided an outlet for an announcer gone mad, so, apparently, did "Shoot the Works" provide an uninhabited medium for lyric writers. "I'm back in circulation again," warbles a torch singer whose romance has busted; "I want to chisel in on your heart, I want to muscle in on your love," sings a gangster swain to his moll; "I'm just a doorstep baby" is the refrain of another piece, and a fourth gets melodic significance out of the phrase, "Pie in the sky."

Producers Attend.

Some of the sketches may have proved comforting to Florenz Ziegfeld and the other commercial revue producers who attended the première. In the show business for a living, they came to see what a philanthropic movement could turn up. Broun, Johnson, Dorothy Parker—all excellent writers—have been pretty much ignored by a commercial stage that sticks to the same old George Kaufmans and Howard Dietzes and Gene Bucks. Now, with a fellow writer and former dramatic critic as the big boss, they might show the old money grubbers a thing or two.

Broun chose for his own offering a sketch entitled "Death Says It Isn't So." He admitted to the audience that it was a bit serious—but he liked it, he said, and the audience had better not think it funny. A dying man is visited by Death, Death being a genial looking Irishman in brown coat and white trousers who fingers a pack of cards instead of a scythe. The dying man is amazed that he isn't afraid, and when Death leans over to whisper a funny story the invalid goes into a paroxysm of laughter. The nurse thinks it's the death rattle, but Death says it isn't so. We all go out laughing at that same gag.

Ineffectual on the Stage.

A comforting notion, without doubt; and, as Broun set it down on paper, a beautifully told one. But it wouldn't act.

So it was with a Dorothy Parker sketch—and she, like Broun, has often criticized the drama in the public prints. Her sketch, in which a young man with a hangover learns from a girl all the horrible things he has done the night before, must have been perfect light reading in the Parker vein, but as material for actors it was something less than perfect.

At a modest $3 top price "Shoot the Works" may find its place in the summer playgoer's schedule. And as long as it does it will provide a clearing house for actors. An eccentric dancer, one Al Norman, joined the cast at the last minute, too late to have his name on the program. In his first Broadway appearance he stopped the show. Earl Carroll was in a subsequent audience, and before the week was over Norman had been engaged to appear in Carroll's "Vanities."

Stock Companies Thrive.

Despite a depression which has cut the list of Broadway offerings to twelve, the summer stock companies have been thriving as well as or better than in former years. For a fraction of their New York wages actors and actresses of first standing are content to spend their vacations in rural spots from Skowhegan to Southampton. Not a few of the stock companies content themselves with offering tried and true hits, while others, more adventurous, try out new plays.

One of them, in Westport, Conn., has been organized with more than a hot weather existence in view. Called the Country Playhouse, the theater has deftly been made from an old barn in an apple orchard. Its sponsor is Lawrence Langner, member of the board of directors of the Theater guild, and its company includes Rollo Peters, Romney Brent, and Dorothy Gish.

Langner, a patent attorney, has found that the Theater guild does not provide enough of an outlet for his energies. An enthusiast on the topic of repertory, he has seen the guild's plans for a repertory season crumble year after year. The Lunts are supposed to act in "Elizabeth, the Queen" and "Much Ado About Nothing" on alternate weeks, but "Much Ado" flops as a production. So, in Westport, Langner has organized his own repertory company, and when the new season opens he will bring it to Broadway independent of the guild.

A Varied Repertoire.

Catholic indeed is his list of six plays. There is a revival in a better-than—"After Dark" manner of Dion Boucicault's "The Streets of New York"; there's "The Comic Artist," by the Pulitzer prize winning Susan Glaspell; there go Shakespeare's "As You Like It"; a comedy by Langner himself, and another comedy by William Cotton, magazine writer.

The "Streets of New York" revival is done with fine gravity, and to see Miss Gish go into a Victorian swoon or to see the personable Brent as a drunken young schemer is to become enthusiastic over the Langner plan. If the very old Shakespeare, the pretty old Boucicault, and the new Glaspell can all be done within the space of a week, this new repertory theater should hold the Broadway interest.

Late this month Earl Carroll will open his new home for extravaganza, a 3,000 seat hippodrome where, by charging a mere $3 or less a seat for ten performances a week, Carroll hopes to afford productions that will knock somebody's eye out. Not depending upon press releases, but having been taken on a tour of inspection by Maestro Carroll himself, I am able to report that the new theater has dazzling possibilities. Carroll has thought of a couple of stunts that the movie cathedrals have failed to discover.

Public Address System.

There are, for instance, loud speakers concealed in every corner of the theater—in the rest rooms, in the lobbies, and in the dressing rooms. When the stage manager wants Will Mahoney on stage he simply plugs in the Mahoney dressing room and barks through the loud speaker. When intermission comes and is about gone the public address system will be turned on, and the awed customers will hear this polite warning: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is the stage manager speaking. The performance is about to begin."

Just behind the orchestra pit and in view of the audience is a black panel from which a formally attired "light conductor"—head electrician to Mr. Carroll's competitors—will manipulate the buttons that light the show. Everything is at his fingertips. A red tipped button slides up or down a groove and red lights glow or grow dim. A green tipped button controls green lights, another amber, another white. Each groove has numbers alongside of it, so that the lighting of any one set will have a code number—6291 meaning 6 on the red, 2 on the blue, and so on.

Thoughtful of the Beauties.

Backstage Carroll has been most thoughtful of his beauties. Each girl will have her own modernistic dressing table. There will be a refrigerator in which they may keep their Johns' orchids. There will be telephones so that John may talk to his girl from the stage door. The elevator is extra high, so that girls may get aboard without crushing their headdresses. A Carroll beauty without a headdress doesn't exist.

Perhaps the most quixotic detail of the whole place is a card room for stage hands. Stage hands, says Carroll, are good fellows even if they do keep a poker game going all during a performance. So why not give them a clubroom? The room he has provided is large, with a real fireplace in one corner. Unhappily, it is below stage and has no real windows. So the thoughtful Carroll is building a false window. During matinees it will glow with artificial sunlight, and in the evening it will be illuminated with synthetic moonlight.

BESSIE LOVE.

THE Palace theater is giving followers of the films a chance to see Miss Love "in person" this week. She appears in a one act sketch upon the vaudeville program which began performances last night.

Actress Speaks Her Mind

KATHARINE CORNELL, now in her first year under her own management [and with the highly successful "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as the result], has answered a questionnaire about theatrical conditions on "the road" by stating that they are the fault of New York's theater overlords. She says:

"I believe that the reason theatrical conditions on the road are not what we would like them to be is due to the fact that the public has been cheated by managers for so long that it has become impatient and disinterested. By this I mean that the poorest and sketchiest presentations have been untruthfully advertised as original New York productions; even some stars have failed their public by allowing their performances to fall below the New York standard.

"Until we restore playgoers' faith by giving them good plays, well done, it is natural that their interest in the theater is lukewarm. I hope I have made it clear that, in my opinion, it is the managers themselves who are to blame for the present conditions outside of New York."

In Vaudeville

HERE are notations on the acts that comprise the vaudeville program at the Palace theater for the current week:

BESSIE LOVE—The cinema star "in person." Originally placed in the movies by John Emerson, she was developed into stardom by D. W. Griffith. Her personation of a Duncan sister in the first musical talking picture, "Broadway Melody," brought her into vogue. In Hollywood after working hours she shares honors with Lupe Velez as an informal entertainer. She sings, plays a "uke"—and owns half a dozen cups which declare her to be the champion Charleston stepper of Hollywood's ballrooms.

HON. M. WU AND HIS CHINESE COLLEGIANS — They combine the skill of the oriental as an entertainer with American jazz ideas in dance and song. A company of half a dozen young men and girls in a specially produced "unit." Incidentally most of the collegians come honorably by the title.

HOWARD, FINE AND HOWARD—They were originally "stooges" with Ted Healy and have graduated into an act of their own. With them are Jack Walsh and Ruthie Goodwin.

BILLY FARRELL AND DAD—Dancers and comedians who are really father and son.

THE FOUR KADEX—A European importation with an aerial apparatus on which they perform hazardous tricks.

Chicago Girl Ascribes Film Entry to Luck

But Personality Makes Frances Dee Favorite.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Three summers ago Frances Dee was a want-ad taker for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Two years ago she went from her home in Chicago to spend a vacation in Los Angeles.

And now this 21 year old girl, whose big blue-gray eyes sparkle with ambition and humor, daring, and willingness for hard work, suddenly has become one of the favored younger darlings of the movies, after a sequence of events which never would have happened if she had known in advance that the things she experienced can happen to only one movie aspirant in 10,000.

Miss Dee is one of the few young film favorites who never dyed her hair to get a part. She still wears it the natural chestnut brown of her college days at the University of Chicago. She did not change her own name to a film name. She did not go in for "movie society," but lives comfortably at a home made for her in Hollywood by her mother, Mrs. F. M. Dee of Chicago, and an older married sister, Margaret. She did not pose in lingerie and kimono photographs to win herself publicity in cheaper magazines.

Rejects Starvation Diet.

She eats what and when she feels like it, figuring it better to remain a normal healthy American girl than to starve herself under 110 pounds, as most of the younger actresses do in furtherance of film aspirations. Miss Dee weighs 115. She has not had any "engagement" announced to this, that, or the other actor for the double reason that she does not believe in this overused and unintelligent Hollywood means of obtaining newspaper mention, and because she has so conducted herself that none of her Hollywood "friends" have felt it necessary to pass the word around that "Frances Dee" is secretly engaged to so and so.

After coming to Los Angeles for a visit in the summer of 1929, seeing the sights and taking the recommended trips about the countryside, Frances read some movie studio publicity to the effect that University of Southern California girls and Los Angeles high school girls were being recruited at $10 a day to act as part of the college atmosphere in "Words and Music," a Fox film, supposed to have a sorority girl sequence.

As a member of the Sigma club and sophomore class at the University of Chicago, Frances went over to the Fox movie lot "just for fun."

One Chance in 10,000.

"What happened, I know now, was pure luck—one chance in 10,000," says Frances. "I knew so little of what was going on that I stood in the wrong line at the casting office, and by mistake was handed one of the slips given to extra girls who had been summoned to work.

"Finally, I had to explain. Jack Phillips of the casting office scowlingly asked what I was doing there. I said: 'I'm a college girl and I want to get into your college girl picture.' It was so unusual and I suppose it sounded so fresh that he and another man laughed. They sent me to the assistant director in charge of details on the picture. The truth is there was not one college girl or high school girl there, and the chance that sent me in with extras caused me to be given a bit to do—chatting over the sorority house telephone.

"Then I was ruined for returning to school. I wanted to stay in pictures. I wrote to my father and received his permission to remain out here a year."

But films did not take as kindly to her as brown haired Frances had eagerly expected after the first opening.

"It was after a couple of bad tests and nine months of unimportant occasional extra work that I said to myself: 'Well, I got in at Fox's, perhaps I can get in somewhere else the same way.' So I boldly went over to Paramount."

* *

Cinema Progress.

Working without pay every night from 8 to 12 to improve herself in dramatics at the Pasadena Community playhouse helped Miss Dee chisel a bit as a bridesmaid in "Fu Manchu," a Paramount production. Next she was one of ten girls taken in three weeks' location with the "Follow Through" troupe.

She then played a rôle, again without any pay, at the Hollywood Writers' club, but in films continued to get nothing but bits. Then some higher up at Paramount, seeking a fresh face for Maurice Chevalier's "Playboy of Paris," decided to give Miss Dee a chance. The chance stamped her as a leading actress prospect. Her mother and sister came to Hollywood and made a home for her with them. Parts in "Along Came Youth," with Buddy Rogers; "June Moon," with Jack Oakie; "Caught" [not released], with Richard Arlen, and "The American Tragedy" [not released] elevated her to a five year contract and secure place among the younger actresses.

Miss Dee's father was an army captain in ordnance, later going to utility corporations in Chicago until called to Indianapolis with a power corporation. Father Dee is now reconciled to a movie actress in the family despite hearty original doubts about it.

More Plays by Abie's Creator; Theater Gossip

ANN NICHOLS of "Abie's Irish Rose" fame, who deserted New York for Hollywood two years ago, will return and open producing offices on Broadway early in September. She proposes to present three new plays, all by herself or written in association with other authors, during the forthcoming season.

◆

George White announces that the cast for the forthcoming edition of "Scandals," the eleventh of the series, has been completed with the addition of Joan Abbott, Fred Manatt, and Ross MacLean. Others already chosen are Rudy Vallee, Willie and Eugene Howard, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, Barbara Blair, Mavine and Virginia Loomis, the Gale Quadruplets, and Dorothy and Harry Dixon. "Scandals" will open in Atlantic City on Aug. 10. Joseph Urban has designed the settings.

◆

"The Man Who Pays the Piper," a play written by G. B. Stern, English novelist and playwright, has been purchased for production in the fall by Horace Liveright. The author, who was represented on the American stage two seasons ago by "The Matriarch," will come to New York for the première. Mr. Liveright's first production of the season, a play by Edwin Justus Mayer, is now known as "Things as They Are." Its previous tentative titles were "The Last Mask" and "In Statu Quo."

◆

Alexander McKaig has bought for production for next season "Achilles Had a Heel," by Martin Flavin. It will be directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Mr. Flavin is author of "The Criminal Code" and "Children of the Moon." Mr. Mamoulian has directed "Porgy," "R. U. R." and "A Farewell to Arms."

◆

Henry A. Rosendale has placed in rehearsal a farce called "The Widow Is a Virgin," which he wrote. The cast will be headed by Sam Ash and Enid Markey. Mr. Rosendale expects to open the production in New York in about three weeks. He was co-author of "Lady in Pawn," staged in Chicago last winter.

◆

"Manhattan Nocturne," which was tried out last week in Asbury Park, N. J., by William A. Brady, with his daughter, Alice Brady, as star, has been withdrawn for revision. Miss Brady is scheduled to begin a two weeks' stock engagement in Montreal on Aug. 3 in "A Most Immoral Lady," which she acted in New York in 1928.

◆

To date William A. Brady has not found a play suitable to serve as a vehicle for his wife, Grace George, who recently relinquished her option on John Halloran's "En Famille." If he does not get a new play for her by Oct. 1 Miss George will go on tour again in "The First Mrs. Fraser," visiting the south and west.

◆

Jane Seymour has been engaged for the rôle played by Helen Flint in the New York company of "The House Beautiful," which will begin a tour in Philadelphia in September. Mary Philips and James Bell will continue in the cast.

◆

"The Passionate Pilgrim" will be the title of the musical play by Otto Harbach and Jerome Kern which Max Gordon will produce in the fall. Dorothy Debenham, an English actress, has been engaged for the show, which will go in rehearsal early in September.

◆

Miss Billie Burke began an engagement at the Curran theater, San Francisco, last Monday night in "The Vinegar Tree." She is playing the rôle acted in New York by Mary Roland.

More Plays by Abie's Creator; Theater Gossip

ANN NICHOLS of "Abie's Irish Rose" fame, who deserted New York for Hollywood two years ago, will return and open pro- ucing offices on Broadway early in eptember. She proposes to present hree new plays, all by herself or writ en in association with other authors uring the forthcoming season.

George White announces that th ast for the forthcoming edition o "Scandals," the eleventh of the se ies, has been completed with the ad ition of Joan Abbott, Fred Manatt, and Ross MacLean. Others already hosen are Rudy Vallee, Willie and Eugene Howard, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, Barbara Blair, Mavine and Virginia Loomis, the Gale Quadruplets, and Dorothy and Harry Dixon. "Scandals" will open in Atlantic City on Aug. 10. Joseph Urban has designed the settings.

"The Man Who Pays the Piper," a play written by G. B. Stern, English novelist and playwright, has been purchased for production in the fall by Horace Liveright. The author, who was represented on the American stage two seasons ago by "The Matriarch," will come to New York for the première. Mr. Liveright's first production of the season, a play by Edwin Justus Mayer, is now known as "Things as They Are." Its previous tentative titles were "The Last Mask" and "In Statu Quo."

Alexander McKaig has bought for roduction for next season "Achilles Had a Heel," by Martin Flavin. It will be directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Mr. Flavin is author of "The Criminal Code" and "Children of the Moon." Mr. Mamoulian has directed "Porgy," "R. U. R." and "A Farewell to Arms."

Henry A. Rosendale has placed in rehearsal a farce called "The Widow is a Virgin," which he wrote. The cast will be headed by Sam Ash and Enid Markey. Mr. Rosendale expects o open the production in New York n about three weeks. He was co author of "Lady in Pawn," staged in Chicago last winter.

"Manhattan Nocturne," which was ried out last week in Asbury Park, N. J., by William A. Brady, with his aughter, Alice Brady, as star, has een withdrawn for revision. Critic Selects Six Best Films of Last Mont

Directors Also Receive Wor of Praise.

By Mae Tinee.

TEN BEST DIRECTORS OF 1930-1931

	No. o vote
Lewis Milestone	25
Wesley Ruggles	17
George Hill	16
Josef von Sternberg	14
D. W. Griffith	13
Robert Z. Leonard	13
John Cromwell	11
Charles Chaplin	101
Howard Hawks	101
Howard Hughes	91

THE HONOR ROLL.

Alfred E. Green	80
Edward H. Griffith	75
Clarence Brown	74
Ernst Lubitsch	69
George Fitzmaurice	48
Robert Milton	47
Mervyn LeRoy	43
Raoul Walsh	42
Lloyd Bacon	36
Harry D'Arrast	36
John Blystone	35
Harry Beaumont	34
Edmund Goulding	34
Victor Fleming	30
Lionel Barrymore	29
Ernest B. Schoedsack	28
Tod Browning	25

COMPLETE LIST of pictures directed by the "Ten Best" follows:

Lewis Milestone—"All Quiet on the Western Front," "Front Page."

Wesley Ruggles—"The Sea Bat" "Cimarron."

George Hill—"The Big House," "Min and Bill."

Josef von Sternberg—"The Blue Angel," "Morocco."

D. W. Griffith—"Abraham Lincoln."

Robert Z. Leonard—"The Divorcee," "In Gay Madrid," "Let Us Be Gay," "Bachelor Father," "It's A Wise Child."

John Cromwell—"The Big Pond," "For the Defense," "Tom Sawyer," "Scandal Sheet," "Unfaithful."

Charles Chaplin—"City Lights."

Howard Hawks—"The Criminal Code," "The Dawn Patrol."

Howard Hughes—"Hell's Angels."

COMMENTS Film Daily—Milestone's achievement is particularly notable in that the two productions he directed were vastly different in origin and design, in addition to being produced on different lots. "All Quiet," was adapted from the war novel by Erich Maria Remarque, while "The Front Page" came from the stage hit of the same name.

"For the first time in the six years that the Film Daily has been conducting the annual vote on directors, Ernst Lubitsch failed to be included among the Ten Best. This is ascribed to the fact that in the year covered by the present vote Lubitsch directed only one production, 'Monte Carlo.' On this picture he received enough mentions to make fourth place in the honor roll.

"Lubitsch, however, still leads as a Ten Best winner, since he is the only director with five citations. Herbert Brenon and King Vidor made the grade four times each, while Charles Chaplin and Clarence Brown have been among the topliners three times in the six years. Those who have won out twice include James Cruze, Cecil B. de Mille, D. W. Griffith, Rex Ingram, Frank Lloyd, the late F. W. Murnau, Malcolm St. Clair, Josef von Sternberg and Raoul Walsh." . . .

RICHARD CROMWELL, the young chap who made such a hit in "Tol'able David," has been signed for a leading male rôle in "Then Hell Broke Loose" . . . ANNA Q. NILSSON who has been off the screen for three years due to injuries received making a picture, is expected home from Sweden next week . . . JAMES CAGNEY, the tough gangster of "The Public Enemy," devotes six hours a day to practicing on the piano . . .

See you tomorrow!

LOOKING FOR PLAYS

ALICE BRADY.

SHE is the daughter of a veteran theatrical manager—William A. Brady—and the instinct to act is in her blood. Miss Brady doesn't come to Chicago often but her name is frequently seen in the electric lights along Broadway. Last spring she made a vivid impression in "Brass Ankle." Now she is hunting for new plays, with the idea of taking a New York theater for the season.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Favors Credit Division.

Dear Miss Tinée: Could you please tell me why Marie Dressler gets all the credit for every picture she is in with POLLY MORAN? In "Reducing," I thought POLLY MORAN was wonderful, but who got all the credit and praise? No one but Marie Dressler. The same thing happened in "Politics." Something should be done about this at once.

Thanking you,
GEORGE WISSING.

Editor's note: What would you suggest?

Capable of Self Defense.

Dear Miss Tinée. After reading Miss J. W.'s letter in reference to me in the "Voice of the Fan," I couldn't resist a retort in my own defense to her, and to all those so-called responsible people whose cause she is championing.

In the first place I believe you are conducting a movie column, not an "outdoor life" affair, for poets, he-men from the great wide spaces, etc., of which all these responsible people seem to be a part.

Bruce is, no doubt, all right in his way, but in your column he doesn't seem to be very heavy.

I can't understand what life and love have to do with a movie critic's reviews. So Bruce, take yourself out, write to a different outfit, such as "Advice to the Lovelorn," or "Who's Who Among the Cowboys and Indians." I feel sure you'll go over big.

F. WATTS.

Editor's note: Now that everybody's had their say we'll ring off on this controversy.

* *

Lacks Publicity Manager.

Dear Mae Tinée: In the "Voice of the Fan" Jean Siek asks this question: "Why does the public sigh over Chevalier and his smile when Clark Gable and his dimples are on the horizon?" She says she really wants to know.

Well, I'll tell you why. Chevalier was praised and lauded to the heavens before he ever set foot on United States soil, let alone our "silver screen." He was lucky—he had a good publicity manager, I think.

Clark Gable got nary a word of publicity until he fought to win it. He deserves every kind word he gets. He's made himself LOVED in hard rôles. I'm sure you will agree that it is seldom a gangster-murderer-villian or what have you, is loved and admired as Clark Gable is. That's a trick.

A CLARK GABLE FAN.

Editor's note: Sure it's not a dimple?

Tribute to Leslie Howard.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am writing this in hopes that it may attract your many readers' attention to a rising young actor of unusual ability and poise. I refer to Leslie Howard. Only today I witnessed "Five and Ten," and not so long ago "Never the Twain Shall Meet." I was unfortunate enough to have missed your reviews of both these pictures, but feel certain that you, also, must have praised both excellent performances of the gentleman in question.

I read your section entitled "Voice of the Fan" and hope you will do me the favor of publishing this bit of tribute to the fascinating Leslie Howard. Sincerely, yours,

DOROTHY FOLEY.

Editor's note: With pleasure!

* *

"Perfect Lady of the Screen."

Dear Mae Tinée: I have just witnessed the most magnificent performance I have ever seen. It's quite remarkable, since I have seen many great pictures.

How you can say that Norma Shearer played a close second to Lionel Barrymore in "A Free Soul" is more than I can see. She never did and never will take a back seat. Her performance was perfect. She can register sadness and joy better than any other actress. She's the finest actress on the screen of the present or the past.

Let the fans have their Garbo, Crawford, and Bow and their many copies, but I'll stick to the "present ladies of the screen," Norma Shearer for me! Do you blame me?

W. A.

Editor's note: Blame you? Never. I just envy Norma!

* *

Inspired to Rhythm.

Dear Mae Tinée: [Re: that poem of several Sundays ago].

Floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by all truly élite cats.
It's simply amazing you didn't know!
But if you must see them, here's where to go!
Down darkest alleys on moonless nights,
Listening for sounds, and looking for sights,
Such as you've never, never seen
In dreams, or in life, or upon the screen.
Walk, O! so lightly! Beware of a sneeze!
Listen for solos in minor keys!
Follow the echo of padded feet
Under the fence and across the street
Into the arc lamps yellow glare.
O, you'll be astonished when you get there!
Feline aristocrats garbed in the mode
Sponsored by Paquin [and custom sewed].
Sombreros, tilted at dangerous angles,
Fashioned of mouse skin and dripping with spangles.
Well, if you're skeptical, just go and see;
Then you will have to agree with me
That floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by the truly élite cats.
In the name o' nonsense!

DOROTHY.

Editor's Note: Your verse though catty is very natty.

* *

Question for Producers.

Dear Mae Tinée: I don't want to write a long letter for I know you have so many to look over, but I would like to ask you one question.

In a revived picture why don't they use the same star in the talkie that they did in the silent?

For instance, have Richard Dix star again in "The Vanishing American." Or Norma Talmadge in "Smiling Through." I know I would love to see them and there are probably a lot more people who would, too.

Thanks a lot for your valuable time. Yours truly,

CRESIE.

Editor's note: I like the idea! Why don't you write the producers about it?

* *

A Movie Fan's Views.

Dear Mae: I have seen two pictures of Edward G. Robinson, and I want to say that I think he is great. "Little Caesar" and "Smart Money" convinced me.

I wish some one would take Lon Chaney's place. Lon was a great actor. He would risk his life just to make a picture. Would any one else? No! That's why he was my favorite.

Such stars as Emil Jannings, John Barrymore, and others couldn't do such things as Mr. Chaney did in his pictures. Here's for a double for [Genius Man of a Thousand Faces] Chaney. Truly yours,

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's note: I wonder how many of us love our work well enough to risk our lives for it?

* *

Probable Explanation.

Dear Miss Tinée: It MAY have been the heat. Sincerely yours,

BILL FRY.

Editor's note: Well, do write again when you feel warm enough.

* *

Question Remains Unanswered.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you kindly publish the following letter:

Why do we insist upon discouraging real art in the movies, by registering preference for movie king and queen at the box office, and in our fan letters for such "acting" as is regularly being given us by merely a couple of good looking youngsters only portraying their own most natural inclinations, by making love to each other, and who are incapable of real acting, or of stepping out of their own individuality and into that of another character?

Instead, why do we not learn to recognize as the best actor or actress the artist who is best able to portray the greatest number of most contrasting characters, and not the mere performer who is only able to be himself, which we all can do.

Very truly yours,
C. A. CARLTON.

Editor's note: I don't know why.

* *

Surprise for Some One.

Dear Miss Tinee: For want of having nothing better to ocupy my time in the p. m. I find the picture houses restful and cool, and see all the stars. Then we are offered usually a very good variety of interesting subjects from all over the world, but I don't think the public appreciates this enough.

The low grade of books written today has a lot to do with the type of pictures produced. Producers should not film pictures where "Adults only" is advertised, but, as Mr. Arliss says, it is hard to satisfy the public when movies are turned out at the rate of ten pictures a week.

These are some of my ideas. I don't expect to have them published.

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's Note: To him who expecteth not, happeneth!

'Peter Ibbetson' Scheduled for RaviniaMonday

Bori, Johnson Will Sing Leading Roles.

By Edward Moore.

Tre Re," it was—they set up the "Peter Ibbetson" scenery on the stage and Miss Bori, Mr. Johnson, the other members of the cast, the conductor, and the stage force experimented with tricky, intricate lighting cues until 4 o'clock in the morning. This is just a detail in what it means to stage an opera.

The work has had quite a history. It was a novel of fantasy by George du Maurier in 1891. It was regarded with desire and apprehension by people of the stage for nearly a quarter century—desire for its plot, apprehension of the risks of the dream scenes. In 1915 it was dramatized by John Raphael. Then Constance Collier rewrote the dramatization and played the rôle of the Duchess of Towers with John and Lionel Barrymore. Incidentally, it was Maurice Barrymore, their father, who had been anxious to have it in play form years before.

Success of the Year.

Then Deems Taylor grew interested in the play as a subject for opera, and is credited on the fly-leaf with having been the co-author with Miss Collier in converting the play into a libretto. Having done that, he wrote the music.

The work was brought out at the New York Metropolitan on Saturday, Feb. 7, of this year, and it apparently became the leading popular success of the year as far as operas are concerned. It even caused a renewal of interest in the play. Miss Collier staged its revival, and Jessie Royce Landis of Evanston acted the Duchess of Towers rôle. There is talk even now of Miss Collier taking the play on tour this coming season.

Mr. Tayor is coming out to Ravinia to see the first performance given his work outside of New York. When his other opera, "The King's Henchman," was put on at the Metropolitan a few years ago, Mr. Johnson, who sang the leading rôle in it as well as in "Peter Ibbetson," received this among his other notes of congratulation: "Dear God, Thank You for thinking up Eddie Johnson when You were making tenors.

Doubling Necessary.

The opera takes a long cast. Mr. Johnson and Miss Bori lead the list, as just said. Alfredo Gandolfi will appear as Col. Ibbetson, Florence Macbeth as Mrs. Deane, Ina Bourskaya as Mrs. Glyn, and Louis D'Angelo as the prison chaplain. There are a dozen or more other rôles, necessitating quite a bit of doubling. Margery Maxwell and George Cehanovsky, for instance, have each of their names opposite three different characters, though luckily no two of them appear on the stage at the same time.

The conductor is to be Wilfrid Pelletier, a member of the Ravinia and Metropolitan conducting staffs for a number of seasons past. He was selected in this case at Mr. Taylor's personal request.

This opera, by the way, is Ravinia's gesture toward the English language.

In a World Apart.

While on the subject of Ravinia, this seems a fitting place to include some impressions written by a visitor. The visitor is R. L. Hickman, M.D., of Clinton, Okla.:

"There is an atmosphere of dignity and quiet beauty in this group of low, unpretentious buildings among tall trees. God made the trees but surely Ravinia park is the work of an artist. Perhaps one feels this more keenly coming from the city, where life swarms on the lake shore in pagan splendor of bathing suits and beach pajamas. That has a beauty too of its own—the picture of a great middle class city enjoying itself in summer, but here at Ravinia is something else. Here are people come to see and to listen, quietly and intently.

"The opera is 'Faust' and the first act begins before dark. It all seems far away and perhaps a little silly at first. One wonders if, after all, opera is not an anachronism in this modern age. Then complete darkness shuts off the outside world. We are suddenly taken into the world of Faust, Mephisto, and Marguerite. The magic has worked again—opera will never die.

"The beautiful garden scene is the high spot of the opera. It is then that we enter entirely the world of make-believe. The spell endures from then on, even through the long train ride back to the city.

"It seems a marvelous idea to me — Ravinia park — beautifully carried out and managed. I don't know how it happened. Whether it is run by subscription or for the purpose of making money. It doesn't matter—so long as it is there. One only hopes that there will be no reason to discontinue it."

In Russian Concert.

A fairly active week will mark the Ravinia activities in addition to "Peter Ibbetson." There will be a Russian concert this afternoon. Eric DeLamarter and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will present Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" Symphony, Stravinsky's "The Fire Bird," and Joseph Vito, harpist, will play solos by himself and Thomas. The evening performance will be "Fra Diavolo," though the Russian implications of that attractive operetta are not at present entirely clear. Still, it is a first performance of the season. Florence Macbeth, Ina Bourskaya, Mario Chamlee, Vittorio Trevisan, and Virgilio Lazzari will sing the leading parts, and Gennaro Papi will conduct.

There are other new performances on the week's list. "Il Trovatore" is up for Tuesday night with Elisabeth Rethberg, Julia Claussen, Giovanni Martinelli, and Giuseppe Danise in the cast. The next night "Romeo and Juliet" will be heard for the first time this season from the throats of Yvonne Gall and Edward Johnson in the name parts, and Margery Maxwell, Desiré Defrere, Alfredo Gandolfi, and Leon Rothier in others.

Choristers at Loyola.

The Mundy Choristers, an organization of eighty Negro mixed voices, will take the stand in Loyola university stadium this evening under the direction of James A. Mundy, to assist Adolphe Dumont and the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra in the weekly Sunday night concert. Two groups of spirituals will be sung as well as the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "The Messiah," all numbers in which the Mundy Choristers will participate in the Chicagoland Musical Festival Aug. 22 at Soldiers' field. There is also word of the presentation by chorus and orchestra of Loyola university's new anthem composed by Walter Dellers, and first heard in the June commencement exercises.

Mr. Dumont and the orchestra are presenting an attractive summer program which includes Dvorak's "New World" Symphony, the prelude to Act III. of "Lohengrin," Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" Overture, Coleridge-Taylor's "The Bamboula," Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slave."

* *

Ukrainian National Dances.

The fine art of the dance, which has been increasing in popularity to a marked extent in recent years, is apparently due to go on bigger and better during the season to come. Even at this early date there are announcements of events to come.

One refers to Vasile Avramenko, Ukrainian ballet master, who is now in Chicago preparing 500 dancers for an evening of Ukrainian national dances. The place will be the Civic Opera house and the time the end of October, the exact date not yet announced. Mr. Avramenko has been living in New York, and they tell of a similar festival at the Metropolitan Opera house last April, with special emphasis upon the dashing ardor of the dances, the kaleidoscopic colors of the costumes, and the enthusiasm of the audience.

Another dancing newcomer will be Carola Goya, whose Chicago arrival is also the rather indefinite some time in October. She is Spanish, and dances in the four manners of classical, flamenca, gitana, and modern. Last season she gave eighteen recitals in New York. La Libertad of Madrid vouches for her in emphatic terms, saying that her dances are not only of extraordinary beauty, color, and rhythm, but in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance.

Indiana State Contest.

A state-wide contest of male quartets is to feature the Indiana state fair at Indianapolis, Sept. 5 to 12. Contestants are now organizing in the townships, with county elimination contests to follow and the finals at the fair. Each county will be permitted to send two quartets, one whose members are under 26 years old, the other over that age. The contest is being conducted by the Indiana farm bureau through the social and educational department, and the songs to be used have been selected by the bureau and the Indiana Federation of Music Clubs. All professional singers are barred, and only members of rural communities are eligible. The first prize winning quartet in each class will receive a cash award of $100, second place $80, and third place $70. Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of Otterbein will have charge of the contest.

Speaking of opera companies and the synonymous red ink figures, the Opéra-Comique of Paris adds an item to the sad, sweet story. George Ricou recently resigned as director in protest against the insufficient subsidy granted by the government. Figures that have been made public indicate that in France, too, they have their operatic troubles.

The Opéra-Comique receives an annual subsidy of 1,800,000 francs, and its total receipts run between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 francs. On the other side of the ledger it has to pay 2,000,000 francs, or more than its subsidy, about 9,300,000 francs in salaries, 2,250,000 to the orchestra, and 1,240,000 to the choristers. With regard to the quality of the last, there has been much publicly expressed dissatisfaction. In addition, the organization is obliged to stage twelve new works yearly, and much time and money go into these.

Scores Triumph at Bayreuth.

There is word from Bayreuth that Toscanini scored a reasonable success with his conducting of "Tannhaeuser," and an undebatable one with "Parsifal" immediately afterwards.

Slovak day will be celebrated at Riverview park today beginning at 10 o'clock this morning. The program will be under the auspices of the United Slovak societies and for the benefit of the Slovak-American Charitable association. National songs and national dances will be performed by costumed organizations. The dances have been arranged by the Slovak Artists' club, and the group will number eighty. A featured number will be the appearance of the Slovak Shepherds, who play on an instrument resembling a flute under the direction of Martin Pavella.

PETER IBBETSON

EDWARD JOHNSON.

THE name at the bottom of the picture is his own, the one at the top is the character in the like named opera that he will sing at Ravinia tomorrw and Saturday nights. The opera, by Deems Taylor, was produced by the Metropolitan Opera company last February, and at once became the operatic hit of the season. This will be its first performance outside of the Metropolitan. It is in English. Mr. Johnson's associates will be Lucrezia Bori as Mary, Duchess of Towers, and Alfredo Gandolfi as Col. Ibbetson.

FOR "IMPROPER DUCHESS"

IRENE BORDONI.

THE Dramatic League of Chicago has announced the engagement of Miss Bordoni for the leading role in "The Improper Duchess," a play that it will soon import from London. Its heroine is a flirtatious French girl, and Irene is a specialist in such characters. She is the favorite Anglo-French actress of the American stage.

Drama of Insect Life Listed in New Recordings

"Spider's Feast" Is Ably Interpreted.

By Edward Moore.

COLUMBIA gives a view of some rather notable modern music this month. It is a four side recording of the ballet pantomime, "Le Festin de l'Araignée" [The Spider's Feast], by the French composer, Roussel. Rather curiously, in the light of so much talk from the best minds of music about the value of absolute music, some of the best compositions of the present era are coming from composers who have something as definite as the stage presentation in mind.

For the benefit of those who did not hear Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra present this work about five years ago, the piece works out as a drama of insect life quite in accordance with its title. The first section is the prelude and entrance of the ant; the second is the dance and death of the butterfly; the third deals with the birth and dance of the dayfly; and the last with the death and burial of the dayfly. Apparently the ant and the spider are the only ones who come out well in this particular tragedy.

Columbia's numbers are 67952-D and 67953-D. The work is played by the Orchestre des Concerts Straram of Paris and conducted by Walther Straram himself. The recording is rather good and performance excellent. It is rather hard to describe accurately a modern piece of music, or any other piece of music for that matter, but this one is brisk and bright, and apparently a bit affected by Stravinsky in the period when he wrote "Petrouchka."

There is a pair of Wagner songs that seem to be as inevitably linked together as the Italian operas, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." They are "Traeume" and "Schmerzen." Brunswick in the Hall of Fame-International, No. 90178, presents them from the throat of a noted German soprano, Elisabeth Ohms. Both have orchestral accompaniment, but Julius Pruewer conducts "Traeume" and Manfred Gurlitit "Schmerzen." Excellent results both vocally and instrumentally should be set down for both.

* *

An Amusing Experiment.

Brunswick in No. 20100 is stepping out from standardized music into an interesting and amusing experiment with popular music. The two sides record what are called paraphrases by Victor Young of "I Surrender, Dear," and "Star Dust." Even in the memory of what Paul Whiteman and Ferdie Grofé have occasionally done with popular music, they are rather eye opening.

Here are two tunes whose pretty, graceful turn of phrase and naive construction classify them plainly as belonging to the popular classification, but Mr. Young, who is likewise both conductor and soloist in their performance—the Boswell sisters lend other vocal aid—builds them up as earnestly as though he were writing a symphony. Everything is there, symphonic changes of key and mood, unexpected dissonances, skilled treatment of instrumental color, and if his earnestness occasionally sounds as though it were of the tongue in cheek variety, the work is none the worse for it. There are some of us who believe that American popular music is the best popular music in the world, and this record would seem to prove that it is good enough to be capable of considerably more elaborate treatment than it is in the habit of getting. The instrumental body is the Brunswick Concert orchestra, a first class organization.

A mild protest in this column the other day to the effect that only the second half of Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini" had been received from Victor brought prompt correction of the error by the receipt of the missing disk. Wherefore comment is cheerfully reopened for the statement that the first half is even better in performance and recording than the second indicated. The piece is on the Red Seal list, Nos. 11091 and 11092, played by the London Symphony orchestra under the direction of Albert Coates, and those who have followed Mr. Coates' performances will realize more completely than this column can say how expert he is in the perception and projection of dramatic values in music.

Guild Plans

THE Theater Guild announces that "He" will open its New York season; that "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in its leading rôles, will probably be seen in several of the subscription cities before it appears in New York; and that the O'Neill trilogy, "Mourning Becomes Electra," should open about Oct. 26.

Theater Rents Reduced.

A Broadway theater, the Central, was recently rented for $1,000 a week. "The lowest known weekly rental for any Broadway house to date," says Variety, "has been $3,000 a week." Five years ago it was almost impossible to get any Broadway theater without a minimum guarantee of $4,500 on a basis of sharing the gross intake, so that the theater-owner's share might come to $6,000 or even more.—Theater Guild Magazine.

How to Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things

Fat Melts Away

Science has made important discoveries in fat reduction. The average fat person can now rip off fat a pound a day—four to seven pounds every week!—on a full stomach, with never a hungry moment. Thus it is foolish now to stay fat.

This is what you do: Take a teaspoonful ordinary Jad Salts in a glass of water a half hour before breakfast every morning. This reduces moisture-weight instantly. Also cleanses the system of the waste matter and excess toxins that most fat people have, and banishes puffiness and bloat.

Then do this about eating. FILL YOUR STOMACH—eat your fill—of lean meats, vegetables like spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, tomatoes, etc., and lots of salads. Eat a lot. Eat all you can hold. Don't go hungry a minute! Cut down on fats, sweets and desserts. Eat any fruit for dessert.

That's all you do. Fat seems to melt away. The coarse lines of overweight give way to the refined ones of slenderness. You lose as much as a pound a day. You feel better than for years. For in this treatment you achieve two important results. The Jad Salts clear your system of toxins. *The diet takes off fat with food that turns into energy instead of weight.

If you're tired of being embarrassed by fat, try this way. You'll be glad that you did. You can get Jad Salts at any drug store.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent—not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

[Answer on page three.]

Born and Bred in Chicago

ISABEL RANDOLPH has succeeded Grace Huff in the character of Rose La Marr in "Stepping Sisters," now at the Blackstone theater. Illness forced Miss Huff to relinquish her part. She has gone to a Canadian sanitarium for treatment and rest.

Miss Randolph is well known to Chicagoans who frequent the theater. She made her debut in Chicago when she was carried on the stage at the age of six months. Later her schooling continued when she became a member of the Bush Temple Stock company. She played with Lenore Ulric in "The Bird of Paradise"; with Richard Bennett in "Kick In," and with Zelda Sears oin "The Nest Egg." Her most recent Chicago appearances in Chicago were in "The Noose" at the Selwyn theater in 1927 and in "If I Were Rich" at the Cort in 1928.

Stage Stars for Vaudeville

The RKO Palace vaudeville programs have been devoting themselves to "in person" headliners from Hollywood, but the stage isn't going to be neglected. Harriet Hoctor, as fine a dancer as the American stage knows today, will arrive Aug. 8. She will bring a dancing troupe, and will probably repeat the "hunt" ballet that was the highlight of Ed Wynn's "Simple Simon" last winter. Edward G. Robinson will follow on Aug. 15. He has been a dependable stage actor for years, suddenly skyrocketing to fame with his cinema gangster impersonations.

After that Basil Rathbone and Catherine Dale Owen will co-star in a brief version of "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." Louise Groody, star singing girl of musical comedy, will follow.

Loses 16 Pounds of Fat---Eats As Usual

Fat Folks—Here's More Proof—One Bottle of Kruschen Salts and Sixteen Pounds Gone—Eats As Usual—Sleeps Better—Costs 85 Cents

The Kruschen Figure of Health and Vivaciousness. How Will You Look On The Beach This Summer

Modern Science now makes it possible for you to easily and what's best, to SAFELY obtain a bewitchingly lithe, free-from-fat figure and actually enjoy exhilarated health and increase your attractiveness while doing so—

Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—you can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, fatty meats and pastries.

Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. I feel so good in many ways. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lost fat, too. I have told 2 of my friends about Kruschen and they find it as I do."

Unlike other salts, Kruschen doesn't aim to reduce by rushing food through the system—rather it's a superbly blended combination of SIX separate mineral salts which help glands, nerves and body organs to function properly—it drives poisons and harmful acid from the body—Kruschen strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—that's why it's so amazingly successful in cases where everything else has failed!

And just stop to consider how inexpensive Kruschen is—an 85c bottle lasts 4 weeks and offers the same marvelous reducing and health-giving properties which hitherto wealthy people paid thousands of dollars to go to the famous mineral Spas of Europe to obtain. All druggists the world over sell Kruschen and will give your money back if you don't obtain the results you're after.

Revival of Last Season Cinema Hits Welcomed

Old Western Thrillers May Be Next.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The system of "bringing back the big ones," being tried out at the Rialto theater in Times square with considerable success at 25 cents a head, opens a grab box full of possibilities in the picture show world. Over at the Rialto the seats are filled from 11 a. m. until midnight and not all of the audience is composed of bargain hunters.

There are a lot of pictures these days and a lot of people do not get around to more than one feature a week. Consequently when the hits of last season show up at a theater with first run conveniences and third run prices the folks who missed the features when they were first shown are going to drop in.

Garbo, Dietrich, Bancroft, Gary Cooper, and a host of other stars are playing at the Rialto these hot summer days and nights. It is cool inside the theater and some of the old pictures are better than the new ones. The shows are not as long drawn out as at the theaters where the up-to-the-minute films are being shown and, anyhow, there is considerable difference between 25 cents and 65 cents.

Some of Better Westerns.

Now that the movie public has shown its love for last season hits, at least in this town, why not go back into the past and dig up some of the better westerns—epics of those days when men were men and women were chased by the Indians—and show them in a refrigerated playhouse.

The movies are getting softer and softer these days. Even the run of the blood and thunder underworld films are namby pamby tidbits. True, the occasional "Public Enemy" or "Little Caesar" comes along to provide the exception that proves the rule, but for the most part the heroes have lacked the red-blooded vitality of the horse and saddle era of romance.

I believe there are a good many thousand persons throughout our land who would like to forget there are such places as Chicago, New York, Paris, and London. In fact, a lot of those people who would like to forget live in those cities, and yet the talkie makers keep shoving life in the big cities down their throats. Let's have more horses and mustaches and movie heroes who take mustard on their breakfast food instead of sugar.

Roxy's theater went in for something resembling a western picture recently, and it was a big success. It was called "The Holy Terror," and its hero was an up-to-date hombre. He rode horses—at polo—and took to the air on occasions in an airplane. Of course, the hero did not stack up with the heroes of the Bill Hart era, even though he did leap a death-dealing gulch near the Great Divide. The point is the audience liked it and no doubt would like most of the older westerns whether they were made to talk or permitted to remain grim and silent.

Foreign Films Showing.

New York is filled with foreign films this week, but first we will look in on a Hollywood product at the Capitol. "Son of India" with Ramon Novarro is a pleasant enough romance. Taken from an old novel by F. Marion Crawford it tells the romance of an American girl and a young Indian prince. At the end the rich young Indian gives the girl up and harkens to the words of wisdom offered by a beggar prophet. It will do for the summer days.

"Sunny Side Up," with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, is the offering at Roxy's. "The Magnificent Lie," featuring Ruth Chatterton, is the feature at Paramount. "Sunny Side Up," of course, is a revival and a good one. To keep up the past history idea the stage presentation at Roxy's is called "Fifty Million Years Ago," and it is a spectacular affair, the headliner being a dinosaur.

"The Magnificent Lie" was well spoken of by the critics, but this observer has yet to see it. "Night Nurse" is still "telling all" at Warner's Strand.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

NOW is the time to check up on the plans, promises and dreams of theatrical producers for the approaching stage season. A census reveals that 44 firms or men constitute what might be called the "big league" of the drama, and that some [illegible] others are occasional contributors to Broadway activity. Their announcements for the early months of the new playgoing year contain 200 titles, including established successes that will be sent on tour.

This represents an improvement upon last year, when the stage's midsummer statistics did not include more than 150 titles of contemplated productions. It is, indeed, a long step up the ladder toward the abundance of the predepression years, when the managers' August schedules included from 250 to 300 titles.

All this, of course, refers to theatrical production for the Broadway market, out of which come the shows of proven popularity that finally go adventuring on "the road"—a vague region which to the Broadway mind includes all of America outside the borough of Manhattan. In this connection it may be noted that Broadway has at last become "road conscious," and is planning to win back the affections of its lost customers in other cities.

* *

Theater Guild Opinion.

The Theater Guild magazine comments editorially on the subject as follows:

"Officials in the Erlanger office tell us that their bookings for the coming season are more plentiful than in recent years. In the Shubert theaters it would appear that the planned reorganization should prove beneficial in improving booking conditions both inside and outside of New York.

"One thing is almost certain—both offices are cognizant of the fact that a standard of quality must be maintained, and both offices have expressed their intention to look to this point. Despite the business depression, shows of merit have drawn excellent patronage during the last year, both in and out of New York. Mr. Ziegfeld's 'Follies' played to two capacity weeks in Pittsburgh late in June, with the thermometer ascending in a city that does not possess those sea breezes which sometimes disguise the temperature in New York, Boston and Chicago. And in New York many excellent plays are defying the heat with success.

"We cannot explain the conservative optimism which prevails throughout the theater at this moment, but it does exist, and most of it is founded on a sound basis. The best proof of it is to be found in the definitely announced plans of the leading producers. They seem not to be hedging."

* *

Shubert Catalogue.

The Shuberts lead the "big league" with plans already matured for fourteen productions. They list their entries as follows:

"The Laugh Parade," a musical show with Ed Wynn as star.

A musical comedy in which George Jessel will be starred.

Maurice Schwartz and his Yiddish Art Theater company, giving their repertory in English.

"Kissable Girl," a musical comedy based upon "Up Pops the Devil," with Frances Williams, Nina Olivette, Evangeline Raleigh, and the Ritz brothers in the cast.

"La Chienne," a French drama, translated by Forrest Wilson.

"Hearts in Repair," an operetta adapted from the German, with Queenie Smith as star.

"Forbidden," a new play by Elmer Harris, author of "Young Sinners" and "A Modern Virgin."

"Cocktail," an intimate musical comedy adapted from the German; score by Ralph Benatsky.

"The Improper Duchess," a comedy by James Bernard Fagan, highly successful in London, with Irene Bordoni as heroine.

"Poor Men's Daughters," by Elmer Harris.

"Love's Out of Fashion," a comedy adapted from the German of Wilhelm Sterk, with Walter Woolf, Verree Teasdale, Walter Petrie, and Leslie Austen in the cast. To be staged early in August.

"Land of Smiles," an operetta with music by Franz Lehar, now popular in London.

"The Venetian," a play by Clifford Bax, successful in London; to be staged in association with Maurice Browne.

"The Good Companions," the dramatization of J. B. Priestley's novel; a notable success in London.

A season of revivals of famous operettas at the Jolson theater, New York, and on tour.

Erlanger Offerings.

The novelties on the Erlanger list at present are eight in number, as follows:

"The Social Register," a play by John Emerson and Anita Loos, with Lenore Ulric as star. The cast will include Elizabeth Taylor, Wilfred Clark, Betty Garde, Helen Tucker, Thomas Maxwell Conover, and Gerald Yorke.

"Faraway Horses," a drama by Gilbert Emery and Alan Birmingham, to be staged under the direction of Chester Erskin.

"Bad Penny," a comedy by William Anthony McGuire, to be offered in association with Charles Dillingham.

"Stella Brady," a comedy by James Montgomery, also in association with Mr. Dillingham.

A new play by Frederick Lonsdale.

Maurice Chevalier in an entertainment, in New York and on tour.

Up Pops Mr. Shaw.

The Theater Guild's schedule, in addition to the plays announced earlier in the year, will include George Bernard Shaw's latest work, called "Too Good to Be True." At least the Guild feels confident that it will be able to stage this play, as yet unfinished, during the coming season. Mr. Shaw

USHERING IN THE NEW MONTH

Rich pickings. Mitzi Green and Louise Fazenda seem to be finding in Jackie Searl's mouth, as well as in "Newly Rich," the current attraction at the Oriental. And Jackie is acquiescent, even though he's equiped with a dangerous looking weapon. He and Mitzi, sterling comedians, are the juvenile stars of the comedy.

Joel McCrea and Constance Bennett are expounding "The Common Law" at the State-Lake this week.

Is it "The Magnificent Lie"? Sam Hardy is asking that or a similar question: Ruth Chatterton is at the receiving end of the query, and the film of that title is at the Chicago for the present week.

"Ex-Bad Boy" is the name of the picture at the Palace, but, from the looks of things, Lola Lane might run away with the honors on that score. The others are Spencer Charters, Robert Armstrong and George Brent, and all of them have plenty to do.

Th' first of August's here again
Soon the summer will be gone;
But First Sundays of each month
And "Six Bests" keep on and on.

Good Morning!

Well, here we go, with a hop, skip and a jump, back along the trail we traveled last month.

"THE SMILING LIEUTENANT" was found to be "frothy, amusing, tuneful; a bit naughty and a lot nice . . . directed by Ernest Lubitsch—lush with the inspired touches, the unexpected and beguiling bits of 'business' that proclaim genius at the wheel . . . Maurice Chevalier was never more oo-la-la . . . a bang-up hot weather picture . . ."

"THE VIKING." During the making of this film the producer, Varick Frissell and twenty-five of his associates were killed by an explosion . . . "Records in sound the adventures of men who go a-sealing up around the Labrador ice fields and Newfoundland . . . the coldest looking movie you ever saw . . . authentic, episodic and not long . . ."

* *

"POLITICS." Marie Dressler and Polly Moran at their best. 'Nuff sed.

"THE MIRACLE WOMAN" proved "a thrilling melodrama that sports several staggeringly sensational situations, presented with a shrewd sense of dramatic effect . . . different and electrically exciting . . . excellently produced and played to the nines . . . Barbara Stanwyck gives a pulse-quickening performance . . ."

* *

"THE PUBLIC ENEMY" is "racketeering stripped of all romance and all glamour by the sharp knife of realism . . . the last word and, you feel, a true one, in gangland exposés . . . keen, unsparing study of criminal psychology . . . James Cagney as 'The Public Enemy' is tough, evil, deadly, unfunny and never for one minute lovable or pulse stirring. The complete gangster . . . 'The Public Enemy' is the greatest—because the most honest gangster cinema ever made."

* *

"YOUNG AS YOU FEEL" presents Will Rogers entertaining with competent help from Fifi Dorsay. One hundred per cent entertainment.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

ANIMAL lovers, take heed! A burial ground for pets, proclaimed the only one in Illinois, has been opened southwest of Hinsdale. Caskets are used for interment, and tombstones or lifesize statues of the pets mark the graves. John P. Stankowicz, 6000 South Honore street, trustee of the park, offered a lot to Admiral Byrd for his Igloo. Byrd replied personally, thanking Mr. Stankowicz for his offer and praising the idea, but saying that the grave of Igloo must be near the Byrd home.

Anther home town girl has broken into big time. Two years ago Miss Marjorie May Meehan was a student at Englewood High school, and now, lo and behold, after two years in vaudeville in New York, she makes her Chicago debut this week at a loop theater.

* *

We've tidings that Clarence Bayne Jr., son of Our Town's enterprising realtor, has received a one year scholarship to the Y. M. C. A. college. Young Bayne while at Fenger High school was vice president of the national honor society, a captain of the Fenger R. O. T. C. unit and a brevet second lieutenant of the Illinois National Guard. Well, we've always heard "like father, like son!"

* *

AMONG the famous personages who dropped in on Our Town for a visit last week was "Baby Illinois." She is Irene Marie Bittner, 3 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Bitner, who used to live here. Irene is staying with her grandmother, Mrs. John McMillen, 828 West Garfield boulevard. She received her title at the Elks' baby show in Peoria, if you must know, and has three other silver trophies to her credit. 'Tis said she will represent Illinois in a national baby show during the 1933 World's Fair.

Marion Lee Kurtz, who teaches young Chicagoans to dance in the public schools all winter, has been showing the latest steps to the Mormons out in Utah this summer, our friend I. N. Kurtz informs us. Before she returns to Our Town in September she will go to New York for the dancing teachers' annual convention. Some fast stepping that, across the continent and halfway back again!

All sorts of odd things come a physician's way, none perhaps odder than to Dr. Holger N. Hoegh, 2376 East 71st street, the other day. He was called to care for Mrs. Lillian Hudspeth, 7350 Phillips avenue, who shot herself in the left leg above the knee while packing her husband's revolver in a suitcase. Dangerous business to pack a gun, lady!

* *

Haven Poole of 11131 Watt avenue improved the shining hours of his vacation by going east and getting married. The new missus is the former Cora De Vall of Westminster, Md.

* *

THE Rev. Charles R. Osborn, pastor of the Morgan Park Congregational church, left yesterday for Coldwater, Mich., to join his family at their cottage on Morrison lake. He's expected back in the pulpit Aug. 23.

The first lap of an exciting trip has just been completed by Miss Bernice Campbell, 7401 Kingston avenue, and Miss Dorothy Wideman, 1417 East Marquette road. They've returned from Tahiti and other south sea isles, where they've been wintering on Zane Grey's yacht. Now they're enjoying a breathing spell in Pasadena preparatory to starting on a journey by horseback through Idaho to help get data for Mr. Grey's newest novel. Nice knowing an author!

* *

The Barnard Parent-Teacher association in Beverly Hills has lost a faithful press chairman in Mrs. A. J. Chouinard, 10525 Hale avenue, who has moved to Park Ridge. Her colleagues on last year's board of the association gave a farewell luncheon at the Southmoor Country club.

* *

Out at Arlington Park last weekend whom should we run across but our South Chicago friend, John Murray. We understand he didn't do so badly, except that he missed some big money by two noses and a neck.

Hope we've not giving anything away, John?

From Detroit Mrs. Alexander E. Cook of 6838 Jeffery avenue sends us word that she's bound by motor for Toronto, Montreal, Quebec, and Murray Bay. The homeward route will be by the New England states, New York, and Buffalo, she says. Her uncle, J. Walker Burns, is accompanying her.

* *

DR. FRANK J. HOSPERS has left the fold of the Englewood Kiwanis club to spend a fortnight in his native Ioway. Incidentally, the doc is author of a poem which first appeared in a sporting magazine and was reprinted last week in the Kiwanis' magazine. "The Call of the Pill" is the title, but it doesn't mean what you might think a physician would mean. It's a golfer's lyric outburst, really, not a doctor's.

* *

Down in the front row of the greeters when Post and Gatty came to town was Warren W. Stautz of the South End Chamber of Commerce. As chairman of the aviation committee he was among those chosen to represent the city in greeting the world flyers.

Robert Paul is the name of that new baby boy you may have noticed being wheeled in and out of the Robert Noonan establishment at 7950 Kingston avenue.

* *

A pretty romance which has just leaked out is that of charming Miss Catherine Janoske, 10338 Avenue N. Or, we should say, Mrs. Theodore Schlesna, for it seems she and Theodore Schlesna of 9340 Escanaba avenue have been married since December. She's off on a vacation now, and patrons who used to buy flowers of her at 3019 East 92d street are hoping it won't be a permanent one.

George Smith, secretary of the West Pullman park board, is back with his wife and children at the Eggleston avenue domicile after three weeks at Newburg, Ont.

160,000 Colored Folk Have Own South Side City

Community 2d Largest in the World.

By Herbert Vedder.

IF YOU would like to look over the second largest Negro city in the world, just take yourself for a jaunt along Indiana or Prairie avenue or South Park way. Only New York's 327,000, two-thirds of whom are congregated in the Manhattan area known as Harlem, exceeds it in size. More than 160,000 of Chicago's 234,000 colored residents live on the south side—a number surpassing the combined colored populations of Atlanta and either Birmingham or Memphis.

No blanket terms—except a designation of race—covers this section of Chicago. It is more than a community or neighborhood; it is like a city, composed of innumerable communities and neighborhoods.

It has its slums, to be sure, as outsiders are well aware, but it has its better districts, too. Investigation reveals neat residential sections, a goodly proportion of professional men, and forces working for the betterment of the race.

Arms of Urban League.

One of the strongest of the latter is the Chicago branch of the Urban league, with its directorate of both white and colored men and women. Its aims are described as two-fold: Encouragement of independence and fostering a civic spirit and civic pride; promotion of interracial coöperation. Negro leaders acknowledge the necessity of white capital in the fruition of their plans.

All sorts of work is undertaken by the Urban league. It has a department of public relations and sponsors industrial training classes. Forums, a lecture series, a free speakers' bureau are among its other branches. Then, there is a department of research and records, which works in conjunction with the University of Chicago. Its work has borne out the general findings as to distribution of types of population in cities. Least desirable sections are those nearest the center of the city and railroad tracks and manufacturing areas. These lie, in general, west of State street and north of 35th street.

Extends Far to South.

The Negro city, generally speaking, extends south to 60th street between Wentworth and Cottage Grove avenues to 63d street between Wentworth and South Park, and into West Woodlawn between Cottage Grove and South Park. Beautiful Washington park is its spacious playground by day, its lovers' lane by night.

Business life centers along 47th street, acknowledged to be the most profitable trade thoroughfare between 63rd street and the loop from Cottage Grove avenue to State street. It boasts neat, bright, up-to-date shops of high rank and one of the finest of the outlying department stores. You can buy practically everything there that is to be bought anywhere.

With the coming of evening the 47th and South Park corner becomes the hub of night life—not a wild, roisterous night life, but one of general, carefree gayety, looking for a good time dancing, or seeing one of the several movies showing within a block or so of the corner.

The Colors They Like.

Here one receives a picture of well dressed Negroes in colors they love best—robins' egg blue, pastel green, pink, maroon. The young swains present a study in black and white—flannels or ducks, with panama or sailor or straw top piece.

On Sundays and warm summer evenings snatches of well blended harmonies float over to fascinate the passerby. Beside the many church groups there are a myriad of independent choruses—many of them neighborhood affairs.

The Negro population is classed as largely churchgoing, and it is difficult to find a seat at Sunday morning services. Olivet Baptist church is one of the largest colored Protestant groups in the city.

In this big area are to be found all strata of the colored race; large groups of the more ambitious folk have moved southward to escape contacts with undesirables and have formed their own neighborhoods. One of the earliest cases of this sort is in that little notch west of State street and south of Garfield boulevard where the bakeries waft their pleasant scent. Composed largely of somewhat humble frame homes, the district boasts one of the oldest of Negro improvement and protective associations in Chicago.

Air of Solidarity.

Fronting on South Park Way and the north edge of Washington park is one of the district's proudest residential sections. Vincennes and Forrestville avenue south of 47th street are flanked with large homes and trim apartment buildings. There is an air of solidarity and cleanliness to the streets through here.

West Woodlawn, that area lying between Cottage Grove and South Park avenues south of 63d street, is one of the oldest and highly respected neighborhoods in the Negro city. New bungalows and brick and stone apartment houses grace tree lined streets in this community. Thirty per cent of the residents are home owners and about 7 per cent are in the professions.

There is an impression of security and respectability about the old stone and brick homes and apartments along Michigan avenue and in the section between 55th and 63d streets from State street over to South Park avenue.

Indiana avenue is a picturesque, semi-bustling street, with Prairie avenue a sort of middle ground, more quiet and residential, State street sort of depresses. [illegible] ety is a trifle sad.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The theater, which is waiting for a new season to begin, has aroused itself from the usual summer time sleep long enough to bring to the George M. Cohan theater a revue born of good will and conceived by some of the best minds.

Entitled "Shoot the Works," it is the brain child of Heywood Broun, column conductor, radio monologist, defeated Socialist candidate for congress, and—which may be more important to use—a former dramatic critic. Mr. Broun, who espouses causes with polygamous frequency, has decided to enter the lists in defense of the unemployed actor. With Milton Raison, a press agent, and Johnny Boyle, a dance director, as his chief assistants, Broun has labored heroically toward the formation of a coöperative show.

Lyrics, Sketches Donated.

With $7,000 in cash to work upon—a good bit of which had to be posted with Equity to guarantee a fortnight's salaries to chorus people—Broun has got a long hot weather show together. Producers contributed scenery and electrical equipment; costumers have given everything from bathing suits to draperies, and a soap company provided a stack of soap boxes which

Long Awaited "Peter Ibbetson" Is Scheduled for Two Performances This Week at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

THAT undercurrent hum of activity proceeding from Ravinia, that set of preoccupied expressions on the faces of several of the company, is not altogether to be accounted for by a busy operatic season, though they have been having an uncommonly active one. Part of it was due to the fact that they were preparing "Peter Ibbetson."

It is now prepared and ready. There has already been an announcement that it would be given its first performance in this part of the country tomorrow night. Now comes a supplementary statement that, since tomorrow night looks like an overflowing house, there will be another performance with the same cast next Saturday night.

Difficult Scenes.

For "Peter Ibbetson," it appears, has taken a lot of doing to put into shape. It was more than just learning a new operatic score. That is something the Ravinia company takes in its stride. Lucrezia Bori and Edward Johnson, who are to sing the two leading parts, had sung them in in New York, and their new associates were promptly rehearsed in their own rôles. But the staging of the piece presented peculiar difficulties.

It has a dream scene, for one, where Peter sees again the garden of his boyhood. It has a final scene where the spirit of Peter takes leave of its wornout human habitation and goes away, young and glorious again, to meet the spirit of Mary, who had just preceded him into death. Once that scenery was built, it had to be tried out, and for this purpose daylight will not do. Also, the stage of Ravinia is in use every night with a performance.

So one night a short time ago—just after a performance of "L'Amore dei

VOICE of the SOUTH SIDE

South Side Resident Discovers Pleasant Summer Resort

A south sider makes the Our Town column, not because he has chosen some distant spot to spend his vacation but for the reason that he has boldly announced his intention of spending the two weeks period at home. Of vacation trips there is no end, and a list of those who have packed up and left for romantic places beyond the Chicago horizon is too long for any attempt at enumeration. The stay at home gets the break in print. No doubt he has plenty of company, but others lack the courage, perhaps, to announce their choice to neighbors and office friends.

The stay at home, however, need not be at a loss for new and interesting experiences during the idle days. With slight expenditure he can explore other sections of the city and find relaxation at strange beaches or shaded woodland pools. A few moments' journey will put him in surroundings he has never seen before.

Change, of course, is one of the benefits of any vacation. Unless a person is completely worn out, spending a vacation in the same environment to which one is accustomed fails to produce the maximum freshening spirit. Vacations have been found worth while by employers because the vacationist returns with renewed zest. Respite from routine has its values, but added advantage results in complete escape from the daily program. Yet, who can doubt that home may provide the best atmosphere for the anticipated period of rest and recreation?

SAFETY TIPS FOR SWIMMERS.

The director of south park beaches and pools, Herbert G. Reynolds, turns from the seasonal discussion of new bathing suits to warn bathers with a penchant for jumping into the lake elsewhere than at the organized beaches. The bathing costume problem will probably be with us always, but Mr. Reynolds is not so sure about the daring persons who choose their bathing places at random.

It is pointed out that those who leap into the water at any point which may suit their fancy are in danger of death or severe injury from hidden rocks and logs which have been removed from the beaches. Furthermore, such individualists usually are beyond assistance of lifeguards. Already this year, more than one broken neck casualty has been reported.

Inlanders have cause for concern at this stage of the bathing season as to the condition of streams and pools. Analysis of water taken from the lake front shows it to be in good condition from a health standpoint. The courts have decreed that persons should be off the beaches at 11 p. m., hot weather or cool.

The warnings and rules are a part of the bathing beach season. No doubt much of the attraction of the beach is that the recreation offers a complete escape from the routine of existence. It is the hope of authorities that the sport will produce only pleasant and wholesome results. It may be more crowded at the organized beaches, but it is also much safer there.

SMILING AT 88.

"I always tried to be where there was fun, and if I didn't find it I made it. I don't believe in long faces." L. W. Schlau, 88 years old, 6823 South Sangamon street, was speaking. His thoughts were of the 57th annual Old Settlers' picnic which, with many other south siders, he plans to attend at Riverview park tomorrow. Mr. Schlau contends that keeping busy prolongs life, and he still belongs to the ranks of workers.

"It's best always to have something on the mind," adds Mr. Schlau, "but not t such an extent that is causes worry. It's foolish to try to live two days in one."

Mr. Schlau belongs to that sturdy group of men and women more than four score years old who have lost none of the enthusiasm for life. Interviews with many of them reveal a philosophy of contentment. They appear to be of one mind that, though life may have it woes, they continue optimistic. Their concern is not so much with the acquiring of worldly goods as in keeping alive the friendships formed in the old days.

Each year at the picnics bouquets are awarded to couples whose combined ages make the greatest total of years. Youthful dancers may be familiar with newer steps and move about in more graceful fashion, but the old-timers prove their hearts are still young. They insist that age has not robbed them of the desire to mingle with folk who are likewise on pleasure bent.

Chicago is richer because of the great group of immigrants who sought the city as a place to establish homes and, by the proper mixture of work and play, get the most out of life. To the modern Chicago they contribute their worthwhile philosophy on how to meet depression and disappointment.

HOMEWOOD CELEBRATES.

It is the hard four lane highway that, these days, influences an outlying community's destiny, and Homewood finds itself directly in the path of the Dixie highway widening development. Homewood has watched progress of the highway construction and, now that it has been completed, plans to celebrate in fitting fashion this week.

Homewood is one of those Cook county communities fortunate in having an American Legion post eager and able to assume the responsibility of such civic events. Practically all of those in the locality eligible to membership are active in the Homewood post. They possess the assets of youth, organization, and enthusiasm. A moment's conversation with these leaders reveals an intense community patriotism.

Homewood makes no secret of the fact that one of the purposes of its celebration is to display its wares to those who may not be familiar with what it has to offer the homeseeker.

Temple Junior Aid to Give Lawn Party, Dance

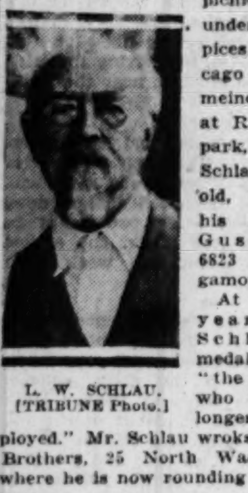
The junior auxiliary of Beth Hamedrosh Hagodal congregation will give another of its lawn parties and dances at 8:30 o'clock this evening at 5345 Greenwood avenue. I. Buchman, president of the auxiliary, is in charge of arrangements. Refreshments will be served and lawn games played.

OLD SETTLER, 88, STICKS 52 YEARS AT THE SAME JOB

L. W. Schlau to See Cronies at Picnic Tomorrow.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Among the south siders planning to attend the 75th annual Old Settlers' picnic, to be held under the auspices of the Chicago Turngemeinde tomorrow at Riverview park, is L. W. Schlau, 88 years old, who makes his home with Gustaf Goetz, 6823 South Sangamon street.



L. W. SCHLAU.

At the picnic a year ago Mr. Schlau won a medal awarded to "the old settler who has been longest in the employed." Mr. Schlau wroks for A. Ball Brothers, 25 North Wacker drive, where he is now rounding out his 52d year.

Mr. Schlau was an artist in his native Germany. He left that country as a young man in 1864 and has made his home in Chicago ever since. He confesses that Chicago at that time was the edge of civilization and it was necessary for him to compromise in shaping his career. Painting of landscapes gave way to interior decorating.

Misses Fire of 1871.

In 1871, Mr. Schlau had gone to Toledo, O., to decorate the interior of a theater. It was while there he heard of the Chicago fire. The Ohio city, he recalls, was so concerned by the dryness of the season and word of the Chicago catastrophe that smoking was prohibited on the streets. On his return home, Mr. Schlau admits that the scene of devastation was appalling but, so far as he was concerned, not discouraging.

Perhaps it is the good humor characteristic of Mr. Schlau under all circumstances that has much to do with the fact that, at 88, his face is still unlined with wrinkles and he enjoys not only good health, but what each day may have to offer.

"It's a mistake to try to live two days in one," he philosophized as he puffed his pipe. "Give me something to do every day and I am contented. Perhaps the quickest way to shorten one's life is going to the extreme in trying to make money.

Sees Lesson in Depression.

"In these days of depression many persons who have centered all their time and effort to accumulate find that when they have lost their money, they have lost everything. Such people are heartbroken the rest of their lives. There are so many other things to existence that can't be bought, nor can they ever be taken from you.

"Good humor means so much. Perhaps it is difficult when there is so much greed abroad. Selfishness has made a rather bad mess of the world just now, but we'll get back to something more satisfactory—an era in which we shall better appreciate the worth of contented minds.

"We early settlers of Chicago have many pleasant memories, but the past periods were not entirely rosy. During the rebuilding of Chicago, there was such an influx of labor that wages were low.

Recalls Optimistic Uncle.

"Why, when I left Germany I came on the advice of an uncle who wrote of what a big business he had. When I arrived, it was necessary for me to help support his family.

"Of course, many of the happy memories of our settlers are centered about the north side Turner hall, where we gathered for concerts and socials. Our first picnics were held in Ogden grove, at Clybourn avenue and the river. It was the setting of prairie cow pastures. In late years I do not see so many familiar faces at the picnics. I take the Western avenue street car to the grove and try to get home before dark, but the event refreshes me rather than tires me out."

Mr. Goetz admiringly brought out one of the paintings on which Mr. Schlau works during his leisure time. During all the years Mr. Schlau has not wholly relinquished his boyhood ambition. He waved away, however, any compliment of his work.

Work Essential for Happiness.

"You see, I couldn't live without being busy," he explained. "It's the monotony of having nothing to do that kills. I've always liked to be where there was fun and if I didn't find it I tried to make it. No, I never danced at the picnics, but years ago I did play a guitar and sing. I believe in anything that helps to do away with long faces."

A varied program has been arranged for the Old Settlers' picnic tomorrow. It will be held in a large grove in Riverview park, Western and Belmont avenues. Adequate parking space has been provided for automobiles. Registration will begin at 1 o'clock, and the usual number of medals to old settlers with outstanding records under various classifications will be awarded. There will be dancing and community singing.

PAUL BARTH WINS KEYMEN'S CLUB GOLF TOURNEY

The first member's prize for low gross in the July golf tourney of the Englewood Keymen's club went to Paul Barth, who shot an 85. First guest prize went to Dr. D. B. Keyser. Dr. C. W. Wendelsdorf won the first prize for low net among the members, with Howard Levy second and Walter Minicus third. Howard Yardley picked off the blind bogey prize.

Consolation prize winners were Chet Rice, Morris Druliner, and Dr. John Chandler. James F. McFarland, secretary of the Englewood Y. M. C. A., was presented with a little red hat for shooting the highest gross score.

J. H. Wilhelm of the Chicago Motor club spoke to the Keymen at their regular meeting Friday.

CONSTRUCTS FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH

Milo Bowman, 61 years old, veteran of the Rock Island lines, is shown back of his home at 7919 Burnham avenue with what he calls his "fountain of youth." He gathered the stones and built the fountain as a hobby.

2,500 FAMILIES GATHER TODAY AT IRISH PICNIC

Annual Basket Affair to Be Held at Palos.

From all over the south side and outlying suburbs, 2,500 members of the Chicago Irish-American Goodfellowship club and their families will gather today in Palos park for the annual basket picnic of the organization. The affair will be held at 85th avenue and 114th street.

Games, races, and contests are included in the program planned for the picnickers. A baseball game between teams chosen by John Mangan and Congressman Edward A. Kelly will be one of the special events. A horseshoe pitching contest will be held with a team headed by Dan McMahon and Judge Marcus Kavanagh opposing a team headed by Michael O'Connor.

Special activities have been arranged for children from 6 to 16 years old. A fifty yard dash for young women, a hundred yard dash for young men, a fat woman's race and a fat man's race are among the events on schedule. Prizes will be awarded in all events.

J. C. Flaherty Is Chairman.

Picnickers going by bus will leave for the grounds at 11 o'clock and 3:30 o'clock from Gibbney's parlors, 79th and Paulina streets. The buses will return at 6:30 and 8:30 o'clock.

Joseph C. Flaherty is general chairman of the picnic. The committee on arrangements: John McGlynn, B. Doherty, Thomas Doherty, Martin McNally, and G. J. O'Connor. The transportation committee includes Joseph Egan, Mr. Kelly, D. O'Brien, Martin McNally, and William J. Guthrie. The prize committee includes Thomas Doherty, Mr .O'Connor, Mr. Kelly, Mr. McNally, and Mr. Guthrie.

Reception and Entertainment.

The reception and entertainment committee includes Mr. Flaherty, John McDonough, Edmund O'Connor, John O'Connor, William Oliver, Joseph Whalen, W. P. Barrett, Bert Bracken, Dr. George Bracken, Dr. John Canavan, Charles McCarthy, Emmett McCarthy, Charles Curry, Thomas Curry, Mort Cussen, Michael Flynn, B. Doherty, and Barney Burke.

Mr. Kelly, Henry Blake, Emmett Whalen, president of the county board; P. J. Brady, city clerk; John M. Lee,, state representative; Thomas Byrne, and James Whalen, sanitary district trustees; Mayor Louis Raskey of Orland, Mayor Roy E. McCarthy, Lemont, and Mayor Daniel P. Bergin of Chicago Heights are members of the committee.

Also on the committee are Thomas Flatley, William McDonnell, Martin Schmidt, J. J. Kelly, Joseph O'Connor, Patrick Tullen, John O'Brien, Thomas Kerrigan, Frank McGarr, John R. Riley, Dan McKeown, Art Dunn, Ed Dunne, E. Des Chattels, B. O'Brien, D. O'Brien, Capt. M. Reagen, Thomas Sheehan, Emmett Flavin, James McArdle, Mike Kenney, Edward Blake, and Edward Barrett.

WHO'S WHO ON SOUTH SIDE

Carl J. Adams, new president of the South Woodlawn Chamber of Commerce, has announced that he will devote all of his civic energy during the next year to accomplishing the objectives of the organization. He is the only man who has headed the body a second time, and has been a director ever since it was formed, eight years ago, as the Eighth Ward Business Men's association. Mr. Adams is trustee of the Woodlawn Kiwanis club and dismisses his other connections by claiming membership in every club for the community—about 50, he estimates.

CARL J. ADAMS.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Born in Michigan, Mr. Adams came to the south side 40 years ago and has lived there ever since. He is 52 years old and proud to know he looks years younger. He heads the Carl J. Adams Funeral parlors, 7350 Cottage Grove avenue, and resides at that address. With him is his family, which includes two daughters, Mrs. Bernice Feldhoff and Miss Grace Adams. The son-in-law, Walter D. Feldhoff, is associated in business with Mr. Adams. The South Woodlawn leader is a proud grandfather also. Asked his principal diversions, Mr. Adams replied he always had had to work for a living. He admitted, however, "playing at golf a little" at the Club Casa Del Mar and Euclid Hills, where he is a member.

HENRY R. POWELL IS NAMED PRESIDENT OF CAL-SHORE GLEE CLUB

Henry R. Powell, 8545 Manistee avenue, was elected president and secretary of the newly formed Cal-Shore male glee club last week. Peter McCue, 8833 Exchange avenue, was named vice president and Thomas O'Brien, 9128 Houston avenue, is treasurer. Bert Siegler, 8724 Kingston avenue, is acting musical director.

HENRY R. POWELL.

The club is anxious to obtain more members, Mr. Powell asserted, and asked that any men in the Calumet or South Shore area who are interested apply to him or Mr. McCue or at the regular meeting each Monday evening at the Bessemer park fieldhouse.

Members attending the election meeting other than the officers were: William Jones, Paul Berkstedt, Paul Pierce, Francis Sloane, Roy Robinson, Sam Schiet, Phil Berg, Louis Ramsey, John Ande, William Posen, Louis Shapiro, and Gary Herbst.

Neighborhood Theaters

The Tivoli is presenting one of the major movie treats of the last few months in "A Free Soul." Lionel Barrymore, as the wizard criminal lawyer who believes that every one is privileged to lead his own life and make his own mistakes, is almost incomparable in stealing the show from its star—Norma Shearer. He had to be, for Miss Shearer turns in one of the best performances she ever has. As father and daughter they make a great pair, to the dismay of their straight laced relatives. Lucy Beaumont, incidentally, rates 100 per cent as grandma. Clark Gable does another fine job as the gang leader with whom the free soul, Norma, has an affair for a time, and Leslie Howard turns in his regular superior, polished performance.

Popular "Daddy Longlegs."

Popular "Daddy Longlegs," with its happily chosen leads, continues to offer fine entertainment with an appeal for the whole family. It will be seen today, tomorrow, and Tuesday at the Grove, Jeffery, and Oakland Square houses as well as these three days and Wednesday, too, at the Maryland. Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter do the honors in a big way.

The Maryland, by the way, is favored with an all-star bill this week. "Five and Ten" and "I Take This Woman" start Thursday to follow "Daddy Longlegs." The former sparkles with brilliant, individual performances by Marion Davies, Leslie Howard, Irene Rich, Richard Bennett, and Kent Douglass. It is the story of the family of a man from a small town who makes a fortune with his string of 5 and 10 stores.

"White Shoulders" at Paccadilly.

Jack Holt, Mary Astor, and Ricardo Cortez make up the bill in "White Shoulders," the intriguing Rex Beach story of a man who forces his bride to live with another man for whom she has professed to care. It is at the Piccadilly today, tomorrow, and Tuesday. Then comes "Just a Gigolo," with William Haines, for the next two days.

Nancy Carroll at Tower.

Let's give Nancy Carroll a great big hand for her acting in "The Night Angel," which adorns the Tower screen this week. She has some fine support, too, including Fredric March, Phoebe Foster, Katherine Emmett, and Emmett Hale. Alison Skipworth is rare as Countess Martini, notorious mother of our Nancy and owner of a questionable night club. March is the district attorney. Can you figure anything from that?

* *

"Up for Murder" at Avalon.

"Up for Murder" is the week's offering at the Avalon. It is a story involving newspaper folk—a publisher, society editor, and cub reporter being implicated in a murder. Lew Ayres, Genevieve Tobin, Dorothy Peterson (appearing as the cub's mother), Purnell B. Pratt, Frank McHugh, and Richard Tucker are the principals. Interestingly done.

9 SOUTH SIDERS PICK DIVORCE AS ONLY WAY OUT

3 More Ask Separate Maintenance.

Nine south side residents, seven wives and two husbands, started divorce suits in the Circuit and Superior courts last week. The actions were based on grounds of cruelty, desertion, habitual drunkenness, misconduct and conviction of a felony.

Separate maintenance bills were filed by three other south side wives. Mrs. Gertrude Stern, 7916 Blackstone avenue, who is seeking separate maintenance from Jacob A. Stern, accuses her husband of cruelty, while charges of desertion are made in the bill filed by Mrs. Beatrice Stevenson against Donald W. Stevenson, 7341 Yates avenue. Another separate maintenance action was started by Mrs. Hermine Dickson, 5609 Drexel boulevard, against Joseph J. Dickson, whom she accuses of both cruelty and nonsupport.

Two Wives Charge Cruelty.

Both Mrs. Julia W. Thompson, 5007 Calumet avenue, in her divorce suit against Perry C. Thompson, 65 East 35th street, and Mrs. Marion A. Laird, 7427 South Shore drive, who is asking permanent separation from Allen Laird, blame the failure of their marriages on alleged cruelty of their mates. Complaints of desertion were made in divorce cases started by Mrs. Mary Jones, 3635 South Vincennes avenue, against Wardie Jones, 500 East 35th street, by Mrs. Emma Stevens, 1744 East 73d street, against Christ Stevens, and by William E. Carney against Mrs. Shirlie Carney, 5000 Drexel boulevard.

Double Charge Against Husband.

John Rose is accused of the double charge of cruelty and conviction of a felony in the suit instituted by his wife, Mrs. Emma Rose, 5432 Prairie avenue, while Frank Carlisle, 222 East 48th street, bases his divorce action, filed against Mrs. Corrine Carlisle, 4516 Prairie avenue, on charges of misconduct.

Because of alleged habitual drunkenness Mrs. Emma Diprima, 920 East 42d street, is asking a divorce from Joe Diprima. Mrs. Christina McGovern, 4006 Ellis avenue, lists charges of both habitual drunkenness and cruelty in her case against Frank J. McGovern, 5534 Ingleside avenue.

SOUTH CHICAGO SUMMER SCHOOL FINISHES TONIGHT

Exhibit and Exercises at Bird Church.

Closing exercises of the tenth annual summer vacation school of the South Chicago Community center in Bird Memorial Congregational church, 9135 Brandon avenue, will be held this evening. The exhibits, which will be in the manual training and community rooms, will open at 7:30 o'clock and the program will begin at 8 o'clock. More than 100 children from the various departments will take part in the exercises.

The school is the most cosmopolitan in Chicago, according to the Rev. Thomas M. Lineweaver, pastor of the church. In the manual training group alone there are more than twenty nationalities. The total enrollment in the five weeks' school was 245, and the average daily attendance was 140.

The Rev. Mr. Lineweaver will have general charge of the program, which will open with entertainment by the kindergarten class under the direction of Miss Bernice Pollock. The youngsters of 5 and under will present a cantata, "The Merry Tea." Those taking part will be Rose Rifish, Marguerita Abalos, Julia Chastivak, Frank Pawlak, Albert Ray, Louise Howard, Carmen Garnika, Marion Grow, Bert Terrases, Wauking Terrases, Armanda Ganz, Alize Ganz, Bertha Sheen, Elsie Sabot, and Agnes Sabot.

In Primary Program.

A poem and songs will be given by the primary department under Miss Frances Smith. Those taking part are John Saboe, Mike Mitroff, Rose Mazar, Bertha Alberos, Anne Madovich, Ethel Gagen, Laverne Grow, Margaret Hiphain, Helen Hudock, Patricia Sheen, Edward Wolinski, John Urban, Flavio Terrases, Julius O'Leary, Hugh Lineweaver, Albino Ganz, Christ Gianapolis, Frank Gianapolis, Fred Ganz, Joe Gonzales, Paul Gonzales, Learthur Dunlap, Phillip Alberos, Justice Ruiz, Edward Alamo, Carl Bebish, Virginia Cummings, Harry Gombrowski, Dorothy Savage, Louis Pavlac, Marvin Roach, Emil Seabloom, Francis Kazowcki, Florence Detratto, Evelyn Hallings, Max Zickovich, and Beatrice Rob.

A song, given in English and Croation, will be sung by Mary and Katie Zivkovich and Helen Mazar of the junior B department under Miss Myra Mallin.

Sample of Daily Program.

The department also will give a sample of the every day program. Those in the demonstration are Elvira Martinez, Esther Granica, Julia Brown, Bertha Gianapolus, Manda Tonkovich, Chester Russell, Morris Ganz, Robert Williams, Buddy Zaja, and Mike Wolinski.

Other parts of the program will be given by juniors and intermediates, who have been under the tutelage of Mrs. Gladys Acosta, A. H. Davis, Miss Amy Annette, and Miss Madaleen Kramer. A feature will be a biblical alphabet, each letter being linked with a verse in the Bible.

Stories will be told by Leonardo Hidalgo and Anna Wolinski.

Make Vases of Records.

One of the feature exhibits is the work of the reed weaving group which has finished a number of neat baskets of various shapes. A unique product on display will be vases made of old phonograph records softened in boiling water and molded before cooling.

The school will be followed by opening of Community center's camp at Tower Hill, near Sawyer, Mich. The girls' group will leave tomorrow and stay until Aug. 13. The boys will take over the camp Aug. 17 and stay until Aug. 27.

125 HYDE PARK Y. M. C. A. BOYS TO CAMP A MONTH

More than 125 boys will embark from the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning for a month stay at Camp Hastings, near Lake Villa, Ill. The group is said to be the largest ever to go to camp from a single "Y" here at one time, and will depart from the usual by being quartered together in a section of the camp all their own, and in staying a month rather than two weeks.

The boys have their bunks picked already, having been furnished diagrams of the cabins. Each cabin will house regular "Y" clubs and groups, and each has been named after a Big Ten university. Willard G. Maltby, boys' secretary, will be in charge of the gang. He was a personnel officer at Culver academy before coming to Hyde Park.

A watermelon eating feast was held at the "Y" Friday evening as a farewell gesture and another will be put on Aug. 29, the day the boys return.

The week's schedule for boys remaining at home includes a trip to White Sox park Thursday and one through the Gulbransen piano plant Friday. The boys will have their fathers or chums over for a swim in the pool Wednesday evening.

New Bids on Southeast Paving Will Be Opened

New bids on the paving of Avenue L from 95th to 106th street and of Avenue O from the latter point to 130th street are to be opened by the county roads committee tomorrow morning. The first bids, received a month ago, were rejected because of the new wage law put into effect by the legislature and becoming effective July 1.

EIGHT CONTESTS TO REACH CLIMAX IN SOUTH PARKS

Girls' Swimming Meets Saturday Feature.

Eight sets of events will be run off this week as the south park playground program reaches the high point of the season. In addition to these, the final playground ball games will be played in the series of tournaments which started in June, and boys between the ages of 10 and 15 will be taking athletic tests at the various parks.

Entries close tomorrow noon for the annual junior tennis tourney for girls under 14. Elimination rounds will be played Tuesday afternoon in two divisions, the north section competing at Hardin square and the south division at Ogden park. The two survivors in each section will meet later in the week for the title.

Two horseshoe eliminations are to be held this week, the junior tourney for boys under 15 being at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon and the intermediate competition for those under 18 at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. These both will be played in two divisions. North section play will be at Fuller park in both tournaments. The south division of juniors will meet at Ogden park and the south group of intermediates at Bessemer park. The two survivors in each sectional elimination will meet those of the other section in the finals.

TRIBUNE ISSUES CALL FOR FALL GARDEN ENTRIES

Honor Roll Contest to Get Under Way.

How does your garden handiwork compare with that of the thousands of others interested in flower gardening within a 40 mile radius of Tribune Tower? Hundreds of persons, by telephone and by mail, have indicated renewed interest in the next semi-annual CHICAGO TRIBUNE garden honor roll, in which the first call for entries in the 1931 fall competition is being issued today.

Whether yours is a rock garden, old fashioned garden, formal or informal, or whether it includes a few vegetables mixed in among flowers and shrubs, if the garden creates an individual setting for your home, it is eligible for entry if it is your work and nonprofessional.

The judging will be the third semi-annual project designed to list flower gardens worth of honor certificates and which others in the many communities which make up the metropolitan area may use as guides in patterning and developing yards and gardens best adapted to individual homes and to communities.

Ballot in This Section.

No tedious work is required of those who wish to enter the contest. An entry blank may be found elsewhere in this section. All it requires is the name and address of the garden and endorsement by signature of two neighbors or friends. Or neighbors may enter a garden of their own volition if the deserving gardener is too modest.

The ballot is to be mailed to the Farm and Garden department, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Those received postmarked later than midnight Aug. 27 will not be considered, as judging must be held as near simultaneously as possible to be fair to entrants in various cections.

A special invitation to those in suburbs, in rural districts and somewhat thickly populated areas of Chicago proper is being issued for this fall contest. In the previous contests the competition has been centered largely in already beautiful city home or suburban areas.

Seek to Stimulate Plantings.

It is the intention of the contest to stimulate home plantings by pointing out those gardeners whose work has built not only community pride but has increased home values. Some of the most interesting situations discovered in the spring competition this year concerned gardeners whose neighbors had endorsed their nomination to the honor roll and yet these same neighbors were revealed as rivals.

To make the competition no less difficult in order to get on the honor roll, but to encourage those who think they would have more chance of recognition, those already given the certificates of merit last fall or this spring will be barred from reëntering this fall.

On Permanent Honor Roll.

Their names will remain, instead, on the permanent honor roll that has already given recognition to 73 gardens in the two previous contests. The list will be kept intact until it is apparent that individuals once honored have failed to continue their model gardening, and then a revised list will be compiled.

The date for judging will be announced as soon as weather conditions permit. THE TRIBUNE's flower garden score card on which the two previous entry lists have been judged will again be used as a basis of fair competition and permanent record of each entrant's garden ideas and progress.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 3.

Prune the climbing roses. As blossoming ends, old canes that are dead or unproductive should be cut out and the new shoots on which next year's roses come may be trained into position and those which have borne flowers shortened. Trim little from the bushy tops, but thin the heavy growth at base considerably.

Tuesday, Aug. 4.

Lettuce started now should be tender hearted for fall. Plant shallow, not over a quarter inch, in good rich soil. If you are afraid the soil will dry out before plants come up, cover the row with boards, burlap or straw, watching for the first show of seedlings to remove this mulch. Mignonette or prizehead, reddish varieties, are good, or Grand Rapids may be grown for leaves.

Wednesday, Aug. 5.

A raid on the flowers' insect pests is in order. Leaf chewing insects like wireworms, grubs, cutworms, beetles or caterpillars succumb to stomach poisons liwe the arsenates in a dust or spray. The piercing, sucking insects like lice or aphids must have some such contract spray as nicotine sulphate. Get at all sides of the leaves and stems of plants.

Thursday, Aug. 6.

The lawn that has suffered from dry weather must be soaked thoroughly today, and again Saturday or Monday. Surface sprinkling or watering in the heat of the sun is harmful, as the water must get into the ground to draw grass roots deeper. A good fertilizer should be used now to give the plants food for fall growth. Reseed the thin or bare spots after raking the soil.

Friday, Aug. 7.

Thin out the young dephinium beds to give the larger, stronger plants a better show in the race for late fall blooming. They should also get plenty of water during the dry spells, and should have two or three feet of open space for circulation of air through these lusty feeders. By September they should be large enough to place in their permanent positions, according to color, of course.

Saturday, Aug. 8.

Weeding the flower beds, borders, and running a cutter around the edge of the sidewalks will tidy up the place for Sunday display. The dandelion and plantain should come out of the lawn and garden rows with a knife or the special pronged weeders on the market. To date no spray or killing liquid or dust has been proved successful for this job.

HITCH-HIKER, 20, TOURS 40 STATES IN TEN MONTHS

Makes 12,000 Miles as Vagabond.

Eugene Ressencourt, 20 years old, set out hitch-hiking to California last September with the ambition of breaking into the movies. He returned Wednesday afternoon to tell of his travels in forty states and Canada, convinced that beating one's way across the country is the real way of seeing things and acquiring an education. He found movieland a closed door and now hopes to be able to write a book on his experiences and observations after taking in the eight states remaining for him to conquer.

EUGENE RESSENCOURT.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The boy makes his home with an uncle, Eugene Defaut, 7948 Rhodes avenue, but has an idea that he may start out again in a month or so to see those eight states—Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Idaho, Washington, and Oregon.

Bronzed and a bit weary, pack still on back and feet in leather boots, the youth dropped in at Tribune Tower as soon as he hit town, reporting that he had 15 cents left out of $50 with which he started from Los Angeles about six weeks ago. Since then he has traveled western, southern, and eastern states and a part of eastern Canada in a zig-zag course which he estimates at 9,000 miles. Added to his trip out to California last fall, this makes approximately 12,000 miles.

Ressencourt carries his Boy Scout card for identification, having joined the organization in 1923 and become an eagle scout in 1926. He is a graduate of Englewood High school and plans to return to the University of Illinois, where he is a sophomore, after another year of traveling. He has lived on the south side for eighteen years.

After giving up his motion picture scheme, Ressencourt got a job as a forester to earn money to make his big jaunt.

84 FOOT DRIVE FOR WORLD FAIR READY FOR USE

Work on Island Buildings Is Started.

The new 84 foot World's Fair roadway along the Illinois Central tracks between 23d and 39th streets, which is to take the place of Leif Ericsson drive during the exposition, is to be opened to day time traffic tomorrow. This announcement was made Thursday by Fair officials.

Originally the drive was designed to have a parkway in the center with a 35 foot roadway on each side. It was opened that way several months ago and proved unsatisfactory, so the last few weeks have seen workmen paving the center strip of 14 feet.

Building Blocks Drive.

With construction well under way on the steel framework of the Hall of Science, Leif Ericsson drive has been closed between 23d street and the south end of Soldiers' field. The building will extend across the drive, which means that the latter will not reopen until after the exposition is over, officials said.

Traffic from the south side to the loop will be forced to continue using the east drive auxiliary World's Fair road and the cutback at 16th street over to the east side of Soldiers' field and by the administration building. It is felt that opening the road along the west side of Soldiers' field to both north and south traffic is unwise at the present time, though such will be the case during the exposition, when the entire Ericsson drive will be closed south to 39th street.

200 Work on New Hall.

More than 200 men are being employed on the Hall of Science while 25 are at work driving piles and leveling ground for the electrical group, started last week on the south end of Northerly island. Within six weeks about 150 men are to be employed on the electrical group. This will not be completed until next year, although the science building is to be done about Dec. 1.

Basic and medical science exhibits are to be housed in the science building, which will be U-shaped, approximately 700x400 feet. It will be two stories and a mezzanine in height. The opening of the U will face east and surround a rostrum with a capacity of several thousand persons. The north façade, centered in Leif Ericsson drive, will be distinguished by a semi-circular grouping of twelve pylons. It is to rise from colored concrete terraces and is to be painted in white and gray, with trimming of red and gold. It is to be lighted at night by indirect and fluctuating colored flooding.

The electrical group is to be two stories high, 1,200 feet long, and 300 feet wide. The power electricity unit will be a three-quarter circular structure at the south end of the building, rising from a series of terraces and surrounding a landscaped court. White, red, yellow, blue, and black are colors to be employed.

ELECTED

MISS ROSALYN SWISKY.

PIERCE BIRKHOFF.

[Daguerre Photo.]

Pierce Birkhoff, basketball and track athlete and member of the glee club, last week was elected president of the August graduating class of Hyde Park High school. Miss Rosalyn Swisky, a member of the Weekly staff, Sigma Epsilon honor society, and the senior sponsor group, was named vice president. Arthur Hultgren, another athlete, was chosen treasurer, and the secretary is Miss Sara Gwin, also a member of the Weekly staff. A regular commencement program has been decided upon, and will be held Aug. 20. The class comprises 73 students, 54 of them from Hyde Park and 19 from other high schools not in session in the summer. All of the officers are Hyde Parkers.

ASK MORE LIGHT ON STONY ISLAND SOUTH OF 79TH

The Calumet Gateway Improvement association last week asked the commissioner of gas and electricity for additional lighting along Stony Island avenue from 79th street to 95th street, comparable to that north of 79th street.

A request also was addressed to H. C. Kelly, superintendent of track and roadway for the surface lines, asking that steel poles along the sides replace the present wooden poles in the center of the parkway.

These moves are in line with the association's plank for the improvement and beautification of Stony Island avenue, explained J. I. Molitor, president of the Calumet Gateway body, who voiced his gratitude to Ald. David L. Sutton [8th] and Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] for having the weeds in the parkway mowed.

Double Benefit from Weed Mowing.

"This is not only extremely worth while from a health standpoint in view of the hay fever season's being upon us," he said, "but also from the safety standpoint. The high weeds obstructed the view of autoists and made crossing at the intersections dangerous."

Announcement was made last week by Mr. Molitor of the association's approval of a plan put forward by the surface lines for a loop at the end of the street car line between 94th street and the Belt railroad. The loop would be made by crossing the southbound drive of Stony Island avenue into property on the west side of the street which is owned by the surface lines.

87th Street Lights On.

Installation of the long sought street lights on 87th street beween Stony Island and Jeffery avenues was completed last week by the department of gas and electricity and the lamps have been turned on. The lights, placed at street intersections and in the middle of each block, are suspended from the surface lines poles.

Filling is being done in Avalon park by the south park board, preparatory to the erection of the proposed field house, which is to be similar to those for Foster and Marquette parks.

RADIO USED TO GIVE NEW KIND OF FARM RELIEF

Loudspeaker Proves Aid to Scarecrow.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio has joined the airplane in giving farm relief. While Iowa farmers are "raining" arsenic from a fleet of planes on myriads of grasshoppers to save their crops, orchard owners have discovered that a radio receiving set installed inside a scarecrow makes it much more effective in keeping the birds out of the cherry trees and berry bushes. An Oregon experimenter reports that not only do the birds flee the advertising announcements but they won't even listen to the best crooners.

The next step is obviously to do away with scarecrows altogether and equip each fruit tree with a loudspeaker to ward off our feathered enemies. As a matter of fact Paul Whiteman plays at a spot where the loudspeakers are hidden in the trees. And birds cause no trouble there.

What is a televisor? A lot of folks who viewed Columbia's visual station dedication program think they're the television whiskers that appeared on some of the celebrities' faces. According to observers Mayor Walker and Guy Lombardo looked like Trade and Mark Smith. By the time television becomes a general success possibly all our favorite announcers will look like European diplomats.

One of the best lines heard at the Columbia dedication was Edwin Cohan's "television of today is perhaps comparable to the phonograph of 1910 and the motion picture of 1905."

Incidentally, the hardboiled announcers who never waver before the microphone have at last found out what "mike fright" is. Certain veterans wilted pitifully before the electric eye of television.

Another Vallee coming up. Rudy's brother Bill, 22 years old, made his debut recently in a program titled "Set With Stars." Predictions are promising.

A recent radio installation in a private home costs about $3,000. It included loud speakers in most of the rooms of the home and remote control devices to operate them from a master receiving set.

Archer Gibson, radio pipe organist recently praised by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, was for years private organist for Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who had a great organ built in his mansion on Riverside Drive after the fashion of his old chief Andrew Carnegie. With Gibson at the organ and great artists, such as Fritz Kreisler participating, the Schwab musicals became famous. "The Rosary" as played by Gibson was said to be Schwab's favorite selection.

Dennis King, famed music comedian, and now a radio artist, tells this story on himself:

"When I was still a struggling thespian in New York, and sleeping in the parks because of lack of funds, Anne Nichols, who later wrote "Abie's Irish Rose," gave me a job in a play she was putting on. It was my first singing part, and on the strength of the engagement, I took my friend and myself out to dinner with my last two dollars. The meal amounted to $1.50 so we indulged in two twenty-five cent cigars to make the event a complete splurge.

"And the next day I was fired. The manager said I was a rotten actor, and would never make out at all."

That was his first experience as king for a day. Later he made a lot of money playing that rôle.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has just been awarded the Columbia Broadcasting medal for distinguished contribution to the radio art. CBS announces that he is the first American so honored. Now it is up to some flying service to pick out a radio big shot and award him a medal engraved "for distinguished service to the art of aviation."

Fred Waring is scheduled to join the "Around the Town" program on Aug. 31 . . . The candy makers, according to a report, are getting together and will join the cigaret manufacturers in their battle of the air . . One of the most popular English radio teams is known as Flotsam and Jetsam, one a tenor and the other a very deep basso . . . Here is an error credited to a Texas newspaper by Editor and Publisher: "Mark Coney, electrical wizard and discoverer of wireless telegraphy, delivered an interesting and instructive lecture."

Carveth Wells, world adventurer, who recounts his strange experiences over NBC, told about his wildest sight recently. It was a carload of sophomores in a collegiate flivver crossing an African desert singing a Vallee number.

Minnesota, No. Carolina Near Top and Bottom

Minnesota and North Carolina take places near the top and the bottom, respectively, of the list of states in which radio receivers have been tabulated by the census bureau.

Out of 608,398 families in Minnesota, 287,880, or 47.3 per cent, had sets in 1930. This was almost 50,000 more than the department of commerce and the radio industry estimated.

Only 72,329, or 11.2 per cent, of 645,245 families in North Carolina, however, possessed receivers when the count was taken. The radio industry made an estimate of 92,000.

Herbert and Nevin Works on W-G-N at 8 Tuesday

Two excerpts from Victor Herbert's only grand opera, "Natoma," and Nevin's "O that We Two Were Maying," sung as a soprano and alto duet, are to be heard in the household program with Adolphe Dumont and a symphony orchestra through W-G-N at 8 p. m. Tuesday evening. A vocal ensemble will offer "Cousin Jedediah."

BETTY, BOB HOSTS TO 250

Antonia Gillman and Richard De Wolfe, the Betty and Bob of W-G-N, with Cloudchaser, an air elf, between them. Betty and Bob were hosts to 250 Chicagoland children last Sunday.

Back to Earth

Two hundred and fifty children from all over Chicagoland had the time of their lives last Sunday when they met in the flesh a real air elf from Cloudland, and Betty and Bob, the two children who are visiting that magic sphere through W-G-N at 5:45 o'clock each afternoon.

The occasion was a picnic held at Brook Hill farms, west of Milwaukee. The air elf was Cloudchaser, who through his magic changed himself into a man in order that he might not be lost in the crowd. He called himself W. E. Johnstone. Betty, of course, is Antonia Gillman, and Bob is Richard De Wolfe.

With the air Cloud Chaser's magic airplane, the two children who are now visiting the Glumpers, the inhabitants of that pessimistic star, Glump, returned to earth for this picnic.

Visitors last Sunday not only made the acquaintance of these three radio personalities, but were introduced to other strange creatures of the land of clouds, in the form of wooden cutouts, scattered in unexpected places over the farm. There was the Terrigog, the Swisher, Twisten-Ding, Pat-Patter, the rain elf.. Sponge-Un, and Hurry Scurry, a snow gnome.

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's Youngest Announcer, Wed

Reginald Martin, W-G-N's youngest radio announcer (he is 20), was married on July 11 to Miss Jane Neilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Neilson of Evanston. Martin came to W-G-N from station WSBT at South Bend, Ind. He reads THE TRIBUNE on the daily Digest of the News program. He is also heard with Leonard Salvo, organist, during Everybody's hour and on the Mail Box program.

GUEST ARTIST

Aileen Stanley, vaudeville headliner and stage star, will appear as guest artist with Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next broadcast, which will be heard through W-G-N Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. During this program Miss Stanley will introduce three new songs.

NBC WILL ERECT VISION STATION ON 84TH FLOOR

The National Broadcasting company has been authorized by the federal radio commission to erect a television and a sound broadcasting station on the eighty-fourth floor of the Empire State building, of New York, tallest structure in the world.

The stations will operate on ultra high frequencies, above 23,000 kilocycles, in an effort to ascertain whether or not they can be adapted to visual broadcasting. The stations will cost $75,000, with $10,000 additional for studios.

A television antenna will be placed on top of the Empire State building mooring mast, 1,250 feet above the street level. NBC engineers believe that many of the present obstacles to visual broadcasting will be removed through the operation of the station from this height.

More Power Is Urged for Western Stations

While still in the midst of his western inspection tour, Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount has expressed the opinion that broadcasting stations in the west need more power because of the often large areas they are required to serve. The western radio commissioner reiterated his contention that cleared channel stations should be permitted to use the maximum power of 50,000 watts. He also noted that numerous technical improvements in broadcasting are apparent throughout the west.

Olive Hull Will Open Series on Child Welfare

Olive Hull, executive secretary of Gov. Emmerson's committee on Child Welfare, will give a series of talks on child welfare from W-G-N every Monday, starting tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. D. T. McNabb, of the Animal Protection committee of the Women's City club will speak Tuesday at this same time on the proper care for pets in summer.

RADIO WILL PLAY IMPORTANT ROLE AT MUSIC FEAST

Quin Ryan to Broadcast Festival Aug. 22.

Radio will play an important rôle in the success of the second Chicagoland Music Festival, which will be held Saturday, Aug. 22, in Soldiers' field, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, associated newspapers, and civic and commercial concerns of the middle west.

Quin Ryan will be at the microphone throughout the festival program. W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, will broadcast the entire program, beginning at 7:30 o'clock, while a National Broadcasting company network will broadcast from 9 to 9:30. Allan Grant, W-G-N staff pianist, will accompany the choruses that night.

A few headliners for the festival concert will be:

Hallelujah chorus of 6,000 voices.
Negro chorus of 2,000 voices.
One drum corps of 400 pieces.
A massed band of 2,200.

Grabel, Cain in Charge.

Last summer letters poured into the office of THE TRIBUNE and W-G-N from listeners in every state in the Union who heard the concert. Many testified that the program was the finest radio broadcast they ever had heard. It will be finer this summer. Victor J. Grabel again will be the bandmaster and Noble Cain the director of the chorus.

From the moment the bands and drum corps enter the huge arena at 7:30 o'clock until the final note is sounded Mr. Ryan will describe the cheering thousands, the huge searchlights as they play upon entertainers and spectators. It will be an evening filled with harmony and dynamic description. Pageantry, color, music, the applause of 150,000 will be brought to all who cannot attend in person.

During the festival an hour will be devoted to presenting winners in the preliminary contests of Dixon and Waukegan, Ill., Racine, Wis., and Gary, Ind.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings preceding that Saturday the contests for male, woman, and mixed choruses will be held in the Drake hotel; bits of these contests also will be broadcast from W-G-N. A few minutes on the air will be given to the adult and juvenile band contests Saturday morning, also in the Drake hotel.

After the Festival.

WMT, radio station in Waterloo, Ia., is sending the prize winning adult band of the first festival, the Cedar Falls (Ia.) Municipal band, to the festival. All the expenses will be paid by Harry Shaw, owner of the station and formerly business manager of the Waterloo Tribune, now merged with another Waterloo newspaper. The Tribune sponsored the neighboring city band last summer. James A. Melichar is the director of the 45 piece organization.

Radio not only plays a big part in the festival week's program but also after the festival is over. Last summer three of the stars in the festival contest—Agatha Lewis, winner of first place in the soprano division for Chicago; David Pritchard, leader of the Pritchard Mixed quartet, first Chicagoland winners, from Racine, and Julius Sklute, also of Racine, second place Chicagoland baritone—all won enviable positions in the concert and radio field.

Miss Lewis is a member of the Herbert Witherspoon chorus. Mr. Pritchard is a W-G-N staff artist, and Mr. Sklute has appeared in radio and on the concert stage throughout the winter and spring. Many of the winnings groups of the first festival were heard this winter in radio recitals over W-G-N.

China Expands Radio.

As part of the expansion and development of China's international radio communication, the Chinese ministry of communications recently decreed that all government radio stations in the country were to operate international services.

TELEVISION TYPE

JANE FROMAN.
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Jane Froman, a contralto with a touch of indigo in her voice, brought to the radio spotlight by Paul Whiteman, made her local debut last Thursday in the first of a series of NBC programs with an orchestra under the direction of Matt Malnek, a protégé of the "dean of modern music." Hereafter their programs will be heard over an NBC net at 7 Wednesday evenings and at 10:30 Thursday evenings.

DR. ARTHUR HOLT WILL SPEAK ON MIDDAY HOUR

Building religion into business is the theme of the midday services from W-G-N for this week. The speaker for 1 o'clock tomorrow will be Dr. Arthur E. Holt, professor of ethics at the University of Chicago and the Chicago Theological seminary. Dr. Holt has been prominent in the work of the Congregational church for many years. Following the theme of the week, Dr. Graham Fay, who has been in social and industrial betterment work for over forty years, will speak on Wednesday. Dr. Fay's subject is "Building Religion Into Business from the Bottom Up."

Another lay speaker, James L. Kraft, Chicago manufacturer, will speak for business men on Friday on "Building Religion into Business from the Top Down." The other services during the week will be conducted by the Rev. John L. Dickson, director of the midday services, who is assisted by Leonard Salvo, organist, and Gene Martin, baritone.

START DIGGING FOR MAMMOTH N. Y. RADIO CITY

New York.—Excavations started last week for the mammoth Radio City, said to be the largest building project in the history of the world, which is to be erected in the heart of New York City. The digging is expected to be completed in the fall. Eight steam shovels, 100 trucks, and nearly 300 workmen started the excavation job. When the actual building work begins, at least 5,000 men will be employed. The $250,000 project is being financed by John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Balks KTNT Removal.

Norman Baker, owner of station KTNT of Muscatine, Ia., is seeking a preliminary injunction against the individual members of the federal radio commission to nullify the action of the commission in removing KTNT from the air last month. The suit was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court.

HAROLD STOKES TO DIRECT NEW DANCE PROGRAM

Tom, Dick, and Harry on Novel Bill.

A new dance program, featuring novel musical combinations and effects, with Tom, Dick and Harry furnishing the vocal end of the bill, will be presented for the first time at 9:45 tomorrow evening under the direction of Harold Stokes.

Harold Stokes, well known to radio listeners as a former director of Jean Goldkette's orchestra, comes back to radio after two years with his own orchestra in Kansas City and Omaha. Stokes is well known for novel arrangements of popular dance numbers. Besides conducting his own orchestra, Stokes plays the piano, accordian, clarinet, drums, and xylophone.

The initial program includes arrangements of hits from "The Wonder Bar," "The Band Wagon," Crazy Quilt," and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

The story of Sheridan's ride will be told at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. Miss Jean Conover has used the famous poem by James Buchanan Reed as the foundation of her story. An incident from the life of John Hancock, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, will be dramatized by Norman Macdonald for the sketch at 8:30 Friday, Aug. 7.

Earle Wilkie, 17 year old boy baritone, who has been singing on W-G-N Wednesday and Saturday mornings at 10:45, will make his bow to its evening audience at 7:45 Tuesday evening. Two of his numbers will be "Shipmates o' Mine," and "In the Silence of the Night." Young Wilkie is a protege of Barre Hill of the Chicago Civic Opera company.

The second of the summer garden concert heard from W-G-N at 8:10 Saturday nights, will be presented Aug. 8 and will have Vienna as its scene. Works of Lehar, Schubert, Suppe, and Straus will be heard on this Viennese program.

FIRST U. S. UNIT IN WORLD WAR TO CELEBRATE

13th Engineers to Revive A. E. F. Show Tonight.

Men who formerly served in the 13th engineers, the first American unit to engage in combat in the world war, today will celebrate the 14th anniversary of their landing on foreign soil by laying the cornerstone for the regiment's convalescent center at Camp Bonarius, in the forest preserve at [illegible]th street and Maple Lake. Veterans of earlier American wars will take part in the ceremony.

Presentation this evening of the engineers' stage show, which made a hit with the A. E. F. in 1917, will help to take the minds of the men back to their days in France. The show will be given under the direction of Congressman John C. Schaefer of Milwaukee, who was a private in the regiment. There also will be dancing this evening. For today a program of sports has been arranged.

Judge Marcus Kavanagh, Judge Joseph Burke, Judge Mathew D. Hartigan, and Gen. P. J. H. O'Farrell are to speak. The event is being held under the direction of Edward J. Walsh, Patrick J. Cahill, and Kieran P. O'Gallagher.

The Illinois state championship games in the American Legion Junior baseball world series will be played at Wrigley field next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Cook county champions will be pitted against downstate champions in three games. The games will start at 3 o'clock.

The South Chicago, Marine post, Berwyn, and Rogers Park teams will play for the Cook county title early in the week. The downstate championship also lies among four teams.

All children in Chicago younger than 16 years will be admitted free to the championship games. The games will be played under the direction of the state athletic committee of the American Legion, Edwin H. Felt, chairman.

Medill-Tribune post, No. 348, will go on a moonlight excursion on the S. S. Theodore Roosevelt Monday night, Aug. 10. The boat will leave the Michigan avenue dock at 9 o'clock and return at 11:45.

The annual meeting of the Cook county council will be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in the council chamber in the city hall. Officers will be nominated and elected for 1932, including commander, vice commander, finance officer, sergeant at arms, and one member of the Cook county executive committee from each of the nine districts for a term of two years. District members of the executive committee will be elected from their respective districts in caucuses.

The hot weather parties given by [illegible] post, No. 111, have proved such a success that a grand finale party has been planned for Wednesday night at the club rooms, [illegible] Cottage Grove avenue.

Lloyd W. Miles announced that the grand finale party will afford an opportunity to revive all the old war songs. Members of neighborhood posts and their friends are invited to attend.

The second picnic of the year will be held by Three Links post today. The event will take place in the forest preserve at 91st street and Hermitage avenue. The program will include a ball game, cards, barnyard golf, and the usual picnic sports. Arthur Moldenhauer announced that coffee will be served free.

There will be prizes for dubs, goofers, and golfers at the golf tournament and dinner to be held Friday by Chicago Stockyards post, No. 333. The event will be held at Cog-Hill Golf club, Archer avenue and 119th street. James B. Neary is chairman of the committee.

William M. Devme has been elected commander of South Shore post, No. [illegible]; John F. O'Brien, senior vice commander; Al Marks, junior vice commander; Edward A. Kamp, finance officer; the Rev. R. R. Weissmueller, chaplain; Fred Haughten, historian, and Roy Hull, sergeant-at-arms.

Yankee post, No. 490, will hold its annual picnic next Sunday afternoon and evening at White City park, 63d street and South Park avenue. The park will be at the free disposal of post members, their families and friends. A place has been provided at the south end of the park for picnic gatherings at lunch time.

BEAUTIFIES GARDEN WITH DOLL HOUSE

Patricia Rose Wolfe, 3015 East 78th street, thinks she has a mighty fine daddy. And, why not? Here she is in the dream playground he has made for her with doll house in the center. In the foreground is a rockery and at the left a lighthouse can be seen.

20,000 ATTEND TRACK CARNIVAL, PICNIC AT LAKE

Set 5 New Records at Athletic Meet.

Twenty thousand persons witnessed the two big outings of the far south side last Sunday—the 5th annual track carnival and road race of the East Side Chamber of Commerce at Calumet park and the picnic of the Hegewisch Young Men's club at Wolf lake. The latter was featured by sailboat races which were won by the Sea Hawk. The craft was manned by John Kania, Frank Kania, Ted Popielak, and Thomas Powers.

The track meet was marked by the establishing of five new meet records. Two others were tied during the afternoon.

Funk Wins Race Again.

The biggest event, of course, was the 5 mile road race, which was won for the third time in five years by Herman Funk of Ogden park. Funk broke his record of last year by running the distance through the east side streets in 29:13 3-5. The old mark was 29:30.4. Running second was Bruno Beccini, also of Ogden.

Don Anderson set a new record of :07 in the 50 yard dash for east side boys. Ed Cook was second and Nick Savia was third. The open 50 yard dash was won by John Hunn of Chase park, who tied the old record of :06.4. Al Rochinski of Bessemer was second and Ascenio of Bessemer third.

Representatives of the Wabash Y. M. C. A. were prominent in record making, Lionel Morgan setting a new senior high jump mark of 6 feet 2½ inches. He was followed by Joseph Sharpe and N. Breford, teammates. John Brooks of the "Y" set a senior broad jump mark of 24 feet and ⅝ inch.

Ralph Metcalfe, colored speedster formerly of Tilden Tech, tied his time of :09.8 in the century and won the 220 yard dash in :23. Andrew Porzel of Ogden was second in the 100 and Robert Fritsche of Chase was third.

The other record performance was that of Louise Closek of Orr playground in setting a new mark of :06.6 in the junior girls' 50 yard dash. Helen Sliva, a Roseland girl, was second.

Eligibility to Be Investigated.

Larant of Chase won the intermediate broad jump and 100 yard dash, but his medals are being held up pending an investigation of eligibility. He leaped 22 feet to a new broad jump record, but this is not expected to be allowed. Louis King of Wabash Y. M. C. A. was second in the jump, Adolph Casper of Tuley was third and Tom Annerino of Hardin was fourth. Wallinger of Chase was second in the century.

Frank Brejcha, James Jurick, and Joseph Karjawa of Ogden, finished one, two, three in the senior 440 yard dash. The time was :52.4. The senior 880 was won by Ewert of Douglas in 2:04.8.

The senior girls' 50 went to Jeanette Buck of Orr playground, with Edna Canter of Franklin second. Freda Orndt of Bessemer was third.

Chase park won the 880 yard relay with Ogden second and Wabash "Y" third.

Roger Powers was general chairman of the games, C. J. Bohlin was vice chairman, and F. G. Roach was referee.

A SALES
BUILDER
Keyed to Today's Needs!

HAVE you fewer customers this year than last? Have some of the old ones stopped trading with you? Have you found it difficult to find new customers?

Not a few merchants and retailers face the problem of maintaining sales volume under present-day conditions.

Some of them, however, have given up trying to do anything about it. They are sitting back, waiting for the return of good times.

Some merchants, on the other hand, refuse to wait. They are making their own good times by doubling their efforts. If business won't come to them, they go out after it—and the medium they use is the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune.

Here is a way to pep up your sales that is keyed to today's needs. Advertising in the Metropolitan Section is low-cost advertising. It is efficient advertising. It is productive advertising. It reaches the families who are spending the money. You direct your message only to actual prospects, for you buy only that portion of the Sunday Tribune's huge circulation that is read on your side of the city, among people who can trade with you.

Are you content to wait for good times, or do you want to make your own good times?

Think it over. Then decide to find out the complete facts about Metropolitan Section advertising and what it can do for your business. Call Superior 0100 tomorrow—Metropolitan.

Ready to Start Stage Season in Manhattan

Week of Aug. 24 Brings Eight Premieres.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Not a single new play, show or frolic will be staged on Broadway during the next seven days, although the week is traditionally regarded as marking the start of the new season. The first première in sight is "Ruddigore," to be revived at Erlanger's theater on Aug. 10. The week of Aug. 17 is barren of announcements. But during the week of Aug. 24, new shows will be in plentiful supply, so a faithful historian of the stage must announce that date as the marker of the season's opening.

Here is the way the premières of late August along Broadway are listed at present:

"Love's Out of Fashion," a German comedy, with Walter Woolf as star, on Aug. 24. "Three Times the Hour," a melodrama which Brock Pemberton will bring to the Avon on Aug. 25; George White's "Scandals," coming to the Apollo, perhaps on the same night; "After Tomorrow," the Hugh Stange-John Golden play, listed for the Golden theater on Aug. 27; the "Vanities," announced to open Earl Carroll's new playhouse, also on the 27th; "Friendship," which George M. Cohan will bring to the Fulton, on Aug. 31; "Cloudy with Showers," the Floyd Dell-Thomas Mitchell comedy, scheduled for the Morosco on that evening; and "Free for All," the Schwab and Mandel musical show, which will set up shop at the Manhattan either the week of the 24th or 31st. Less definite are Miss Unger's play, "Ladies of Creation" and a Negro pastime called "Fast and Furious."

It seems that Jed Harris' projected cycle of Eugene O'Neill revivals will not be started until after the Theater Guild has staged the same dramatist's latest opus, "Mourning Becomes Electra." This may be professional courtesy on Mr. Harris' part; but on the other hand it may be a shrewd decision to ride along in the backwash of the publicity that O'Neill's three layer creation is certain to stir up.

"Desire Under the Elms" will be the first of the revivals, and Eugene Powers will probably have the rôle that Walter Huston originated. The second will be "Marco Millions," on the staging of which Mr. Harris is said to have some new ideas. Mr. Powers will probably be seen in this play also, in the rôle of the Great Khan, which was acted for the Guild by Baliol Holloway and Morris Carnovsky.

Items from the Shuberts' news bureau are as follows:

Judith Anderson will tour in Pirandello's "As You Desire Me" during the first months of the new season. She will spend a fortnight in the Canadian cities, beginning Sept. 21, and on Oct. 5 will open in Boston for a run. In January she will appear as the star of a new play, the title and authorship of which are a state secret in the Shubert office.

"The Venetian," by Clifford Bax, which the Shuberts will import from London, will begin its career in Princeton, N. J., Sept. 26, and will also have a week in New Haven, Conn., before entering New York. Five members of the London cast will be employed in this production.

Ethel Barrymore, now started on a western tour in "The School for Scandal," has dropped her plans for a repertory. She hopes to reach New York in the rôle of Lady Teazle around the Christmas holidays. Earlier in the summer she talked of a quartet of vehicles, with "Hedda Gabler," "Camille" and "Francesca da Rimini" as the other three.

Mae West intends to make another filibustering expedition into the drama. Her new play will be called "The Constant Sinner," and it will be a dramatization of her novel, which bore another title, and which very few people seem to have read. Atlantic City will be the scene of the tryout, during the week of Aug. 24. A Broadway première will follow, on or about Sept. 10.

Among the hits of Mr. Ziegfeld's "Follies" are a group of numbers salvaged from a revue called "Who's Who," promised last season by Arthur Klein, but never staged. They bear the titles of "Changing the Guard," "Doing the New York," "Clinching the Sale," and "Victim of the Talkies." Which would come under the heading of unimportant information but for the fact that Mr. Klein has another show by the same authors. "Vanity Fair" is its title, and early September will see its staging.

"Cloudy with Showers," by Floyd Dell and Thomas Mitchell, is being pointed for the Morosco theater on Aug. 31 by Manager Patterson McNutt. Its story deals with a professor who becomes involved in a scandal with one of his co-eds. Broadway has begun to refer to this play as "a feminine 'Young Woodley'."

Charles Coburn, who appeared in the Chicago company of "Lysistrata" last winter, wants to act "The Peacock," by Leonard Ide, a play that almost tempted George Arliss to take a vacation from the pictures. George C. Tyler also did some flirting with "The Peacock," as a possible vehicle for Otis Skinner.

Plans for Carnival.

Riverview Park is turning its attention toward its autumnal Mardi Gras carnival. Aug. 15 is the date of the carnival opening. It will continue until Sept. 20.

CONTINUED:

"High Hat," with Edna Hibbard, James Spottswood, and Richard Taber; Adelphi theater; seventh week.

"Stepping Sisters"; Blackstone; twentieth week.

COMING:

"A Modern Virgin," by Elmer Harris; Garrick, opening Aug. 17.

"Salt Water," comedy, by Frank Craven, with Taylor Holmes and Fiske O'Hara; Playhouse, opening Aug. 22.

WEEKLY CHANGE:

R.-K.-O. Palace theater: Continuous vaudeville and talking pictures; Bessie Love, headliner.

Academy theater: Burlesque and talking pictures; "French Frolics," with Miss Carmen.

NEW LADY TEAZLE

ETHEL BARRYMORE.

[Fink Photo.]

THE classic role of Lady Teazle in Sheridan's comedy, "The School for Scandal," is now being acted by Miss Barrymore. She is making a midsummer tour to the Pacific coast, and probably will reach Chicago, when eastward bound, about Thanksgiving day. She first appeared as the flirtatious lady of the famous screen scene eight years ago, with her uncle, the late John Drew, as Sir Peter.

Two Hundred Play Titles for New Stage Year

Spirit of Optimism in Managers' Plans.

By Charles Collins.

interrupted his frenzy of composition in order to go to Russia, where his blatherskite tendencies have been manifested in fulsome after luncheon oratory in praise of that economic and governmental insanity called communism.

The Guild says on this point:

"Recently we cabled Mr. Shaw concerning the play. Yes, he replied, it was entirely likely that it would be completed by fall, but that his optimism in this quarter was not to be construed as a promise. We are, however, familiar with his working habits, and with the concentration which he puts into a task until it is finished. In our own heart we feel that the play should be in our hands before the snow flies."

There is only one detail in the approaching theatrical situation, as thus outlined, that the dramatic editor of THE TRIBUNE faces with a sense of unutterable weariness. And that is this new play by Mr. Shaw. The Theater Guild may rejoice over it, but the mere thought of it gives me a sinking feeling. I have seen enough Shaw, and heard enough Shaw, for one lifetime. The famous tongue-in-cheek of the so-called British Aristophanes begins to strike me as a morbid growth, in need of surgery.

Playwright Vs. Censor.

The fear of a stage censorship has been hovering over Broadway for months, because of provisions in the Masker bill, which may be brought before the New York state legislature. This worry has caused the birth of an organization which bears the title of National Council on Freedom from Censorship, and of which a group of professional playwrights and novelists appears to be the founders.

The chairman of the council is Hatcher Hughes, author of "Hell Bent for Heaven." The vice chairmen are Elmer Rice, author of "Street Scene," "The Adding Machine," etc.; Fannie Hurst, and Barrett Clark. Its membership includes authors, lawyers, and educators.

The organization is planning a legislative campaign to attack the post-office censorship over books and publications in the mails. It will also undertake to effect the repeal of certain New York state motion picture laws, of the theater "padlock" law, known as the Wales act, and the laws giving special police powers to vice reform societies.

The council, apparently, has overlooked the greatest current menace to the freedom of the imaginative writer, which is the bawdiness, vulgarity, and vicious exploitation of depraved sex themes now widely practiced in the craft of letters. A playwright or a novelist deserves no more freedom of self-expression than he earns by his manifestation of good taste, artistic sincerity, and cleanness of purpose.

Jack and Jill Plays.

"The Haunted Castle" is the next children's performance to be given at Ravinia by the Jack and Jill Players under the auspices of the Ravinia Opera club, Aug. 6. The play will be directed by its author, Marie Agnes Foley.

The Jack and Jill Players' winter season of Saturday afternoon performances opens Oct. 3 at the Chicago Woman's club theater. There will be an extra performance every first Sunday afternoon of the month. The players will also take part in a pageant on Labor day in Soldiers' field under the auspices of the Federation of Labor.

Actress Stars Own Managers in Repertory

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Katharine Cornell will take over the Belasco theater under an arrangement expected to be completed soon. This indicates that Miss Cornell, with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as a nucleus, will install her long planned repertory company in the playhouse presided over so many years by the late Belasco.

This does not mean that Miss Cornell will take over the Belasco organization, as that machine disbanded after the death of its leader. She has not yet decided whether she will take "The Barretts" on tour before she produces a new play in New York.

In addition to Miss Cornell, three other woman stars will have their own theaters and repertory troupes this fall. Alice Brady will be given a theater by her father, William A. Brady, in which to produce a cycle of dramas in which she will be starred. The first will be "Manhattan Nocturne," already tried out in Atlantic City. It is being rewritten before being brought to town.

Pauline Lord, who quit the stage for a while after her marriage, is returning in the rôle of producer. She has one play in rehearsal now and is looking for a theater of her own.

Jane Cowl also will go "independent" this fall and manage her own plays. She will produce a repertory. Several of her appearances are likely to be in Shakespearean works.

The new operetta being written by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach is almost completed, and it has been titled "The Passionate Pilgrim." The two principal rôles will be played by George Metaxa and Dorothy Debenham, both well known on the London stage, but this will mark their first trials in this country.

Metaxa, a Rumanian by birth, is a matinee idol in England. After making a hit in "Wake Up and Dream" he played opposite Peggy Wood in "Bitter Sweet" for two years.

Frieda is a diminutive 4 year old who plays in "The Green Pastures." Her performance consists mainly in getting a fish bone caught in her throat in the scene where the Negroes have an old fashioned fish fry.

Two nights ago Frieda disappeared, and only after a frantic search was she discovered sitting out in the audience in a second row seat.

"I hadn't ever seen the show and I wanted to," she explained to the reproving stage manager.

'Modern Virgin' for Chicago

"A MODERN VIRGIN," a comedy by Elmer Harris, will be the first new play of the season in Chicago, opening Monday, Aug. 17, in the Garrick theater. It will be presented by the Messrs. Shubert, following its successful engagement on Broadway.

Mr. Harris, as in "Young Sinners," deals with the subject of the young moderns in "A Modern Virgin." The play tells the story of a mischievous girl of 17, who, writhing under the strict discipline of a maiden aunt, decides to discover the secrets of love and life.

The cast will be headed by Roger Pryor, recently seen here as the leading man of "Up Pops the Devil"; Margaret Sullavan, who was acclaimed as the ingénue "find" of last season, and Herbert Rawlinson, a celebrity of the screen.

New York Wits Unite Abilities in Broun Show

Some Good Sketches in Co-operative Venture.

By John Chapman.

were converted into an amusing set for the first act finale.

Such well known songsmiths as Irving Berlin, Philip Charig, Dorothy Fields, Jimmie McHugh, the Lief brothers, and Vernon Duke have given lyrics and music, and such nationally approved wits as Nunnally Johnson, Dorothy Parker, Peter Arno, and Broun, himself, have supplied dialogue material.

Those who gave money may get all of it back—indeed, the $11 opening night paid back almost all of the production cost—but they'll get no dividends. Profits are to be shared cooperatively by the principals.

A coöperative show is no news to Broadway, and rarely is a charity. Shoestring producers make a habit of getting their casts to waive salaries even though Equity loudly objects. But "Shoot the Works" is a different sort of thing in that no shoestringer will profit by his cast's sacrifice. Loose, amiable, and informal, it is much like the old "Garrick Gaities" or "Grand Street Follies." At the opening Broun told the critics that he wanted constructive criticism. They should start, he said, by saying the show was swell and build up from there. Most of them did their best by Heywood by reporting that the revue had some swell numbers.

A Radio Skit.

There is, for instance, a rapid skit in which Jack Hazard, veteran among comedians, played the rôle of a radio announcer gone mad from having to say the same old things in the same old way every night. To bring him to sanity his daughter arranges a fake broadcast in which the old gentleman may work off all his suppressed language. The old gentleman curses roundly, warns the unseen audience that the next number will be terrible, and confides that Uncle Ned, who tells bedtime stories, is really a bit of a lecher. Hazard played the part magnificently the opening night, though he felt not at all well. Next morning his doctor told him he had chicken pox—caught it from the Hazard children—and the actor relapsed sadly into a state of quarantine.

Just as the fake microphone provided an outlet for an announcer gone mad, so, apparently, did "Shoot the Works" provide an uninhabited medium for lyric writers. "I'm back in circulation again," warbles a torch singer whose romance has busted; "I want to chisel in on your heart, I want to muscle in on your love," sings a gangster swain to his moll; "I'm just a doorstep baby" is the refrain of another piece, and a fourth gets melodic significance out of the phrase, "Pie in the sky."

Producers Attend.

Some of the sketches may have proved comforting to Florenz Ziegfeld and the other commercial revue producers who attended the première. In the show business for a living, they came to see what a philanthropic movement could turn up. Broun, Johnson, Dorothy Parker—all excellent writers—have been pretty much ignored by a commercial stage that sticks to the same old George Kaufmans and Howard Dietzes and Gene Bucks. Now, with a fellow writer and former dramatic critic as the big boss, they might show the old money grubbers a thing or two.

Broun chose for his own offering a sketch entitled "Death Says It Isn't So." He admitted to the audience that it was a bit serious—but he liked it, he said, and the audience had better not think it funny. A dying man is visited by Death, Death being a genial looking Irishman in brown coat and white trousers who fingers a pack of cards instead of a scythe. The dying man is amazed that he isn't afraid, and when Death leans over to whisper a funny story the invalid goes into a paroxysm of laughter. The nurse thinks it's the death rattle, but Death says it isn't so. We all go out laughing at that same gag.

Ineffectual on the Stage.

A comforting notion, without doubt; and, as Broun set it down on paper, a beautifully told one. But it wouldn't act.

So it was with a Dorothy Parker sketch—and she, like Broun, has often criticized the drama in the public prints. Her sketch, in which a young man with a hangover learns from a girl all the horrible things he has done the night before, must have been perfect light reading in the Parker vein, but as material for actors it was something less than perfect.

At a modest $3 top price "Shoot the Works" may find its place in the summer playgoer's schedule. And as long as it does it will provide a clearing house for actors. An eccentric dancer, one Al Norman, joined the cast at the last minute, too late to have his name on the program. In his first Broadway appearance he stopped the show. Earl Carroll was in a subsequent audience, and before the week was over Norman had been engaged to appear in Carroll's "Vanities."

Stock Companies Thrive.

Despite a depression which has cut the list of Broadway offerings to twelve, the summer stock companies have been thriving as well as or better than in former years. For a fraction of their New York wages actors and actresses of first standing are content to spend their vacations in rural spots from Skowhegan to Southampton. Not a few of the stock companies content themselves with offering tried and true hits, while others, more adventurous, try out new plays.

One of them, in Westport, Conn., has been organized with more than a hot weather existence in view. Called the Country Playhouse, the theater has deftly been made from an old barn in an apple orchard. Its sponsor is Lawrence Langner, member of the board of directors of the Theater guild, and its company includes Rollo Peters, Romney Brent, and Dorothy Gish.

Langner, a patent attorney, has found that the Theater guild does not provide enough of an outlet for his energies. An enthusiast on the topic of repertory, he has seen the guild's plans for a repertory season crumble year after year. The Lunts are supposed to act in "Elizabeth, the Queen" and "Much Ado About Nothing" on alternate weeks, but "Much Ado" flops as a production. So, in Westport, Langner has organized his own repertory company, and when the new season opens he will bring it to Broadway independent of the guild.

A Varied Repertoire.

Catholic indeed is his list of six plays. There is a revival in a better-than—"After Dark" manner of Dion Boucicault's "The Streets of New York"; there's "The Comic Artist," by the Pulitzer prize winning Susan Glaspell; there go Shakespeare's "As You Like It"; a comedy by Langner himself, and another comedy by William Cotton, magazine writer.

The "Streets of New York" revival is done with fine gravity, and to see Miss Gish go into a Victorian swoon or to see the personable Brent as a drunken young schemer is to become enthusiastic over the Langner plan. If the very old Shakespeare, the pretty old Boucicault, and the new Glaspell can all be done within the space of a week, this new repertory theater should hold the Broadway interest.

Late this month Earl Carroll will open his new home for extravaganza, a 3,000 seat hippodrome where, by charging a mere $3 or less a seat for ten performances a week, Carroll hopes to afford productions that will knock somebody's eye out. Not depending upon press releases, but having been taken on a tour of inspection by Maestro Carroll himself, I am able to report that the new theater has dazzling possibilities. Carroll has thought of a couple of stunts that the movie cathedrals have failed to discover.

Public Address System.

There are, for instance, loud speakers concealed in every corner of the theater—in the rest rooms, in the lobbies, and in the dressing rooms. When the stage manager wants Will Mahoney on stage he simply plugs in the Mahoney dressing room and barks through the loud speaker. When intermission comes and is about gone the public address system will be turned on, and the awed customers will hear this polite warning: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is the stage manager speaking. The performance is about to begin."

Just behind the orchestra pit and in view of the audience is a black panel from which a formally attired "light conductor"—head electrician to Mr. Carroll's competitors—will manipulate the buttons that light the show. Everything is at his fingertips. A red tipped button slides up or down a groove and red lights glow or grow dim. A green tipped button controls green lights, another amber, another white. Each groove has numbers alongside of it, so that the lighting of any one set will have a code number—6291 meaning 6 on the red, 2 on the blue, and so on.

Thoughtful of the Beauties.

Backstage Carroll has been most thoughtful of his beauties. Each girl will have her own modernistic dressing table. There will be a refrigerator in which they may keep their Johns' orchids. There will be telephones so that John may talk to his girl from the stage door. The elevator is extra high, so that girls may get aboard without crushing their headdresses. A Carroll beauty without a headdress doesn't exist.

Perhaps the most quixotic detail of the whole place is a card room for stage hands. Stage hands, says Carroll, are good fellows even if they do keep a poker game going all during a performance. So why not give them a clubroom? The room he has provided is large, with a real fireplace in one corner. Unhappily, it is below stage and has no real windows. So the thoughtful Carroll is building a false window. During matinees it will glow with artificial sunlight, and in the evening it will be illuminated with synthetic moonlight.

FROM SCREEN TO STAGE

BESSIE LOVE.

THE Palace theater is giving followers of the films a chance to see Miss Love "in person" this week. She appears in a one act sketch upon the vaudeville program which began performances last night.

Actress Speaks Her Mind

KATHARINE CORNELL, now in her first year under her own management [and with the highly successful "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" as the result], has answered a questionnaire about theatrical conditions on "the road" by stating that they are the fault of New York's theater overlords. She says:

"I believe that the reason theatrical conditions on the road are not what we would like them to be is due to the fact that the public has been cheated by managers for so long that it has become impatient and disinterested. By this I mean that the poorest and sketchiest presentations have been untruthfully advertised as original New York productions; even some stars have failed their public by allowing their performances to fall below the New York standard.

"Until we restore playgoers' faith by giving them good plays, well done, it is natural that their interest in the theater is lukewarm. I hope I have made it clear that, in my opinion, it is the managers themselves who are to blame for the present conditions outside of New York."

In Vaudeville

HERE are notations on the acts that comprise the vaudeville program at the Palace theater for the current week:

BESSIE LOVE—The cinema star "in person." Originally placed in the movies by John Emerson, she was developed into stardom by D. W. Griffith. Her personation of a Duncan sister in the first musical talking picture, "Broadway Melody," brought her into vogue. In Hollywood after working hours she shares honors with Lupe Velez as an informal entertainer. She sings, plays a "uke"—and owns half a dozen cups which declare her to be the champion Charleston stepper of Hollywood's ballrooms.

HON. M. WU AND HIS CHINESE COLLEGIANS — They combine the skill of the oriental as an entertainer with American jazz ideas in dance and song. A company of half a dozen young men and girls in a specially produced "unit." Incidentally most of the collegians come honorably by the title.

HOWARD, FINE AND HOWARD—They were originally "stooges" with Ted Healy and have graduated into an act of their own. With them are Jack Walsh and Ruthie Goodwin.

BILLY FARRELL AND DAD—Dancers and comedians who are really father and son.

THE FOUR KADEX—A European importation with an aerial apparatus on which they perform hazardous tricks.

Chicago Girl Ascribes Film Entry to Luck

But Personality Makes Frances Dee Favorite.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Three summers ago Frances Dee was a want-ad taker for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Two years ago she went from her home in Chicago to spend a vacation in Los Angeles.

And now this 21 year old girl, whose big blue-gray eyes sparkle with ambition and humor, daring, and willingness for hard work, suddenly has become one of the favored younger darlings of the movies, after a sequence of events which never would have happened if she had known in advance that the things she experienced can happen to only one movie aspirant in 10,000.

Miss Dee is one of the few young film favorites who never dyed her hair to get a part. She still wears it the natural chestnut brown of her college days at the University of Chicago. She did not change her own name to film name. She did not go in for "movie society," but lives comfortably at a home made for her in Hollywood by her mother, Mrs. F. M. Dee of Chicago, and an older married sister, Margaret. She did not pose in lingerie and kimono photographs to win herself publicity in cheaper magazines.

Rejects Starvation Diet.

She eats what and when she feels like it, figuring it better to remain a normal healthy American girl than to starve herself under 110 pounds, as most of the younger actresses do in furtherance of film aspirations. Miss Dee weighs 115. She has not had any "engagement" announced to this, that, or the other actor for the double reason that she does not believe in this overused and unintelligent Hollywood means of obtaining newspaper mention, and because she has so conducted herself that none of her Hollywood "friends" have felt it necessary to pass the word around that "Frances Dee" is secretly engaged to so and so.

After coming to Los Angeles for a visit in the summer of 1929, seeing the sights and taking the recommended trips about the countryside, Frances read some movie studio publicity to the effect that University of Southern California girls and Los Angeles high school girls were being recruited at $10 a day to act as part of the college atmosphere in "Words and Music," a Fox film, supposed to have a sorority girl sequence.

As a member of the Sigma club and sophomore class at the University of Chicago, Frances went over to the Fox movie lot "just for fun."

One Chance in 10,000.

"What happened, I know now, was pure luck—one chance in 10,000," says Frances. "I knew so little of what was going on that I stood in the wrong line at the casting office, and by mistake was handed one of the slips given to extra girls who had been summoned to work.

"Finally, I had to explain. Jack Phillips of the casting office scowlingly asked what I was doing there. I said: 'I'm a college girl and I want to get into your college girl picture.' It was so unusual and I suppose it sounded so fresh that he and another man laughed. They sent me to the assistant director in charge of details on the picture. The truth is there was not one college girl or high school girl there, and the chance that sent me in with extras caused me to be given a bit to do—chatting over the sorority house telephone.

"Then I was ruined for returning to school. I wanted to stay in pictures. I wrote to my father and received his permission to remain out here a year."

But films did not take as kindly to her as brown haired Frances had eagerly expected after the first opening.

"It was after a couple of bad tests and nine months of unimportant occasional extra work that I said to myself: 'Well, I got in at Fox's, perhaps I can get in somewhere else the same way.' So I boldly went over to Paramount."

* *

Cinema Progress.

Working without pay every night from 8 to 12 to improve herself in dramatics at the Pasadena Community playhouse helped Miss Dee chisel a bit as a bridesmaid in "Fu Manchu," a Paramount production. Next she was one of ten girls taken in three weeks' location with the "Follow Through" troupe.

She then played a rôle, again without any pay, at the Hollywood Writers' club, but in films continued to get nothing but bits. Then some higher up at Paramount, seeking a fresh face for Maurice Chevalier's "Playboy of Paris," decided to give Miss Dee a chance. The chance stamped her as a leading actress prospect. Her mother and sister came to Hollywood and made a home for her with them. Parts in "Along Came Youth," with Buddy Rogers; "June Moon," with Jack Oakie; "Caught" [not released], with Richard Arlen, and "The American Tragedy" [not released] elevated her to a five year contract and secure place among the younger actresses.

Miss Dee's father was an army captain in ordnance, later going to utility corporations in Chicago until called to Indianapolis with a power corporation. Father Dee is now reconciled to a movie actress in the family despite hearty original doubts about it.

More Plays by Abie's Creator; Theater Gossip

ANN NICHOLS of "Abie's Irish Rose" fame, who deserted New York for Hollywood two years ago, will return and open producing offices on Broadway early in September. She proposes to present three new plays, all by herself or written in association with other authors, during the forthcoming season.

George White announces that the cast for the forthcoming edition of "Scandals," the eleventh of the series, has been completed with the addition of Joan Abbott, Fred Manatt, and Ross MacLean. Others already chosen are Rudy Vallee, Willie and Eugene Howard, Ethel Barrymore Colt, Everett Marshall, Ray Bolger, Barbara Blair, Mavine and Virginia Loomis, the Gale Quadruplets, and Dorothy and Harry Dixon. "Scandals" will open in Atlantic City on Aug. 10. Joseph Urban has designed the settings.

"The Man Who Pays the Piper," a play written by G. B. Stern, English novelist and playwright, has been purchased for production in the fall by Horace Liveright. The author, who was represented on the American stage two seasons ago by "The Matriarch," will come to New York for the première. Mr. Liveright's first production of the season, a play by Edwin Justus Mayer, is now known as "Things as They Are." Its previous tentative titles were "The Last Mask" and "In Statu Quo."

Alexander McKaig has bought for production for next season "Achilles Had a Heel," by Martin Flavin. It will be directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Mr. Flavin is author of "The Criminal Code" and "Children of the Moon." Mr. Mamoulian has directed "Porgy," "R. U. R." and "A Farewell to Arms."

Henry A. Rosendale has placed in rehearsal a farce called "The Widow Is a Virgin," which he wrote. The cast will be headed by Sam Ash and Enid Markey. Mr. Rosendale expects to open the production in New York in about three weeks. He was co-author of "Lady in Pawn," staged in Chicago last winter.

"Manhattan Nocturne," which was tried out last week in Asbury Park, N. J., by William A. Brady, with his daughter, Alice Brady, as star, has been withdrawn for revision. Miss Brady is scheduled to begin a two weeks' stock engagement in Montreal on Aug. 3 in "A Most Immoral Lady," which she acted in New York in 1928.

To date William A. Brady has not found a play suitable to serve as a vehicle for his wife, Grace George, who recently relinquished her option on John Halloran's "En Famille." If he does not get a new play for her by Oct. 1 Miss George will go on tour again in "The First Mrs. Fraser," visiting the south and west.

Jane Seymour has been engaged for the rôle played by Helen Flint in the New York company of "The House Beautiful," which will begin a tour in Philadelphia in September. Mary Philips and James Bell will continue in the cast.

"The Passionate Pilgrim" will be the title of the musical play by Otto Harbach and Jerome Kern which Max Gordon will produce in the fall. Dorothy Debenham, an English actress, has been engaged for the show, which will go in rehearsal early in September.

Miss Billie Burke began an engagement at the Curran theater, San Francisco, last Monday night in "The Vinegar Tree." She is playing the rôle acted in New York by Mary Roland.

LOOKING FOR PLAYS

ALICE BRADY.

SHE is the daughter of a veteran theatrical manager—William A. Brady—and the instinct to act is in her blood. Miss Brady doesn't come to Chicago often but her name is frequently seen in the electric lights along Broadway. Last spring she made a vivid impression in "Brass Ankle." Now she is hunting for new plays, with the idea of taking a New York theater for the season.

Cecil B. de Mille, D. W. Griffith, Rex Ingram, Frank Lloyd, the late F. W. Murnau, Malcolm St. Clair, Josef von Sternberg and Raoul Walsh." . . .

RICHARD CROMWELL, the young chap who made such a hit in "Tol'able David," has been signed for a leading male rôle in "Then Hell Broke Loose" . . . ANNA Q. NILSSON who has been off the screen for three years due to injuries received making a picture, is expected home from Sweden next week . . . JAMES CAGNEY, the tough gangster of "The Public Enemy," devotes six hours a day to practicing on the piano . . .

See you tomorrow!

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Favors Credit Division.

Dear Miss Tinée: Could you please tell me why Marie Dressler gets all the credit for every picture she is in with POLLY MORAN? In "Reducing," I thought POLLY MORAN was wonderful, but who got all the credit and praise? No one but Marie Dressler. The same thing happened in "Politics." Something should be done about this at once.

Thanking you,
GEORGE WISSING.

Editor's note: What would you suggest?

Capable of Self Defense.

Dear Miss Tinée. After reading Miss J. W.'s letter in reference to me in the "Voice of the Fan," I couldn't resist a retort in my own defense to her, and to all those so-called responsible people whose cause she is championing.

In the first place I believe you are conducting a movie column, not an "outdoor life" affair, for poets, he-men from the great wide spaces, etc., of which all these responsible people seem to be a part.

Bruce is, no doubt, all right in his way, but in your column he doesn't seem to be very heavy.

I can't understand what life and love have to do with a movie critic's reviews. So Bruce, take yourself out, write to a different outfit, such as "Advice to the Lovelorn," or "Who's Who Among the Cowboys and Indians." I feel sure you'll go over big.

F. WATTS.

Editor's note: Now that everybody's had their say we'll ring off on this controversy.

* *

Lacks Publicity Manager.

Dear Mae Tinée: In the "Voice of the Fan" Jean Siek asks this question: "Why does the public sigh over Chevalier and his smile when Clark Gable and his dimples are on the horizon?" She says she really wants to know.

Well, I'll tell you why. Chevalier was praised and lauded to the heavens before he ever set foot on United States soil, let alone our "silver screen." He was lucky—he had a good publicity manager, I think.

Clark Gable got nary a word of publicity until he fought to win it. He deserves every kind word he gets. He's made himself LOVED in hard rôles. I'm sure you will agree that it is seldom a gangster-murderer-villian or what have you, is loved and admired as Clark Gable is. That's a trick.

A CLARK GABLE FAN.

Editor's note: Sure it's not a dimple?

Tribute to Leslie Howard.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am writing this in hopes that it may attract your many readers' attention to a rising young actor of unusual ability and poise. I refer to Leslie Howard. Only today I witnessed "Five and Ten," and not so long ago "Never the Twain Shall Meet." I was unfortunate enough to have missed your reviews of both these pictures, but feel certain that you, also, must have praised both excellent performances of the gentleman in question.

I read your section entitled "Voice of the Fan" and hope you will do me the favor of publishing this bit of tribute to the fascinating Leslie Howard. Sincerely, yours,

DOROTHY FOLEY.

Editor's note: With pleasure!

* *

"Perfect Lady of the Screen."

Dear Mae Tinée: I have just witnessed the most magnificent performance I have ever seen. It's quite remarkable, since I have seen many great pictures.

How you can say that Norma Shearer played a close second to Lionel Barrymore in "A Free Soul" is more than I can see. She never did and never will take a back seat. Her performance was perfect. She can register sadness and joy better than any other actress. She's the finest actress on the screen of the present or the past.

Let the fans have their Garbo, Crawford, and Bow and their many copies, but I'll stick to the "present ladies of the screen," Norma Shearer for me! Do you blame me?

-W. A.

Editor's note: Blame you? Never. I just envy Norma!

* *

Inspired to Rhythm.

Dear Mae Tinée: [Re: that poem of several Sundays ago].

Floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by all truly élite cats.
It's simply amazing you didn't know!
But if you must see them, here's where to go!
Down darkest alleys on moonless nights,
Listening for sounds, and looking for sights,
Such as you've never, never seen
In dreams, or in life, or upon the screen.
Walk, O! so lightly! Beware of a sneeze!
Listen for solos in minor keys!
Follow the echo of padded feet
Under the fence and across the street
Into the arc lamps yellow glare.
O, you'll be astonished when you get there!
Feline aristocrats garbed in the mode
Sponsored by Paquin [and custom sewed].
Sombreros, tilted at dangerous angles,
Fashioned of mouse skin and dripping with spangles.
Well, if you're skeptical, just go and see;
Then you will have to agree with me
That floating trousers and rakish hats
Are worn by the truly élite cats.
In the name o' nonsense!

DOROTHY.

Editor's Note: Your verse though catty is very natty.

* *

Question for Producers.

Dear Mae Tinée: I don't want to write a long letter for I know you have so many to look over, but I would like to ask you one question.

In a revived picture why don't they use the same star in the talkie that they did in the silent?

For instance, have Richard Dix star again in "The Vanishing American." Or Norma Talmadge in "Smiling Through." I know I would love to see them and there are probably a lot more people who would, too.

Thanks a lot for your valuable time. Yours truly,

CRESIE.

Editor's note: I like the idea! Why don't you write the producers about it?

* *

A Movie Fan's Views.

Dear Mae: I have seen two pictures of Edward G. Robinson, and I want to say that I think he is great. "Little Caesar" and "Smart Money" convinced me.

I wish some one would take Lon Chaney's place. Lon was a great actor. He would risk his life just to make a picture. Would any one else? No! That's why he was my favorite.

Such stars as Emil Jannings, John Barrymore, and others couldn't do such things as Mr. Chaney did in his pictures. Here's for a double for [Genius Man of a Thousand Faces] Chaney. Truly yours,

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's note: I wonder how many of us love our work well enough to risk our lives for it?

* *

Probable Explanation.

Dear Miss Tinée: It MAY have been the heat. Sincerely yours,

BILL FRY.

Editor's note: Well, do write again when you feel warm enough.

* *

Question Remains Unanswered.

Dear Miss Tinée: Will you kindly publish the following letter:

Why do we insist upon discouraging real art in the movies, by registering preference for movie king and queen at the box office, and in our fan letters for such "acting" as is regularly being given us by merely a couple of good looking youngsters only portraying their own most natural inclinations, by making love to each other, and who are incapable of real acting, or of stepping out of their own individuality and into that of another character?

Instead, why do we not learn to recognize as the best actor or actress the artist who is best able to portray the greatest number of most contrasting characters, and not the mere performer who is only able to be himself, which we all can do.

Very truly yours,
C. A. CARLTON.

Editor's note: I don't know why.

* *

Surprise for Some One.

Dear Miss Tinee: For want of having nothing better to ocupy my time in the p. m. I find the picture houses restful and cool, and see all the stars. Then we are offered usually a very good variety of interesting subjects from all over the world, but I don't think the public appreciates this enough.

The low grade of books written today has a lot to do with the type of pictures produced. Producers should not film pictures where "Adults only" is advertised, but, as Mr. Arliss says, it is hard to satisfy the public when movies are turned out at the rate of ten pictures a week.

These are some of my ideas. I don't expect to have them published.

A MOVIE FAN.

Editor's Note: To him who expecteth not, happeneth!

'Peter Ibbetson' Scheduled for RaviniaMonday

Bori, Johnson Will Sing Leading Roles.

By Edward Moore.

Tre Re," it was—they set up the "Peter Ibbetson" scenery on the stage and Miss Bori, Mr. Johnson, the other members of the cast, the conductor, and the stage force experimented with tricky, intricate lighting cues until 4 o'clock in the morning. This is just a detail in what it means to stage an opera.

The work has had quite a history. It was a novel of fantasy by George du Maurier in 1891. It was regarded with desire and apprehension by people of the stage for nearly a quarter century—desire for its plot, apprehension of the risks of the dream scenes. In 1915 it was dramatized by John Raphael. Then Constance Collier rewrote the dramatization and played the rôle of the Duchess of Towers with John and Lionel Barrymore. Incidentally, it was Maurice Barrymore, their father, who had been anxious to have it in play form years before.

Success of the Year.

Then Deems Taylor grew interested in the play as a subject for opera, and is credited on the fly-leaf with having been the co-author with Miss Collier in converting the play into a libretto. Having done that, he wrote the music.

The work was brought out at the New York Metropolitan on Saturday, Feb. 7, of this year, and it apparently became the leading popular success of the year as far as operas are concerned. It even caused a renewal of interest in the play. Miss Collier staged its revival, and Jessie Royce Landis of Evanston acted the Duchess of Towers rôle. There is talk even now of Miss Collier taking the play on tour this coming season.

Mr. Tayor is coming out to Ravinia to see the first performance given his work outside of New York. When his other opera, "The King's Henchman," was put on at the Metropolitan a few years ago, Mr. Johnson, who sang the leading rôle in it as well as in "Peter Ibbetson," received this among his other notes of congratulation: "Dear God, Thank You for thinking up Eddie Johnson when You were making tenors.

Doubling Necessary.

The opera takes a long cast. Mr. Johnson and Miss Bori lead the list, as just said. Alfredo Gandolfi will appear as Col. Ibbetson, Florence Macbeth as Mrs. Deane, Ina Bourskaya as Mrs. Glyn, and Louis D'Angelo as the prison chaplain. There are a dozen or more other rôles, necessitating quite a bit of doubling. Margery Maxwell and George Cehanovsky, for instance, have each of their names opposite three different characters, though luckily no two of them appear on the stage at the same time.

The conductor is to be Wilfrid Pelletier, a member of the Ravinia and Metropolitan conducting staffs for a number of seasons past. He was selected in this case at Mr. Taylor's personal request.

This opera, by the way, is Ravinia's gesture toward the English language.

In a World Apart.

While on the subject of Ravinia, this seems a fitting place to include some impressions written by a visitor. The visitor is R. L. Hickman, M.D., of Clinton, Okla.:

"There is an atmosphere of dignity and quiet beauty in this group of low, unpretentious buildings among tall trees. God made the trees but surely Ravinia park is the work of an artist. Perhaps one feels this more keenly coming from the city, where life swarms on the lake shore in pagan splendor of bathing suits and beach pajamas. That has a beauty too of its own—the picture of a great middle class city enjoying itself in summer, but here at Ravinia is something else. Here are people come to see and to listen, quietly and intently.

"The opera is 'Faust' and the first act begins before dark. It all seems far away and perhaps a little silly at first. One wonders if, after all, opera is not an anachronism in this modern age. Then complete darkness shuts off the outside world. We are suddenly taken into the world of Faust, Mephisto, and Marguerite. The magic has worked again—opera will never die.

"The beautiful garden scene is the high spot of the opera. It is then that we enter entirely the world of make-believe. The spell endures from then on, even through the long train ride back to the city.

"It seems a marvelous idea to me Ravinia park — beautifully carried on and managed. I don't know how it happened. Whether it is run by subscription or for the purpose of making money. It doesn't matter—so long as it is there. One only hopes that there will be no reason to discontinue it."

In Russian Concert.

A fairly active week will mark the Ravinia activities in addition to "Peter Ibbetson." There will be a Russian concert this afternoon. Eric DeLamarter and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will present Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" Symphony, Stravinsky's "The Fire Bird," and Joseph Vito, harpist, will play solos by himself and Thomas. The evening performance will be "Fra Diavolo," though the Russian implications of that attractive operetta are not at present entirely clear. Still, it is a first performance of the season. Florence Macbeth, Ina Bourskaya, Mario Chamlee, Vittorio Trevisan, and Virgilio Lazzari will sing the leading parts, and Gennaro Papi will conduct.

There are other new performances on the week's list. "Il Trovatore" is up for Tuesday night with Elisabeth Rethberg, Julia Claussen, Giovanni Martinelli, and Giuseppe Danise in the cast. The next night "Romeo and Juliet" will be heard for the first time this season from the throats of Yvonne Gall and Edward Johnson in the name parts, and Margery Maxwell, Desiré Defrere, Alfredo Gandolfi, and Leon Rothier in others.

Choristers at Loyola.

The Mundy Choristers, an organization of eighty Negro mixed voices, will take the stand in Loyola university stadium this evening under the direction of James A. Mundy, to assist Adolphe Dumont and the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra in the weekly Sunday night concert. Two groups of spirituals will be sung as well as the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "The Messiah," all numbers in which the Mundy Choristers will participate in the Chicagoland Musical Festival Aug. 22 at Soldiers' field. There is also word of the presentation by chorus and orchestra of Loyola university's new anthem composed by Walter Dellers, and first heard in the June commencement exercises.

Mr. Dumont and the orchestra are presenting an attractive summer program which includes Dvorak's "New World" Symphony, the prelude to Act III. of "Lohengrin," Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" Overture, Coleridge-Taylor's "The Bamboula," Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slave."

* *

Ukrainian National Dances.

The fine art of the dance, which has been increasing in popularity to a marked extent in recent years, is apparently due to go on bigger and better during the season to come. Even at this early date there are announcements of events to come.

One refers to Vasile Avramenko, Ukrainian ballet master, who is now in Chicago preparing 500 dancers for an evening of Ukrainian national dances. The place will be the Civic Opera house and the time the end of October, the exact date not yet announced. Mr. Avramenko has been living in New York, and they tell of a similar festival at the Metropolitan Opera house last April, with special emphasis upon the dashing ardor of the dances, the kaleidoscopic colors of the costumes, and the enthusiasm of the audience.

Another dancing newcomer will be Carola Goya, whose Chicago arrival is also the rather indefinite some time in October. She is Spanish, and dances in the four manners of classical, flamenca, gitana, and modern. Last season she gave eighteen recitals in New York. La Libertad of Madrid vouches for her in emphatic terms, saying that her dances are not only of extraordinary beauty, color, and rhythm, but in the finest spirit of the traditional Spanish dance.

Indiana State Contest.

A state-wide contest of male quartets is to feature the Indiana state fair at Indianapolis, Sept. 5 to 12. Contestants are now organizing in the townships, with county elimination contests to follow and the finals at the fair. Each county will be permitted to send two quartets, one whose members are under 26 years old, the other over that age. The contest is being conducted by the Indiana farm bureau through the social and educational department, and the songs to be used have been selected by the bureau and the Indiana Federation of Music Clubs. All professional singers are barred, and only members of rural communities are eligible. The first prize winning quartet in each class will receive a cash award of $100, second place $80, and third place $70. Mrs. Charles W. Sewell of Otterbein will have charge of the contest.

Speaking of opera companies and the synonymous red ink figures, the Opéra-Comique of Paris adds an item to the sad, sweet story. George Ricou recently resigned as director in protest against the insufficient subsidy granted by the government. Figures that have been made public indicate that in France, too, they have their operatic troubles.

The Opéra-Comique receives an annual subsidy of 1,800,000 francs, and its total receipts run between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 francs. On the other side of the ledger it has to pay 2,000,000 francs, or more than its subsidy, about 9,300,000 francs in salaries, 2,250,000 to the orchestra, and 1,240,000 to the choristers. With regard to the quality of the last, there has been much publicly expressed dissatisfaction. In addition, the organization is obliged to stage twelve new works yearly, and much time and money go into these.

Scores Triumph at Bayreuth.

There is word from Bayreuth that Toscanini scored a reasonable success with his conducting of "Tannhaeuser," and an undebatable one with "Parsifal" immediately afterwards.

◆

Slovak day will be celebrated at Riverview park today beginning at 10 o'clock this morning. The program will be under the auspices of the United Slovak societies and for the benefit of the Slovak-American Charitable association. National songs and national dances will be performed by costumed organizations. The dances have been arranged by the Slovak Artists' club, and the group will number eighty. A featured number will be the appearance of the Slovak Shepherds, who play on an instrument resembling a flute under the direction of Martin Pavella.

PETER IBBETSON

EDWARD JOHNSON.

THE name at the bottom of the picture is his own, the one at the top is the character in the like named opera that he will sing at Ravinia tomorrw and Saturday nights. The opera, by Deems Taylor, was produced by the Metropolitan Opera company last February, and at once became the operatic hit of the season. This will be its first performance outside of the Metropolitan. It is in English. Mr. Johnson's associates will be Lucrezia Bori as Mary, Duchess of Towers, and Alfredo Gandolfi as Col. Ibbetson.

FOR "IMPROPER DUCHESS"

IRENE BORDONI.

THE Dramatic League of Chicago has announced the engagement of Miss Bordoni for the leading role in "The Improper Duchess," a play that it will soon import from London. Its heroine is a flirtatious French girl, and Irene is a specialist in such characters. She is the favorite Anglo-French actress of the American stage.

Drama of Insect Life Listed in New Recordings

"Spider's Feast" Is Ably Interpreted.

By Edward Moore.

COLUMBIA gives a view of some rather notable modern music this month. It is a four side recording of the ballet pantomime, "Le Festin de l'Araignée" [The Spider's Feast], by the French composer, Roussel. Rather curiously, in the light of so much talk from the best minds of music about the value of absolute music, some of the best compositions of the present era are coming from composers who have something as definite as the stage presentation in mind.

For the benefit of those who did not hear Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra present this work about five years ago, the piece works out as a drama of insect life quite in accordance with its title. The first section is the prelude and entrance of the ant; the second is the dance and death of the butterfly; the third deals with the birth and dance of the dayfly; and the last with the death and burial of the dayfly. Apparently the ant and the spider are the only ones who come out well in this particular tragedy.

Columbia's numbers are 67952-D and 67953-D. The work is played by the Orchestre des Concerts Straram of Paris and conducted by Walther Straram himself. The recording is rather good and performance excellent. It is rather hard to describe accurately a modern piece of music, or any other piece of music for that matter, but this one is brisk and bright, and apparently a bit affected by Stravinsky in the period when he wrote "Petrouchka."

There is a pair of Wagner songs that seem to be as inevitably linked together as the Italian operas, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." They are "Traeume" and "Schmerzen." Brunswick in the Hall of Fame-International, No. 90178, presents them from the throat of a noted German soprano, Elisabeth Ohms. Both have orchestral accompaniment, but Julius Pruewer conducts "Traeume" and Manfred Gurlitit "Schmerzen." Excellent results both vocally and instrumentally should be set down for both.

* *

An Amusing Experiment.

Brunswick in No. 20100 is stepping out from standardized music into an interesting and amusing experiment with popular music. The two sides record what are called paraphrases by Victor Young of "I Surrender, Dear," and "Star Dust." Even in the memory of what Paul Whiteman and Ferdie Grofé have occasionally done with popular music, they are rather eye opening.

Here are two tunes whose pretty, graceful turn of phrase and naive construction classify them plainly as belonging to the popular classification, but Mr. Young, who is likewise both conductor and soloist in their performance—the Boswell sisters lend other vocal aid—builds them up as earnestly as though he were writing a symphony. Everything is there, symphonic changes of key and mood, unexpected dissonances, skilled treatment of instrumental color, and if his earnestness occasionally sounds as though it were of the tongue in cheek variety, the work is none the worse for it. There are some of us who believe that American popular music is the best popular music in the world, and this record would seem to prove that it is good enough to be capable of considerably more elaborate treatment than it is in the habit of getting. The instrumental body is the Brunswick Concert orchestra, a first class organization.

A mild protest in this column the other day to the effect that only the second half of Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini" had been received from Victor brought prompt correction of the error by the receipt of the missing disk. Wherefore comment is cheerfully reopened for the statement that the first half is even better in performance and recording than the second indicated. The piece is on the Red Seal list, Nos. 11091 and 11092, played by the London Symphony orchestra under the direction of Albert Coates, and those who have followed Mr. Coates' performances will realize more completely than this column can say how expert he is in the perception and projection of dramatic values in music.

Guild Plans

THE Theater Guild announces that "He" will open its New York season; that "Reunion in Vienna," with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in its leading rôles, will probably be seen in several of the subscription cities before it appears in New York; and that the O'Neill trilogy, "Mourning Becomes Electra," should open about Oct. 26.

Theater Rents Reduced.

A Broadway theater, the Central, was recently rented for $1,000 a week. "The lowest known weekly rental for any Broadway house to date," says Variety, "has been $3,000 a week." Five years ago it was almost impossible to get any Broadway theater without a minimum guarantee of $4,500 on a basis of sharing the gross intake, so that the theater-owner's share might come to $6,000 or even more.—Theater Guild Magazine.

How to Lose Fat a Pound a Day on a Full Stomach

Do Just These Two Simple Things

Fat Melts Away

Science has made important discoveries in fat reduction. The average fat person can now rip off fat a pound a day—four to seven pounds every week!—on a full stomach, with never a hungry moment. Thus it is foolish now to stay fat.

This is what you do: Take a teaspoonful ordinary Jad Salts in a glass of water a half hour before breakfast every morning. This reduces moisture-weight instantly. Also cleanses the system of the waste matter and excess toxins that most fat people have, and banishes puffiness and bloat.

Then do this about eating. FILL YOUR STOMACH—eat your fill—of lean meats, vegetables like spinach, cauliflower, cabbage, tomatoes, etc., and lots of salads. Eat a lot. Eat all you can hold. Don't go hungry a minute! Cut down on fats, sweets and desserts. Eat any fruit for dessert.

That's all you do. Fat seems to melt away. The coarse lines of overweight give way to the refined ones of slenderness. You lose as much as a pound a day. You feel better than for years. For in this treatment you achieve two important results. The Jad Salts clear your system of toxins. *The diet takes off fat with food that turns into energy instead of weight.

If you're tired of being embarrassed by fat, try this way. You'll be glad that you did. You can get Jad Salts at any drug store.

*Note particularly—the salts are urged purely as a poison-banishing agent — not as a reducing. The change in food does the work.

[Answer on page three.]

Born and Bred in Chicago

ISABEL RANDOLPH has succeeded Grace Huff in the character of Rose La Marr in "Stepping Sisters," now at the Blackstone theater. Illness forced Miss Huff to relinquish her part. She has gone to a Canadian sanitarium for treatment and rest.

Miss Randolph is well known to Chicagoans who frequent the theater. She made her debut in Chicago when she was carried on the stage at the age of six months. Later her schooling continued when she became a member of the Bush Temple Stock company. She played with Lenore Ulric in "The Bird of Paradise"; with Richard Bennett in "Kick In," and with Zelda Sears oin "The Nest Egg." Her most recent Chicago appearances in Chicago were in "The Noose" at the Selwyn theater in 1927 and in "If I Were Rich" at the Cort in 1928.

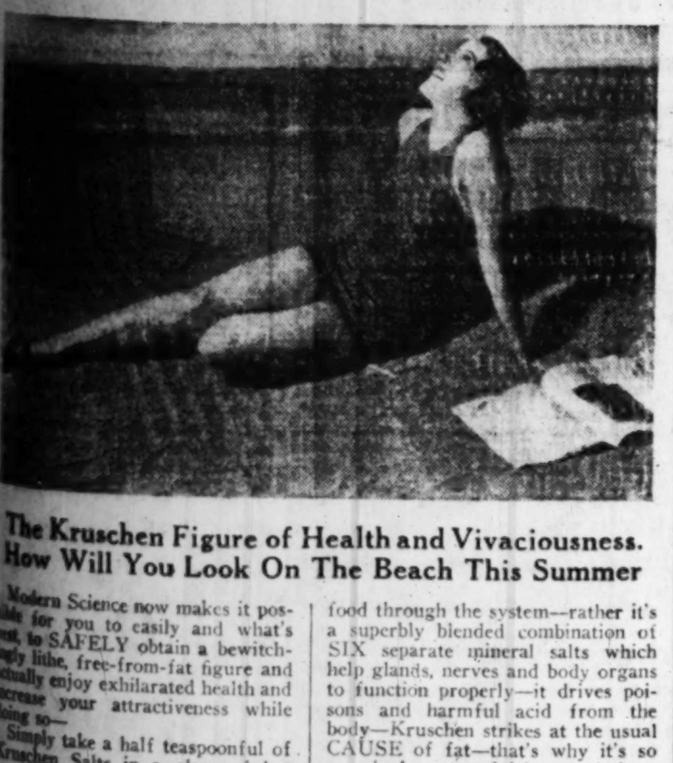
Stage Stars for Vaudeville

The RKO Palace vaudeville programs have been devoting themselves to "in person" headliners from Hollywood, but the stage isn't going to be neglected. Harriet Hoctor, as fine a dancer as the American stage knows today, will arrive Aug. 8. She will bring a dancing troupe, and will probably repeat the "hunt" ballet that was the highlight of Ed Wynn's "Simple Simon" last winter. Edward G. Robinson will follow on Aug. 15. He has been a dependable stage actor for years, suddenly skyrocketing to fame with his cinema gangster impersonations.

After that Basil Rathbone and Catherine Dale Owen will co-star in a brief version of "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." Louise Groody, star singing girl of musical comedy, will follow.

Loses 16 Pounds of Fat---Eats As Usual

Fat Folks—Here's More Proof—One Bottle of Kruschen Salts and Sixteen Pounds Gone—Eats As Usual—Sleeps Better—Costs 85 Cents



The Kruschen Figure of Health and Vivaciousness. How Will You Look On The Beach This Summer

Modern Science now makes it possible for you to easily and what's best, to SAFELY obtain a bewitchingly lithe, free-from-fat figure and actually enjoy exhilarated health and increase your attractiveness while doing so—

Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—you can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, fatty meats and pastries.

Mrs. Ethel Smith of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 lbs. with my first bottle of Kruschen. I feel so good in many ways. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days but now since I am taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lose fat, too. I have told 2 of my friends about Kruschen and they find it as I do."

Unlike other salts, Kruschen doesn't aim to reduce by rushing food through the system—rather it's a superbly blended combination of SIX separate mineral salts which help glands, nerves and body organs to function properly—it drives poisons and harmful acid from the body—Kruschen strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—that's why it's so amazingly successful in cases where everything else has failed!

And just stop to consider how inexpensive Kruschen is—an 85c bottle lasts 4 weeks and offers the same marvelous reducing and health-giving properties which hitherto wealthy people paid thousands of dollars to go to the famous mineral Spas of Europe to obtain. All druggists the world over sell Kruschen and will give your money back if you don't obtain the results you're after.

Revival of Last Season Cinema Hits Welcomed

Old Western Thrillers May Be Next.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The system of "bringing back the big ones," being tried out at the Rialto theater in Times square with considerable success at 25 cents a head, opens a grab box full of possibilities in the picture show world. Over at the Rialto the seats are filled from 11 a. m. until midnight and not all of the audience is composed of bargain hunters.

There are a lot of pictures these days and a lot of people do not get around to more than one feature a week. Consequently when the hits of last season show up at a theater with first run conveniences and third run prices the folks who missed the features when they were first shown are going to drop in.

Garbo, Dietrich, Bancroft, Gary Cooper, and a host of other stars are playing at the Rialto these hot summer days and nights. It is cool inside the theater and some of the old pictures are better than the new ones. The shows are not as long drawn out as at the theaters where the up-to-the-minute films are being shown and, anyhow, there is considerable difference between 25 cents and 65 cents.

Some of Better Westerns.

Now that the movie public has shown its love for last season hits, at least in this town, why not go back into the past and dig up some of the better westerns—epics of those days when men were men and women were chased by the Indians—and show them in a refrigerated playhouse.

The movies are getting softer and softer these days. Even the run of the blood and thunder underworld films are namby pamby tidbits. True, the occasional "Public Enemy" or "Little Caesar" comes along to provide the exception that proves the rule, but for the most part the heroes have lacked the red-blooded vitality of the horse and saddle era of romance.

I believe there are a good many thousand persons throughout our land who would like to forget there are such places as Chicago, New York, Paris, and London. In fact, a lot of those people who would like to forget live in those cities, and yet the talkie makers keep shoving life in the big cities down their throats. Let's have more horses and mustaches and movie heroes who take mustard on their breakfast food instead of sugar.

Roxy's theater went in for something resembling a western picture recently, and it was a big success. It was called "The Holy Terror," and its hero was an up-to-date hombre. He rode horses—at polo—and took to the air on occasions in an airplane. Of course, the hero did not stack up with the heroes of the Bill Hart era, even though he did leap a death-dealing gulch near the Great Divide. The point is the audience liked it and no doubt would like most of the older westerns whether they were made to talk or permitted to remain grim and silent.

Foreign Films Showing.

New York is filled with foreign films this week, but first we will look in on a Hollywood product at the Capitol. "Son of India" with Ramon Novarro is a pleasant enough romance. Taken from an old novel by F. Marion Crawford it tells the romance of an American girl and a young Indian prince. At the end the rich young Indian gives the girl up and harkens to the words of wisdom offered by a beggar prophet. It will do for the summer days.

"Sunny Side Up," with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, is the offering at Roxy's. "The Magnificent Lie," featuring Ruth Chatterton, is the feature at Paramount. "Sunny Side Up," of course, is a revival and a good one. To keep up the past history idea the stage presentation at Roxy's is called "Fifty Million Years Ago," and it is a spectacular affair, the headliner being a dinosaur.

"The Magnificent Lie" was well spoken of by the critics, but this observer has yet to see it. "Night Nurse" is still "telling all" at Warner's Strand.

WHILING AWAY THE SUMMER IN SOCIETY

Gould Affairs Again Figure in Limelight

Rumor of Rift Between Wainwrights.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The unhappy Goulds! Once upon a time their name was one to be reckoned with in society, but not since the passing of the late Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould and the [illegible] of Georgian court has the family done other than slowly fade from the social stage.

The late Lady Decies' marriage to an elderly British baron many years ago was practically the last great moment of the family founded by the wily and frenzied Jay Gould. From then on the Goulds seemed to find nothing but misfortune.

Now there seems to be no doubt that the Carroll Livingston Wainwrights are definitely sundered. The former Edith Gould and her blond husband, who is an artist of the Hey[illegible] Brown school, are frankly on the outs, and gossip has it that Edith will divorce the son of the late Stuyvesant Wainwright and marry an older and wealthier man. Be that as it may, the Wainwrights have often been on the outs.

One of the inheritances of the Gould girls is that of embonpoint. They are in a constant fight against increasing weight, and Edith is no exception to the rule. Her sister Gloria, who after divorcing Hank Bishop married a man outside the realm of society, is likewise given to taking on poundage.

Friends of the Wainwrights are trying hard to bring them together again, but the colonists of the Hamptons are of the opinion that nothing can be done.

Plan Debuts, Weddings.

Plans are being made for autumn and winter débuts and winter marriages as well. A December wedding of interest to Boston will be that of Cornelia Curtis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Kingsbury Curtis, to Laurence V. Lombard.

Cornelia made her début at the Ritz some winters ago in company with Lucy Leffingwell, who was her classmate at Vassar. The Curtis ancestral home, the Maples, at Watertown, Conn., is still standing. It was bought by her great-grandfather, the late Judge Holbrook Curtis, in 1814, and has been carefully preserved as an example of late colonial architecture. The Herbert Pelham Curtises of Boston are kin of the family. Mr. Lombard is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel I. Lombard of Winchester, Mass.

Beattys May Be Hunting Guests of Former King

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Lady Beatty, daughter of the late Marshall Field, is a frequent visitor to France, and may be drawn into even more activities in the French hunting set if ex-King Alfonso of Spain acquires the château which he recently has been considering near Chantilly. When galloping with the Melton Mowbray fox hunting crowd this coming autumn and winter King Alfonso, it is said, will make his headquarters at Brooksby Hall, Leicestershire, the country place of Earl and Countess Beatty. Here the Beattys entertain on a large scale.

The deposed monarch recently had representatives looking over the Rothschild property situated at Gouvieux, about thirty miles north of Paris, near the junction of the Lys forest and Chantilly. Indeed, rumor says that the king is planning to buy not only the Château de Fontaine, near Gouvieux, but another nearby for his suite.

The whole countryside is rich in game. The deer now there are said to be the descendants of a small herd imported by Napoleon from Germany, and originally installed at Château Chambord, in the Touraine district.

Hunt Traditions Rule.

The Château de Fontaine offers a magnificent collection of trees, not to mention the handsome interior of the building which once belonged to the late Baroness James de Rothschild. If Alfonso really acquires this property he will find himself amid famous country seats of ancient French aristocracy where hunting conditions, especially the "chasse à courre," have been transmitted through various generations.

The Château de Champlatreux, nearby, is the residence of the Marquis and Marquise de Noailles, the latter the daughter of the late Duc de Gramont. This pair figure largely in the important Rallye Valliere hunt, which holds its picturesque meets in the forest of Chantilly, and especially in the St. Hubert affair early in November, when, just before the sport begins, the pack is blessed at a quaint church. The Marquis de Noailles is the master of the Rallye Valliere hunt, while the marquise is noted for her skill in training hounds to follow the scent.

Alfonso would thus be in a position to return the Beatty hospitality in a most interesting fashion. Naturally, leaving aside all the ifs. An ancient proverb here says: "All Paris could be put into a bottle—if you could find a bottle big enough."

By the way, Lady Beatty's son, Roland Tree, and his wife, the former Nancy Perkins, will extend and receive much of the hospitality of the Melton Mowbray set at their place,

Sunday Buffet Supper Parties Popular.

HARBOR POINT, Mich., Aug. 1.—[Special.]—Joseph E. Otis of Chicago, trustee in the Harbor Yacht club, is enlisting the efforts of the Chicago cottagers here in the annual regatta, which will be held on the beautiful blue harbor on Aug. 15 and 16. Ten thousand spectators will witness the pageant.

Duncan Meyers of St. Louis will be the starter and Commodore C. R. Garrison of St. Louis will represent the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, in order to make any records official.

Fifty boats will enter, including those from Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and other cities.

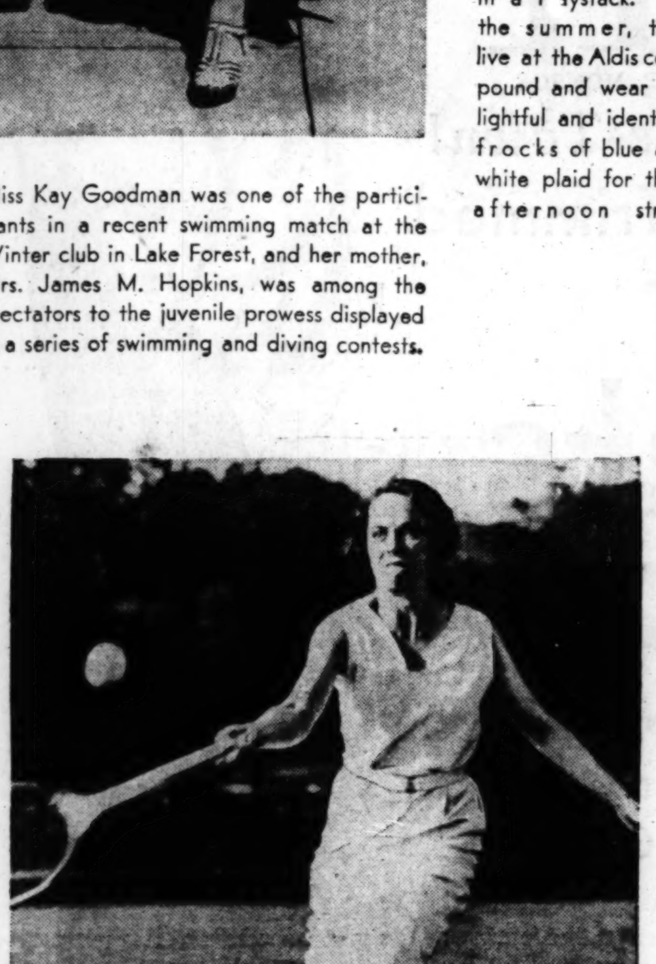
Ruth and Peggy Aldis (or is it, left to right, Peggy and Ruth?) investigate with suitably skeptical gravity the cameraman's suggestion that there are fish in the deeps of the Lake Forest Winter club's swimming pool. Ruth and Peggy are the three year old twins of Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, and are grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis and James Keeley. Their mother, Dorothy Keeley Aldis, is the author of several volumes of children's verse, short stories, and a recent detective novel, "Murder in a Haystack." In the summer, they live at the Aldis compound and wear delightful and identical frocks of blue and white plaid for their afternoon stroll.

Miss Kay Goodman was one of the participants in a recent swimming match at the Winter club in Lake Forest, and her mother, Mrs. James M. Hopkins, was among the spectators to the juvenile prowess displayed at a series of swimming and diving contests.



Miss Mary Elizabeth Johnston and her fiance, Conway Howard Olmsted of New York City, are pictured during a fast and strenuous tennis game on the Onwentsia courts. Their marriage is to take place on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 12, at the Church of the Holy Spirit in Lake Forest, with a reception following at the residence of Miss Johnston's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. DeForest Hulburd.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

(Picture in rotogravure section.)

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, January 5, 1878.

DEAR JULIA:

Here we are, in a new year again! Our Christmas season was quiet, of course, and we missed our little girl, but we were glad to think of her and of you as in England, where Christmas seems so much at home. We read Dickens' "Christmas Carol" on Christmas eve, and fancied you in the atmosphere of British good cheer. Dickens makes so much of food, particularly in his holiday stories, one's mouth waters at his descriptions of the good things they have to eat. We are looking forward to hearing about your Christmas soon, perhaps by the end of this week.

Last night Will attended the annual banquet of the graduates of Yale college living in Chicago. It was held at the Palmer House, with sixty-five men present. Judge Henry Booth was president this year and many well known citizens, Yale alumni, were there. Prof. F. W. Fisk, a Congregational divine; the Rev. S. F. H. Savage, W. F. Poole, A. T. Galt, Edward G. Mason, Alfred Mason, H. B. Mason, A. A. Sprague, J. H. Andrews, James Norton, F. R. Butler, Thomas Grover, Leslie Carter, D. B. Lyman, Dr. James Nevins Hyde, Washington Hesing, J. V. Farwell Jr., Le Grand Smith, Carter Harrison, Perry Trumbull, H. V. Freeman and F. S. Winston—all well known Chicagoans, were on the list of the banqueters. John Farwell is still in college. I suppose the Yale undergraduates at home for the holidays were invited.

Will was invited to respond to the toast: "Our Alma Mater," and, as he rehearsed to me before he left for the party the little talk he was to give, I thought it sounded quite interesting. He said that, when he came out here, twenty-two years ago, he supposed he was leaving his college associations behind him, but on arriving here he found Yale's sons had preceded him in this part of the world, and that what was known as the "Yale band" had established colleges out here in the Mississippi valley. Beloit, Wis., and Jacksonville, Ill., had been the scenes of endeavor for the sons of Old Eli, and he remembered it was a Yale man, Dr. Theron Baldwin, who was the first principal of Monticello seminary for girls. Dr. Baldwin he told them, had planned the early curriculum of Monticello, modeling it after that of Yale. [Will said there was quite a burst of applause at this.]

Will spoke of the progress made by Yale, its many new buildings and its baseball and boat clubs, which would hardly have been tolerated in his [Will's] day. The physical side of the college student seems now to be emphasized more than it was 25 years ago. At the conclusion of Will's speech, the gentlemen rose and sang "Alma Mater" and Will has been singing it about the house all day.

"Alma Mater! Alma Mater! Heaven's blessing attend thee!
While we live, we will cherish, protect, and defend thee!
Thy sons, dear old Yale, sing in loud, thrilling chorus,
While we think of thy great men who've been here before us."

O. F. Aldis responded eloquently, Will said, to the toast: "Literature in Yale." I'm glad the Yale men have such a flourishing organization.

Yesterday, armed with the Bon Ton directory, containing names of many prominent ladies of the city and their receiving days, I set forth to make some calls. I went in to see a few north side neighbors, one of these being Mrs. W. F. McLaughlin of Rush street. Another was Mrs. William G. McCormick, a bride of whom I am very fond. She was a Baltimore girl, named Nellie Brooks before her marriage. Gay and witty in conversation, she is yet much devoted to her church and has a fine influence on the young married set. On the south side, I called on Mrs. John A. Logan, on Calumet avenue, and Mrs. Edson Keith and Mrs. P. D. Armour on Prairie avenue.

The Armours have recently come here from Milwaukee, but already Mr. Armour is recognized as our foremost packer. I was glad to find he had come home early from his office, on the afternoon of my call, as I had not met him before. He is a remarkably magnetic person, genial in his manner, but impressing you as having much reserve force. He is a York state man, born on a farm in 1832. He went to California, when gold was discovered there [he told me today] but discovered that the gold wasn't all in the ground, and that he had a better chance to attract it to his own pockets by building sluices for the prospectors. He prospered in this undertaking, and returned east with several thousand dollars in his possession, ready to begin business.

He started the real business of his life in Milwaukee, with Mr. Plankinton, but moved to Chicago two years ago and has "made things hum," to use Will's phrase, ever since. He is eliminating waste in the packing business, I am told, so that it pays much better than it did. Will says he will be the richest man in Chicago before he dies.

Mrs. Armour is a sweet woman. She was Miss Belle Ogden of Cincinnati. They have two sons, Ogden, and Philip D. Jr.

A letter from a strong minded friend who is spending the winter in Washington, D. C., tells of meeting Dr. Mary Walker on the street. My friend writes: "She was wearing cunning little boots and most bewitching pants; a greatcoat reaching nearly to her knees, and a big cape, trimmed with fur. She carried a gold-headed cane in one hand and a parasol in the other. Her hat was tall and shiny and her hair was pinned up in puffs around her head. She is a slim, small woman, with eyes and hair as black as ink, fastidiously neat and always dressed in rich material. She has the prettiest walk of any woman in Washington, and the prettiest foot, as well. She steps high and brings those little boot-heels down with a manly thump.

"Dr. Walker's eccentricity in dress causes a good deal of comment, of course. Three women immediately behind Dr. Walker attracted my eye by their costumes, so strikingly in contrast with 'Wild Mary's' pants and paletot. The first of these three society ladies crossing the street grabbed for the lower ruffle of her skirt and pulled her train away above her knees, displaying considerable shoe, stocking and drapery not intended for the public eye. The curbstone reached, she dropped the mass of flounces, fringes, beads and buttons onto the muddy pavement, gave a vigorous backward kick, to spread out the fantail, and sailed on in conscious virtue, casting a withering glance at Dr. Mary Walker."

I know trains aren't sanitary, and trousers are, but I haven't the courage to face the world in bifurcated garments. Do write me all about the

Spanish Nobles Leave Homeland for Safer Places

Venice Is Popular Haven for Refugees.

By Cousin Eve.

NAPLES, Italy.—[Special.]—We were sitting on the tender at Gibraltar. There was a strong breeze from the sea and every kind of vendor was trying to sell the passengers something for a dollar before the big ship in the channel swallowed us up again. Every well known American cigaret was selling at a dollar for the carton. And stringy shawls, and figs, and strawberries.

The flower man was a persistent devil. An obstinate Spaniard, he had an immense basket of blue hydrangeas, pink carnations, and white African daisies as big as my hand, at Easter prices.

Nearly everybody was considering the fresh Gibraltar soles that had been taken aboard, and hoping we would have them for luncheon, when suddenly a horse drawn vehicle with flapping linen curtains and fringes flourished up to the gangway. Out stepped a very tall man and a rather small, chic woman. They had for luggage two suitcases and two dressing bags, on which they sat—rather plain luggage.

The man was dark and deeply tanned. His clothes were of an indefinite gray plaid, smartly cut, and at the waist [for he had a waist] a broad black sash such as Spaniards wear, over a soft linen shirt. His bearing was quite gorgeous, I thought.

The lady, who looked rather English than Spanish, had on a summery print, and the best pearls I have seen in some weeks. They were refugees, off for Venice, which from time immemorial has been a shelter for aristocrats in exile. The Spanish don is not traveling under his own name.

Also escaping on the Vulcania are a group of courtiers and members of the former Spanish government. Dr. Albuquerque, Marchese de Larios, Count and Countess de Guadalhore, and Viscount and Viscountess de Santa Clara. All of these are headed for Cannes.

There is no luxury tax at Gibraltar, so women from the ship are buying all the expensive scents for half price, and cartons of the cheap cigarets, as well as those which sell for $2.50 a hundred on the rock. In New York they are often three times as much.

But of what avail to carry cartons of cigarets to Italy? The Italian customs put up with no nonsense about cigarets or playing cards. It is a very tender subject. So avaunt bargains!

At Gibraltar is building a very good looking new hotel near the Alameda called the Rock. It looks as if it might be done in a year or so, and a nice place to stop for a night. We are off the African coast in a mild haze, the water a blue gray. Two miles away is a chain of scrubby mountains, homeland of many monkeys. In Algiers is a favorite drive to a not distant "Valley of the Monkeys," where the strange creatures are festooned in the trees. But I am not for this drive.

At Anchor in Algiers.

Algiers is splashed for miles over the hills and along the sea. The first effect is of a creamy sepia, many terraced city, with here and there a park of clipped plane trees and dusty palms, and the snow white domes of mosques. The great Italian ship backs in the French harbor, painted, polished, flags flying, groups of officers in snowy uniform on every deck, and the band playing gayly, happily, the most entrancing, provocative airs, which float merrily out.

In the jetty beside us is a huge Dutch liner just moving for the far east, and anchored, an American yacht. The yawl from this circles about us, full of smart looking compatriots who have come to pluck the Michael Van Burens off the ship. But not so fast. First must come up the floating dock. This is a long chain of broad, heavy rafts, soon snuggling to the ship's side, and in another minute covered with Arab shops. Blue motorboats have crept up unawares, laden with Morocco leather, rugs and all the other junk of the orient.

Hardly are the gangways set when the shopping is on, madly, furiously. Many people are leaving the ship here, some for Tunis and the drive east along the African coast; others to visit, for there is a large and amusing foreign colony. Others are going on a tour of the city, on a hunt for adventure, life. Algiers, in the geography of my mind, has always had a fifty-fifty background of calorie and flea. But here came the upset of tradition; after a very cool afternoon inspecting the mosques and the Kasbah and the heights of Mustapha Supérieur whereon dwell the rich and great of Algiers, I returned to the ship without one single flea. Plus, however, armfuls of highly colored Levantine leather, green, purple, red, soft and supple, and minus but a few francs. The adolescent salesman on our floating pier might have taken at the end of our bargaining kind words alone, had it not been for portentous papa Arab looming thereabouts.

Through the Slums.

A large party from the ship was guided afoot through the slums of Algiers. It was a sort of fête and everybody was out quarreling and howling. Such strongly hooked noses, fierce eyes, wild gestures, and wicked, unforgettable faces! Strong meat for les Americains! Every color of Arab Moslem, Mahomedan, fez, turban and burnous, including blacks from the Soudan and the fighting men from Senegal! It was a matter of stepping down the stairs that are narrow

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MRS. REGINALD BUELL MARTIN.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM F. NEILSON of Evanston announce the marriage of their daughter, Jane Adelaide, to Reginald Buell Martin on Saturday, July 11, at the First Methodist church in Waukegan, Ill. The Rev. Gilbert Stansell performed the ceremony. Mrs. Martin was graduated from the Evanston High school, and attended the Dearborn-Morgan School for Girls at West Orange, N. J. Mr. Martin is an announcer on the staff of W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune radio station. Mr. and Mrs. Martin are residing at the Coronada apartments.

MRS. HARRY GARFIELD BETHUNE II.
[Rayhuff-Richter Photo.]

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the marriage of Miss Beatrice Grave La Velle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. La Velle of Oak Park, to Harry Garfield Bethune II., also of Oak Park. The former Miss La Velle attended the University of Illinois. Mr. Bethune studied at the University of Chicago.

Scowls and black looks everywhere. Americans are not so popular on French territory, coming off a magnificent Italian boat. In the quarter where the women sit silent at their doors with long stained and polished finger nails and dreary eyes charged with hohl, there was a stampede among the ship's ladies. Several in the long défilé insisted on backing up the stairs and going home to the Vulcania. But once having stepped on the downward path, they had to follow it to its logical ending.

The guides nearly went mad at the idea of any change in the program—it was dangerous; it was fou: Ces Americains! What a dull time these Arab women have of it! All over the streets they waddle, draped in yards of sail cloth, breathing hot air behind the veil. No coquetry, no bargain hunting, no dieting, no face lifting, no lipstick!

Dinner and Dancing.

There was a grand gala dinner at the Casino Municipal that night, at 100 francs a passenger, for such as love gala dinners and muscle dancing. Many of the local gentry attended, and the Italian officers. Some of the travelers, seeing foreign parts for the first time, did not care greatly for muscle dancing. But the tom-toms on the ship had to beat violently on the sultry night air to call in the absent. The vessel was due to sail at midnight. As eleven hundred people were ashore, it was no small job to shepherd them. On the last trip out from Naples seventy were left behind when the ship sailed. And when the Vulcania began to move with a last roar from her one vast funnel, the dock was floating away and the gangways lifting, the last persons aboard were George Ryerson of Chicago and two Vassar girls.

No, George was not at the gala dinner. Worse than that. George, just being graduated from Yale with honors, was looking for adventure. At six o'clock a great unconquerable desire to behold the desert of Sahara once grew in his breast. So, inviting the two Vassar maidens, he seized top seats on a dashing red bus to the desert town of Blida, one and a half hours distant. Seated with peanut eating, gum chewing Arabs, they had a very blissful time taking everything in.

On the Edge of the Desert.

Arrived at the desert, George Ryerson, being a prudent soul, espied ahead on the desert's verge a large massmeeting of many hundreds of Arabs. Turbaned and sheeted, gesticulating and shouting, they looked more alarming than not, so George turned about and hustled his fair Vassar friends in an opposite direction. Soon they found a restaurant with a fine view of the desert and enjoyed a very good dinner, while the moon was doing its nightly stuff over the great dry spot.

MRS. JOSEPH L. STRAUSS JR.
[Dubois Photo.]

Mrs. Joseph L. Strauss Jr. is the former Miss Leanore Marion Purvin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max A. Purvin of 5532 Everett avenue. Her marriage took place the latter part of June at the Blackstone hotel.

At 10 o'clock the party was still at Blida, loving it, and the Vulcania sailing at midnight. Pretty soon it was train time, and then came the crux of the expedition. Among them all they had not enough money to buy three third class tickets. What to do—leave one of the party to her or his fate; or all be left together? Finally George found an errant 10 cent piece in his clothes. He persuaded the station agent that it was a very important piece of American money, small but powerful, and the man finally said, "Thou shalt pass."

So when the Vulcania had given her final hoarse toot, the desert party climbed on board, feeling that life is full of charm, after all. And so it was, as we pulled out into a starless night of black velvet sea and sky. Not a star, not a flicker on the Mediterranean! But on the shore, Algiers shone and sparkled, semi-circular, like a vast tiara of glittering diamonds. Even so, the French are welcome to Algiers.

Bargain Rentals.

They have one progressive thing there: very fine apartment buildings for French people of large family and small means. Blocks of white stucco apartments, each with three rooms a kitchen and veranda at $5.00 monthly rental. The same thing is even better done in Vienna for $1.00 per month, and I hear that Rome has the loveliest of all, replacing old slum sites. Julius Rosenwald has been pushing the idea in Chicago, so eventually we shall probably have in our remote quarters what Algiers has.

We skirted the south coast of Sardinia, mountainous and dreary in a rainy mist. But what a foil to the bay of Naples next morning early. Rising out of a pale blue, gleaming sea, those oddly shaped volcanic islands, on the left Ischia, on the right Capri. We salute Capri and all the poets, artists and writers dreaming away their days. Also, Dr. Axel Munthe for his strange book "San Michele," written under his own fig and vine on Capri.

MRS. ARTHUR P. WINNER.
[Gibson Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Oppenheim announce the marriage of their daughter, Ethel, to Arthur Paul Winner, son of Mrs. R. Winner.

We gaze soulfully at the steep cliff where Tiberius Caesar, who also dreamed on Capri, used to bet with wastrels on the bounce of slaves as they fell over. We saw the nearing shores, on the left beyond Ischia, the fashionable Posilippo with its pink, apricot and creamy villas and palaces—and over beyond where Virgil is buried, among waving palms, and flat topped Neapolitan pines.

On we go, and at a sudden turn the whole incomparable, marvelous panorama of Naples. And Vesuvius, mysteriously casting off a long mantle of fogs and vapers, standing forth, smoking a light morning cigaret. Over all the superb city of Naples with its rosy palaces, its national glories, the old ivory of its buildings circling the sea, its towering heights crowned with villas and georgeous ruins, over all a dazzling warmth, color.

A Famous Villa.

I looked up where stands Villa Lucia, the country house in which Emma, Lady Hamilton, lived and kept an eye on Horatio, Lord Nelson, as he trod the decks in the harbor below. On the right a dark brown immensity, the home Capodemonte, of the Duke of Aosta, who had died a few hours before.

Bands played, we docked. The Vulcania was rushed by happy visitors. The imperative duties of debarkation lay before us, passports, customs. Suddenly, a delegation of charming men appeared before me. White clad, they bowed, they smiled, they named themselves; their numerous attendants bowed and smiled. I do love Italians. And there were some Fascisti, a captain of the militia of the port and his aide, handsome and bland, supervising. Certain departments of the Italian government, foreign and interior, were welcoming us to Italy.

I adored it. It was grand. Of course, it was all the work of some very charming friends, Commander Giuseppe Castruccio, consul general from Italy in Chicago, one of Italy's bravest flying men, and member of an old and honored family of Genoa.

And once ashore, telephones, flowers, messages, and friends of Mme. Castruccio awaited us. Princess de Candriano, lady in waiting to the queen of Italy, absent from her Naples palazzo in summer, caused gallant and handsome men with motor cars to call. All the beauty spots of Naples must be seen, the yacht clubs, the improvements in the town.

No noise, no confusion in Naples that Sunday, possibly due to the duke's death. Thousands of flags were at half staff with black streamers, and all the house doors placarded with black and white posters, mourning the passing of Emanuele Fidalberto of Savoia, Duke of Aosta. He had lived in Naples since Crown Prince Humbert married and elected to live in Turin as Prince of Piedmont. There is a very brilliant society in Naples, small and elegant, and the Aostas headed it. The duchess was Helen of Orleans and is most popular with Italians.

The Octopus Again.

The first thing I did in Naples was to visit the Aquarium in its garden of palms and ilexes. Across the broad street is the blue sea. It cost me 50 cents this time to see my old friend, the octopus. The Naples aquarium, to which the former emperor of Germany made large annual gifts, is about a fifth of the size of the Shedd aquarium in Chicago. It is hard to compare them. The Naples exhibit is in a rather damp cave in a building of yellow tufa.

The Shedd building is of marble and cost millions. But the Naples fish are infinitely more beautifully displayed. Their large cubicles are made of rough rocks, lighted from above and filled with sea anemones, highly colored mosses, corals, and one setting is like a bed of orange roses. The octopus was having a nap in a dark corner and never came out, just winked a weary eye at me.

The minute I saw Naples it was plain great changes had taken place in five years. The same thing has been doing that was done in Rome. Great historical buildings, hemmed in by tenements, have been cleared. The 700 year old Castle Aragon, where Boccaccio stayed, stands grandly out near the royal palace, with its five great round towers and carved gates. It has been presented by the Italian government to the city as a municipal gathering place. Last month it was completed, inaugurated, and 4,000 guests came to a reception and concert given by the Duke and Duchess of Bovino, lord mayor and lady mayoress.

Up Hills in Elevators.

On the heights, new quarters have grown, broad streets with hair pin turns, splendid villas, palaces. To these various heights run ten new public elevators. The trip takes from five to ten minutes and costs 2 cents.

Exactly how I came to be motoring with Count de la Ville was odd, but nice. He is a charming man who thought I was interested in housing schemes for the poor. And so I am, now that I have seen the seven Neapolitan units. The first we visited was new and named for the prince of Piedmont. There were eight splendid stone buildings. Six storied, they loomed in what had been the worst and most unruly portion of the town.

Built round courtyards with swaying palms, trees planted all round, it was a lovely place. The apartments are of three rooms with bath, kitchenette, electric heater. If they had been built in Chicago, I am sure all the millionaires would be moving in. Rent is $2.50 a month per room, and at the end of twenty-five years, the flat belongs to the tenant.

Families who have many children and are really of the working class are eligible. Every unit has its own fresh, beautifully clean school and also, its very own church. And another good thing, only one janitor for every four buildings!

The Mussolini government subsidizes this housing scheme, which, with certain borrowings at the bank, makes the buildings feasible. I saw all seven units. Each is different in style. In all 30,000 people are living comfortably in this way, and slums are disappearing from Naples. So are donkeys. I forgot to say that prizes are given for the best window boxes and balconies, and for the cleanest apartment.

A New Speedway.

There was another charming man on this expedition who thought I was interested in fast motoring, and so I was after we had turned into the new speedway or Alta Strada, which stretches for thirty miles between Naples and Pompeii, like a broad, black ribbon. Bordered with gay flowers, and wide enough for two cars, it was smooth as a ballroom floor. We passed a tollgate and being very great people paid no toll, but were greeted by the Roman salute and slipped on—80 kilometers, 90, 100, and not going too madly, at that. The grape vines en route, the occasional pink villinos, the arched bridges over the track, the dark fig trees did not blur.

Finally, we reached a grove of umbrella pines, a white tea house, new and spick—the sort of place one cares and dares to eat in—and we stopped. Through the pines glowed the bay of Sorrento, dark as sapphire; behind us loomed Vesuvius. This Alta Strada is a forerunner of the great motor road that Mussolini proposes to have built from the north of Italy to the south.

Little Vesuvius.

I did not pay a call on Vesuvius, in spite of the new motor road that winds to the top. But I did go, one day, to see an understudy of the great volcano, called Little Vesuvius, which has not been active since the 11th century. At a place called Pozzuoli, it was electrifying to hear that Nero went there for his rheumatism, and Cicero for whatever was the matter, and that lovely Lucrezia Bori goes annually to a little cure, Ognana, nearby.

Walking in this dry crater, which reverberated under our feet, a lighted cigaret would send up clouds of steam from every part of the big, sulphurous basin. In the center a great pool of black mud bubbled and gurgled. The sun dropped suddenly, as we were coming away, and the myrtles sent out a pungent odor, which mingled with the pines.

One takes tea at half after seven at Naples in the summer, and dinner at nine, perhaps, or ten. Then a movie, or the theater, and an out of door supper. At the Castle Egg, in the harbor, Neapolitan songs, dancing, the moon and the sea and cool breezes until dawn.

Mrs. W. F. McLaughlin was mother of Frederic McLaughlin, and Miss Mary A. McLaughlin, and the late George D. McLaughlin of Lake Forest.

Mrs. William G. McCormick was mother of Chauncey B. McCormick of Chicago. She died a number of years ago. William G. McCormick is spending the summer abroad, and his children have gone abroad to celebrate his eightieth birthday with him.

Dr. Mary Walker was a forerunner of the pajama wearers of today. "Wild Mary's pants" had wide publicity in the newspapers of the day, but she was merely a voice crying in the wilderness then. Most women preferred to drag their trains in the mud.

"A Gary [Ind.] Reader" sends us an adage frequently used by her Virginia grandmother:

"Wide will wear, where narrow will tear." [Don't skimp on material.]

Miss Emma Lee Walton of Chicago offers: "She always had one eye on the pot and the other up the chimney." [Said of a wool gathering person.] And "That is the cap-sheaf." [The finishing touch, as the best sheaf was on top.]

Mrs. C. Samsoe, Kenosha, Wis., sends a Danish proverb: "That which cures a blacksmith may be the death of a tailor."

Mrs. M. R. Chambers of Chicago sends the words of a song her father used to sing in the days before railroads were common. This song comes from Pennsylvania.

WAITING IN THE DEPOT.

I.

"Every class of people in this mighty nation,
Fully represented in the railroad station.
Restless, whistling Yankee, with impatient tread,
Wishes that the cars would just go ahead.

Chorus.

Thinking every moment [Listen!]
That the cars will go [Listen!]
Worrying out an hour
In the small depot.

II.

Rowdy at the glass, with a fierce moustache,
Obviously thinks that he cuts a dash.
Suddenly is heard an unearthly scream—
'Tis the engineer, letting off the steam.

III.

Every one impatient, everybody grumbling;
Train at last comes in, with tremendous rumbling;
Like a band of furies from the realms below,
Wildly rush the inmates of the small depot.

IV.

Elbowed, jammed, and crowded, we may thank our stars,
If we find a seat in the railroad cars;
Chuckling with delight; with congratulation,
That we have escaped from the railroad station."

Dinner hosts included Mrs. Walter James, Mr. and Mrs. R. Livingston Beeckman, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. William Hayward, and Mr. and Mrs. R. Beverley Corbin.

Arrangements have been made for the wedding of Hope Bennett, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Bennett of Wideacre, and Walter F. Wyeth Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Wyeth of Boston. The ceremony will take place on Aug. 22 in Trinity church with the reception to follow at Wideacre.

Mr. and Mrs. John Pell were among the visitors here recently. Also here were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strawbridge, Hamilton Fish Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann, Mrs. Beverley Pope, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Colby.

Steal Prehistoric Teeth.

HARBIN.—(AP)—When the well preserved skull of a huge prehistoric beast was unearthed near here, Chinese peasants stole the teeth, believing the animal was a dragon. They refused to sell them at any price, as powdered dragon's teeth are held by Chinese to be an infallible cureall.

New York is used to them and the exnobles of the czarist régime pursue the tenor of their ways unnoticed. Some are wealthy, some not; some fortunate and others far from it. The Grand Duchess Marie has done well, not alone with her position at a famous dress shop, but also as an author.

Princess Xenia, the former Mrs. William B. Leeds, is well off and moves serenely in society. She was present at the recent marriage in St. Nicholas chapel, Whitestone, L. I., of Prince Vasili Alexandrovitch Romanoff and Princess Natalie Galitzine, daughter of the Alexander Galitzines of California.

Prince Vasili is a nephew of the late czar and a son of the Grand Duke Alexander and the Grand Duchess Xenia, sister of the czar.

Popular Prince George.

Incidentally, one of the most popular of the Russians in town, who is happy-go-lucky despite the fact that he is always hard up, is Prince George of Russia.

A tall, lanky young man, with an Oxford accent mixed with a Russian one, this cousin of King George of England is now a floorwalker in a Fifth avenue shop. When I first knew him he was with a bank. That didn't work at all, but he used to come from a day's work as messenger and get into full kit to dine on Fifth or Park avenue. He still is much in demand, and the fact that his cheerful grin is bestowed on humble patrons of the department store does not make him less valued as an honored and amusing dinner guest. More power to "little" George.

It was to him that another Oxford man said two winters ago, "George, for a prince you're a jolly good fellow."

Easterners Noted at Southampton Beach Club Fetes

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I.—[Special.]—Visiting Mr. and Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson of the colony, were Livingston Biddle and Samuel Walsh of Philadelphia.

Thomas B. Davis Jr. arrived on the Ormaldo to join his parents for the season. William Thaw IV. is with his parents at Sans Souci. Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Tyng have lent their studio to Mrs. William C. Gulliver for a piano recital by Frank Sheridan on Aug. 14.

Bishop Stires was a recent visitor here.

Among those noted at recent Beach club parties were Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rogers Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Merton Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Boardman, Mrs. George Terry, Mrs. Paul Morton, her granddaughters, Charlotte and Jean Potter, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stillman.

New Automatic Writing Gives Hidden Talents

Good and Bad Traits Are Brought to Light.

BALTIMORE.—(AP)—Practically every one has an interest or talent of which he is unaware, in the opinion of Dr. Anita M. Muhl of San Diego, Cal.

Dr. Muhl uses a unique method—"automatic writing"—to bring the hidden talents to the surface.

An expert in the field of psychotherapy, Dr. Muhl was brought to the Phipps Psychiatric institute of Johns Hopkins hospital to demonstrate her methods with the patients there.

* *

Attention Is Diverted.

The automatic writing system works something like this:

One's arm is placed in a comfortable position in a device arranged for the purpose, and a pencil placed loosely in the fingers. The attention is diverted by reading a detective story or some other bit of fiction aloud.

While this goes on the pencil moves, its direction dictated by the unconscious mind.

The result may occasionally be a drawing, a fragment of a fairy tale, or a poem, the revelation of an unknown talent.

Acquires Information.

In this fashion the psychiatrist acquires information about what goes on in the patient's mind that is inaccessible to ordinary questioning.

Patients by this method, said Dr. Muhl, have disclosed memories from the age of two or three years.

In like manner, of course, undesirable traits come to light, and these the psychiatrist tries to eliminate by diverting the undesirable quality into a constructive channel.

Seeks Creative Outlet.

"Few people," she said, "get into difficulties if they are doing what they like to do. The thing I try to do is to find a creative outlet for the individual, to give him something to do that he is really interested in."

One woman, Dr. Muhl related, revealed 23 distinct personalities.

Much of her work has been with children.

Dr. Muhl is a native of Indianapolis and was educated at the University of Indiana and George Washington university. She was at one time assistant physician at St. Elizabeth's government psychiatric hospital at Washington.

Woman Scientist Seeking New Data in Ancient Graves

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(AP)—Dorothy Popenoe, member of the Society of Woman Geographers, has spent the last two years on an exploring and excavating expedition in Honduras.

In 1929 she directed excavations in an ancient graveyard lying between 15 and 17 feet below the present surface of the land. Fourteen graves were opened.

The bones and articles accompanying them were sent to the Peabody museum of Harvard for study.

She is now engaged in exploring painted pottery sites in the same country.

TRAVEL NOTES IN COLOR

Burnham Show, Current at the Art Institute, Affords a Vivid Glimpse of World Wanderings Enjoyed by Winnetka Family.

By Eleanor Jewett.

AMONG the summer exhibitions current in the Art institute is a group of water color travel notes by Anita Willetts Burnham and her young daughter, Carol Lou. So great was the press of interesting pictures offered by the Chicago Camera club in the international photographic show that these water colors have had to be relegated to the furthest hall, but when you find them, as you will, your hunt is well rewarded.

Mrs. Burnham is a person for whom one can have the deepest respect both as a woman and as an artist. She has five children and the most fascinating of tiny studio homes in Winnetka, a home that essentially is a sublimated log cabin. There never has been too much money but there always has been the courage that makes money, much money, unnecessary. There always have been ambition, hope, romance, and plenty of affection.

Probably a number of people will remember with me how Mrs. Burnham's little boy was kept with bobbed hair several years longer than the average masculine child, because he "posed for mother." Mrs. Burnham used each of her children for models, and has painted in the last years a great many perfectly charming pictures with a child for the central theme. She has a delicate, whimsical, sure touch which makes her work fascinating.

Inspection of the World.

Perhaps three years ago the Burnham's decided they would like to travel. They rented their home and started with the slimmest of purses, but with an abundance of sketching blocks and water colors. They decided on a leisurely inspection of the world. They gave up two years to their journey and missed nothing. Many of us have heard the delightful talk Mrs. Burnham gives on their trip. One episode at the dock in England stands out as typical, typical in a complimentary way of Mrs. Burnham's gorgeous spirit.

In the family was a child of school age [besides a baby of less than a year and an older daughter who was married in Jerusalem] and the admission of this particular school age child to England worried the official greatly. He wanted to know why she was not in school, etc., etc. There was also some talk about money. Did the Burnhams have enough to see England and get away again.

Mrs. Burnham, so the story runs, traveled in the simplest of clothes, perhaps a scarf on her head instead of a hat—any way there was a doubt in the official's mind as to their financial standing. Mrs. Burnham talked pleasantly until just talking seemed of no use and then she turned away, slipped her hand into a hidden recess in her costume and showed the doubting Thomas one thousand perfectly good American dollars. Whereupon all objections to the status of the school child, whom, by the way, Mrs. Burnham had justified in her travels by the remark that: "A child gets a great deal through travel which she can get in no other way; travel is an education in itself; travel is just as important as the ordinary schooling"—were withdrawn and they were allowed to go on up to London.

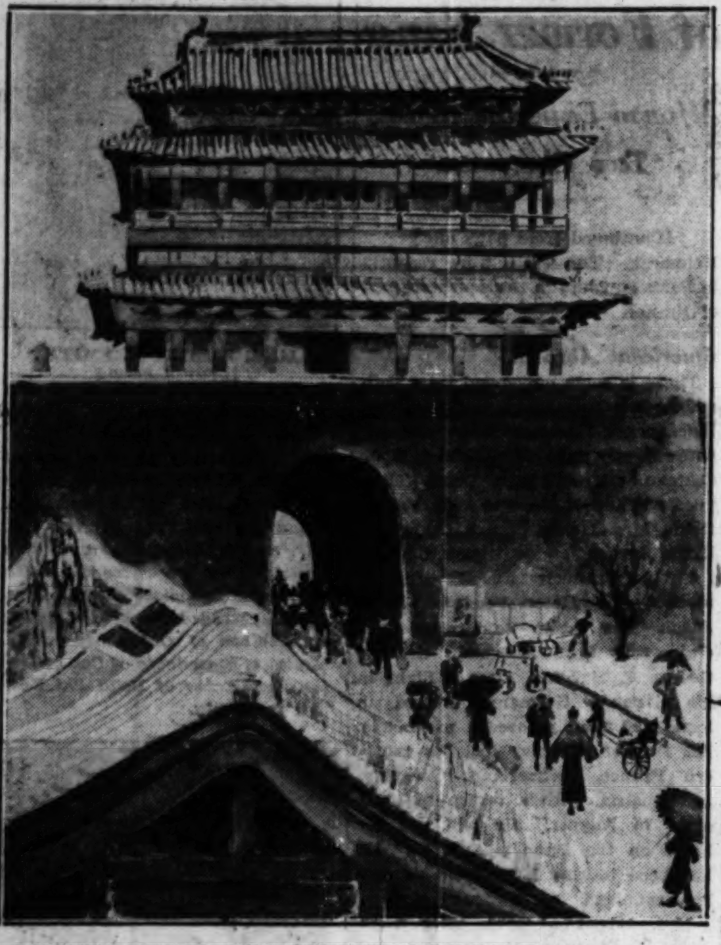
Gained Priceless Memories.

There was a lot of fun about the voyaging. They traveled third class in India and sat up nights in rickety trains in China, but they missed no sight that was important. It was a perfectly glorious adventure, and one that the most of the rest of us will miss because very few have the faith that guides Mrs. Burnham's conduct. They are back home with memories of two years of wandering that are priceless.



"CHINESE," by Carol-Lou Burnham, one of her delightful water color sketches on view in the summer exhibits current in the east wing galleries of the Art institute.

The Art institute exhibit gives just the faintest suggestion of all they did. Mrs. Burnham has several impressionistic sketches of France and China and Carol Lou follows suit. You will like the sparkling water color of the washing clothes under the protection of an enormous white flowering tree, by Anita Willetts Burnham, and the book stalls of Paris and the Luxemburg garden fountain by Carol Lou Burnham.

There is a portrait of a Japanese by Carol Lou which is distinctly good, and her work impresses you as being mature and spontaneous. She apparently is more definite than her mother in her way of handling her subjects. She has the certain attack that youth gives, and whereas in Mrs. Burnham's painting there is invariably a poetic interpretation, a charming loose impressionistic flair, in the younger painter this is still an undiscovered and unrealized territory. She is, indisputably, at this stage a decorative artist, a realist and a painstaking craftsman.

Notes on Art and Artists.

The All-Illinois society of the Fine Arts, in continuing its exhibition of paintings by Illinois artists in the Stevens hotel, has for the summer made several changes among the pictures. You will find an extraordinarily fine portrait by Carl Olsen, who is indeed becoming a portrait painter to reckon with. This portrait is of Dr. ——— of Northwestern university. He is seated at his desk in shirt sleeves with a sheaf of papers before him and a pen in his hand. The detail in the painting is worth observing as well as the fine quality in the flesh and the texture of the various items making up the composition.

Another delicate and charming new painting is the canvas of daisies by Sister Rufinia, and a third is the lovely still life by Bernice Newman. It is yellow roses against the beauty of a large glass plate. Mrs. Newman is the more to be congratulated on the exquisite touch in this arrangement because she is practically an amateur in art. It is, so the story runs, only a little time since she began to paint. Her technique is the more remark-

A portrait of Jacob McGavock Dickinson, ex-secretary of war, by Louis Betts may be seen in the Knoedler gallery. It is, as are all Mr. Betts' portraits, a brilliant likeness and a magnificent canvas.

This afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ross J. Beatty are holding an exhibit of early Indiana crafts and antiques at their home from 3 until 9 o'clock for the benefit of the Hoosier Salon Patrons association. The address is 260 Ravine drive, Highland Park.

Social Workers Equip Gandhi's London Home

Have Sanctuary, Goat's Milk in Readiness.

LONDON.—(AP)—Kingsley Hall settlement, where Gandhi plans to live in September when he comes to the round table conference, reminds one just a little of an American Y. M. C. A.

It lacks a gymnasium and some of the other apparatus, but it has something of that air about it.

Muriel Lester, who will be Gandhi's hostess, founded the settlement in the East London slums 28 years ago, but the modest, modern building now housing it is only a few years old.

Gandhi and his entourage are to live in the big hall on the ground floor. At one end is a pulpit and on three sides are tall windows. The bare floor is oak and polished by use. This hall serves the settlement both as a chapel and concert lecture hall.

Retreat for Silence Day.

Just outside and on the same floor is a tiny room known as the "sanctuary." Here one may go and pray or meditate in quiet. Gandhi may use it if he likes, especially on the weekly "day of silence."

On the floor above is a clubroom, with ping pong and billiard tables. It boasts a cocktail bar, but the cocktails have no alcohol, which should please the Mahatma. The library, too, is on this floor. It is called the "American room" for much of its support comes from Americans.

On the top floor are the cells in which the settlement workers live, one side for women, the other for men. Finally there is the roof from which Gandhi may look over thousands of homes of the poor against a zig-zag background of industrial buildings, including the omnipresent gas works.

Reserve Rock Garden.

In one corner is a rock garden, secluded from the rest of the roof. This will be mostly reserved for Gandhi when he comes.

For the workers the furnishings are Spartan and utilitarian, and Gandhi will like that, Miss Lester believes.

She thinks, too, that they will have no trouble in preparing his food, if he desires, for many of the workers are vegetarians and his diet is world famous by this time.

The goat's milk that Gandhi drinks will be ready for him. When news spreads of Grandhi's selection of the settlement as a residence a dozen milk goats were offered, and Miss Lester accepted one with a good producing record.

The settlement is a little excited, quite naturally, but no extraordinary preparations are being made.

Simple Living Conditions.

"I think he will be very much at home here," said Miss Lester, "more so than his wealthy friends at Belsize park. I'm afraid the luxury there would bother him. Here he will find living conditions more comparable with those he knows."

Miss Lester visited India in 1927 and stayed at Gandhi's camp at Ahmedabad. Last year she spoke in Boston, New York, Chicago, Washington, and other American cities.

The Kingsley hall district—just off Bow road—probably knows more about Gandhi than he about it, for Miss Lester has lectured extensively about India since her visit there.

"We have much in common with him," she said. "We aren't imperialists and we are constantly organizing demonstrations against militarism."

Expenses at Minimum.

There are nine workers living at the hall. They have $1.25 a week for clothes, 50 cents for pocket money, and must spend half an hour a day in silent prayer.

All of the work in the hall is done by this group, headed by Miss Lester. Because they must live so frugally they sometimes wear old clothes sent by friends, but their rules read: "We have no right to superfluities while our brothers anywhere lack necessities."

Packers Discover It Pays to Heed Shoppers' Taste

LONDON.—(AP)—Feminine insistence may yet revolutionize methods of shipping meat from England's far flung dominions to British dining rooms.

Because they insisted the meat purchases still retain the "bloom," British housewives have purchased home grown meats at the expense of the meats produced outside the British isles.

Valueless, at least from monetary standards, nevertheless the "bloom" is calculated as worth several millions of dollars annually in increased prices for dominion meat. Hence a research party which is endeavoring to solve the problem of retaining the "bloom" in meat shipped long distances.

Lack of the color seldom denotes deterioration in meat, but, scientists said, is the result of evaporation and loss of moisture.

Here's Simple Way to Really Get Rid of Arm or Leg Hair

That Utterly Banishes Coarsened Re-growth

A Discovery That Not Only Removes Hair Instantly, But Delays Its Reappearance Remarkably

How, by Means of a Simple Discovery, a Noted Laboratory is Proving to the Wonder of the Cosmetic World That Hair on Arms and Legs Can Not Only Be Removed Instantly, but Its Reappearance Delayed Amazingly . . . Completely Without Coarsened Re-growth

WHAT IT IS and HOW TO USE IT

A WAY of removing arm and leg hair has been found that not only removes every vestige of hair instantly, but that banishes the stimulated hair growth thousands of women are charging to the razor and less modern ways. A way that not only removes hair, but delays its reappearance remarkably.

It is changing previous conceptions of cosmeticians about hair removing. Women are flocking to its use. The creation of a noted laboratory, it is different from any other hair remover known.

What It Is

It is an exquisite toilet creme resembling a superior beauty clay in texture. You simply spread it on where hair is to be removed. Then rinse off with water.

That is all. Every vestige of hair is gone; so completely that even by running your hand across the skin not the slightest trace of stubble can be felt. And—the reappearance of that hair is delayed surprisingly!

When re-growth finally does come, it is utterly unlike the re-growth following the razor and old ways. You can feel the difference. No sharp stubble. No coarsened growth.

The skin, too, is left soft as a child's. No skin roughness, no enlarged pores. You feel freer than probably ever before in your life of annoying hair growth.

Where To Obtain

It is called NEET—and is on sale at all drug and department stores and beauty parlors. Costs only a few cents.

(Above) Even by running one's hand across the skin absolutely no stubble can be felt this new way.

(At Left) Not only is slightest fear of bristly re-growth banished, but actual reappearance of hair is slowed amazingly.

STRAY LEAVES FROM A GLOBE TROTTER'S NOTEBOOK

Motley Rubbing of Shoulders in Montparnasse

Colony's Sidewalk Cafes Offer Weird Picture.

By Egbert Swenson.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—The sun beats down on the sleepy terrace. Most of the men and women sitting at the little, round tables have just got out of bed; it's only two in the afternoon. That little fellow with the bushy hair and blood-red shirt is Luzek, the Polish sculptor. He lives in a houseboat on the Seine. With him is Florian, one of the surrealists. Florian is the only man in Montparnasse who wears a nose ring. It is the size of a dollar.

You order another drink and take a good look at these people dreaming or chattering at the other tables on the sidewalk. In front of you sits a carefully dressed man of 50. As he rests his chin thoughtfully on his cane, you note that he has a yellow beard and yellow spats, and his face is yellow. He sits alone in frozen silence. He looks sinister and when he glances around to give you a cold up and down through a monocle you try to outstare him, but he wins.

Who is he? If you are new around here you will probably ask yourself that question every few minutes. This is Montparnasse, the Paris colony of outcasts and idealists. You are in the land of artists, poets, and bums. They snap their fingers at a busy world and lie back in their fog of liquor and dreams. A few more dreams, a few more drinks—and another day floats quietly away.

Five o'Clock Animation.

About five o'clock all the tables on the wide sidewalk are occupied, and the scene becomes animated. General conversation begins to buzz along the "carrefour"—juncture of streets—and you sit up and take notice. There are Americans, Swedes, Germans, Russians, South Americans, Poles, Czechs, Serbs, Bulgars, Turks, Senegalese, orientals, and few Frenchmen. The white aproned garçons with their tin trays waltz around the tables with bocks (short beers), cremes (coffee with milk), and aperitifs (appetizers). These dexterous waiters, although the tables are crowded close together, manage to crawl over to yours without spilling anything. If a garçon falls, he is laughed at in ten languages.

The fellow next to you or behind you may be a duke, a moujik, writer, or a pickpocket. You can't judge by the way he dresses. That mystery with the bread basket beard, wild eyes, and velvet trousers is only an artist's model at the Grande Chaumiere. Many of the better painters dress like bond salesmen.

Seated near the flower pots are two youths sketching. They wear big, black hats and striped pink shirts open at the throat. One of them has a red beard with two spikes; the other sports a pair of sideburns all the way down to his teeth. Do not be deceived; they are only a couple of kids from Davenport, Ia., waiting for their checks from home.

A Cosmopolitan Gathering.

About 6 o'clock the terrace is jammed and the garçons bring more tables and chairs. The sidewalks begin to look like a bleachers at a ball game. A restless mob crowds and pushes up and down before the terraces looking for a seat.

You change your seat for another eyeful. Here comes Foujita, the exotic Japanese painter, flanked by his wife and ex-wife. The trio wave to friends across the street. Foujita trots around here with a Buster Brown haircut and a spot of rouge on either cheek. On Sundays a bright, golden coin swings from the lobe of his left ear.

Behind you floats a sweet American voice:

"One more year of love, and then I'll write my novel!"

A discreet glance reveals three flappers working on three Pernods, the nearest thing to absinthe, absinthe being prohibited. The one that's doing the talking is about 19. She looks like a nursery child, but drinks Pernod, the highest explosive among the aperitifs, like milk.

At another table a German gold digger is arguing with a gigolo. He slaps her and everybody roars. The girl calmly empties her beer on his head and walks off, sore at the world.

Hand to Mouth Living.

Strangers sometimes wonder how these people live. An artist sells a picture once in a while or his girl perhaps earns something as a model or by performing other chores. Some of the girls run out to Joinville, the Hollywood of Paris.

Then there are the rackets. The best one is selling 10 franc prints for 150 to American tourists. The slick boys who pose as artists and peddle these prints are known as "oilers."

There is an ex-pawnbroker from Brooklyn who is known as Cinderella. His long, golden locks reach down to his shoulders. He plays the sketch racket from café to café. For 15 francs he will draw a terrible likeness of you. Sometimes Cinderella and his like become too persistent. Once a pestered American picked him up by the slack of his pants and tossed him into the street. He came back crying like a school girl and his assailant gave him 10 francs to disappear.

It isn't until the sun begins to set and the big, garish lights come out that you get the real smell of Montparnasse. Every one is restless but no one is in a hurry. If the famous Dome is too crowded, they stroll over to the Coupole or to the Select across the street.

Each Has His Own Trick.

The vendors of gimcracks, including toy rabbits and "cacahuetes"—peanuts—are out now. They shout their wares and do their tricks from café to café. You listen to a blind violinist who sings a cracked melody into his beard. There is a Japanese kid tossing knives into the air. He will pass the hat. Old women walk slowly through the mob, trying to sell their faded roses and lilies. A cadaverous Pole with a foghorn voice coasts up to the curb on a bicycle. He is selling papers and when he issues his trade call you duck to escape it. They are like actors in a dream.

Later the oldtimers begin to come out. You see a stocky fellow with a tight coat and gray derby. He waves a large white flower as he staggers up to strangers and shouts his own poetry at them. It is Dargal, the Surrealist poet, usually drunk. With him walks a huge Russian, singing to himself. He is Pavoff, a painter who haunts the streets ever since his American girl left him. The two cronies lean upon each other for support and the chances are about even they will collapse on the sidewalk before the night is over. Noon is bedtime for them and they wake up in the evening.

Fortune Teller from Turkestan.

There is Kousang, the fortune teller from Turkestan. His huge, red pompadour swings down his back like a mop. He says he was born in a caravan and spent years in the pay of an old sultan as a harem caretaker. But he looks and acts harmless. For a package of American cigarets he will tell you your lucky number or star, and for 15 francs—60 cents—he will sell you a Chinese talisman.

Suddenly a woman blocks the traffic by dropping to her knees. The crowd forms a wide circle as she bounces on her elbows and picks little snakes from her hair. The "agents de police" lift her to her feet and put her in a cab. They know her. She is Feena, caught by the d. t.'s. She was once a famous Hungarian actress. Drink and dope did it. An old mother in Budapest supports her.

In the bars young writers, some of them American, drink the night away. Discouraged by failure, they hurl drunken curses at the world of readers and critics, and the bartenders smile tolerantly so long as the bills are paid. Any one of them will tell you he is a genius and will fight to prove it. He will dazzle you with talk about rayonism, futuristic philosophy, black magic, Chinese literature, or anything else he may have picked up.

If you listen carefully to the literary conversation of the bars you will observe that the awesome name of James Joyce is employed several times within the hour. It is not fashionable to criticize Joyce. The author of "Ulysses" is never seen on the carrefour. He is unapproachable, being of an abnormally reticent nature. He lives in the Rue de l'Universite, just a few minutes from the Dome, but is never seen at that celebrated café. Occasionally he may be remarked in the afternoon as he takes his daily walk in the Champ de Mars near the Eiffel Tower.

Seeks the Riviera.

Other celebrities drop around for a "café creme" once or twice a day. Ludwig Lewisohn is in the habit of sitting on the terrace of the Coupole with his "The Case of Mr. Crump" under his arm. Emma Goldman has left her studio in the Rue de la Tombe-Issoire for the Riviera, where she finds a pleasant neighbor in the aged Frank Harris. Emma's memoirs are ready for the publisher.

F. Scott Fitzgerald disappears from Montparnasse for months and then suddenly returns to the Select. One of the favorite haunts of Michael Arlen is the Falstaff bar, about a block from the Dome. Richard le Gallienne has left his "eighth heaven" studio for the climate of the south of France, where he is working on another romantic novel.

Most of the big names have temporarily deserted Montparnasse for Nice, Cannes, and Mentone. The desertion is temporary but at the same time little colonies are slowly forming in these outposts because the quarter is becoming too big and overcrowded. Already there is an invasion of cabarets, haberdashers, and fish markets.

But the boys and girls still come back, for Montparnasse has that peculiar quality that never lets them go.

Canton Chuckles as Nanking Holds Reds Chief Foes

CANTON.—(AP)—Announcement that the Nanking régime considers the communists a more serious menace than the Canton coup d'état, has caused elation among the Cantonese leaders.

It was, in fact, just what they have been hoping for.

With Nanking too busy fighting the reds to give the southern politicians much attention, the latter are in a position to strengthen their armies and put their political machine in smoother running order.

More than 50,000 recruits have been added to the Canton military rolls, but progress in turning them from peasants into fighting men has been delayed by nonarrival of arms which have been ordered from abroad.

Better results have been obtained in the air corps and in that branch, at least, the south is comparatively well off. It has thirty-five battle planes and fifteen more are on the way.

In air personnel it is especially strong. Nanking's best birdmen before the split were Cantonese, and when the trouble started most of them joined the south.

Financially Canton seems scarcely able to support an army, let alone raise one. But in China armies have a habit of sprouting from next to nothing.

The provincial treasury is almost empty, but a bond issue has been authorized and as merchants and landlords must pay fixed levies into the bond fund, it probably will bring close to the $2,500,000 gold which is its face value.

Australian Wives Jail Unemployed Husbands for Fees

SYDNEY.—(AP)—Prison relief money for wives and children of prisoners is keeping many Australian husbands in cells.

The law of nonsupport allows wives to send husbands to jail when the men are in arrears on maintenance payments. Meanwhile the state furnishes relief money to the dependents.

Instances have come to light where spiteful women have sent willing workers to cells after the men had lost their jobs and could no longer bring home some weekly earnings.

New Road in Near East Is Threat to Russian Control

JERUSALEM.—A feature of the rapid economic development of the near east in recent years has been the systematic improvement of transport facilities. Now a road has been planned to commence near Naiderabad and with its outlet at Alexandretta. It promises to be of wide significance to Persia, Iraq, and Syria.

By connecting northern Persia with the Mediterranean directly the new road will make this region independent of the Russian Caucasus. Moreover, the connection of Persia and Iraq, through which the road will pass, will enable common action against the soviets in case of need.

The route will be of direct benefit to Great Britain, which will have a direct route for conveyance of its exports to northern Persia. It will, furthermore, facilitate Britain's scheme for a network of military and air bases in and about Persia and Iraq.

Persian exports will have an easier route to Iraq, Syria, and Turkey and, conversely, the goods of these countries will have an easier entry into Persia.

Autos Impoverish People, Says Emir; May Abolish 'Em

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

JERUSALEM. — A movement has been started in Amman, Trans Jordania, to ban automobiles in that country east of the Jordan.

The idea is said to have been originated by the Emir Abdullah himself, who would like to see his country free of automobiles because they impoverish his subjects. He says they buy cars on the installment plan and by the time they are paid for they are ready for the junk pile.

But there is another reason which is gaining more popular support. That is that it befits Arabs and sons of the desert to ride on horseback and not drive "devil's contraptions."

Berlin by Moonlight.

BERLIN. — American tourists in Berlin have something new to write home about — at least those lucky enough to be in the German capital when the moon is shining. The latest thrill for visitors is a moonlight tour, conducted into the oldest, darkest and most mysterious streets of old Berlin. The tour radiates from the famous old Molkenmarkt, and extends into the whole vicinity.

Black Hills Hum with Gold Activity

Claims of 1876 Rush Are Being Reworked.

DEADWOOD, S. D.—[U.P.]—Gold pan prospectors have started placer mining along Black Hills streams with activity that rivals the famous 1876 rush.

Because of the unemployment situation and the rise in value of gold, many men have staked out all available ground, and in some cases have installed elaborate equipment with which to coax the yellow gold from its hiding place. Rockers, sluice boxes, Long Toms, and modern gold machines are a common sight along French creek, Potato Gulch and Bear creek.

Better Than Farming.

Miners claim they are making good wages. Henry Raver, whose dairy farm supplied President Coolidge with milk while he was at the state lodge, found placer mining more profitable than dairy farming.

He has been averaging about two dollars a yard, and is reported to have made as much as $25 in a day. On this farm $40,000 in gold was mined in the '70s during a single month.

"Potato Creek" Johnny Perrett, a veteran Black Hills prospector, recently found a nugget valued at $150, another at $40, and last year he sold one worth $250. Other prospectors in the Potato creek district average from $5 to $8 a day.

Pick and Shovel.

The prospectors use various methods, the favorite, commonest, and least expensive being the pick, shovel, and gold pan method. By this method the miner picks loose the rocks, shovels coarse gravel into his pan, takes it to the side of a running stream, and lets the water do the work.

A modern machine is in use on French creek. The ore is shovelled into an ore bin, and from the bin into a funnel where water washes the dirt into a large circular, rotating machine which operates by centrifugal force in much the same manner as a cream separator. The whirling bowl is cleaned out each night and a little panning separates the gold from the gravel.

The gold is sent to the mint at Denver by storekeepers, who buy it from the prospectors, or sold to a bank.

Finland's Dry Law Results in More Drinking

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS.—A leading Helsingfors daily has just completed a survey of night life conditions under Finland's prohibition law and concludes that drinking is now much more widespread than it was before prohibition. The effect of prohibition has been demoralising because hard liquor as opposed to wines and beer is much more favored than formerly and consumption necessarily must be done secretly.

The public can get liquor in three kinds of speakeasies: so-called private families where one "guest" at a time comes in for a drink; residences devoting several rooms to drinkers; and clubs. In addition, restaurants serve liquor surprisingly openly. Any taxi driver can direct a thirsty man or woman to one of these speakeasies, which are relatively free from raids in the order mentioned, the clubs being the most hazardous.

There are numerous families in Helsingfors who earn their livelihood by their drawing rooms. Upon entering the home the "guest" is received by a member of the family and conducted into the drawing room, where he may order what he likes. Not more than one guest at a time is admitted so as to preserve the private character of the place. The usual beverage is tea, strengthened with crude, 96 per cent spirits, and this drink costs about 12 cents.

English Bicycle Boom.

NOTTINGHAM, England.—(AP)—England's bicycle industry, employing 250,000 workers, is basking in a boom attributed largely to the "back to the country" movement which has nearly conquered the island.

Norway May Get More Land, but No Folks for Its Census

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A land once inhabited by Eskimos, but now barren and ice choked most of the year—this is the segment of Greenland's east coast causing a sovereignty dispute between Norway and Denmark, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. A broad stream of ice is constantly moving southward along the entire east coast line, forming an impenetrable barrier to ships for at least ten out of every twelve months.

The section newly claimed by Norway—a mere patch of the long east coast, between 71 degrees 30 minutes N. and 75 degrees and 40 minutes N.—lies from 300 to 700 miles north of the arctic circle, and is a region of deep cut inlets and high rocky islands, backed by huge glaciers which crowd down to the water's edge. Although it is not far north of the uppermost part of Norway the district's climate is subject to all the extremes of remote arctic regions because the polar currents carry ice masses from the Greenland sea off Spitsbergen in a slow and steady procession along its ragged, shallow coastal banks.

Entirely Uninhabited.

If Norway succeeds in its claim no new subjects will swell its population figures, for this part of Greenland is entirely uninhabited, even by Eskimos. Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, arctic explorer, who visited the region in 1929 under the auspices of the Heye foundation, found the remains of a once flourishing village of Eskimos on Shannon island, at the extreme northern end of Norway's claim, but the population had disappeared during the last century, leaving no clues of what became of them.

This Pompeii of the frozen north has thirty-eight ruins of stone houses in reasonably good condition, and in them were found sewing implements of women, the toys of children, and household and hunting utensils, left as if their owners had walked out of the dwellings for only a brief absence.

Mysteriously Deserted.

The settlement on Shannon island was first visited by Europeans in 1823. When the next recorded visit was made in 1870 the village had been mysteriously deserted. Only a few parties of white men have been to the island since 1870. Capt. Bartlett said that this part of the coast is usually fenced off by a barrier of heavy ice 150 miles wide, and that sometimes even in summer ships cannot get through to the coast. An easy passage to the shore can be found, he said, not more than once in fifty years.

The region teems with wild life and game. Both on Shannon island and the mainland the Bartlett party found myriads of birds—barnacle geese, gray geese, other waterfowl and numerous song birds from Europe. Musk oxen, arctic hares, foxes, and polar bears wander along the narrow gravel beaches and rocky valleys leading up to the great Greenland ice cap.

Nearest Settlement.

In midsummer the thermometer has been known to reach 100 degrees Fahrenheit, and the ground becomes so warm that the musk oxen hunt patches of snow in which to sleep. These brief respites from the biting cold cannot be enjoyed, however, for the swarms of large mosquitoes "that bite like dogs," Capt. Bartlett reports.

Angmagsalik, the only permanent settlement of the Greenland east coast, lies well below the arctic circle, some six hundred miles south of the Norwegian claim. Angmagsalik's population consists of several hundred Eskimos and a mere handful of Danes—trader, missionary, doctor, and a few minor officials. In the summer a considerable volume of water flows out from glacial rivers centering at Angmagsalik, which tends to make an opening in the drifting ice offshore. Then ships may push through with supplies and mail from the outside world.

Camp Three Miles Up.

WILMINGTON, N. Y.—A public camp site commanding a bird's-eye view of the Au Sable valley from a vantage point nearly three miles high on the slopes of Whiteface mountain will soon be at the disposal of motorists to this section of the Adirondacks. This was announced by Superintendent of Forests William G. Howard of the state conservation department.

Belgium's Defense for Next Conflict Forms Triple Line

BRUSSELS.—(AP)—Three lines of defense are envisaged by the Belgian government in the event another war should embroil the little kingdom.

The first is at the frontier, the war ministry recently revealed in the course of a senate debate upon a $40,000,000 appropriation for fortifications.

If beaten back, the Belgian armies would re-form along the Maas river. A third line extends from Antwerp via Ghent to the sea and is meant to allow the Belgian army to make a last desperate stand while awaiting help from its allies.

The minister for defense said that full account had been taken of such possibilities as poison gas, aircraft, and giant artillery.

Moscow Plans New Subway.

MOSCOW.—(AP)—Moscow is to have a subway, the central committee of the communist party having decreed that construction of an underground transportation system shall begin in 1932.

Gaming Shifts Site in Juarez; Revenue Grows

Yankees Forced to Cross on Uptown Bridge.

JUAREZ, Mexico.—[U. P.]—The Americans are doing more of their drinking and gambling now just where the state of Chihuahua wants them to indulge.

The campaign to tell Americans where to drink and gamble has ended in victory for Gov. Andres Ortiz of Chihuahua, although for a time a general strike in Juarez was threatened as a protest.

Gambling is said to have increased fourfold at the Casino Turista Internacional. Business in the uptown saloons also is said to have picked up.

We Need the Money.

The reason the governor was so solicitous about business in the uptown section of Juarez is that it is from those sources that the state gains most of its tax revenue. And right now, politicians say, it is imperative that the state's income be increased because the state's coffers are low.

So to fill the treasury again the governor took drastic steps to increase business uptown here. When he was at first unsuccessful in having the Santa Fe street bridge closed to pedestrians coming from El Paso, he decreed that 12 saloons near the bridge must close at 9 o'clock nightly. His object in closing the bridge to pedestrians was to force them to go across the Stanton street bridge and thus go through town instead of patronizing the saloons near the other bridge.

Everybody Happy.

Then the labor unions threatened a general strike in Juarez unless the saloons were allowed to remain open until midnight as formerly. A compromise was arranged whereby American pedestrians are not permitted to cross the Santa Fe street bridge from El Paso, while the saloons were granted permission to stay open until midnight.

Poor Fish Stay with Crowds; Big Fish Don't

BIG fish have a habit of avoiding crowds. Where the band plays and propellers churn, the big ones just aren't. But go up beyond the crowds—up where it's really wild, and a bit too timber thick for the week-enders. There you'll find muskie, pike and bass plenty willing to eat your hardware.

The Manitowish waters in the vicinity of Manitowish and Mercer, Wis., 400 miles from Chicago, comprise just such a treasure chest for the fellow who knows his big game fishing. The lakes, all connected, are large, wide, deep and cold, with many small islands having steeply sloped, rocky banks. The mainland shore bottoms and the bars support vigorous vegetation, which, of course, is paradise for the big 'lunge.

It's no trick at all to get strikes up shore. But it takes an angler to get a Manitowish muskie up to the dinner table.

78,000 Tour Sweden.

OESTERSUND, Sweden.—[U. P.]—Sweden was visited last year by 78,000 foreign tourists, or 20,000 more than in 1929. Sweden's total income from the foreign tourist traffic in 1930 amounted to $11,524,000.

West Michigan Just One Vast Bathing Beach

State Hailed Playground of the Nation.

By H. J. Gray.

IT wasn't so many years ago that vacation trips were mere "camping parties" just about as far away from home as could be reached in a day with the old gray mare; or, perhaps a boat trip down some river to fishing holes not ordinarily reached by the city folks.

When the automobile came, good roads followed. People began looking for new places to visit; they wanted to get away from civilization and live in the rough. They piled everything in and on the car that springs and tires could bear and then managed somehow to get the family loaded. The advent of tourist camps let them leave some of the equipment at home; good roads made them desire to go further afield and then the tourist resort changed the attitude of the camping tourist.

Telling the World.

Nature fitted Michigan to be "the playground of a nation." West Michigan was given the entire east shore of Lake Michigan for a bathing beach—playgrounds for all kinds of water sports. The coast towns, knowing how much the city people love the water—especially the clear, sparkling water of sand beaches, began telling the world what they had to offer to summer visitors. It is just a night's ride by boat from Chicago and Milwaukee. It isn't a long ride by auto or by train, and in these coast towns and cities the people from the city were able to loaf and play, eat fresh vegetables and fruits, drink clear spring water, fill their lungs with fresh air, and go home feeling re-created.

So many cars began pouring into Michigan that the state took up the question of good roads and today there are over 21,000 miles of hard surfaced roads. The tourist can drive as fast as he pleases, with safety. These roads connect all the towns and cities up and down and across the state. Counties have improved the byways so that one can get in "back of the beyond" over fine dirt roads that lead into the most charming out of the way countrysides.

Transformation.

Summer visitors wanted more than bathing; they wanted good golf courses, they wanted fishing, boating, horseback riding; they wanted to explore historical places; they wanted canoe or boat trips over strange waters.

Towns all over the state bought up rolling farm land with creeks, lakes, wood lots and turned them into golf courses. They turned them into show places; brought in the best architects and made some of the sportiest courses the country knows about. A visitor has said: "One may drive a ball from one golf course to another up and down and across west Michigan." Millions of dollars have been spent to make these courses the best in the land.

Millions of Fish.

The state conservation department stepped in to make Michigan outstanding as a place in which to fish. Sixteen great state owned hatcheries produce millions of fry and fingerlings each year. The big lake furnishes millions of fingerling pan fish, which are planted in inland waters. Thousands upon thousands of rainbows work up from the big lake into the streams each year. Many of these are caught and stripped of eggs and milt and the hatcheries improve on nature in fish propagation. A power company transports thousands of rainbows, bass, pike, and wall-eye from the rivers below the dams to the waters above, making fishing unusually good in these waters. Private hatcheries on club owned properties add their quota.

The inland lakes—and there are over 5,000 of them—are being liberally planted with fish each year. Splendid resort hotels are operating, giving to the tourist all kinds of water sports, the best of fishing, good golf and the finest of fresh vegetables and fruits.

Corduroys to Tuxedos.

Such streams as the Pere Marquette, the Manistee, the Muskegon offer canoe and boat trips of great scenic beauty—miles upon miles between high banks and meadow land. Back of the power dams on some of these streams are lakes 18 miles long. All these waters give the best of fishing for trout, bass, and pike.

Resorts have their special features. The visitor may have active society or complete solitude. He can go to places where formal dress is the thing or to other places where the old corduroys are proper. All feature Michigan foodstuffs.

Michigan is unusual in that it offers such a variety of scenery from the flat country to rolling farm land; fertile valleys to the great sand dunes; cutover land to fine forests—cities to wild lands; and everywhere are lakes and streams.

A STUDY IN PEACEFULNESS

SKIRTING auto roads and railroads, wayside streams run through Michigan's meadow and woodland, offering the photographer and the artist many an opportunity to exercise their genius.

England Eager to Regain Lost Sea Supremacy

New Liners Will Strive for Speed Honors.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The next battle for the blue ribbon of the north Atlantic probably will be fought out by Germany and Great Britain, with the United States apparently out of the running for transoceanic speed honors in the next few years.

American prospects of winning the trans-Atlantic crown have been retarded owing to the delay in construction of two super-liners, sister ships of the Leviathan.

Meanwhile the Cunard line, former possessor of the speed trophy, has started building the first of two giant ocean greyhounds designed to bring back to Britain her supremacy of the seas.

Tonnage of 73,000 Tons.

These ships will have a tonnage of 73,000 tons each, as compared with the 59,000 tons of the Leviathan and the 51,000 tons of the reigning speed queen, the German Europa. The new Cunarders will be more than 1,000 feet long.

The Europa wrested the crown from her sister ship, the Bremen, in March, 1930, when she made the 3,100 mile crossing from Cherbourg to New York in 4 days, 17 hours and 6 minutes.

The Cunard Mauretania, still one of the fastest Atlantic liners, long held the speed record.

Speed Record of 1840.

In July, 1840, the Britannia, first of the Cunard liners, came from Liverpool to New York in 14 days and 8 hours, which was considered no mean achievement in those days.

The first steamship to cross the Atlantic was the Savannah, 350 tons, built at New York City. She left Savannah, Ga., on May 14, 1819, and reached Liverpool in 26 days.

The quickest passage of a sailing ship across the Atlantic was made by the clipper Dreadnought, from New York to Queenstown, Ireland, in 9 days and 17 hours.

Two Tour World at Cost of $700

FORT WAYNE, Ind.—[U. P.]—A 33,000 mile globe encircling jaunt has been completed at a cost of under $700 by Harold Greinert, Fort Wayne, and Paul Neipp, Cleveland.

The youths, both of whom were graduated from Concordia college here, began their long trip a year ago this month.

Among their methods of earning transportation was peeling potatoes on an ocean liner. In Spain they traveled more than 750 miles on bicycles.

Recreation Park Ousts Tombstones of 18th Century

TWICKENHAM, England.—(AP)—Unusued for more than a century, the old burial ground here will be turned into a recreation park. The last burial was in 1825, and small houses now surround it.

In granting the town's request the chancellor of the diocese remarked:

"The tombstones have no interest except as they disclose the favorite virtues of the late 18th and early 19th centuries, such as humility—now sadly out of fashion."

Three Treatments for Unemployment Evolved at Geneva

GENEVA.—(AP)—Three courses of treatment for Europe's unemployment ills will be proposed to the coördination committee of the European union commission late in August.

One would be an international exchange of workers under jurisdiction of a "technical placing conference."

Another would be public works on an international scale, financed by long term credits recruited from idle capital.

The third calls for use of Europe's surplus population in "exploitation of territories which are in a position to absorb it usefully." Proponents of this idea do not list the territories which might be in that position.

The coördinating committee will use these and other recommendations from special groups in formulating a general plan of relief which will be presented to the European commission itself the first week in September.

Radio for Indians.

YOSEMITE.—Uncle Sam is a kindly landlord. Without having to be asked and knowing he will receive no rent, he is building homes here for the few remaining families of Yosemite Indians, who have previously lived, summer and winter, in canvas cabins. The new homes will have two bedrooms and a combination kitchen and dining room, running water and electric lights, with an electrical plug in each room, as most of the families are radio enthusiasts.

Chemist Holds Gas War Scare Mere Nonsense

Calls It Most Humane Form of Fighting.

LONDON.—(AP)—Chemical warfare, a sort of chamber of horrors for most people, is actually the most humane form of fighting, says Charles L. Parsons, secretary of the American Chemical society, who came to England for the jubilee conference of the Society of Chemical Industry.

"Much that is talked about death rays being used for shattering cities in the next war is perfect nonsense," said Prof. Parsons.

Too Greatly Feared.

"Nor is there any more danger of wiping out cities by gas attacks than by using high explosives. Either is possible if done on a sufficiently enormous scale, but both are almost inconceivable.

"One thing I would like to emphasize. Chemical warfare is very greatly misunderstood. Far from being the most terrible form of warfare it is the most humane.

"It may sound strange, but this is demonstrated by the facts. At the close of the war, while 30 per cent of the casualties came from gas, gas was responsible for only two per cent of the deaths.

* *

No Cruel Disfigurement.

"You do not get your arms blown off, your eyes put out and your lungs ruined by gas. There were no more tubercular cases from those gassed than from those not gassed.

"All warfare is terrible, and I want to see it done away with. But if we have warfare, then chemical warfare is going to be the least terrible aspect of it.

"You can spray all over an area of country with mustard gas and nobody is going to cross that country for several weeks. Mustard gas, therefore, would make certain areas untenable. It would compel troops to leave, but it would not kill many of them."

Mount Vernon Replica Is Dry, Even Though Embassy Is Wet

PARIS.—[U. P.]—The French Mount Vernon, replica of George Washington's mansion, erected at the colonial exposition, is going to obey the prohibition amendment and is the dryest spot in Paris.

C. Bascom Slemp, American high commissioner at the exposition, decided that Mount Vernon would be kept dry, even at the expense of exciting ridicule. There have been a number of garden parties there this summer, under the trees of the Vincennes forest, but the punch was unspiked fruit juices.

"This is just another bit of American soil and the prohibition amendment to our constitution applies here just as much as it does in the states at home; our parties will certainly not be wet and our punches will be above reproach," Slemp said.

Embassy officials were not asked for a ruling, but pointed out today that the embassy, which is also considered as American soil, is "wet" and that cocktails and wines are served at embassy functions.

Most of the buildings at the exposition and all of the restaurants are "wet" and at all the official functions champagne corks pop and native liquors provide enthusiastic atmosphere. For visitors to the exposition there are 27 cocktail bars and two beer gardens, one of which is adjoining the American building.

Riders' Paradise.

OTTAWA, Ont.—More than 2,000 miles of saddle pony trails are maintained by the Canadian government in the national parks in the Canadian Rockies.

Arizona Prospers.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—[U.P.]—Arizona, with its population of less than half a million, enjoys an annual hotel business of more than $6,000,000, a chamber of commerce survey disclosed. A large portion of the hotel income is from eastern visitors who spend the winters in southern Arizona, with the summer business of the northern highlands swelling the volume considerably.

7-Day Cruise to Canada and Niagara Falls
. . . a thrilling week you'll never forget!

Sail on the palatial, oil-burning, White Liners, "NORTH AMERICAN" or "SOUTH AMERICAN" from Navy Pier, Chicago, to the peaceful Georgian Bay country . . Cruise in American and Canadian waters to Parry Sound, Canada . . that's a trip for you.

Three hours at Mackinac Island . . Three hours at Detroit . . stop at Cleveland . . Full day at Buffalo and Niagara Falls . . a seven day cruise — over 2000 miles.

Every stateroom, regardless of location, is outside — with porthole or window. Exclusive on the Lakes with these ships, is the observation garden, high up atop all other decks. Canopied during the day—open to the sky evenings.

This is the only trip from Chicago into beautiful Georgian Bay, Canada, and these two ships are the only exclusively passenger "cruising" ships on the Great Lakes. Bear these important facts in mind in planning your trip. Sail the Luxury Way on oil burners. No smoke — no cinders.

Yes! And the Price is Only $72.50 including meals, transportation and berth in an airy outside stateroom.

POSITION

THIS FALL

There is no field open to women which offers the unlimited money making opportunities to be found in beauty culture. We not only refer to the future. We mean NOW. But the first requirement is thorough training under highly experienced experts, who not only know the subjects they teach but who are skilled in the art of imparting their knowledge to others. That is the kind of training you will receive at BURNHAM'S.

You cannot get such experience — such training elsewhere. It doesn't pay to go bargain hunting for a course in beauty culture.

BURNHAM'S

has secured positions for thousands of graduates at no extra charge and will do the same for YOU. In a few short weeks you can qualify for a splendid position or we will help you open YOUR OWN SHOP. The sixty-year reputation of the world's oldest and largest school will be an asset to you for the rest of your business career. Capitalize on the vast experience of this organization. It will make money for YOU.

I Offer You GROCERIES AT WHOLESALE

AND A WONDERFUL CHANCE TO MAKE

$15 A DAY

Besides

Yes, I'll give you Groceries at rock bottom, wholesale prices and a chance to pocket $15 in a day besides! Just send me your name and I'll give you some money making money saving facts that will amaze you. I'll show you how L. C. Van Allen of Illinois quit a $23 a week job, took hold of my proposition, and shortly afterward reported earning $125 in a single week. Gustav Karnath of Minnesota—farm laborer—made $20.35 the FIRST 5 HOURS. And Mrs. B. L. Hodges of New York says: "Making more money than ever before—from $18 to $20 a day." Of course, some people make more than others. But these big earnings of a few of my representatives prove the wonderful opportunities. And today I offer you a proposition EVEN BETTER than I gave these people.

No Experience Necessary
With Groceries at wholesale and $15 a day in your pocket, you would have cash to pay your bills, to buy new clothes, a radio, house furnishings, or take pleasure trips. You positively don't need any capital. You don't need any experience. You don't have to take any course of training. YOU CAN START RIGHT IN MAKING GOOD MONEY THE VERY FIRST DAY.

$15 a Day for Pleasant Work
All you do is call on your friends and my established customers in your locality and take care of their orders for my line of Groceries and other Household Necessities. This is very pleasant work. Your own home will be your headquarters. You set your own hours and work as you please. All orders from my customers must go through your hands, because I never sell through stores. You alone get all the profits. In addition I will supply you with Groceries, Toilet Goods, and Household Necessities at our LOWEST, ROCK-BOTTOM, WHOLESALE PRICES. Thus you have a wonderful opportunity to SAVE BIG MONEY as well as to MAKE BIG MONEY.

Send No Money.
If you want to, you can keep your present job and start in spare time. Oscar Stuart of West Virginia reports $18 profit in two and one-half hours' spare time. This shows the wonderful possibilities. So get the facts at once. YOU HAVE EVERYTHING TO GAIN. It costs nothing to investigate. In addition to giving you Groceries at Wholesale and a chance to clear $10 to $15 in a day, I also offer you a brand new Ford Tudor Sedan as an extra bonus—IN ADDITION to your large cash profit. Here's a chance you can't afford to miss. Mail coupon now for these amazing new facts.

MAIL THIS.
Albert Mills, Pres., American Products Co., 7858 Monmouth-av., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Send me, without cost or obligation, all the facts about your new proposition that offers Groceries at Wholesale and a chance to make $15 in a day besides. Also explain your generous Ford Sedan offer.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Miscellaneous.

MEN. IMMEDIATE EMPLOYMENT.
THIS COMPANY WILL TAKE ON ADDITIONAL MEN WHO NEED EMPLOYMENT AND WHO WISH TO LEARN IF THEY CAN DO SPECIALTY SALES WORK. THERE WILL BE NO CHARGE FOR EQUIPMENT, AND NO DEPOSITS REQUIRED. WE WILL TRAIN ALL SUCH MEN FREE—THERE IS NO EXPENSE. THOSE WHO CAN QUALIFY CAN MAKE $150.00 TO $400.00 OR MORE DURING AUGUST.

Many men who least suspect it possess very great and very valuable sales ability. Many of the very best men in our national organization never sold anything before coming into this business. Men who made as high as $50.00 their first day in the field knew nothing about selling other than what they learned the previous two days from our sales instructor.

Experience in sales work is not necessary. The instructors in our Chicago branch offices are experienced salesmen and men of earnest and sympathetic understanding with the problems of the beginner. They can and do awake and activate the latent abilities of men to do creative work.

Perhaps they can help you make a success of this work. It is worth a try. The training is free. The opportunity is open. If you can do it, you make real money and have assurance of its permanence. If you cannot do it, no harm done. The experience will have been valuable. And now is the time to get started.

In our national business all over the United States July was the biggest month in our history. Reports of business up to Saturday morning showed an increase of July over June. These are interesting facts to men who desire to get themselves advantageously connected with a growing business that has a genuine program of progress.

While you cannot make money here unless you earn it, many men who never previously even thought they could do work of this kind have found it to be just the opportunity they sought for years, and are making more money than they ever previously dreamed of earning. We have men making $750.00, $600.00, $500.00 a month. Others $750.00, $600.00, $500.00, and $400.00. If you wish the opportunity to see if you, too, can learn to do this work and make money of that kind, it is now open to you.

This is a new product by an established institution—the largest of its kind in the world, and the product already has a greater sale than anything in the world ever offered for the same service. It is new in this market, having been introduced here but a few months ago. This is a genuine present opportunity for cash, and also for future progress in the certain growth of the business. It is for men who have foresight—men who are in earnest about seeking a sound opportunity to get in and work ahead.

Our requirements of you are that you be honest, of good reputation, active, alert, willing to learn, and do the following things:

To learn [as taught] how to make a clear and convincing explanation of why you have called to see your prospect.

To learn [as taught] how to show the product so it will reveal the absolute need for it and the necessity of buying it.

To learn [as taught] how to persuade some one to do that which positively ought to be done.

To be honest in your own thought, so that you are entitled to confidence.

To work hard every day to make a genuine success in return for the privilege of a genuine opportunity in a permanent position with good people who will deeply interest themselves in helping you get started and to get along.

This is a straightforward offer of sincere intent to worthy men who are in need of good substantial positions. Please do not apply for these positions unless you feel you can meet these requirements. Applicants will be personally interviewed Monday, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

AN EXCEPTIONAL OPPOR.
A limited number of ambitious men possessing the proper qualifications can enter upon a lifetime career of profitable, dignified work that insures position of honor and standing in their neighborhood. Ordinary intelligence, common sense, willingness to work hard, pleasing personality, and genuine delight in meeting people, are absolutely essential. Successful applicants will be thoroughly instructed and then assigned to definite territories to represent an investment advisory service and a savings plan with strong appeal to average wage and salary earner, sponsored by a banking firm with 18 years' history in Chicago. They will work on a proved method under the constant, close and personal supervision of a director until they are earning from $300 to $500 per month, which figure they must attain within a few months in order to continue with the organization. Only those with ability and determination to reach this mark will be considered. Tell enough about yourself in your reply to warrant an interview.

SUBLEASE—2920 Commonwealth-av.

By reason of the present business depression there are available two apartments in this building, one seven room and one nine room [may arrange to sublet these apartments furnished] each containing three baths which the present lessees must vacate. This is one of the finest buildings on the Gold Coast facing the Lincoln park golf course and has every possible known modern convenience. This is a real opportunity to sublet one of the most beautiful homes in Chicago. Those, however, whose incomes are modest or who are looking for bargains beyond what is reasonable, even under present conditions, should not trouble to investigate. See superintendent, Roy Fleury.

A Bargain That Should Interest Every Man

Right now, Jerrems, Chicago's long established custom tailors, have assembled from their five stores 87 uncalled-for suits that were originally ordered in good faith by their customers. The suits were originally priced from $65 upward, and are now on sale, while they last, at their tailor shops, on the 3d floor at 225 North Wabash-av., corner Wacker-dr., at just half price. If you find your size in a suit you admire you can secure a brand new custom-tailored suit at less than it costs to make it. Many of these suits have extra trousers.

Be sure to ask for Mr. Wois.

HERE IS CHICAGO'S BIGGEST ANNUAL USED CAR EVENT

STUDEBAKER'S AUGUST CLEARANCE!

You may have read about used car clearances before, but never anything like this. We are placing on sale all the cars in our big building at 26th and Michigan, and this tremendous selection includes all popular makes and models.

Prices have been cut to the bone. You can save as high as 25% to 50% by buying during this event.

And you can purchase with confidence; 5 days' free driving trial goes with each sale.

School Scrip Accepted at Full Face Value

CASE SEDAN. Here is a fine performing quality car that never left the Chicago boulevards. A checkup will reveal that it's in splendid condition throughout. Snubbers, bumpers, shutter front, spare tire, etc. Reduced to $295.

MARMON 8 SEDAN. A recent model with many extras. As a matter of fact, this Marmon was actually only driven enough to be broken in. It's a beautiful car with marvelous performance. $485.

FLINT COACH. We can truthfully say it looks and runs as though it were worth four times our price. Has snubbers, bumpers, spare tires, etc. Excellent rubber. Reduced $95.

GRAHAM-PAIGE SEDAN. Recent model, that was only used a few months. The handsome finish has not a mar on it and the expensive mohair upholstery is luxurious. Has wire wheels, side mounts and many extras. Will not remain long at $495.

DODGE SPORT COUPE. Victory 6, with roomy rumble seat, wire wheels and a wealth of extras. It was only driven Sundays and evenings for pleasure purposes, so now it will give new car satisfaction. $395.

STUDEBAKER '28 SEDAN. This is a 7-pass. Pres., exceptionally clean throughout. Examine this car from bumper to bumper and you'll find that every detail is in wonderful shape. The motor is 100%, and the price is out of keeping with the high quality of this automobile. Reduced to $350.

HUDSON '28 COACH. Many valuable extras, including bumpers, snubbers, spare tire, etc. The motor was reconditioned by expert mechanics and the mohair upholstery appears brand new. The finish has not a mar on it. Will not remain 24 hours at our price of $285.

ESSEX SEDAN. Late model, that was oiled and greased every 500 miles by the original owner, so now it's topnotch in every respect. Equipped with every essential extra. Considering the condition of this car, it's a sensational value at our reduced price of $295.

'28 STUDEBAKER SEDAN. This Commander must be seen to be appreciated. The finish is bright and shiny and the upholstery appears unworn. Has shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $395.

CADILLAC SEDAN. Model 314, that was owned by a wealthy family and given expert attention by the chauffeur. The appearance is very attractive and the motor performs smoothly and quietly. Very fully equipped. Reduced to $395.

CHRYSLER SEDAN. 1929 model 65, that looks and runs as though it had never been driven a mile. This Chrysler will satisfy the most exacting buyer and it will not remain long at our reduced price of $485.

OAKLAND COACH, '29. The finish has not a mar on it, and the upholstery is luxurious. Has a wealth of extras. This Oakland was traded in at a very favorable price, so we'll pass on the saving to you. Now, $495.

STUDEBAKER FREE WHEELING SEDAN. 1931 President 8; only driven a few weeks. The finish is ducoed a smart battleship gray and the upholstery is luxurious. Has wire wheels, side mounts, trunk rack, foot rests, folding arm rests in the rear. Houdaille shock absorbers, etc. Motor is guaranteed. Offered at a $500 discount.

PACKARD 6 SEDAN. 1928 model, that is equipped with many extras. The finish sparkles like a new dollar and the interior is very distinguished. Motor could not be improved. Will not remain long at our price of $645.

BUICK SEDAN. This 1928 Master Six was owned by a prominent manufacturer. The finish, upholstery and tires are in the original new condition and the motor runs very smoothly. Equipped with bumpers, spare tires, snubbers, etc. $545. Also a 1930 Buick Coupe, like new, for $645.

STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT 1929 STR. 8. With a wealth of extras. It was owned by an executive of this company and checked over every day by our head mechanic. So now it will give new car satisfaction. The appearance is beautiful. Reduced to $695.

PIERCE-ARROW

Youn Opportunity to Get a Quality Car at a Big Saving

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN. One of the very latest 5-pass. Str. 8s on the 133 inch wheelbase. This Pierce is a positive beauty. It was in storage for 6 months and during the short time it was used it was given the best of care. The finish has not a mar on it and the upholstery is luxurious. Tires appear unused. Equipment includes Houdaille shock absorbers and a wealth of extras. Has a powerful, smooth running motor. Sold for over $3,000 a short time ago, now $1,450.

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN. 1928 model 81, is ducoed a beautiful blue. The interior and exterior are the last word for refined beauty. The motor is A-1. The equipment includes every essential extra. Here is a car that never left the Chicago Blvds., and at first appearance one would think it were brand new. A sensational buy at $895.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

Partnerships and Investments.

A New Field for Profits.

Nationally prominent concern operating a chain of quality food shops throughout the United States offers a distinct opportunity to well located retail merchants—grocers, markets, restaurants, and department stores—to obtain a franchise arrangement—in lieu of our present retail outlet—which will materially increase the net income of such establishment. The franchise will grant these merchants who qualify the use of valuable equipment, trademarks, and trade names, in addition to expert assistance in getting the new business started. Net profits of the franchise alone average $3,000 to $5,000 yearly while affording in addition a definite increase in the volume of sales on other merchandise.

Exclusive territory is available in sections of Chicago and suburbs, also in a substantial number of other Illinois and Wisconsin cities—a 5,000 population or over. Please state nature of business and other pertinent information.

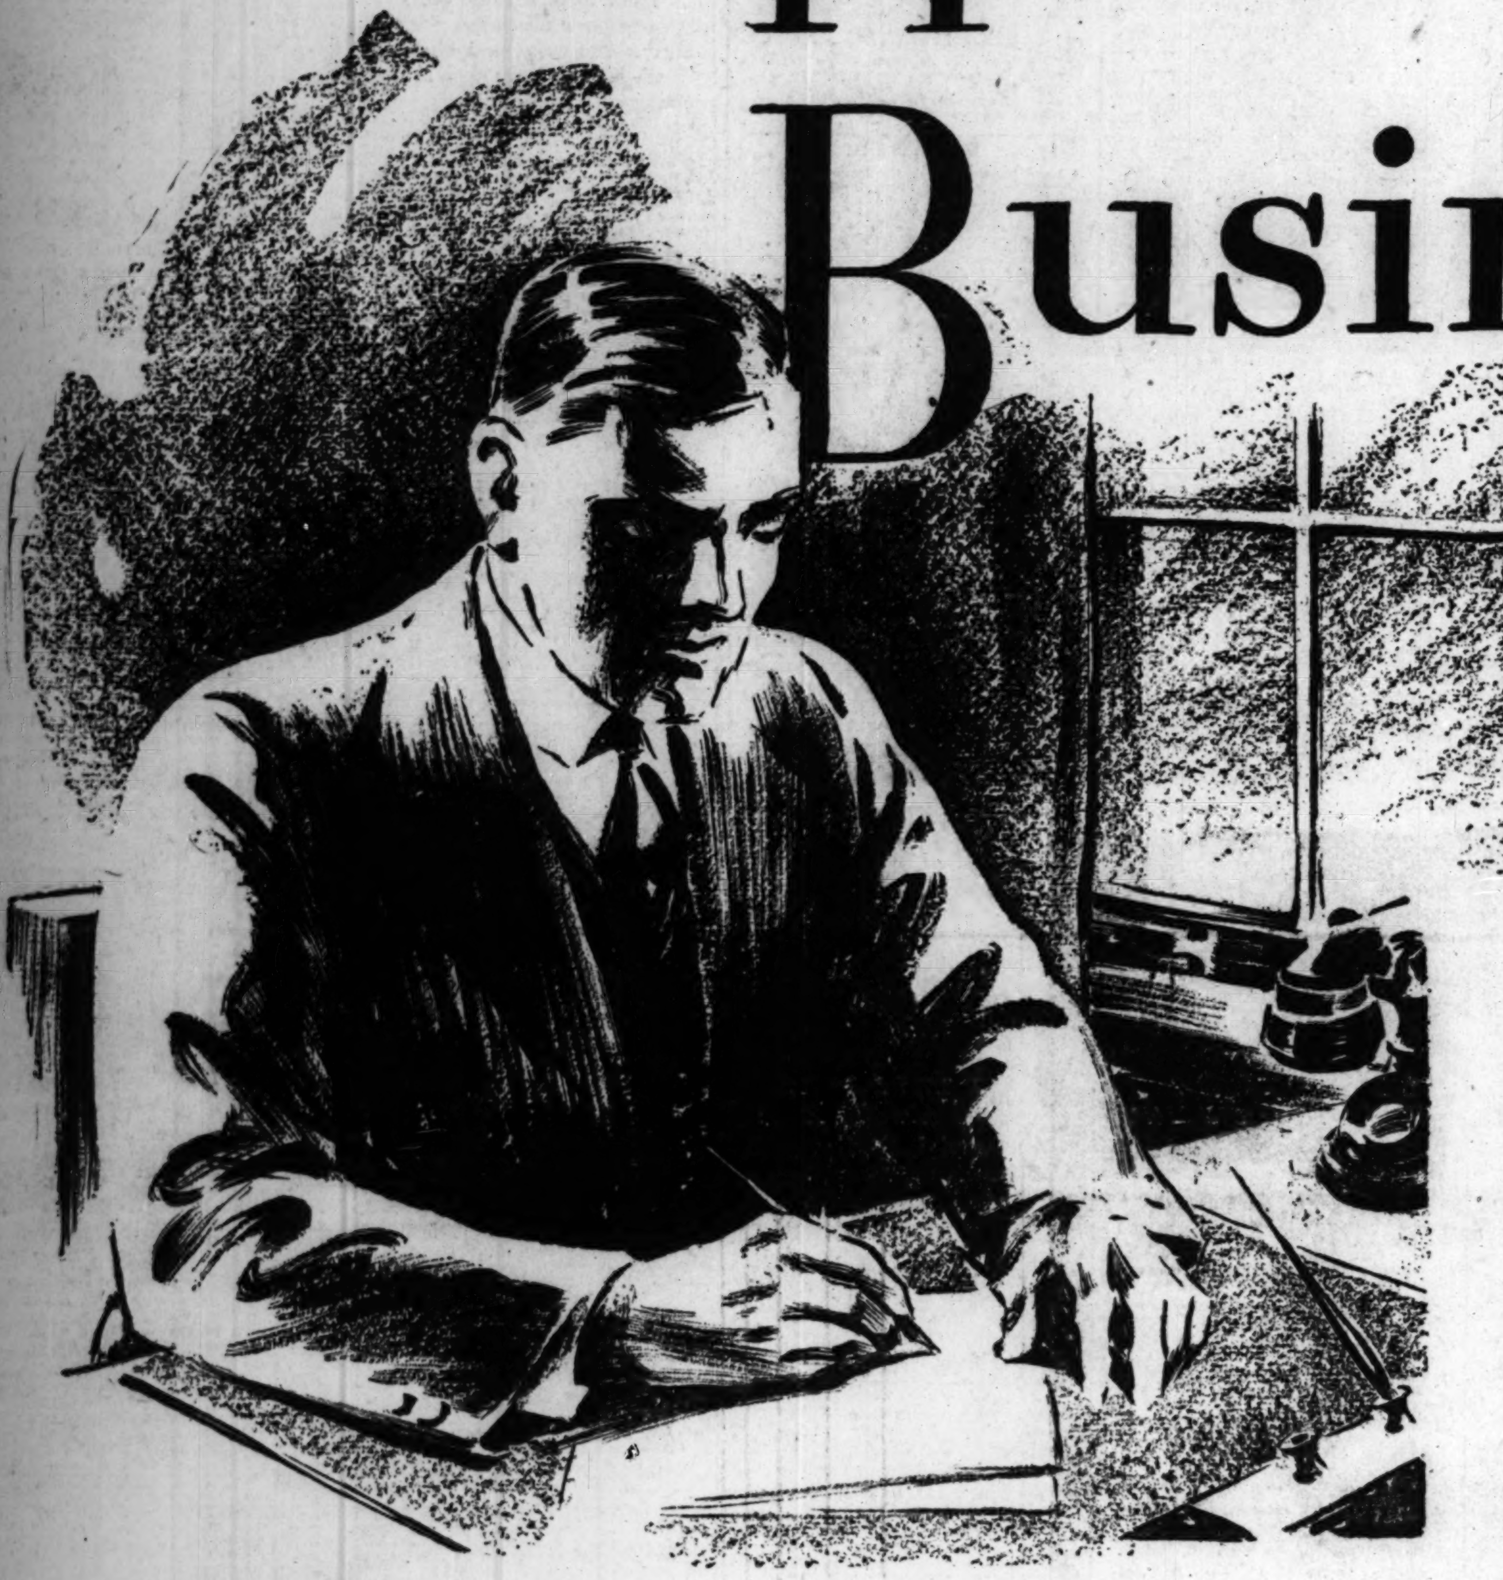
A Page of Opportunities for Business Men



A Few Suggestions for Sales Managers

To increase sales. Sales managers who are reorganizing their departments, creating new territories and in other ways driving for every bit of business should take advantage of present opportunities to build up a sales staff of top-notchers. You can get in touch with experienced men by referring to and using the Situations Wanted and Help Wanted—Salesmen classifications in the Tribune Want Ad Section.

To get distribution. If you have no present staff and cannot wait to build one you can obtain the services of complete sales organizations or find organizations controlling retail outlets by referring to and advertising in the Business Opportunities classification.

Furthermore, Tribune Want Ads can help you cut the traveling expense of your sales staff. Good used cars selected from those advertised in the Want Ad Section will increase the number of daily calls made by salesmen and reduce their selling expense.

Plant Superintendents! These Classifications Will Interest You!

Regardless of the type of plant you operate, you'll find opportunities to buy and sell economically in these Tribune Want Ad classifications:

Machinery & Equipment
Plumbing & Supplies
Business Directory
Light & Heavy Manufacturing
Building Materials
Miscellaneous

Check your plant and yards for idle equipment that can be sold. List such surplus material in a Tribune Want Ad for quick sale. Also check equipment in use that needs replacing. Then shop for your requirements in the Want Ad Section. You can be practically certain of finding what you need offered at an attractive saving in the Tribune Want Ad Section classifications listed above.

Purchasing Agents! Office Managers!

When you need to purchase materials or equipment of any kind, look first through these classifications in the Tribune Want Ad Section for bargains!

Office Devices—Trucks—Store Fixtures—Auction Sales—Machinery & Equipment—Automobile Tires—Business Directory, Office Furniture, Files, etc.—Printing Machinery & Supplies—Building Materials—Typewriters & Supplies.

These Classifications Will Interest Senior and Junior Executives!

From the president down to the occupant of the last office in "executive row" these Tribune Want Ad classifications can be used with profit.

Stocks & Bonds—Financial—Real Estate Loans—Mortgages—Legal Notices—Partnerships & Investments—Business Service—Businesses for Sale—Distributors—Real Estate for Exchange—Wanted to Rent—Manufacturing Property—To Rent—Manufacturing Property, Buildings, Offices and Shops—Floors and Lofts.

Employment Managers!

You can depend on the Tribune Help Wanted Ads to help find the right man for the job quickly! Use openly addressed ads if you want applicants at your door in the morning. Use box number identification where you want applications by mail. Then you can select the right man at your leisure.

Many of the most desirable workers give their qualifications in Tribune Want Ads in the Situations Wanted classification.. Jobs open today can be filled from the offers in today's Tribune.

A Word to Owners of Small Businesses!

Tribune Want Ads offer one of the most efficient services at the disposal of owners of small businesses. Use of the Business Directory and Parcel Post & Express classifications can help you extend your business beyond the limits of a neighborhood. Store fixtures, supplies, machinery and equipment of all kinds can be bought and sold profitably. If you need additional capital to expand the business, more than likely a want ad placed in the Business Opportunities column under Partnerships & Investments will bring desired results.
A new and better location can be found by consulting and using the Real Estate classifications. If you want to sell your business quickly, list it for sale under Businesses for Sale.

For the Man Who Wants a Business of His Own!

The Business Opportunities classification in the Tribune Want Ad Section can be a big help to the man who has decided to go into business for himself! Here in this market place are listed businesses of all kinds, located in all sections of the city and suburbs. By checking the offers carefully you can quickly get a line on the business you want!

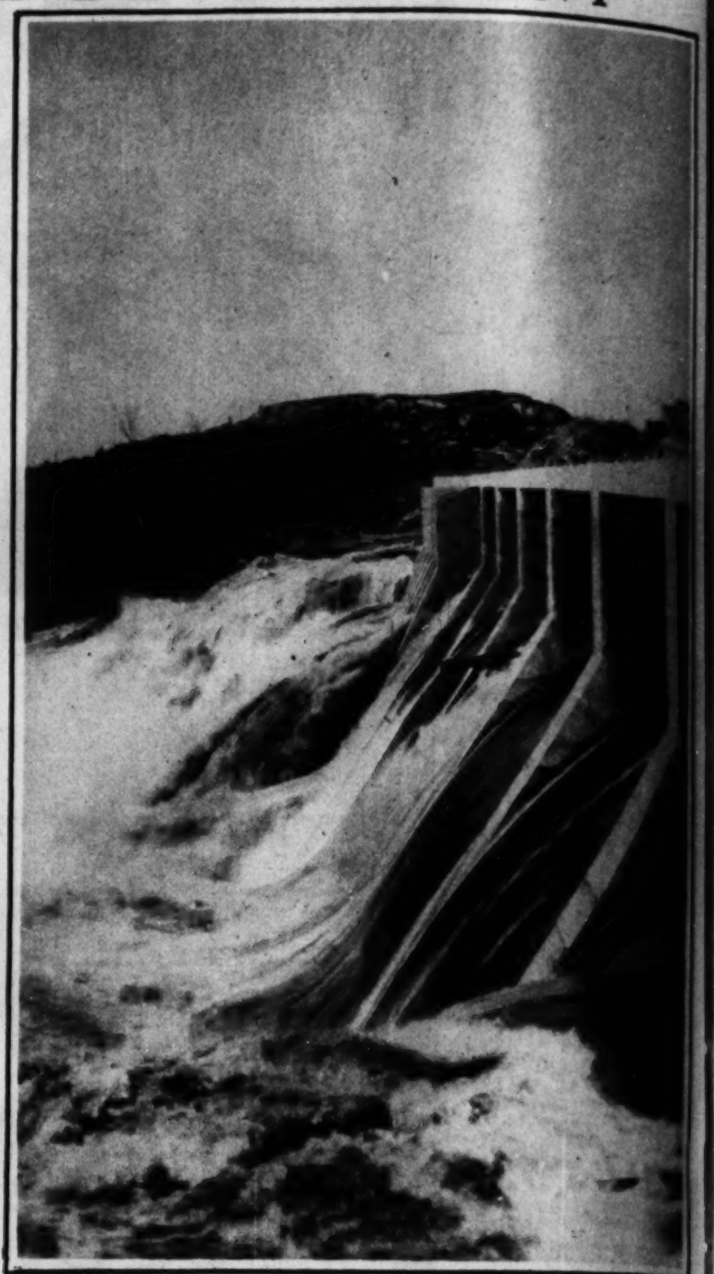
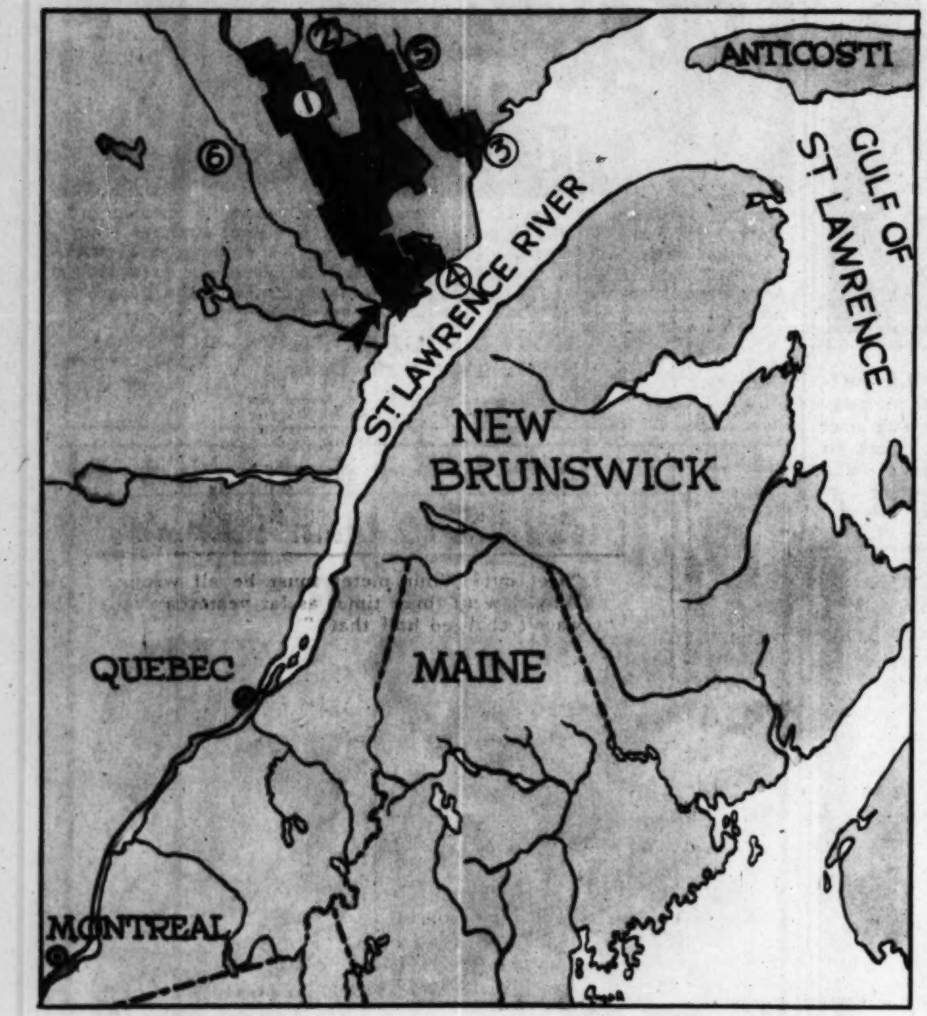
THE TRIBUNE'S NEW POWER AND PAPER MILL DEVELOPMENT

THE MAIN DAM—This view from downstream of the Outardes river, on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, in the eastern reaches of the province of Quebec, shows the principal unit of the Tribune's power and paper project in its Canadian timberlands. This dam, with its companion works, was eight years in course of construction and was completed in the spring. It will supply power for a paper mill to be erected by the Tribune on the Manicouagan river. Below the dam a headworks has been completed and the land has been graded for great flumes which will carry water down to the site of the power house which is to be erected. The plant will develop a minimum of 15,000 horsepower.



WATER pouring through the spillways of the main dam.



TRIBUNE TIMBERLANDS—This map shows the location and extent of the Tribune's Canadian timber limits. 1—The Manicouagan river; 2—the Toulnustouk river; 3—Shelter bay, terminus for logging operations in Tribune camp; 4—Franquelin, another Tribune port; 5—Rocky river; 6—Outardes river. The arrow indicates the site of the dam on the Outardes.

THE FORCE OF THE OUTARDES—This picture shows the torrents of flood waters from the Tribune's dam discharging through the by-pass canal.

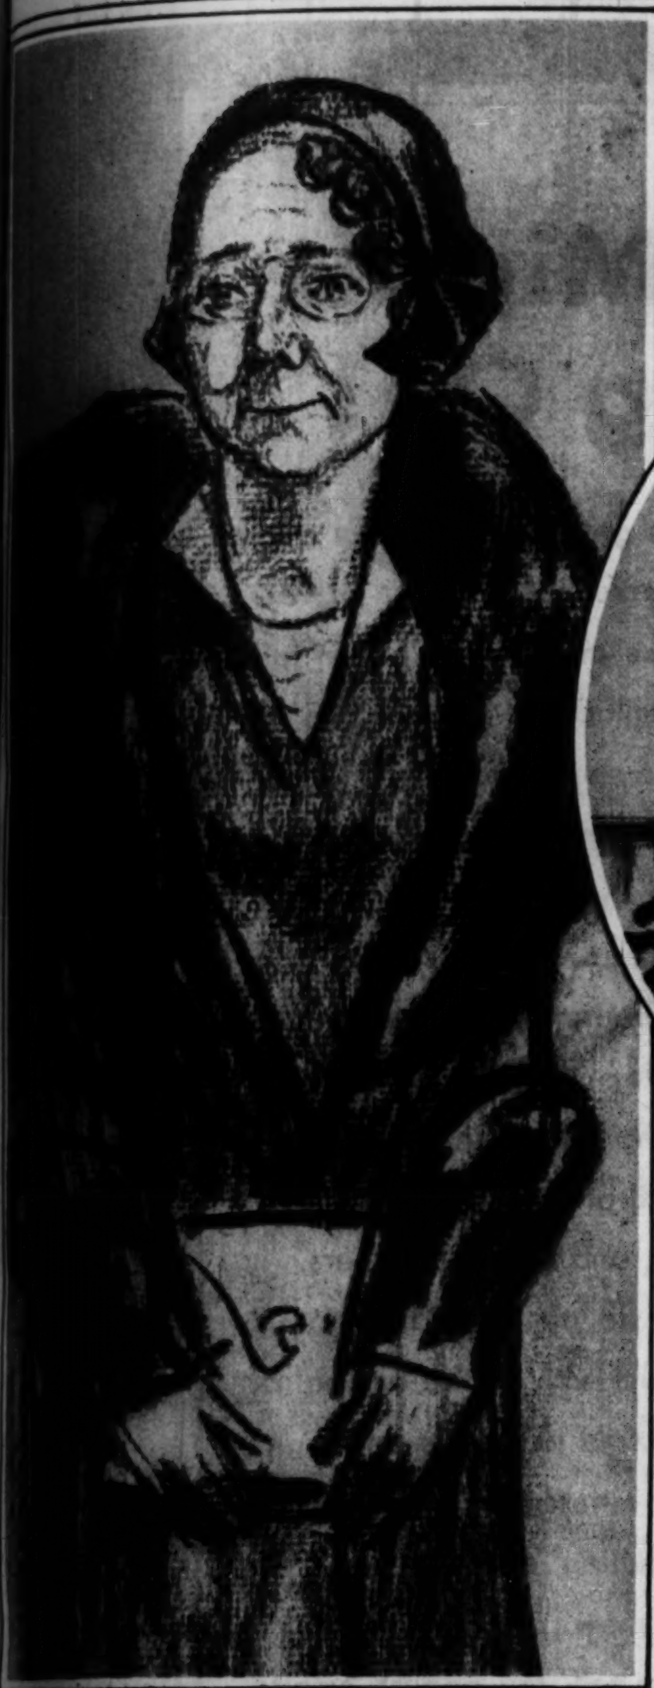
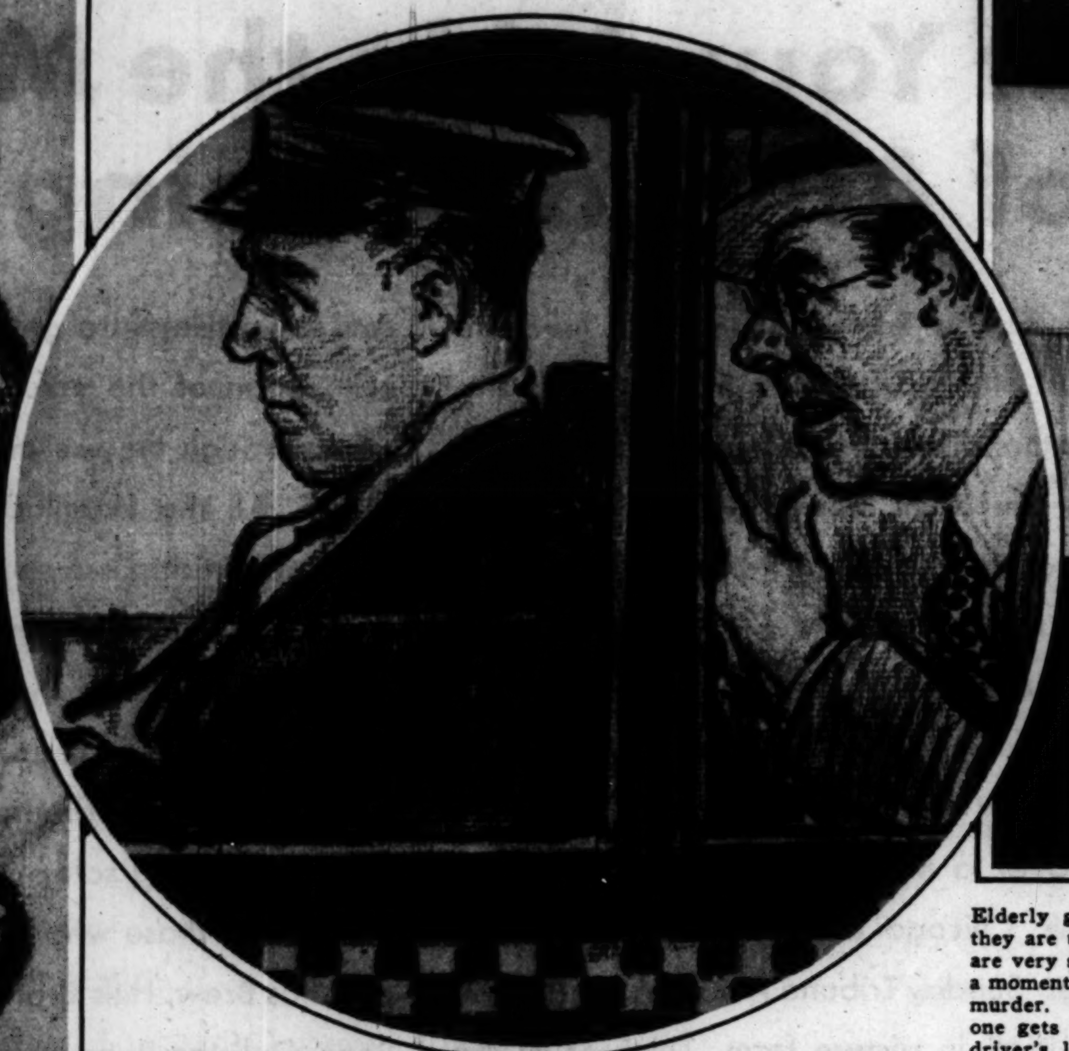
Taxi Fares

By W. E. Hill

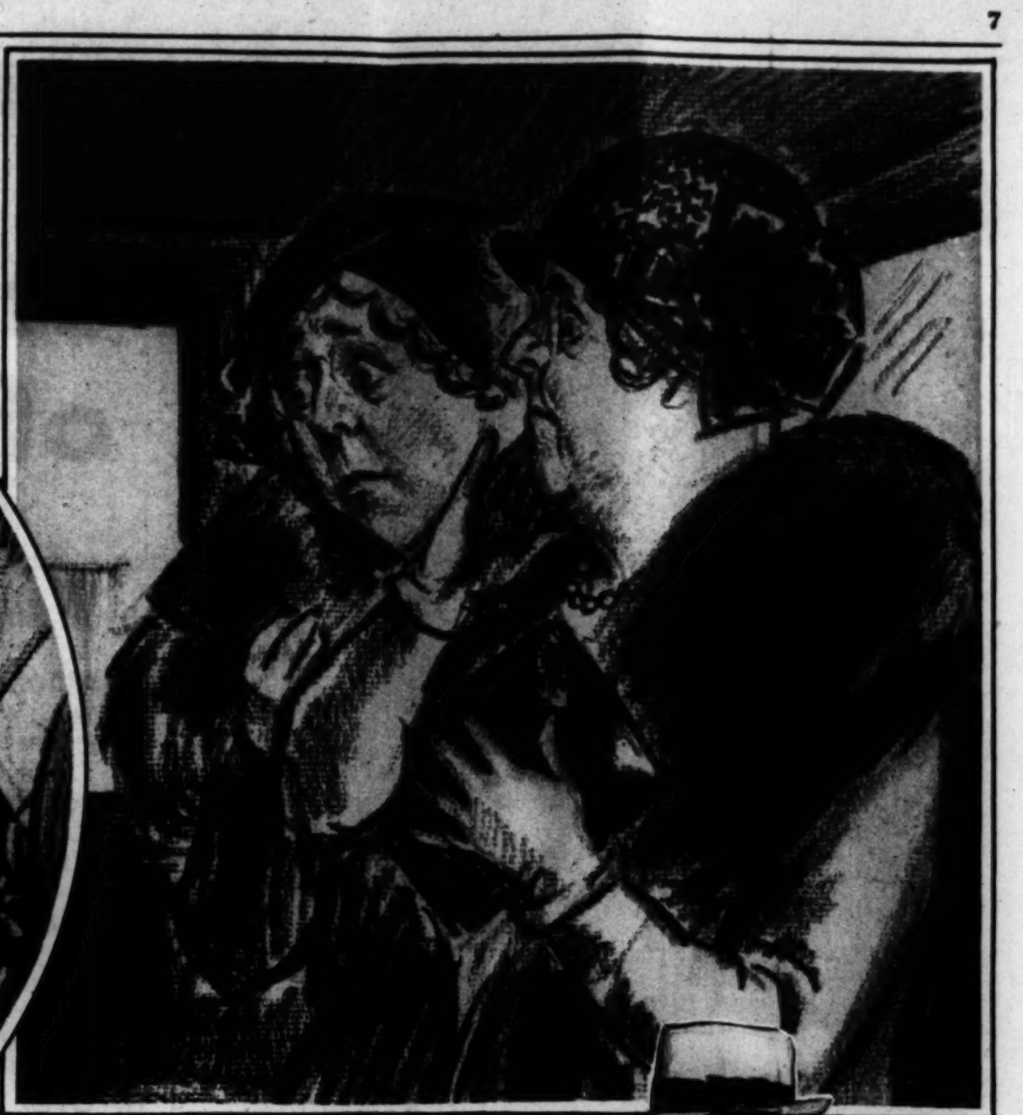
[Copyright: 1931: By The Chicago Tribune.]



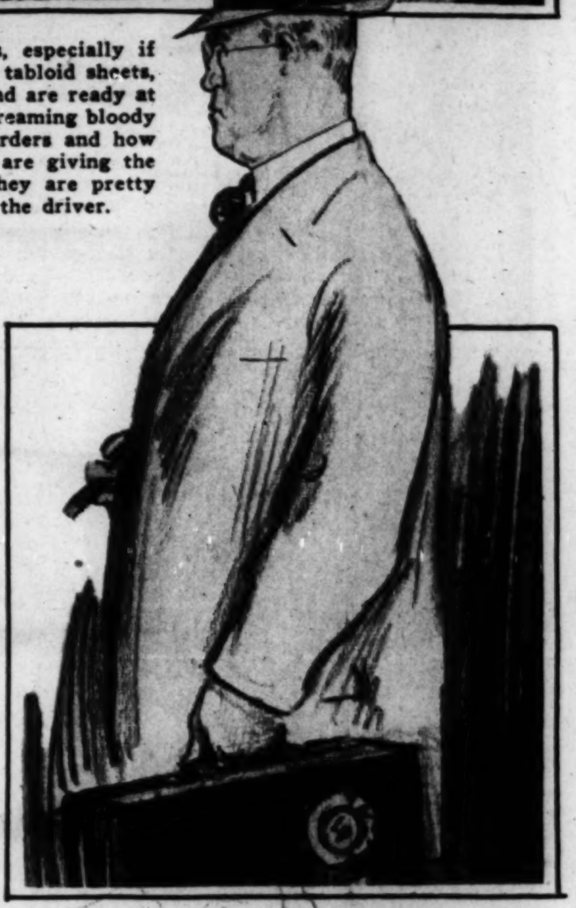
"Now, driver, you must promise to drive, O, so carefully! And very slowly, because it's not a month yet since my operation!"



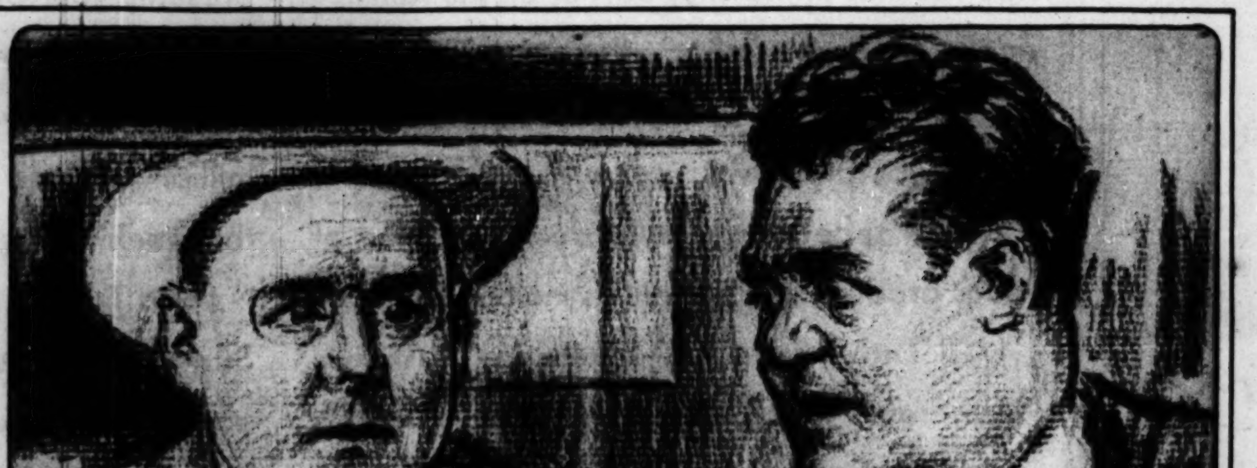
"Hey! What ya think you're doing? Y'oughta go across and then down to Garfield street. Why didja come up this street?" Nothing gives a taxi driver greater joy in this life than the fare who knows much more than necessary about the city traffic arteries.



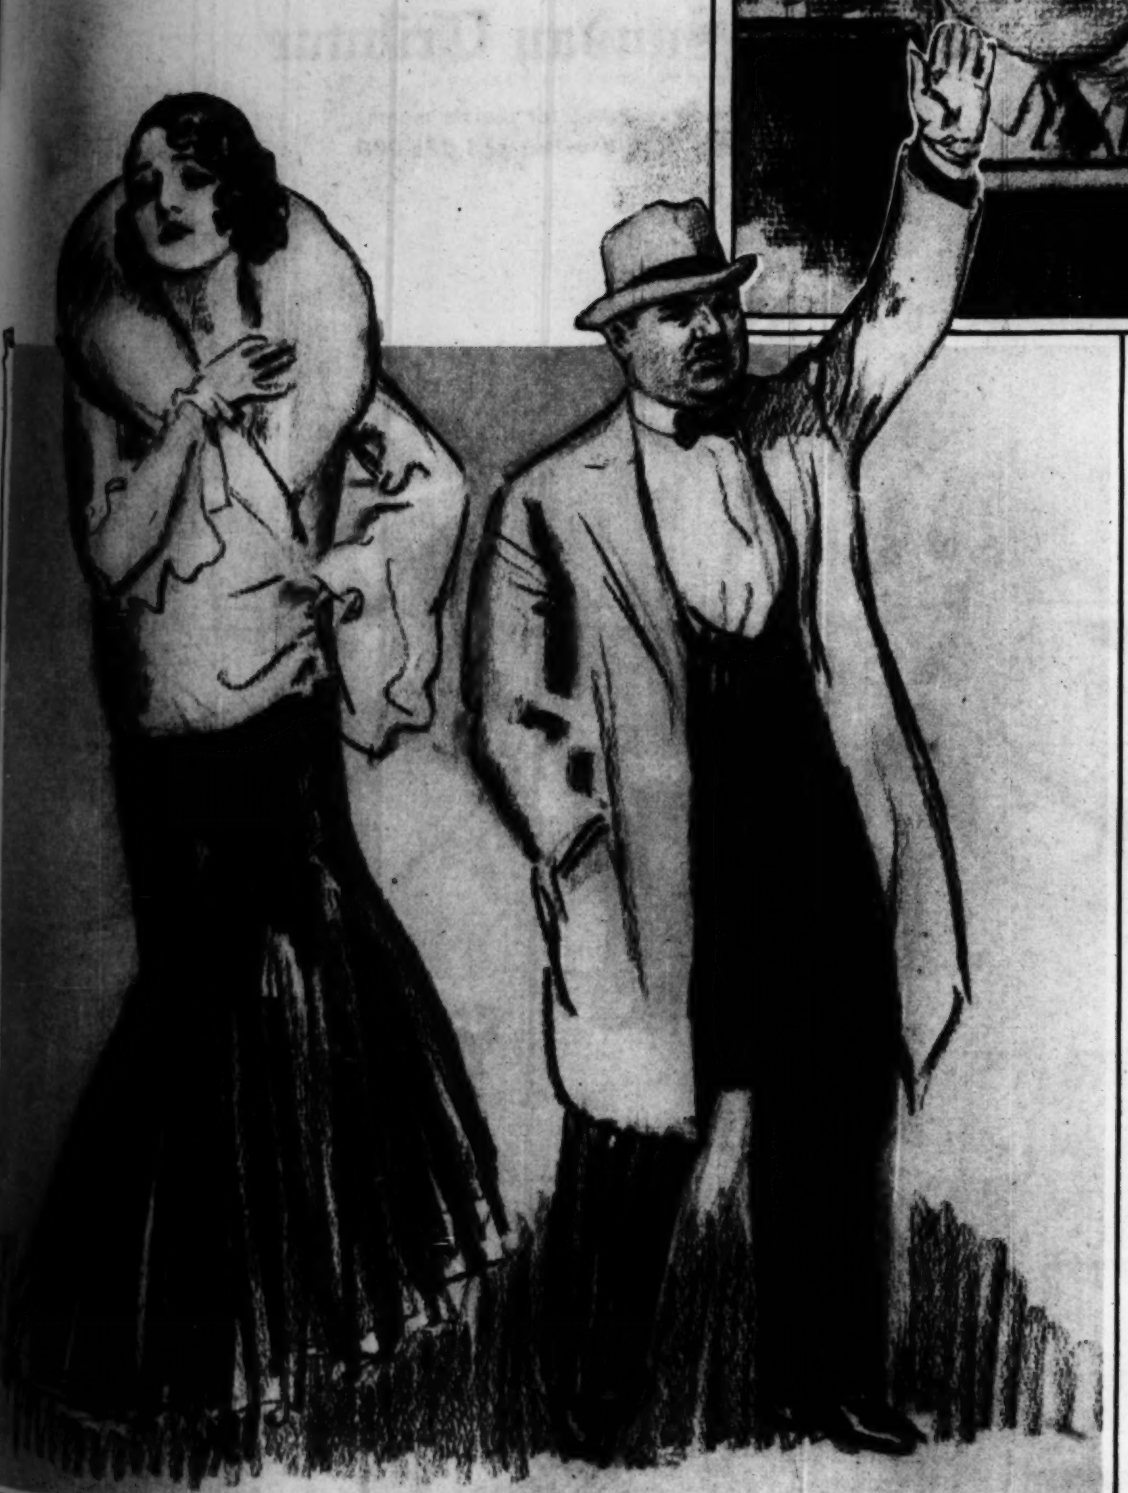
Elderly girls from the quieter localities, especially if they are up on all the crime news in the tabloid sheets, are very suspicious of city taxi drivers and are ready at a moment's notice to jump from the cab screaming bloody murder. They know all about torch murders and how one gets put on the spot. These ladies are giving the driver's license a rigid once-over and they are pretty certain that the attached photo is not of the driver.



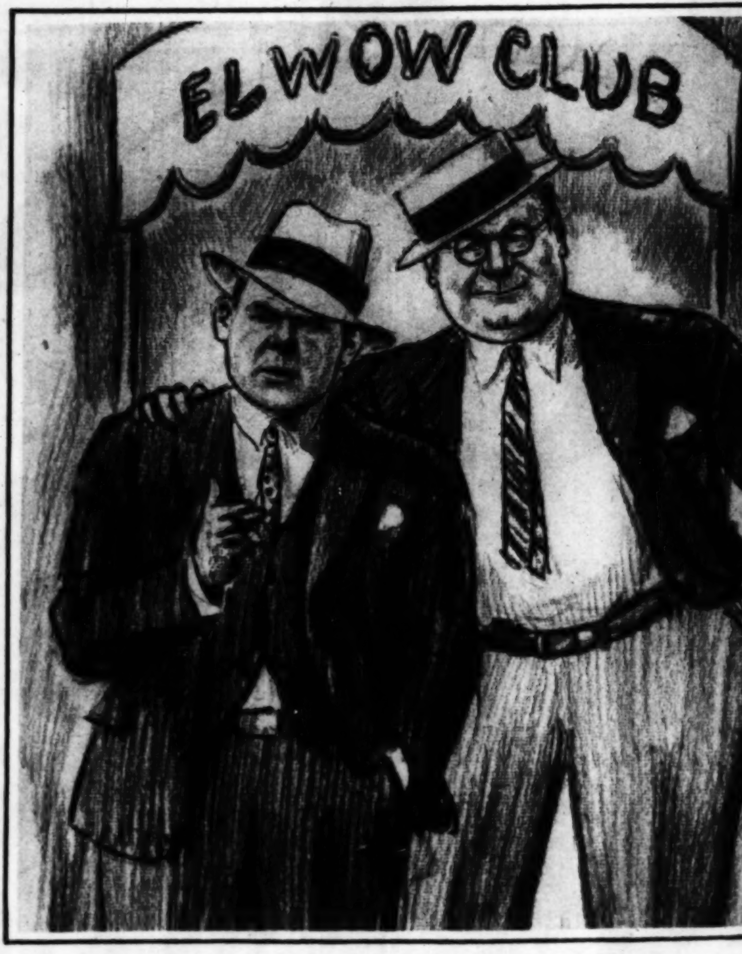
"Get out! Your meter must be all wrong! Why, I went three times as far yesterday and wasn't charged half that!"



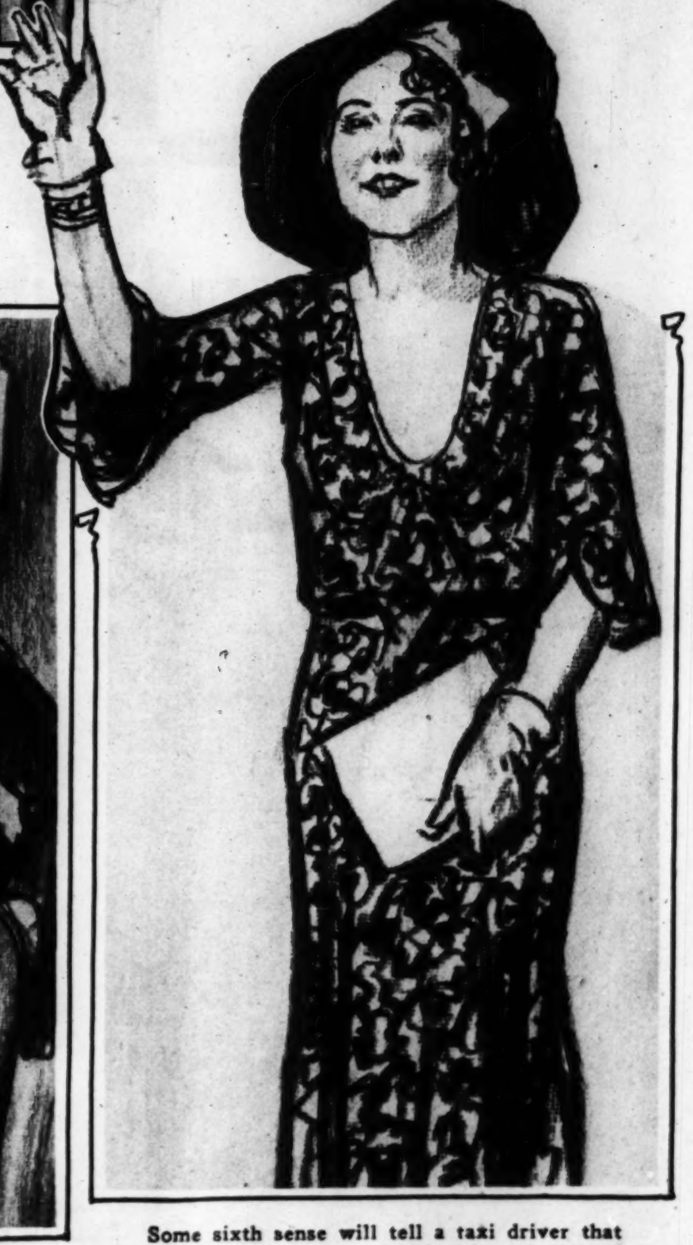
Certain people who do a lot of going hither and yon in taxis just naturally seem to inspire a feeling of chumminess on the part of chauffeurs. Just as certain parties have sex appeal, these others have something just as potent which impels a taxi driver to tell them all about his wife's gall bladder operation, or how last winter he was driving a guy home from a speakeasy, etc., etc. This power of inviting confidences is often a great trial to the possessor, especially in crowded traffic.



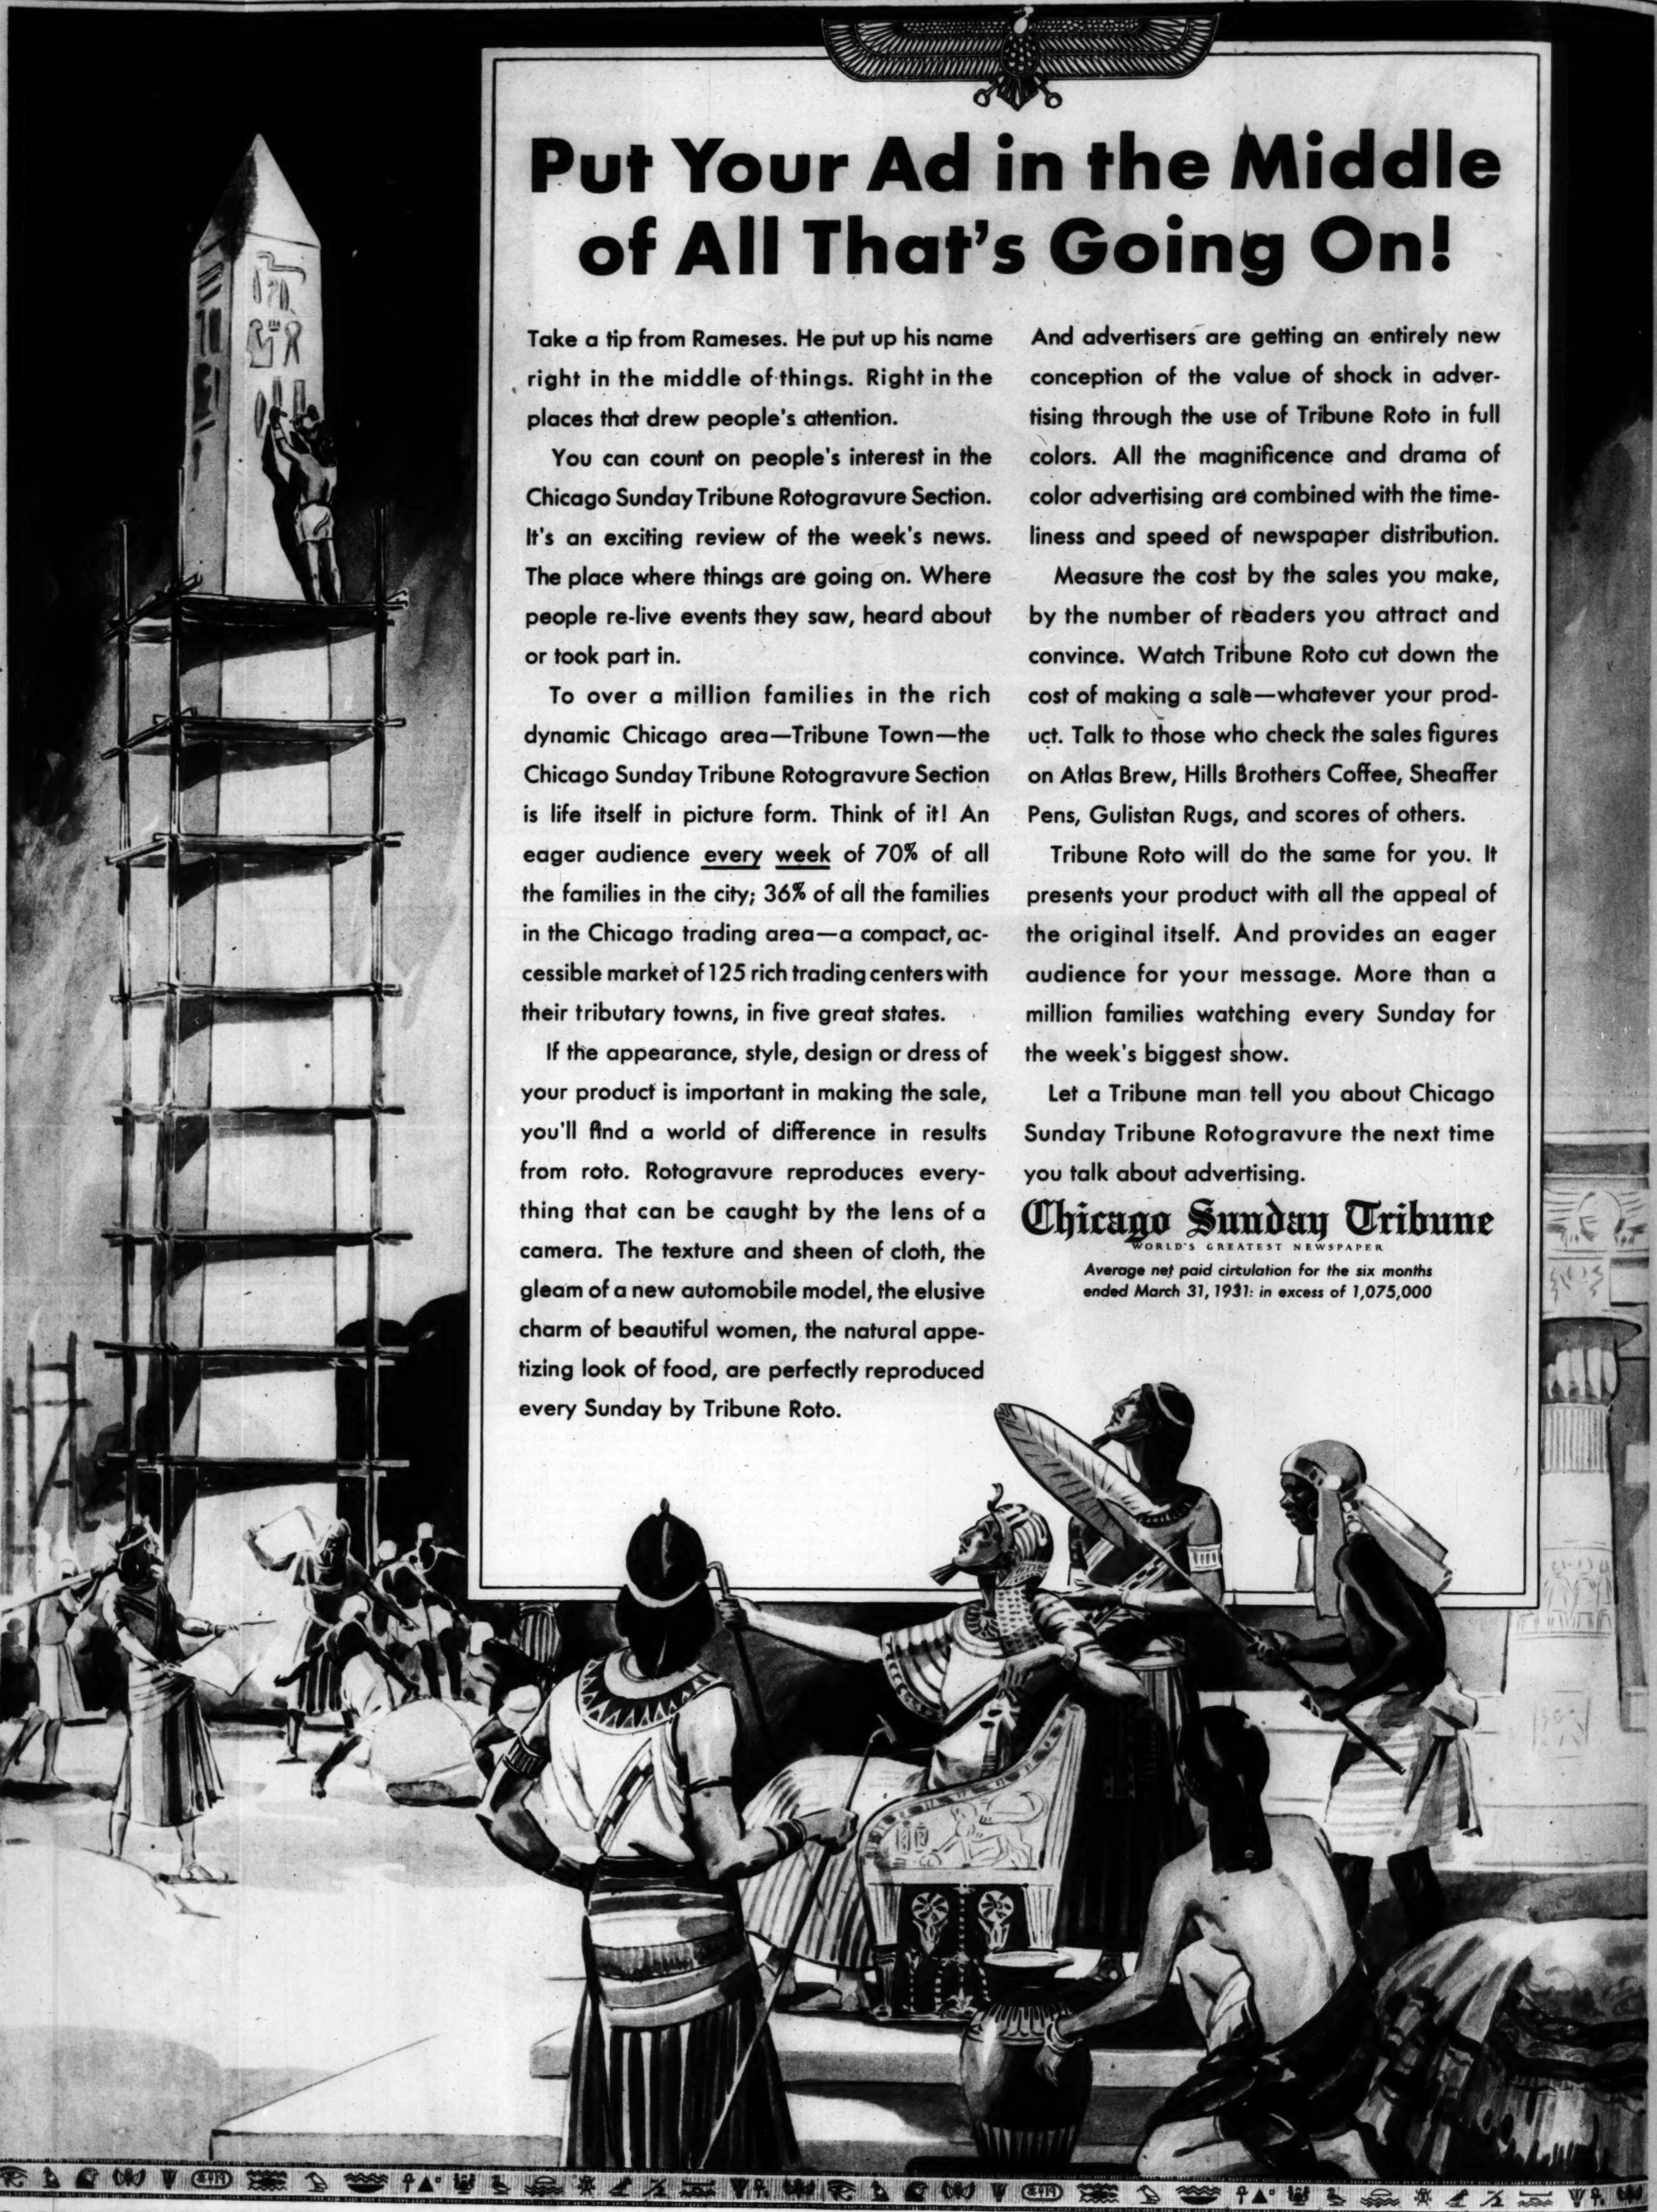
Taxi drivers are very sensitive to the fitness of things, and if they note that a party signaling a taxi in front of a theater on a wet night has the wrong overcoat and hat for evening clothes, they will pass him by every time.



These jovial boys are out for good, wholesome fun. They are about to hail a taxi and command the driver to take them where they can get some liquid refreshment of high power.



Some sixth sense will tell a taxi driver that this lovely lady has nothing but the exact change with nothing left for a tip.



Put Your Ad in the Middle of All That's Going On!

Take a tip from Rameses. He put up his name right in the middle of things. Right in the places that drew people's attention.

You can count on people's interest in the Chicago Sunday Tribune Rotogravure Section. It's an exciting review of the week's news. The place where things are going on. Where people re-live events they saw, heard about or took part in.

To over a million families in the rich dynamic Chicago area—Tribune Town—the Chicago Sunday Tribune Rotogravure Section is life itself in picture form. Think of it! An eager audience every week of 70% of all the families in the city; 36% of all the families in the Chicago trading area—a compact, accessible market of 125 rich trading centers with their tributary towns, in five great states.

If the appearance, style, design or dress of your product is important in making the sale, you'll find a world of difference in results from roto. Rotogravure reproduces everything that can be caught by the lens of a camera. The texture and sheen of cloth, the gleam of a new automobile model, the elusive charm of beautiful women, the natural appetizing look of food, are perfectly reproduced every Sunday by Tribune Roto.

And advertisers are getting an entirely new conception of the value of shock in advertising through the use of Tribune Roto in full colors. All the magnificence and drama of color advertising are combined with the timeliness and speed of newspaper distribution.

Measure the cost by the sales you make, by the number of readers you attract and convince. Watch Tribune Roto cut down the cost of making a sale—whatever your product. Talk to those who check the sales figures on Atlas Brew, Hills Brothers Coffee, Sheaffer Pens, Gulistan Rugs, and scores of others.

Tribune Roto will do the same for you. It presents your product with all the appeal of the original itself. And provides an eager audience for your message. More than a million families watching every Sunday for the week's biggest show.

Let a Tribune man tell you about Chicago Sunday Tribune Rotogravure the next time you talk about advertising.

MY PLAN IS TO CONVINCE LILLUMS HOW HOLY AND SACRED LOVE IS -- YOU'RE TO GO ALONG AS A SCOFFER!
I SURE HATE TO IMPROVE YOUR STANDIN' WITH THAT LIL' RADIATOR -- BUT I FEEL A BIT MERCENARY TO-DAY -- SLIP ME TH' 'QUATAH'!
NO PAY IN ADVANCE! DO YOUR STUFF FIRST AND YOU GET THE EQUIVALENT OF TWENTY-FIVE CENTS IN FOOD --
OKAY! BUT I'M HUNGRY RIGHT NOW!
BEACH PARKING 25¢
BEEZIE AND I DIFFER ON A VERY SACRED SUBJEC' -- AND WE'D LIKE TO HAVE YOU DECIDE WHICH IS RIGHT!
I'M HUNGRY!
NOT POOR LITTLE ME!
T'ME LOVE IS A VEHICLE FOR FUN -- LOVE 'EM AND LEAVE 'EM IS, MY MOTTO -- LOOK AT THE FUN Y'HAVE!
WHY, BEEZIE BINKS?
Y'SEE, LIL' GIRL -- LOVE IS A SACRED AND HOLY THING -- MORE SACRED THAN THE ANGELS EVEN!
I'M FED UP ON CONVERSATION -- I CRAVES REAL CALORIES!
HOLY CATS! I S'POSE I'LL HAVE TO TAKE TH SEA-HORSE OUT AND FEED HIM!
I'M SO HUNGRY I RATTLE INSIDE!
ONE MORE CRACK ABOUT BEIN' HUNGRY -- AND I'LL SLAY YOU, I THINK -- YOU BIG PORK MERGER!
Y'LOOK PALE, BEEZIE! ARE YOU ILL?
AW, BUGS! I'M HUNGRY I GUESS!
POW!
OIL YOUR TONSILS! GEDUNK

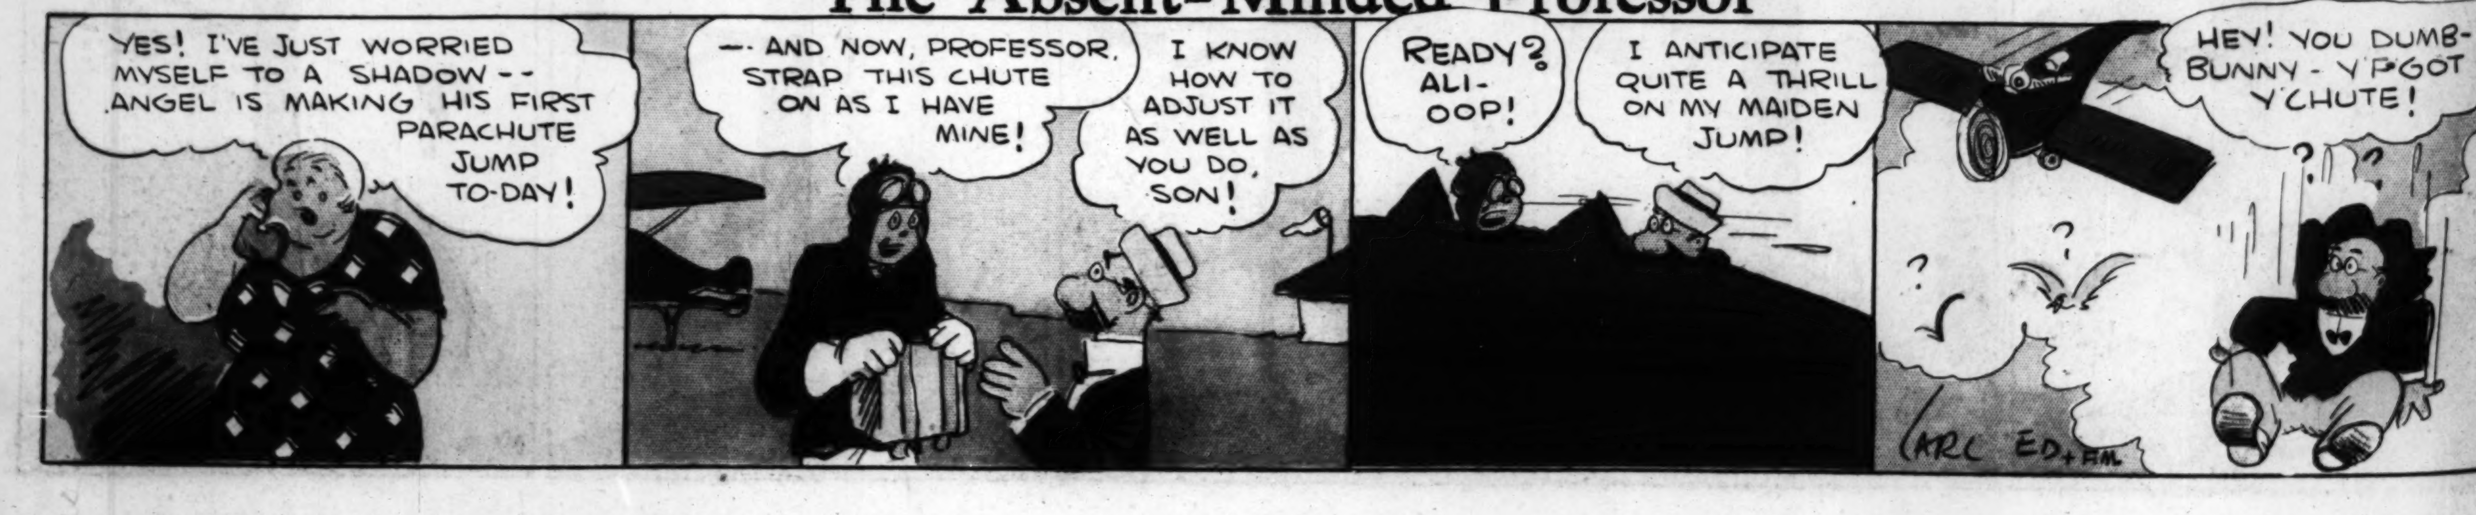
The Absent-Minded Professor



YES! I'VE JUST WORRIED MYSELF TO A SHADOW -- ANGEL IS MAKING HIS FIRST PARACHUTE JUMP TO-DAY!
-- AND NOW, PROFESSOR, STRAP THIS CHUTE ON AS I HAVE MINE!
I KNOW HOW TO ADJUST IT AS WELL AS YOU DO, SON!
READY? ALI-OOP!
I ANTICIPATE QUITE A THRILL ON MY MAIDEN JUMP!
HEY! YOU DUMB-BUNNY - Y'FGOT Y'CHUTE!

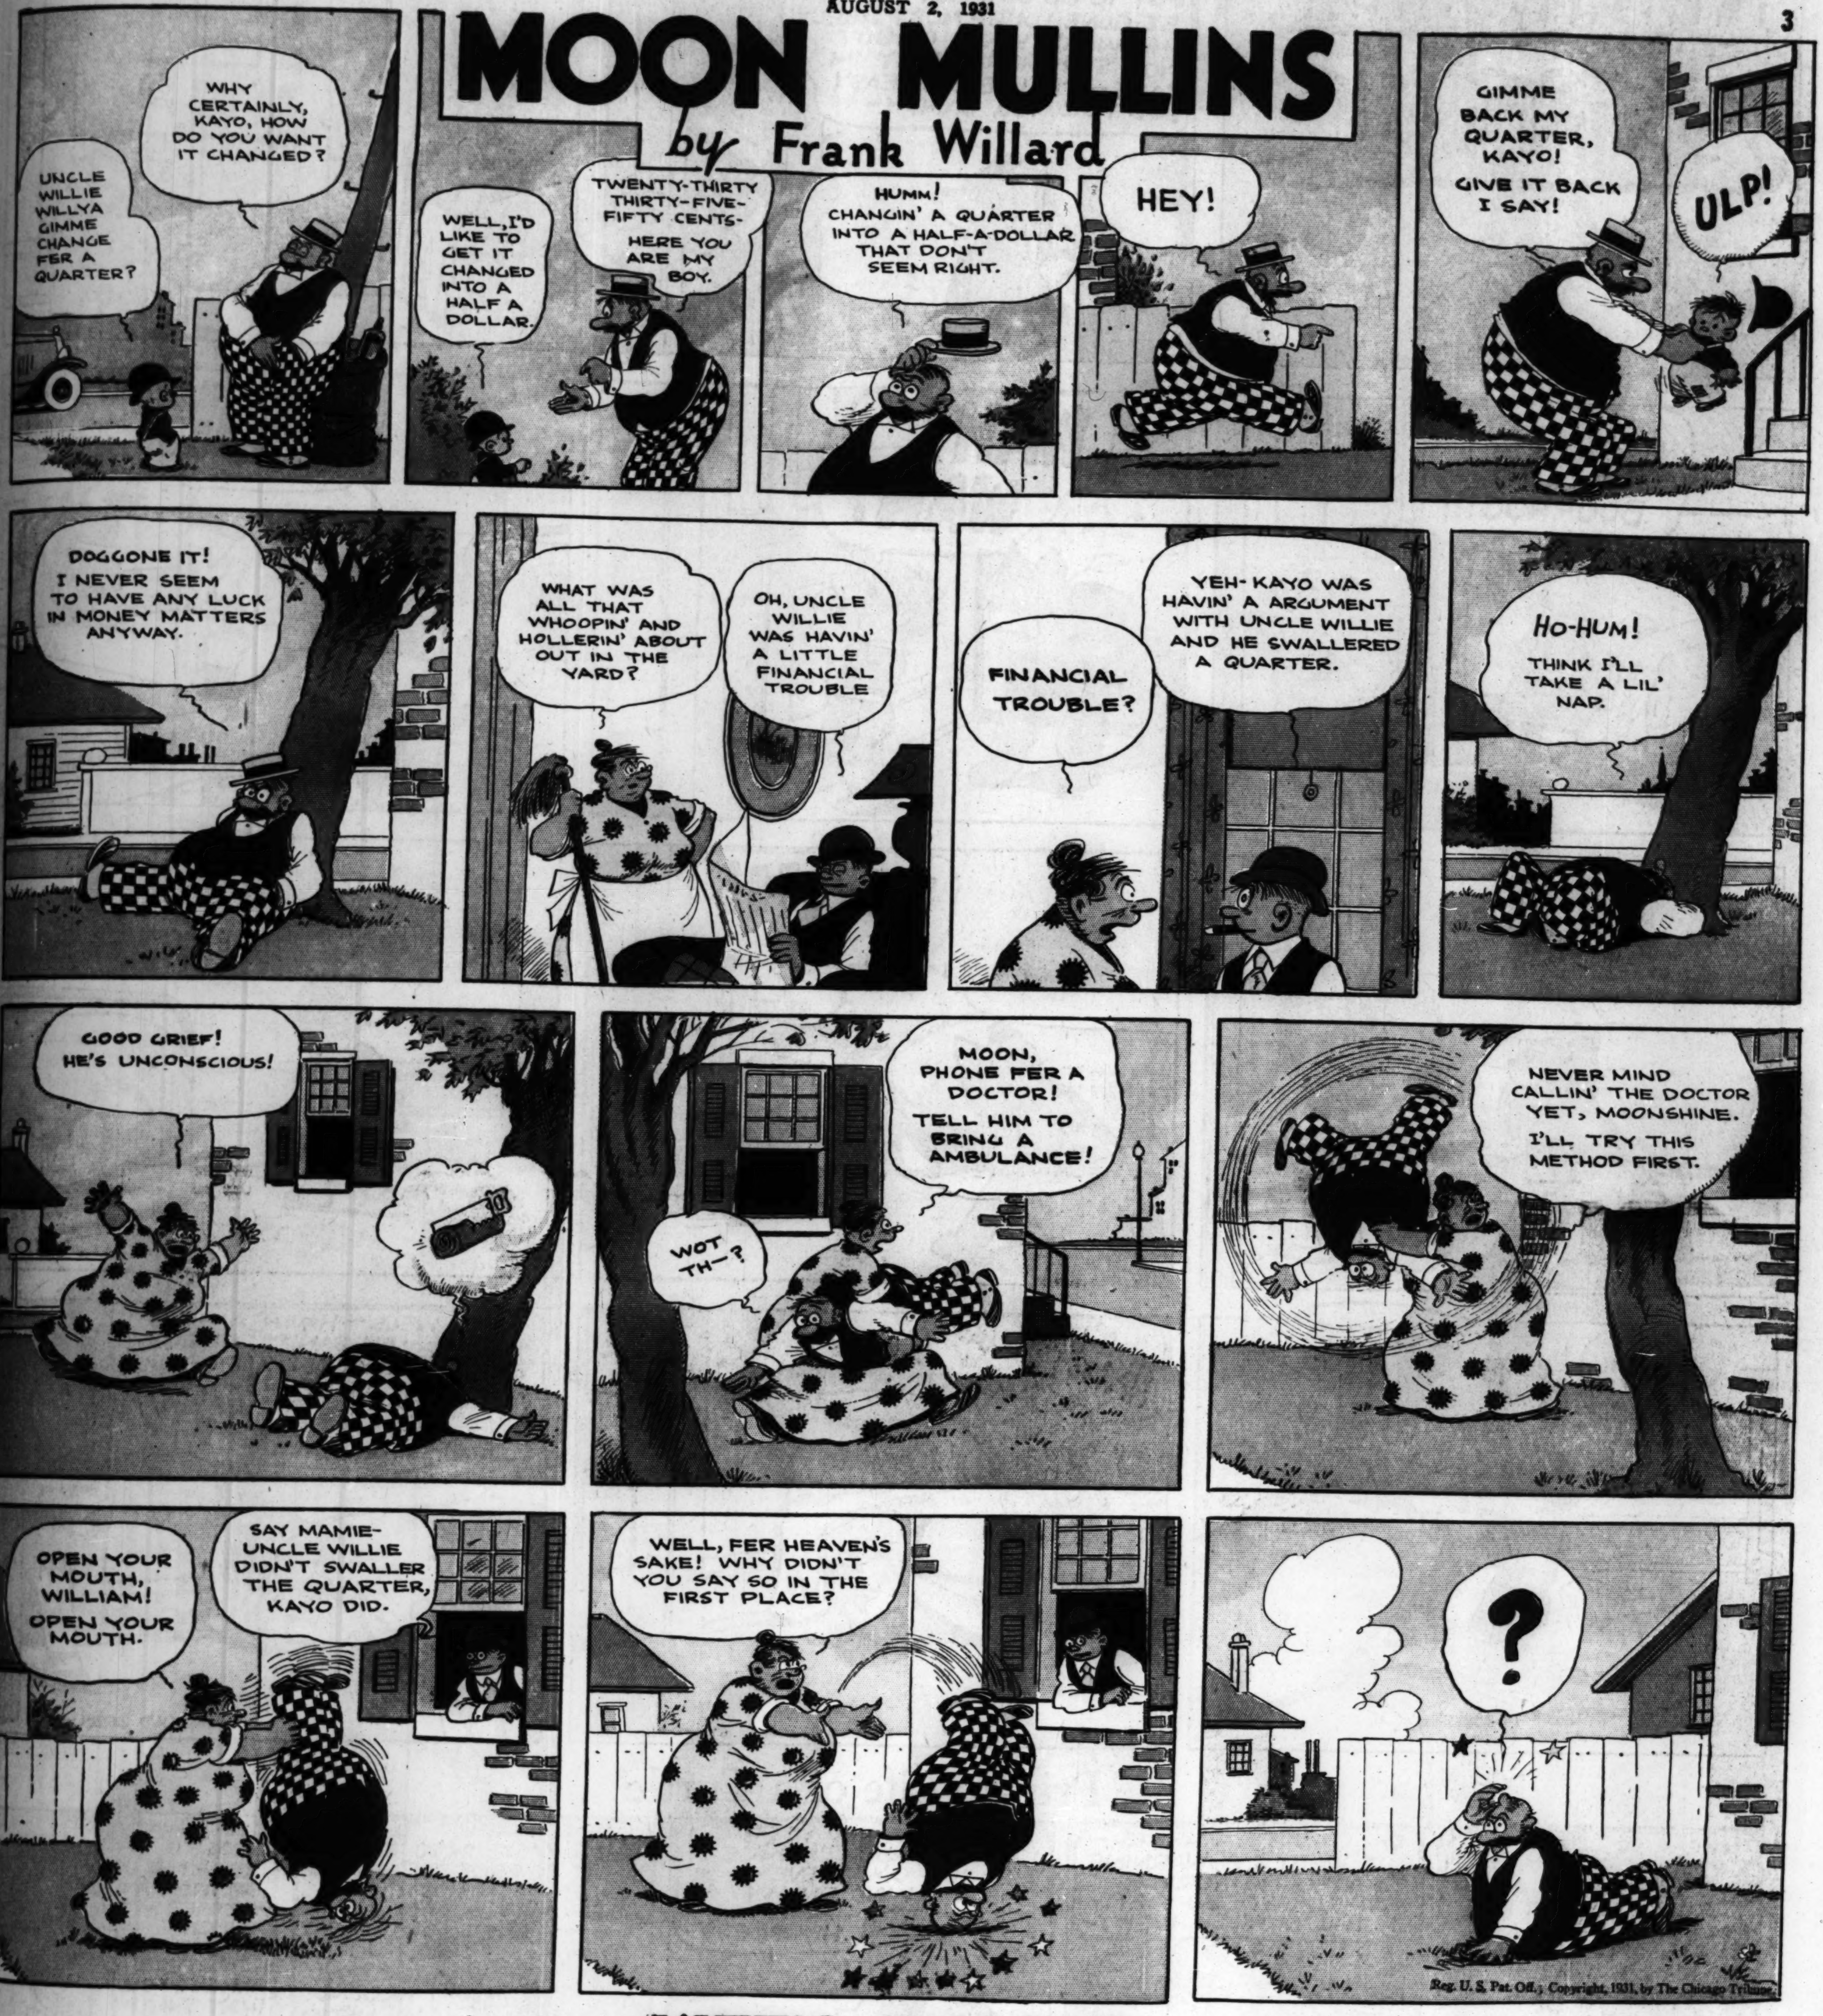
MOON MULLINS

by Frank Willard



UNCLE WILLIE WILLYA GIMME CHANGE FER A QUARTER?
WHY CERTAINLY, KAYO, HOW DO YOU WANT IT CHANGED?
WELL, I'D LIKE TO GET IT CHANGED INTO A HALF A DOLLAR.
TWENTY-THIRTY THIRTY-FIVE-FIFTY CENTS- HERE YOU ARE MY BOY.
HUMM! CHANGIN' A QUARTER INTO A HALF-A-DOLLAR THAT DON'T SEEM RIGHT.
HEY!
GIMME BACK MY QUARTER, KAYO! GIVE IT BACK I SAY!
ULP!
DOGGONE IT! I NEVER SEEM TO HAVE ANY LUCK IN MONEY MATTERS ANYWAY.
WHAT WAS ALL THAT WHOOPIN' AND HOLLERIN' ABOUT OUT IN THE YARD?
OH, UNCLE WILLIE WAS HAVIN' A LITTLE FINANCIAL TROUBLE
FINANCIAL TROUBLE?
YEH- KAYO WAS HAVIN' A ARGUMENT WITH UNCLE WILLIE AND HE SWALLERED A QUARTER.
HO-HUM! THINK I'LL TAKE A LIL' NAP.
GOOD GRIEF! HE'S UNCONSCIOUS!
MOON, PHONE FER A DOCTOR! TELL HIM TO BRING A AMBULANCE!
WOT TH-?
NEVER MIND CALLIN' THE DOCTOR YET, MOONSHINE. I'LL TRY THIS METHOD FIRST.
OPEN YOUR MOUTH, WILLIAM! OPEN YOUR MOUTH.
SAY MAMIE- UNCLE WILLIE DIDN'T SWALLER THE QUARTER, KAYO DID.
WELL, FER HEAVEN'S SAKE! WHY DIDN'T YOU SAY SO IN THE FIRST PLACE?

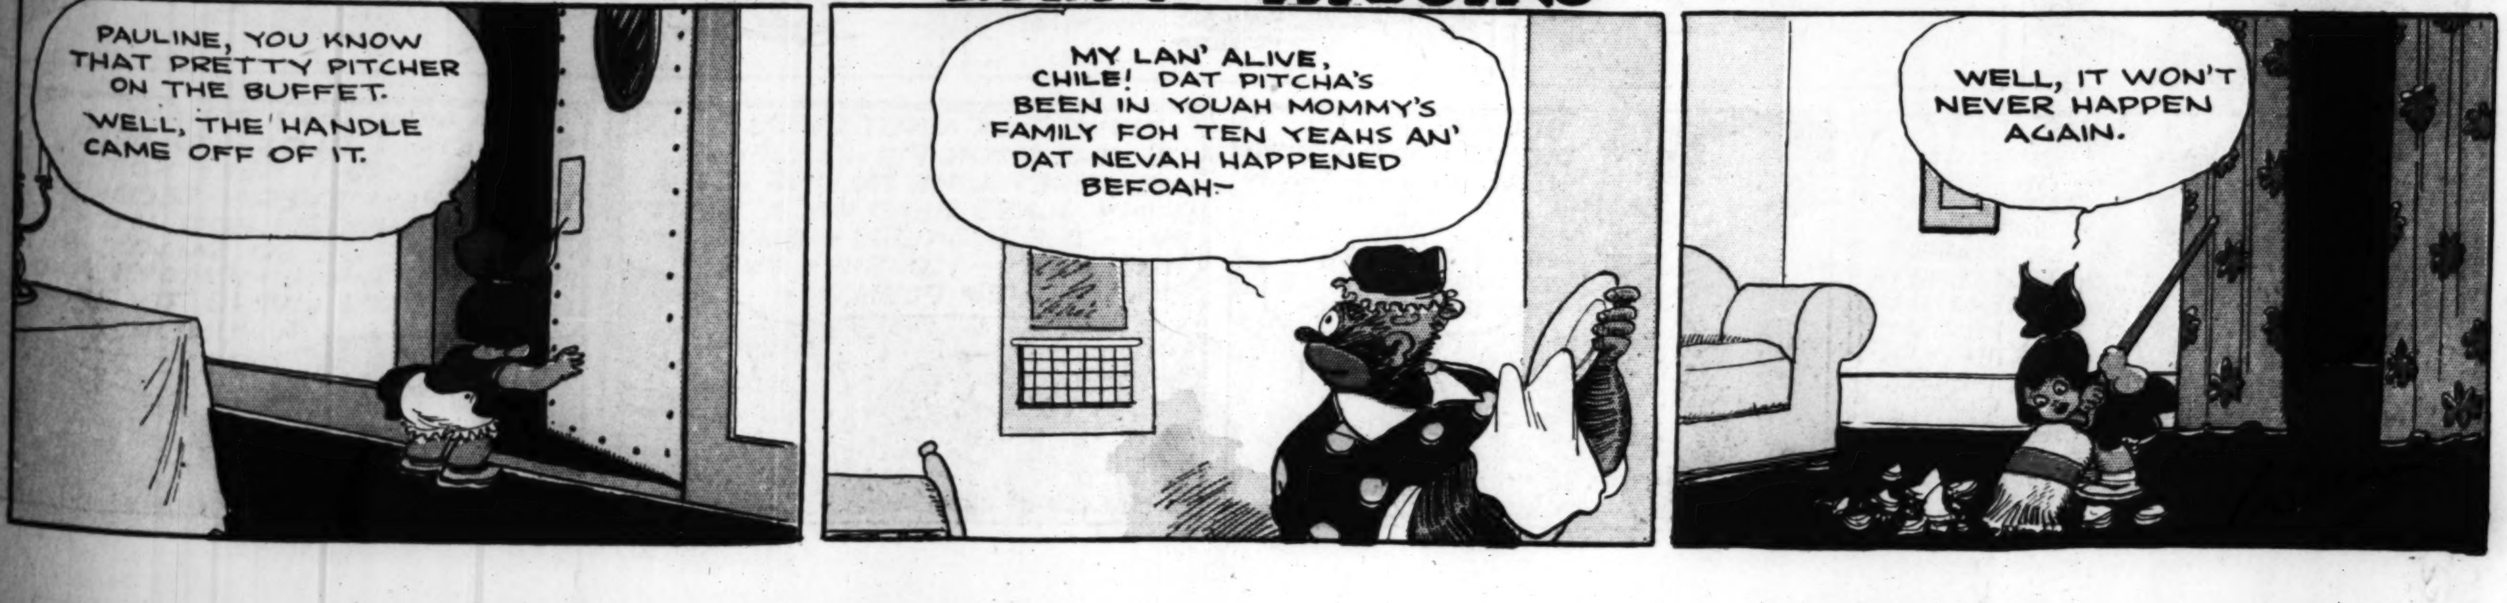
KITTY HIGGINS



PAULINE, YOU KNOW THAT PRETTY PITCHER ON THE BUFFET. WELL, THE HANDLE CAME OFF OF IT.
MY LAN' ALIVE, CHILE! DAT PITCHA'S BEEN IN YOUAH MOMMY'S FAMILY FOH TEN YEAHS AN' DAT NEVAH HAPPENED BEFOAH-WELL, IT WON'T NEVER HAPPEN AGAIN.

Little Orphan Annie
PAT'S SOUND ASLEEP AT LAST- NOW, SANDY, I'VE GOT TO GO OUT, BUT I WON'T BE GONE LONG- MOST LIKELY SHE WON'T WAKE UP, BUT YOU STAY HERE, JUST IN CASE- IT'LL BE AN EASY JOB FOR YOU, SANDY-
AN-NIE!
BANG!
AN-NIE! BOO-HOO!!!
???
WAH! WAH!
YEOW!
BLAH!
HA!
YI!
HA! HA! HA! HA! HA-HA- HA!
WELL, WELL- HAVIN' A HIGH OLD TIME- EH, SANDY? I HEARD YOU TWO WHOOPIN' IT UP AS I CAME UP-STAIRS- I'LL BET YOU WOKE PAT UP ON PURPOSE, SO SHE'D PLAY WITH YOU-

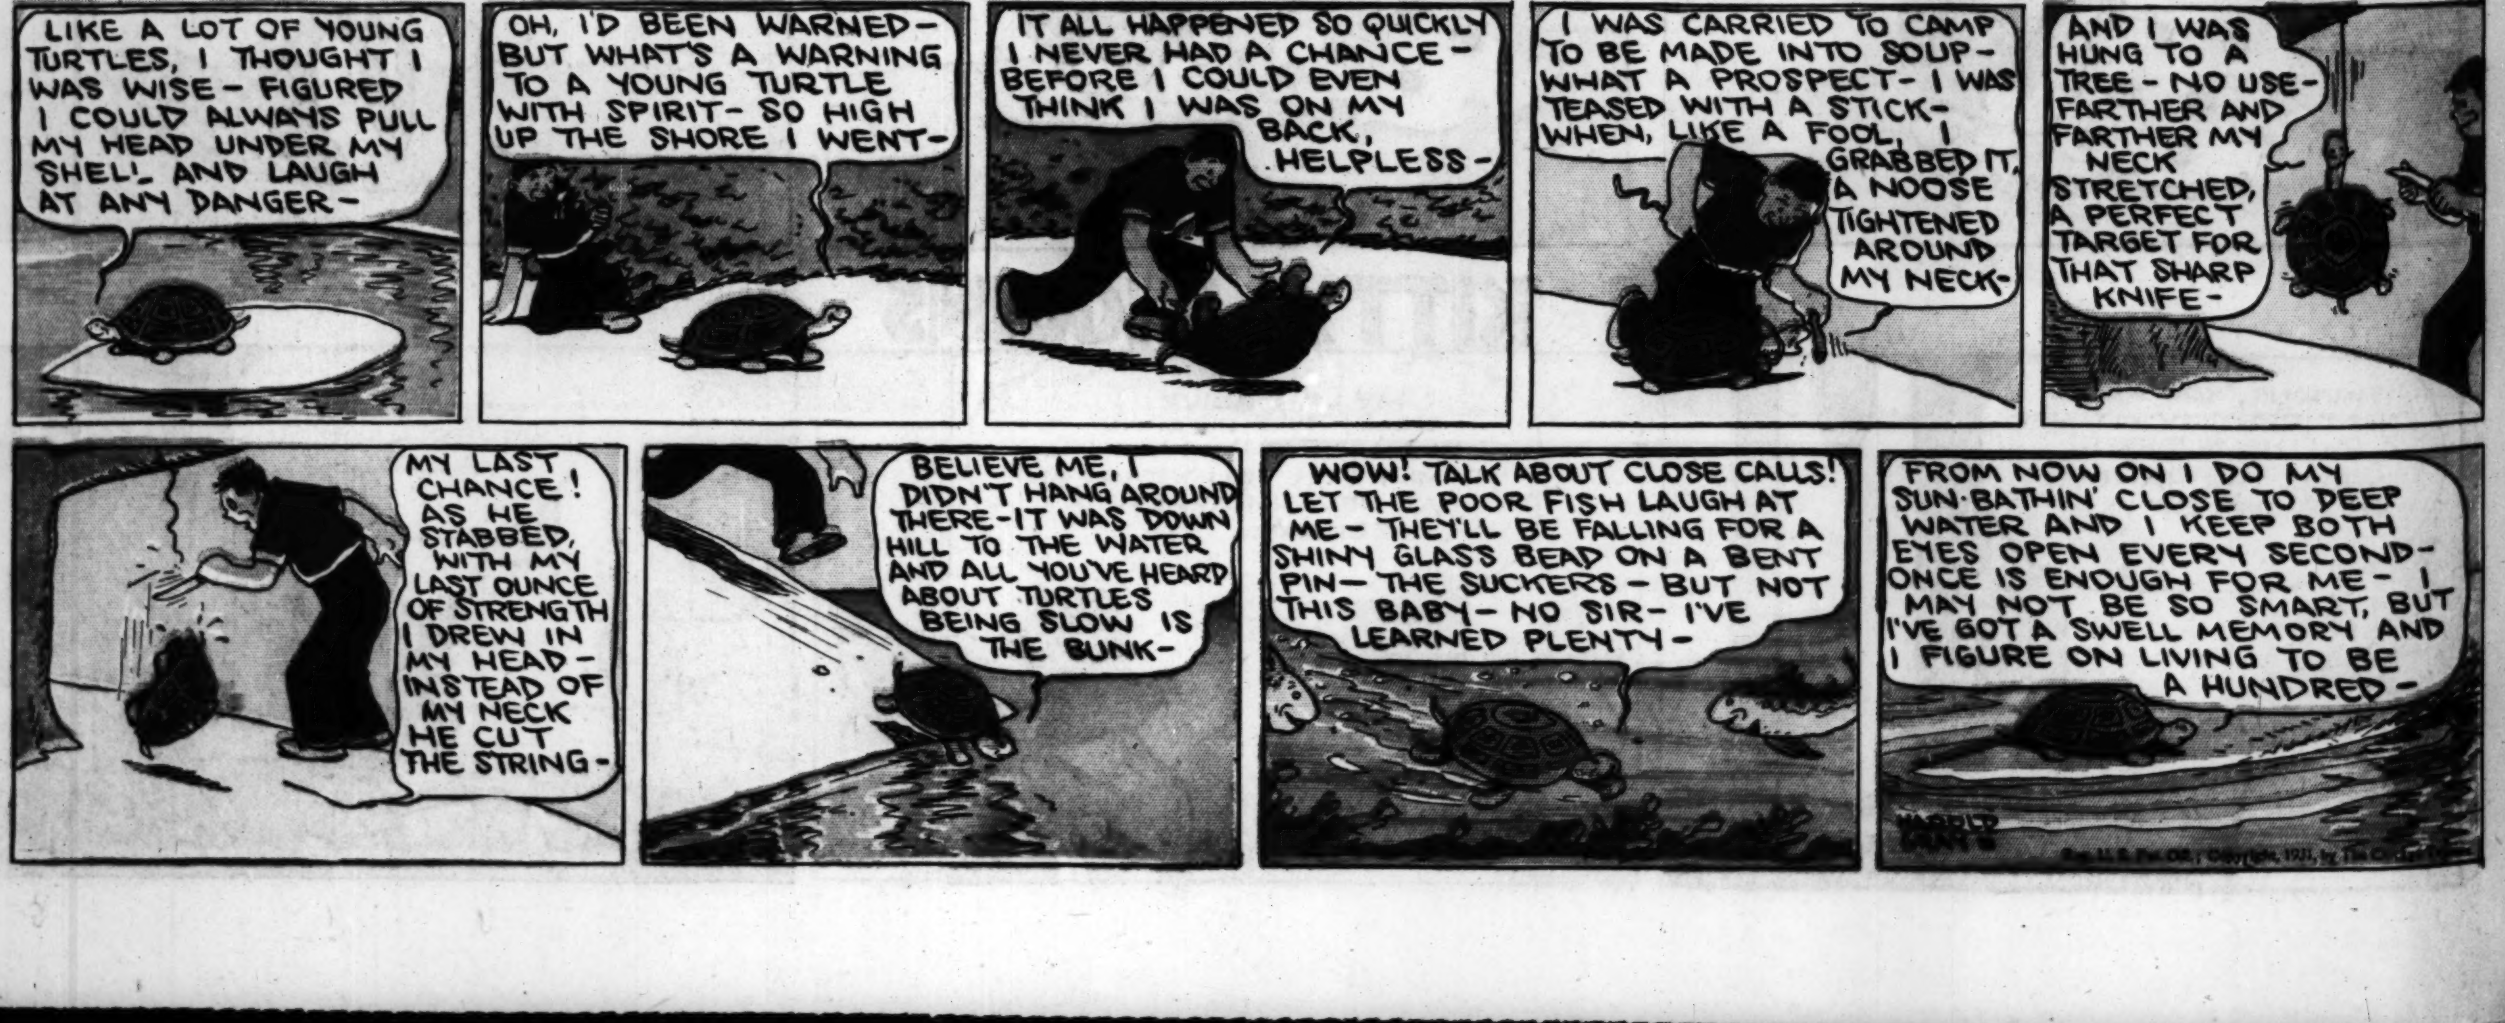
Private Life of a Turtle



LIKE A LOT OF YOUNG TURTLES, I THOUGHT I WAS WISE- FIGURED I COULD ALWAYS PULL MY HEAD UNDER MY SHELL AND LAUGH AT ANY DANGER-
OH, I'D BEEN WARNED- BUT WHAT'S A WARNING TO A YOUNG TURTLE WITH SPIRIT- SO HIGH UP THE SHORE I WENT-
IT ALL HAPPENED SO QUICKLY I NEVER HAD A CHANCE- BEFORE I COULD EVEN THINK I WAS ON MY BACK, HELPLESS-
I WAS CARRIED TO CAMP TO BE MADE INTO SOUP- WHAT A PROSPECT- I WAS TEASED WITH A STICK- WHEN, LIKE A FOOL, I GRABBED IT, A NOOSE TIGHTENED AROUND MY NECK-
AND I WAS HUNG TO A TREE- NO USE- FARTHER AND FARTHER MY NECK STRETCHED, A PERFECT TARGET FOR THAT SHARP KNIFE-
MY LAST CHANCE! AS HE STABBED, WITH MY LAST OUNCE OF STRENGTH I DREW IN MY HEAD- INSTEAD OF MY NECK HE CUT THE STRING-
BELIEVE ME, I DIDN'T HANG AROUND THERE- IT WAS DOWN HILL TO THE WATER AND ALL YOU'VE HEARD ABOUT TURTLES BEING SLOW IS THE BUNK-
WOW! TALK ABOUT CLOSE CALLS! LET THE POOR FISH LAUGH AT ME- THEY'LL BE FALLING FOR A SHINY GLASS BEAD ON A BENT PIN- THE SUCKERS- BUT NOT THIS BABY- NO SIR- I'VE LEARNED PLENTY-
FROM NOW ON I DO MY SUN-BATHIN' CLOSE TO DEEP WATER AND I KEEP BOTH EYES OPEN EVERY SECOND- ONCE IS ENOUGH FOR ME- I MAY NOT BE SO SMART, BUT I'VE GOT A SWELL MEMORY AND I FIGURE ON LIVING TO BE A HUNDRED-

WHEN DAD LEAVES HIS OFFICE HE FORGETS ALL ABOUT BUSINESS WORRIES TILL NEXT DAY!
AND HE'S WISE— EV'RYBODY SHOULD RELAX A LITTLE!
YEAH—MISTER TROUTLINE, THE FISH DEALER, NEVER EATS FISH 'CAUSE HE DOESN'T WANT TO THINK OF HIS BUSINESS!
THAT REMINDS ME OF BEEFSTEAK WILLIAM WHO HAS A CHOP HOUSE — HE'S A VEGETARIAN!
—AN' LITTLE PETE TAGLIARINI'S DAD WON'T WORK IN HIS GARDEN WHEN HE GETS HOME!
WHY?
'CAUSE HE'S A DITCH DIGGER ALL DAY LONG!
WHAT DOES HE DO WHEN HE GETS HOME?
HE LISTENS TO MISTER GABBLE, THE RADIO ANNOUNCER!
—AN' MISTER GABBLE DOESN'T SAY A WORD WHEN HE GETS HOME— 'CAUSE HE DOESN'T LIKE TO TALK SHOP!
MY COUSIN GEORGE WOULD LIKE TO FORGET BUSINESS, ONLY HE CAN'T BECAUSE OF THE NEW BABY!
WHAT'S THE BABY GOT TO DO WITH IT?
COUSIN GEORGE IS A FLOOR WALKER!
WAW-W AW!!

SURE YOU GET A FISHPOLE TOO, CORKY. IT'LL BE JUST AS GOOD AS MINE BUT NOT SO BIG.
THEN WE'LL GO AN' S'PRISE RACHEL WITH A LOT O' FISH FOR SUPPER.
CORKY TOO.
GEE THERE'S A RAIN CLOUD COMIN'. OH, WELL, THAT'LL MAKE THE FISH BITE ALL THE BETTER.
IT'S COMIN' DOWN. WE'D BETTER STAY UNDER A TREE TILL IT BLOWS OVER.
CORKY TOO.
GOLLY IF IT'S GOIN' TO LIGHTNING UNDER A TREE IS THE WORST PLACE.
LOOK AT THAT! IT STRUCK THE VERY TREE WE WERE UNDER.
THE WORST OF IT IS OVER BUT I DON'T JUST FEEL LIKE FISHIN' ANY MORE
CORKY TOO.
THAT'S A BEAUTY. WE'RE GETTIN' SOME OF EVERYTHING TODAY.
HURRY UP, CORKY! YOU KNOW WHAT I BETCHA WE'LL FIND AT THE END OF THE RAINBOW? SOME RAINBOW TROUT.

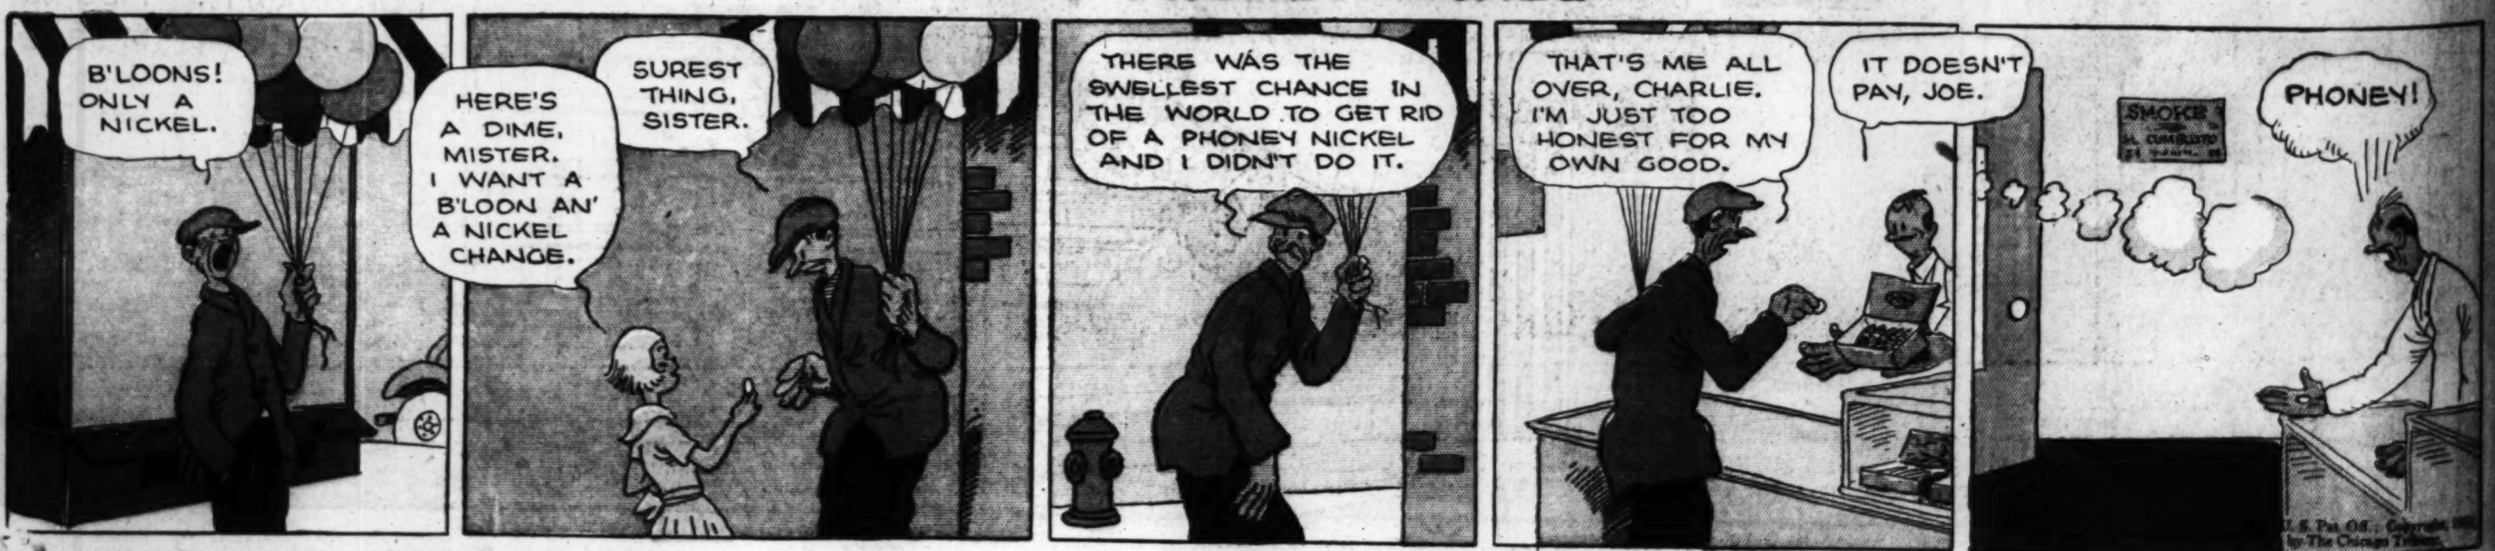
THAT PHONEY NICKEL



B'LOONS! ONLY A NICKEL.
HERE'S A DIME, MISTER. I WANT A B'LOON AN' A NICKEL CHANGE.
SUREST THING, SISTER.
THERE WAS THE SWELLEST CHANCE IN THE WORLD TO GET RID OF A PHONEY NICKEL AND I DIDN'T DO IT.
THAT'S ME ALL OVER, CHARLIE. I'M JUST TOO HONEST FOR MY OWN GOOD.
IT DOESN'T PAY, JOE.
